In addition to the bid submitted by the union organization, the trustees also received two other bids from outside corporations. Bids were received from Barnes and Noble and Follett Higher Education Group, based in Chicago. According to a statement made by Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page, the bids could potentially take up to 120 days to review, and will be good for five years.

The union bid plans to combine the University Textbook Annex with the University Store. The bid calls for a two-step renovation process, in which a bookstore cafe will be added to the University Store space. In addition, the bid also entails a reconfiguration of the University Store that would cost about $225,000. Another major portion of the bid is further development of the bookstore's "e-commerce" program that offers books for sale through the Internet. Students can currently access merchandise through the UMass website.

The proposal submitted was in response to the possible privatization of some organizations on the UMass campus by the UMass Board of Trustees. Last spring, trustees hired consultants to study the cafeteria and auxiliary services, which included the University Bookstore, comprised of the University Store and the

Turn to PRIVATIZATION page 2

Police chase four men following larceny

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Last Thursday, while the University of Massachusetts Police Department continued to investigate assaults on campus, four individuals gave the police an opportunity to focus on something different.

At 2:41 a.m., officers on routine patrol observed four individuals run and get into a van in a campus parking lot. The individuals were observed to be carrying an object, at that time unidentified, in their hands. Once in the van, the individuals sped past a UMPD cruiser that activated its lights and began to pursue the van. The officer sought to pull over the van to ask what the individuals were doing.

The van did not stop however, speeding up running stop signs, and almost hitting a pedestrian in an attempt to evade the police car. The van made it off campus, past the Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium, and into Hadley as officers continued pursuit. While officers pursued the van, occupants of the van threw what they had been carrying out of the

Turn to CRIME page 2

China launches "Magic Vessel" into orbit

By Michael Laris
Washington Post

BEIJING – Chinese scientists launched the country's first spacecraft designed to carry humans into orbit and guided it back to Earth, making a key breakthrough in the government's seven-year effort to join the United States and Russia in the elite club of manned space flight.

The unmanned module – dubbed the Shenzhou, or Magic Vessel, by Chinese President Jiang Zemin – was thrust into space before dawn Saturday aboard a new version of China's Long March rocket, officials said. It orbited the Earth 14 times before hurtling back through the atmosphere and parachuting into a field in Inner Mongolia Sunday morning, 21 hours after taking off.

"The successful launch of the Shenzhou has fulfilled a long-cherished dream of the Chinese people," the country's official New China News Agency said. "As early as 500 years ago, the Chinese test-fired rockets into the sky in an attempt to realize the dream."

Decades after Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin became the first person to orbit the Earth and President John F. Kennedy vowed that the United States would put a man on the moon, Chinese leaders have taken a page from the playbooks of the former Cold War rivals as they seek to boost the country's national pride and international stature.

China began pursuing manned space flight in the late 1960s but abandoned the effort because Premier Chou Enlai thought the program too costly. Jiang revived the effort in the early 1980s, after he was appointed the nation's leader following the crackdown on democracy demonstrations in Beijing in 1989. The expressed goal was to achieve manned space flight by the end of the century. That deadline is now virtually impossible to meet, but analysts said China would likely be able to make it within a year or so.

Pilot suicide considered rare

By Don Phillips
Washington Post

Early in the crash investigation of EgyptAir Flight 990, the airline said the crew had passed a psychological examination. But in truth, no pilot gets a formal psychological or psychiatric examination unless he or she raises suspicions during routine medical exams, acts strangely around colleagues or voluntarily reports problems.

A pilot who is good at masking internal problems often can get away with lying about mental conditions, according to government officials and physicians who did not want to be identified because of the sensitive international implications of the EgyptAir crash.

Nonetheless, instances of suicide or severe self-destructive behavior among commercial pilots is so rare that suicide would hardly be more than an asterisk in a list of causes of plane crashes. More often, suicide or suspected suicide occurs among general aviation pilots who use an aircraft to kill only themselves.

No one has revealed the details of copilot Gamed el-Batouty's last medical exam or any other medical or psychological records, but on the surface there is no indication he would ever have been inclined to push an airliner full of people into a fatal dive. That history is not always an accurate predictor of behavior, however.

"I have seen a number of pilots develop problems after years of flying," said a senior federal official. "It can happen any time in a career."

Aviation has wrestled with the question of suicide and pilot mental problems for decades. In a 1971 report to the Federal Aviation Administration, a research team led by Robert E. Yanowitch suggested that some accident investigations include a detailed "psychological autopsy" to determine why a pilot took actions that seemed self-destructive.

The National Transportation Safety Board does detailed human-factors investigations of pilots, particularly of the last 48 to 72 hours before the crash. But the psychological autopsy suggested by Yanowitch would be far more intrusive.

Yanowitch acknowledged the difficulties in conducting such an intrusive examination and noted that families sometimes go into denial and even destroy evidence such as suicide notes.

It may be necessary to explain to informants that self-destructive tendencies do develop in responsible, religious or successful persons, and the fact that the deceased may have made plans for the next day or week is not sufficient reason to rule out a simultaneous preoccupation with suicide or a suicide plan," the report said.

The report also noted that it is not necessary for a person to be planning suicide to exhibit self-destructive behavior. Destructive impulses "ordinarily are well-controlled and most unconscious," the report said. "However, these impulses can be brought to the fore and released under influences of mental stress, physical exhaustion, frustration, alcohol, drugs and other tangible and intangible agents."

Many commercial pilots seem to have several stories of the sudden onset of odd behavior among their colleagues, which on rare occasions became so bad that they reported a fellow pilot to the airline or to the professional standards boards of the Air Line Pilots Association.

A former copilot who did not want his airline or the airport identified recounted that while approaching a

Turn to PILOTS, page 2

BARBARA BRADLEY/COLLEGIAN

A Coupla' Guys

Performing jazz at the Peking Garden in Hadley on Saturday night were bassist Jordan Richmond, guitarist Charlie Apicella, conga player Marcel Langevin, along with drummer Kenji Ross and David Piper on trumpet.

EXTENDED FORECAST

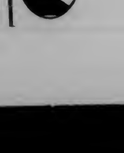
Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 65 LOW: 42	HIGH: 62 LOW: 47	HIGH: 57 LOW: 41

FOR MORE WEATHER.COM

Sweet Cotus

For a visual perspective on the soul-inspiring music of two enlightened DJs, open to the photographic flipside in today's news.

PAGE 2



How Much Is Enough

James Bond heads up this weekend's coverage as 007 makes a triumphant return to the big screen with The World Is Not Enough. Check out our review, along with a look at Tim Burton's Sleepy Hollow, in today's Arts.

PAGE 6

Shipp to dock in Greenville, SC

Marcel Shipp and the rest of the Minutemen's defense of the I-AA title starts Saturday at Furman University

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

■ privatization

continued from page 1

Textbook Annex. The reports concluded that the cafeterias on campus were failing to make a profit for the University, primarily due to high costs of union wages and benefits paid to workers.

Unions on campus disagreed with the consultants' findings and joined together to form the Campus Community Labor Coalition to oppose privatization. The organization found that rather than going down, profits would increase by 11 percent after privatization. In addition, campus jobs and benefits would increase. Special services, such as lenient return policies, textbook buyback programs, and special orders would also be lost.

As of now, bids are being reviewed for the open spaces on campus. The deadline for bids for all food retail organizations on campus, including the Bluewall, the Coffee Shop, and the Hatch food court, will be Dec. 3.

Currently, the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) has established a "Privatization Hot Line" to allow campus workers to provide information to the campus community allied against privatization. The hotline can be reached at 545-3832.

■ walkout

continued from page 1

They are also asking that visual hangings and information remain on campus grounds, especially chalking and writing on sidewalks. The group wants the campus community to be aware of what is happening and believes that it is important that the messages not be erased.

On a broader level, the group hopes that the walkout today will lead to more discussion on the larger issues that the assaults have brought to light on campus. They ask that after Thanksgiving break, family and friends of UMass students call the administration and demand action. They want UMass to be a model for awareness of violence against women. The organizers have suggested awareness be increased through classes, and possibly seminars, during freshman orientation.

■ pilots

continued from page 1

major airport on a clear evening, a senior captain suddenly leveled the plane at 1,000 feet and proceeded as if it would simply fly over the airport. "Final Captain, you're at 1,000 feet," the copilot said, evoking no reaction from the pilot. The copilot repeated the statement more forcefully, just as the copilot decided to take control of the plane, the captain seemed to snap out of his fog. Rather than aborting the landing, the captain went into a precipitous descent and successfully landed.

■ China

continued from page 1

van's windows.

The items were later identified to be auto-stereo equipment that had been removed from ten cars in the parking lot.

In Hadley at 2:47 a.m., the UMPD was joined by officers from the Hadley Police Department in the pursuit of the van. The van drove to I-91 South before the Massachusetts State Police brought the vehicle to a stop with a "stop-stick" near a Holyoke exit at 2:55 a.m.

A "stop stick" is a roll of nails and sharp barbs that uncoils on a road that shreds and flattens the tires of an automobile.

Three men were arrested immediately. The driver escaped for a short time before being arrested and taken back to the scene.

All four men were brought back to the University Police Station at Dickinson Hall. Edgard Hernandez, a 26-year-old Springfield resident, Herman Santana, an 18-year-old resident of Chicopee, Felix Escobar, a 21-year-old resident of Springfield, and Roel Burgos, a 19-year-old resident of Springfield, were all arrested and charged with breaking and entering in the nighttime, and larceny over $250.

All were also charged with disorderly conduct, and possession of a burglarious instrument. Hernan was also charged with speeding, failure to stop for a police officer and reckless driving, while Escobar was also charged with possession of a class D drug.

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

The Fire Goddess

While listening to ambient electronic music at Mystery Train Records in Amherst, Jenn E. Brown, a UMass student, contemplates saving the universe from evil-doers.

Gene-therapy study proceeded despite safety concerns

By Deborah Nelson and Rick Weiss
Washington Post

Four days after scientists infused trillions of genetically engineered viruses into Jesse Gelsinger's liver as part of a novel gene-therapy experiment, the 18-year-old lay dying in a hospital bed at the University of Pennsylvania.

His liver had failed, and the teenager's blood was thickening like jelly and clogging key vessels, while his kidneys, brain, and other organs shut down.

It was a rare and irreversible blood reaction, but it wasn't the first time the researchers had seen it. Unbeknown to Gelsinger, who had signed up for the experimental treatment for a rare and often fatal liver disorder, monkeys that the Penn team had similarly treated had succumbed in very much the same way.

The team had moved forward with the human experiment, despite the monkey deaths and despite criticism from other researchers who thought it was too dangerous, because they believed that a new version of genetically altered viruses they had developed was safer than the one that had killed the monkeys.

"Now I have to think, 'Was I blind?'" said James Wilson, head of Penn's Institute for Human Gene Therapy and a lead scientist in the trial. "I'm asking myself that question a lot these days."

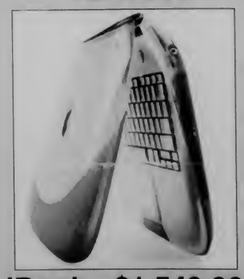
So far, the Penn team's investigation into Gelsinger's death in September thought to be the first fatality from gene therapy – has yielded no clear indication of what triggered the fatal reaction, so it's too soon to say whether it should have been predicted and prevented. Besides, experimental therapies by definition often are dangerous, and the distinction between laudable perseverance and unjustifiable risk-taking can be blurry.

Gelsinger's father remains highly supportive of the Penn team. And Gelsinger himself was eager to participate, despite the risks.

But a close look at the Penn research provides a rare snapshot of that subtle scientific and ethical landscape known as the cutting edge of medicine. And it resurrects old questions about whether the Penn experiment ever should have begun.

Own Your Own

With finals just around the corner don't stand in line for the computer lab... Check out the new products from Apple!



G4

Apple has a new line of computers with the latest technologies. It's great to own your own computer and avoid the lines at the public labs. Think of your Student I.D. card as an Apple discount card and buy direct from Apple at educational discounts.

iMac DV	iBook
Affordable High Performance • 350- or 400-MHz PowerPC G3 processor • ATI RAGE 128 VR 2D/3D accelerated graphics • 64MB or 128MB of SDRAM; supports up to 512MB • 6GB, 10GB, or 13GB hard disk drive • Slot-loading CD-ROM or DVD-ROM drive • Slot-loading DVD-ROM drive plays DVD-Video movies • Two FireWire ports let you connect DV camcorders, hard disks, and other high-speed peripherals • Preinstalled iMovie software makes it easy for anyone to create high-quality DV movies in minutes	Impressive Performance, Low Price • 300-MHz PowerPC G3 processor with performance-boosting backside level 2 cache • Up to 6 hours of battery life (depending on configuration & use) • Graphics controller plus 4MB of SDRAM video memory for 2D and 3D graphics acceleration, enhanced QuickTime movie playback, and games • Built-in high-speed Ethernet networking and 56K modem • Stunning shape in a choice of two eye-catching colors • Brilliant high-resolution TFT active-matrix display • Convenient foldaway carrying handle • Unique closing mechanism with no latches to break

iBook

iBook - $1,549.00
M7619LL/A - Tangerine
M7707LL/A - Blueberry

iMac DV - $1,249.00
M7493LL/A - Blueberry
M7671LL/A - Tangerine
M7672LL/A - Grape
M7673LL/A - Strawberry
M7674LL/A - Lime

To find out how you can take one home...
Visit the Apple Education On-line Store at http://www.apple.com/education/store or call
800-780-5009

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Lotus and the Art of Enlightenment

DJs Sweet Melissa and Carey Lotus, spinning jungle and deep house, performed to a crowded venue at the Peking Garden in Hadley on Saturday. The soulful night featured an opening jazz band, dancing, and the New York styles of Melissa and Carey. For information concerning upcoming shows, contact Carey at 549-9493.

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

A town torn by race debate

Eric Slater
Los Angeles Times

DECATUR, Ill. – This is a factory town, a union town, a town where folks have long been able to ask a stranger one question – labor or management? – and know much of what they needed to know. It is also a town laid low time and again by that divide.

Now, after weeks of grueling debate over the expulsions of seven black high school students for fighting, and over the ensuing protests led by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, many here fear "Strike Town, U.S.A." as Decatur was dubbed a few years back, is becoming divided in a new way.

For despite all the rhetoric, despite all the pleas from all the sides to leave race out of the expulsion debate, race has become an issue, probably the issue.

"Why didn't Jesse Jackson come here when those two white kids got expelled for fighting?" asked a young white woman during an impromptu debate at a coffee shop near Millikin University. "How come they didn't expel that white kid who made the bomb threat?" a young black man retorted.

"I don't know when it turned," school board president Jackie Goetter said earlier yesterday as she sat surrounded by flowers, some sent for her 49th birthday, others to express support for the board. "I can't point to the particular moment. But somewhere along the line, as it went on and on...this became about race."

Framed against the prairie by its towering east-end smokestacks, Decatur is a blue-collar town if ever there was one, a city of 80,000 whose modern history used to be defined by labor disputes, not race relations.

Not everyone here knows that one of the great civil rights leaders in American history, Abraham Lincoln, launched his campaign for the White House in Decatur. But almost everybody knows somebody who went on strike in the early and mid-1990s against Caterpillar, or Bridgestone/Firestone or A.E. Staley Manufacturing.

And although the town, which is about 19 percent black, is no more racially harmonious than most American cities, residents agree color has mattered much less than union affiliation for most practical purposes.

Many are worried that now, having rebounded nicely from the strikes that at one point of bitter division saw about five percent of the city's population on picket lines, Decatur is splitting apart again.

The fight that began took place Sept. 17, at a football game between Eisenhower High School and cross-town rival MacArthur High School. The brawl between alleged gang members rolled through the bleachers for over a minute.

In the following weeks, the school board expelled seven Eisenhower students for two years for their alleged participation in the brawl. The teens were allowed to apply for readmission after one year – a point frequently forgotten in the frenzy of recent weeks. Still, the punishment was so severe it would come to be criticized by many nationwide, including educators.

That the board is predominantly white and the kids black has become one of many aspects of the story with racial, though not necessarily racist, overtones.

No one here, though, believes for a second that the fight initiated the debate, or even the two year expulsions. It was the arrival of Jackson two weeks ago, and in turn, the national media.

Congratulations to:

Christen M. Emery
Betsy A. Frisch
Sarah E. Grimes
Amy M. Hamling
Amelia Heddens
Danielle J. Lamarbre
Olivia S. List
Jessie McLaughlin
Marcia Nadler
Alice Shabunin
Jessica Smith
Rebecca A. Stone
Nicole M. Wagner
Jacqueline C. Young

- for becoming new members of Kappa Omicron Nu National Honor Society.
The Scholastic Honor Society within the College of Food and Natural Resources.

READ COLLEGIAN NEWS

Do you have a legal problem? We specialize in civil and criminal litigation, including university disciplinary actions.
FIERST & PUCCI LLP
64 Gothic Street, Suite 4
Northampton MA 01060-3042
413-584-8067

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
APSHIRE FITNESS club
Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt.9
2 Miles East of Town Center
256-6446

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

$ATTENTION$
FEBRUARY 2000 GRADUATES
If you are a member of the February 2000 graduating class who received Federal Perkins Loans while enrolled at U Mass you should have recently received certified letter about those loans.
We know this is a very busy time for you so we've mailed this information rather than having you attend a meeting.
However there are serious consequences if you fail to return these documents by 11/30/99 as instructed in our letter.
If you haven't received our letter but think that you should have or if you have any questions about what you did receive
$ Call 545-2377 $

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Monday, November 22, 1999

Empowerment is the key

The recent assaults on campus have caused students to feel unsafe walking around campus at any time of day. The University of Massachusetts Police Department is investigating the incidents, but when a resolution will come is not yet known. However, there are immediate actions that students can take to ensure safety on campus.

The University purchased 10,000 shriek alarms for students, faculty and staff to be used in case of an emergency. Interested students may also enroll in self-defense classes sponsored by various on and off-campus organizations. In addition, the Student Government Association has sponsored the formation of Pondwatch, a volunteer-based group whose aim is to accompany students walking alone across campus. However, many students have already begun to walk with friends in groups to and from class, rather than walk alone.

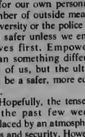
While defensive, preventative measures provide a certain level of safety, more proactive actions such as education and awareness can do much to avert physical and sexual assaults in the future. Discussion with professors, friends and co-workers creates awareness of violence in our society and may lead to education of students by their peers.

Student initiatives, both proactive and reactive, are necessary because the University and the UMass Police Department cannot provide 24-hour protection for the thousands of students who attend UMass. While the University has taken positive action to combat the rash of violence and while UMPD is working overtime in an attempt to increase safety and to resolve the situation, some students have criticized both for not doing enough. Whereas some criticism may be justified because the police department was slow to disseminate information, publicizing information about an on-going police investigation could inhibit and compromise the efforts of the police.

The campus belongs ultimately to the students, not the University administration and not the UMPD. We do not want our community to have police officers on every corner and fearful students walking by each other, nervously clutching shrick alarms. We have to take responsibility for our own personal safety. No number of outside measures by the University or the police will make us feel safer unless we empower ourselves first. Empowerment will mean something different to each one of us, but the ultimate result will be a safer, more educated campus.

Hopefully, the tense atmosphere of the past few weeks will be replaced by an atmosphere of awareness and security. However, violence on the UMass campus is an ongoing problem, and education must continue in the future.

Unsigned editorials represent the majority opinion of the Editorial Board.



Demons and tree roots and elephants, oh my!

If you happened to stumble upon the news in the past couple of weeks at key times, you possibly ran across a couple of gems in the "absolutely ridiculous" section of the paper.

Of course, if you haven't stumbled upon the news in the past couple of weeks, you are living in a hole and should be ashamed of yourself for being such an unworthy human being.

I apologize if I have offended any unworthy human beings out there who take umbrage because they do, indeed, stumble upon the news regularly.

Anyway, the point is, there are a couple of stories that you would have missed if you hadn't been paying close attention to the infinite and tedious world around you. I, luckily, have friends who do such things, and so I will pretend to be significantly more aware than you because they told me about these humorous diatribes.

Seth Koenig

After coming in from a brisk midnight walk back from my home-away-from-home, Applebee's ("America's Neighborhood Restaurant," for short), my cultured and worldly roommate Lisa Metcalf brought to my attention a "front-page" winner that had just been on the television.

Apparently, some kids in the Connecticut forests were out late in the evening doing incredibly innocent things that very likely involved the systematic burning of illegal plant life, when who should appear, but Satan and his legion of evil minions.

According to these teens, there were "like a thousand voices" calling their names in a very demonic fashion. Needless to say, the kids found this scenario extremely unpleasant and decided that the best was to deal with the problem was to run... fast.

Having not paid attention while watching any of the recently released horror films, such as I Know What You Did Last Summer, I Still Know What You Did Last Summer and the soon-to-be available third installment called I Wasn't Actually There, but I Was Told What You Did Last Summer and I'm Not Happy About It, the kids weren't aware that when sprinting away from evil, it is not uncommon to fall helplessly to the ground after tripping on something tiny in order to create a dramatic near-death scene.

The kids tripped. However, it wasn't because they were clumsy. It was because the demons grabbed their legs. It is now painfully apparent that the reason this story is so funny is because of the language barrier between Connecticut and the rest of the nation. In "The Constitution State," named appropriately because the Constitution was signed in Philadelphia, the word "demon" means "tree root."

Even with that cleared up, the story continues to get interesting. After averting the attacks of the violent and angry trees, the kids sought help from the best person possible when combating forest life – their pastor. If anyone could stop the revolt of the pines, it would most definitely be Jesus, and so that's where they went.

At this point in time, being 3:00-or-so in the morning, according to the news, the pastor was busy suppressing other natural disasters, or, in laymen's terms, sleeping. When he heard suspicious noises coming from his front lawn, he did what any normal person would do in such a situation and called the police.

When the boys in blue arrived, they seemed less interested in the fact that demons ("tree roots") were attacking the teens, and more interested in the fact that, in preparing their own militant stand, our heroes had packed their car full of illegal ninjitsu weaponry.

Now, I'm sure you're wondering how the kids got illegal ninjitsu weaponry at 3:00 a.m. Well, I forgot to ask Lisa about that, so just assume they went to one of those terribly-common, all-night martial arts stores that seem to be scattered across the Connecticut landscape.

In the end, the cops apprehended the teens, the pastor went back to bed, and the demons sat in the ground supplying water and nutrients to the trees above.

Now, even though you are thoroughly satisfied with that story, no doubt, you are hungry for more.

Luckily for you, a second cultured and worldly friend, Brett Mauser, told me about an important development overseas. In a much shorter story than the elaborate one featured above, a group of elephants in Australia apparently managed to get into a vat of alcohol somewhere, perhaps at their local micro-brewery, and after getting hammered in typical elephant fashion, the group headed out to trample some people.

This story ends in heartbreak and sorrow, though, as the drunken animals made pancakes out of six innocent Australians. Weep heartily now.

Okay, enough. The six innocent Australians would likely not care if you got trampled by intoxicated elephants, so why return the favor?

Now for the eagerly anticipated moral of the story, and that is: if you are the owner of an establishment that serves alcohol, like, perhaps, a pub, micro-brewery, or my home-away-from-home, Applebee's, enforce a strict limit to how much elephants can be served so as to keep them from getting all fired up and killing six Australians. If that isn't moral enough for you, another important thing to keep in mind is this: if you are being chased through the forest by demons, do not attempt to retaliate with ninjitsu weaponry because the police will arrest you for having it when you frighten your pastor at 3:00 in the morning.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

The beautiful people

Jennifer Love Hewitt. OK, what just came to mind? An attractive woman, right? That's a great characteristic that most famous people have: visual appeal. Cindy Crawford, Tom Cruise and many others are most famous for their good looks, and in our superficial culture, that's what matters most to the general population.

But what about those not-so-visually-appealing spectacles, those hideous little trolls who are uber-inducing to look at but are still famous? You know, the famous people who make you go, "Damn, how the hell did this guy make it?"

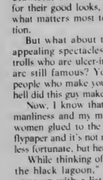
Now, I know that I am the pinnacle of manliness and my magnetic photo has you women glued to the Collegian like flies on flypaper and it's not nice to make fun of the less fortunate, but hear me out...

While thinking of these "creatures from the black lagoon," my roommates and I came up with a list of "aesthetically challenged" people who make us go "hmmm" and force us to wonder how any of them ever left the delivery room.

Howard Stern. Now, have you seen an uglier person in your life? For someone who makes fun of everyone and everything, this guy has a lot of explaining to do to the genetics police. Damn!

Tori Spelling. Sorry, Tori, but the breast implants and the facelifts were just not enough. You still look like a chemistry experiment gone wrong. She's quite the dish, huh? Whatever. "She's a man, man!"

Bill Gates. Nerd alert! This man proves that some women are only interested in money. Take a look at him (and his pocket protector). And he gets more than me? Hey, I know that quadriplegics get more than me too, but even Linda Tripp is less nauseating than this guy!



Rodney Dangerfield. And he wonders why he gets "no respect?" Take a look in the mirror, buddy. Your eyes look like they're about to explode and you're 112 years old. Sit down before you fall down.

Meatloaf. Hey, pal, that's one of the many foods you've apparently had a little too much of. Change your name to Cabbage and maybe your image will pick up a bit.

Chelsea Clinton. Now, I used to think that she was slightly more attractive than she once was, but my roommate put me in my place. Damn! She looks like Rumplestiltskin... on a bad day.

Scott Broscius. "Yeuh, yeuh! Garsh, Mickey!" Hey, Gaxley, get the hell off the field and back into your cage... and take Knoblach with you!

The Olson Twins. I have two words for these beauties: troll dolls!

Gary Mendese

Randy Johnson. What the hell happened there? I guess that is a prime example of many generations of good ole' southern inbreeding (can't keep it in the pants, keep it in the family).

Mimi. I don't watch the Drew Carey show very often, but this woman reminds me of Tammy Faye Baker plus 500-400 pounds. She has about five pounds of makeup on, but she's still a fat, nauseating trilobite. For her, I wouldn't even recommend exercise – just execution.

Barbara Streisand and Fabio. Hey, remember the TV show, Beauty and the Beast? Well, these two brutes look like the beast. Think about it! "I can't believe it's not butter..." Die, loser – and the Michael Bolton hair went out a long time ago. And Barbara, lose the attitude, get another nose job, and please stop singing. Edith Bunker even sings better than you do, so stop scaring the children.

All of the Bradys. Need I say more?

David Letterman. All I have to say is, "It's good!" Use some of your millions and fix your teeth, buddy.

The Backstreet Boys. "I want it that way?" Hey, fem-bots. I'd take it any way I could get it if I were you. Beggars can't be choosers.

Mick Jagger. Well, I guess I can't dis him... at least David Bowie likes him.

Drew Barrymore. Last but not least I'd like to talk about Miss Piggy herself. Now, my good friend Eric and many other confused people think she's gorgeous, but "Swamp Thing" just doesn't turn me on. OK? When ET phoned home, she probably should have gone back with him. Well, bacon does taste pretty good, so I'd like to give a shout-out to the Barrymore family. Thanks a million!

Hey, I know I'm nothing spectacular, but some people out there are just plain nasty. But now I know that if these guys can make it, there's nothing I can't accomplish! Thanks for the inspiration.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian columnist

Confront your jerk!

I'm usually a very tolerant person. I try not to hate anybody. I do my best to ignore stupidity and moronic situations, but no matter how much I try I cannot stand jerks. This is not just a problem for me; this is a problem for every human being. Everybody knows at least one jerk. It's just the way life is. A jerk could be someone you work with, take a class with, or maybe even live with.

It's not easy to spot a jerk as soon as they enter your life. Jerks can be male or female, young or old, tall or short. They are self-indulgent people who usually are the type to attend parties and get irritated when nobody pays attention to or worships them. They go out of their way to make people feel small. They find other people's feelings insignificant.

Jerks try to dominate every group or team they may be assigned to. They saturate this group productivity with their ideas, even if they know they've made terrible choices. They are also loud and tend to snap at people. If they ever do big, charitable, or important jobs, they do them for the attention, never because it's right. Jerks are also known by other names such as Sloth, Power Monger, or even Princess.

Besides displays of bitterness, jerks show their ugly personage in other ways.

-Jerks get onto elevators on the 9th floor and get off at the 8th floor.

-They pee on the toilet seats so you then have to wipe off the seat with toilet paper.

-They shut propped-open doors when people are passing through with armfuls of heavy belongings.

-They pee on the toilet handle so when you flush you have to grab the handle with a handful of toilet paper.

-They pay for small and inexpensive items with credit cards or checks when there is a long line of people behind them.

-They pee on the toilet paper so you can't wipe off the seat and the handle that both got previously peed on.

I have a jerk in my life right now. I'd name this person, but that would be a very jerky thing to do, so of course I won't. I'm very lucky that I don't work or live with this jerk. It's also really cool that there are no jerks in the cast or on the crew of the UMass Theater Department show I'm doing right now called "She Stoops to Conquer." It's a jerk-free show. No, this person is someone I take classes with. My jerk is someone I cannot stand no matter how much I try to tolerate him. I have concluded that this person has no soul, and in its place is that freakish Mambo #5 song that has smelled up the airwaves for weeks and weeks now. My jerk is anal-retentive and always wants things his way, even when it goes against the laws of common sense, logic, science, and sometimes even reality. This is a sure sign of a jerk.

Jason Czernich

So, how can you combat the problem of a jerk? Well, you could ignore the problem and hope it goes away. That solution is the simplest but also the most ineffective. If you don't let your jerk know that he or she is being an inconsiderate speck of snot, then he or she will just keep on walking all over you. You cannot let that happen. Show him or her that you won't take it, and stand up to your jerk. Try being polite at first. If he or she blows you off, then stand up and loudly say "BY THE POWER VESTED IN ME BY COMMON SENSE, I HEREBY PROCLAIM YOU A JERK!" Other people who witness this will probably cheer, proclaim you their hero, and even ask you for advice on how to deal with their own personal jerks.

Now be careful with your jerk-proclaiming rights. Sometimes, regular people get confused for jerks too. Sometimes, if a person yells at you, it could mean that they're having a bad day. These people are called "normal people having a bad day," or pseudo-jerks. These people who lash out at you in a moment of weakness have just let the pressures of life get to them temporarily (real jerks are morally weak 99.9% of the time!). These people are confused. Don't retaliate. They really need our sympathy and understanding. After they calm down, and if they let you, give them a hug.

I notice that jerks want a lot of attention from people in popular cliques, some members of which are jerks themselves. Jerks usually ignore the rest of us unless they're having their hourly conniption fit, where we usually get caught in the shrapnel of their anger. If you've already stood up to your jerk once, simply ignore his or her ravings of sulphur and hot air. You've already shown him or her that you won't take the stupidity. He or she is nothing to you now. The jerk will eventually realize that nobody is listening to him or her, even the popular people he or she brown-noses. Your jerk should no longer be as big a leach on your rear end as he or she was before.

Since jerks think they know what's best for everybody, we often find that they have wormed their way into high or popular positions. Don't let it fool you. They are still jerks! Some groups I have found that are heavily laden with jerks are politicians, Michael Bolton fans, prima donnas, egomaniacal students who dominate classroom conversations, guys named Tony, people who take all the credit but none of the blame, and people from New Jersey named Josh. Jerks will also never decompose or biodegrade.

The last thing I'll mention about jerks is also the scariest thing about jerks. Jerks usually cannot tell if they're genuine jerks. Hopefully, this article will help jerks-in-denial realize their true jerkiness. Maybe then they will change. On second thought, they probably won't because...they're JERKS!

Jason Czernich is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Monday, November 22, 1999

Rear-View Look at Busing Ruling

By Sam Fulwood III
Los Angeles Time

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – Among the first schoolchildren bused to integrate the Charlotte-Mecklenburg School District in 1970 was a 14-year-old black boy with thick glasses and no idea what awaited him in a white classroom on the other side of town. As the bus rolled from his Westside neighborhood, skirting the glass towers of uptown Charlotte and finally lurching to a stop 45 minutes later at an eastside junior high, he thought of himself as a soldier being mustered into some glorious army to wage war against segregation. Hundreds of black and white schoolchildren were being driven into the great unknown, with a mission to change the nation one classroom at a time. That bus ride was one of the most defining moments of my life.

Now, nearly 30 years later, a federal judge has ordered an end to race-based busing, arguing that Charlotte has done all it can to end racial discrimination in its schools. His decision, which the school board is appealing, could resegregate Charlotte into neighborhood schools. I wanted to find out why history was reversing itself. So I went home.

What I learned contradicted my childhood memories and surprised me. I found a city in uproar, divided not between white and black but between Old South and New South, debating whether racial harmony was the key to economic prosperity. I discovered a sense of disappointment among many whites that 30 years of effort had come to naught. And, I heard black Charlotte residents express a weary feeling of deja vu, as if they had been waiting all these years for whites to back away from their experiment with integration. Mostly, I found that the issue of busing and school desegregation was as much about economics as about race. During the last 15 years, Charlotte's population has increased by nearly half with a wave of professional and politically empowered newcomers. The overwhelming majority of them are white and well-off.

When I grew up here in the 1960s and '70s, Charlotte was a racially segregated city. It still is, but less so. Then, blacks were a rarity in professional occupations, standing apart in our own world, isolated from Charlotte's elites. Now, there are a few black lawyers and bankers among them. Charlotte's white leaders credit school busing for producing these positive changes, so they continue to embrace desegregation. But they are running headfirst into ardent opposition from the newcomers. The debate over busing finds the old Charlotte establishment fighting a new wave of white suburbanites over what history means, if anything.

When school busing began in 1970, I was in the ninth grade. I knew that Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. had led protest marches that turned violent in Selma, Ala., and I remember racially segregated schools, and want nothing to do with the old busing plans. "They are as a group freshly scrubbed, upper-middle-class, professional nomads who came to Charlotte over the past 10 to 15 years in search of economic bounty," said Frye Gaillard, a local freelance writer who reports on the schools. "Once they arrived, they saw what was happening with the schools and asked themselves, 'What's this busing thing all about?'" Six of those parents did more than ask questions. They filed a suit in 1997, demanding that the Charlotte-Mecklenburg district drop all attempts to assign children to schools based on the color of their skin. "My estimate of them isn't that they're racist or feel strongly negatively toward integration," said Gaillard. "They just didn't have the same history as many of us."

Judge Robert D. Potter, a Ronald Reagan appointee to the federal bench, agreed with their arguments. Potter had fought against the original 1969 desegregation suit as a private citizen. As a federal judge he was able to rule in September that Charlotte should return to neighborhood schools. In his order, he reasoned that the school system had "eliminated, to the extent practicable, the vestiges of past discrimination in the traditional areas of school operations."

Just as black parents had celebrated a generation earlier when Judge James B. McMillian ordered Charlotte to use busing to desegregate the schools, supporters of neighborhood schools cheered Potter's call to stop the buses. To them, machinations to preserve racially diverse schools are ridiculous relics of a long-gone era. Worse, they see them as unfair to parents who want their children at schools close to home.

"The obsession with race, above all other issues, continues to drive a majority of the Board of Education," said Thomas Ashcraft, one of the attorneys for the parents. "It's a sad sight to see, for them and for the community."

School officials are appealing the judge's ruling. In the meantime, they have pledged to comply with the order to stop using race as a criterion in assignments but only when all of the schools have equal resources and facilities. To do otherwise would permit a return to separate and unequal schools, divided along race and class lines, which the Supreme Court has ruled unconstitutional.

Indeed, if the school board follows Potter's order to stop using race in pupil assignments for the 2000-2001 school year, nearly every one of Charlotte's 151 schools could be easily identified by race and class. All this busing still is necessary because busing patterns remain separated along racial lines. And to bring schools in black neighborhoods up to the standards of those in white neighborhoods will take money, a lot of money, some $1.5 billion by one school board estimate.

Tradition-bound and graying, Charlotte's old-line leaders, both white and black, say it is imperative to Charlotte's economy to preserve racially integrated schools. They are aghast at the arrogant and selfish attitudes of the newcomers who refuse to go along. It is clear and palpable that the old Charlotte leaders are turning on the very newcomers whom they have recruited, seeing in them the seeds of destruction to the city's prosperity.

Even the veneer of Southern genteel politeness fails to mask the resentment they feel for the interlopers' lack of understanding of Charlotte's proud history of working hard for integration. "If it hadn't been for (busing to desegregate the schools), Charlotte wouldn't be the city it is today," said Ron Thompson, principal of East Mecklenburg High. "The people who brought the (recent) lawsuit don't see that. They weren't a part of our past. They don't understand our history of struggle. We have allowed them to come into this community and be the prevailing voice. They have nothing to do with who we are and what we've come from."

As I listened to him, I imagined how a similar conversation might have sounded 30 years ago. Someone like him would have complained to a reporter about how black parents and "forced busing" would ruin Charlotte. The reporter then would have been white. Now it was me. A lot has changed since then. "In 1971, Charlotte was a black community and a white community," Thompson told me. "Today, Charlotte is a multicultural community, and we're better for it."

Aboard Flight 990, a typical scene until the final minutes

By Marc Fisher and Don Phillips
Washington Post

Five months from retirement, EgyptAir co-pilot Gameel Batouti was scheduled to fly part of the New York to Cairo route. A few days before Flight 990 took off on Oct. 31, Batouti's brother-in-law asked him whether flying over water made him nervous. "We see our deaths every day over the ocean," the co-pilot replied. Whether that remark was a bit of quotidian poetry or a forecast of doom may never be known. But Batouti has now emerged as the center of a complex and diplomatically dicey investigation.

Every aspect of Flight 990, its timing, its mechanical health, its passengers, and now especially its crew, has been under microscopic inspection since the jet plummeted through the night sky over the North Atlantic on Halloween morning. With no survivors, a shattered fuselage, no obvious evidence of mechanical problems, and the usual hunger for answers to an air disaster, the investigation now centers on the horrible possibility that one man, someone entrusted every working day with hundreds of lives, committed one of the largest, most cold-blooded mass slayings in history.

There remain more questions than answers. The possibility of pilot intent is based on a few lines of dialogue retrieved from the cockpit voice recorder and a preliminary reconstruction of the sequence of onboard events. But no other hypothesis has emerged from the federal probe and, as frightening a scenario as an intentional downing may be, it has happened before.

As best as investigators and reporters can tell at this point, this is what happened on EgyptAir Flight 990: The flight was to be a long one, from night into day and on into the next evening. It is eleven hours from New York's JFK Airport to Cairo, and EgyptAir has a history of tardiness. The Boeing 767 that would become Flight 990 was late on its way to the United States, late getting to Los Angeles, and now Saturday, Oct. 30, after having two tires changed at Los Angeles International Airport, four hours late on its return from California to JFK.

Two Pratt & Whitney engines powered the plane, delivered new to EgyptAir in 1989. It had proven reliable and efficient: it had logged 33,219 hours of flight time, almost as many hours as the combined tally of its experienced command crew of four captains and first officers. EgyptAir generally carried a crew of four on its transatlantic routes. Flight 990 had two extra pilots on a training course to familiarize them with the route across the ocean.

Thirty-two passengers traveling to Cairo had boarded Flight 990 in Los Angeles; an additional 167 joined them in New York. Just one passenger got off in New York, Edward McLaughlin, who had conducted a seminar for EgyptAir employees in Los Angeles about coping with loss and bereavement in a plane crash. Now, with pilots and attendants, 217 people were on board.

The trip to Cairo was routine for some, the highlight of a lifetime for others. There were Americans, Egyptians, and others. There was the first black firefighter in Rochester, N.Y.'s, history, and a couple in their seventies celebrating their first wedding anniversary. Four women from Southern California who played cards together every Thursday had been planning their three-week vacation in Egypt for almost a year. Two couples from the San Diego area were going to ride camels, climb the pyramids, and ride down the Nile.

The flight finally took off at 1:19 a.m. on Oct. 31, two hours and 19 minutes late. Takeoff and ascent were normal. Flight 990 began climbing to the southeast. At about 120 miles out, it was vectored to the northeast and settled in for a long over water flight at 33,000 feet.

At 1:43 a.m., a routine radio transmission was made to air traffic control. Early in the flight, according to sources familiar with the investigation, Batouti, the relief co-pilot, entered the cockpit and asked to fly, even though he wasn't scheduled to take over until far later in the trip. Batouti was given the co-pilot's chair. Hall an hour into the flight, with the plane at cruising altitude, Capt. Habashy got up, exchanged a few words with the co-pilot and left the cockpit, perhaps to use the bathroom, perhaps to get some coffee.

The co-pilot was now alone in the cockpit, sitting in the right-hand seat, the cockpit voice recorder suggests. Sometime in the next five minutes, the co-pilot now believed to be Batouti, recited a fragment of a Muslim prayer: "Tawakkil ala Allah," which has been variously translated as "I entrust myself to God" and "I put my faith in God's hands." Although federal investigators have released no transcript of the cockpit remarks, various investigators and congressional sources have relayed the dialogue to reporters in similar yet distinctive variations.

According to government sources, the co-pilot then said, "I have made my decision." A former CIA official said that the emerging hypothesis of an intentional downing is heavily based on that "decision" quotation. Whatever the precise words, the following actions are devastating in their clarity.

At 1:49 a.m. and 45 seconds, investigators now believe, the co-pilot clicked twice on the red button on his control column, switching off the autopilot. If some defect had shut off the autopilot, or if the autopilot sensed a situation it couldn't handle, such as severe turbulence, an alarm would have sounded. None did. Eight seconds later, the co-pilot pushed his control column forward, tilting the plane over into a dive. The plane's tail raised up; the nose pointed down. The dive was so steep that 14 seconds later Flight 990 reached a zero-gravity state, meaning its passengers felt weightless, a condition that lasted about 20 seconds. At almost the same time, Flight 990 surpassed its maximum allowed speed and plummeted at up to 44 percent the speed of sound. A warning alarm sounded and, because of the zero-gravity state, engines' pressure dropped.

Somewhere in this chaos, Capt. Habashy, presumably alarmed by the sudden descent, returned to the cockpit. The opening of the door is captured on the cockpit voice recorder. By some accounts, he got back into his seat and said "What's going on?" or "What's happening?" Moments later, the same voice: "Pull with me! Pull with me!"

At 1:50 a.m. and 22 seconds, two odd things happened. Two devices on the tail began to point in opposite directions, one commanding the plane to dive, the other positioning it to climb. The "climb" device was being controlled from the pilot's seat, while the "dive" device was directed from the co-pilot's side. These left and right elevators, which normally operate in tandem to control the craft's up and down movements, split, apparently the result of two pilots pulling and pushing hard in opposite directions on their control columns.

Flight 990 kept diving, kept picking up speed, plummeting toward the Atlantic. At almost the same moment, someone shut down the engines, a deliberate step that requires pulling up a shield and pulling a switch. It cannot be done accidentally.

In the final seconds before the flights recorders stopped working, someone deployed the plane's speed brakes, panels mounted atop the wing that can help a plane descend without ever speeding. Those familiar with aerodynamics say that such a maneuver would only cause the plane to descend faster. The speed brake handle is on the pilot's side of the cockpit. Nonetheless, for a few seconds at least Flight 990 seemed to be coming out of its dive, investigators said Wednesday.

Perhaps eight seconds after the engine shutdown, the recorders and the plane's altitude reporting transponder stopped working. But radar shows the airplane climbing back to about 24,000 feet. It's unclear whether the climb was the result of the pilot's attempt to save the flight or simply the aircraft's natural inclination to fly.

The climb didn't last long. Before 2 a.m. Flight 990 stalled, plunged and broke apart. Debris scattered about 60 miles off the Massachusetts coast. Few remains were found of the 217 people aboard. There was never so much as a distress call from the plane. At the Cairo airport, hired taxi drivers held aloft signs with the names of passengers who would never arrive. The investigation continues. In Cairo where news reports and cafe conversations run rife with blame, the crash on the United States' coast, Capt. Habashy's sister Didi Farid, said: "They speculate. Everybody speculates. They don't know. Where is the truth? They don't know."

Complex shades of Blackness: "What is the Fourth of July to the slave?"

By Frederick Douglass

We have to do with the past only as we can make it useful to the present and to the future. To all inspiring motives, to noble deeds which can be gained from the past, we are welcome. But now is the time, the important time. Your fathers have lived, died, and have done their work, and have done much of it well. You live and must die, and you must do your work. You have no right to enjoy a child's share in the labor of your fathers, unless your children are to be blessed by your labors. You have no right to wear out and waste the hard-earned fame of your fathers to cover your indolence. Sydney Smith tells us that men seldom eulogize the wisdom and virtues of their fathers but to excuse some folly or wickedness of their own. This truth is not a doubtful one.

There are illustrations of it near and remote, ancient and modern. It was fashionable, hundreds of years ago, for the children of Jacob to boast, we have "Abraham to our father," when they had long lost Abraham's faith and spirit. That people contented themselves under the shadow of Abraham's great name, while they repudiated the deeds which made his name great. Need I remind you that a similar thing is being done all over this country today? Need I tell you that the Jews are not the only people who built the tombs of the prophets, and garnished the sepulchers of the righteous? Washington could not die until he had broken the chains of his slaves. Yet his monument is built up by the price of human blood, and the traders in the bodies and souls of men, shout, "We have Washington to our father." Alas! That it should be so; yet so it is.

"The evil that men do lives after them, the good is oft' interred with their bones."

"What have I, or those I represent, to do with your national independence?"

Fellow-citizens, pardon me, allow me to ask, why am I called upon to speak here today? What have I, or those I represent, to do with your national independence? Are the great principles of political freedom and of natural justice, embodied in that Declaration of Independence, extended to us? And am I, therefore, called upon to bring our humble offering to the national altar, and to confess the benefits and express devout gratitude for the blessings resulting from your independence to us?

Would to God, both for your sakes and ours, that an affirmative answer could be truthfully returned to these questions! Then would my task be light, and my burden easy and delightful. For who is there so cold, that a nation's sympathi could not warm him? Who so obdurate and dead to the claims of gratitude that would not thankfully acknowledge such priceless benefits? Who so stolid and selfish, that would not give his voice to swell the hallelujahs of a nation's jubilee, when the chains of servitude had been torn from his limbs? I am not that man. In a case like that, the dumb might eloquently speak, and the "lame man leap as a hare."

But, such is not the state of the case. I say it with a sad sense of the disparity between us. I am not included within the pale of this glorious anniversary! Your high independence only reveals the immeasurable distance between us. The blessings in which your day dawns are not enjoyed in common. The rich inheritance of justice, liberty, prosperity, and independence, bequeathed by your fathers, is shared by you, not by me. The sunlight that brought life and healing to you has brought stripes and death to me. This Fourth [of] July is yours, not mine. You may rejoice, I must mourn. To drag a man in fetters into the grand illuminated temple of liberty, and call upon him to join you in joyous anthems, were inhuman mockery and sacrilegious irony. Do you mean, citizens, to mock me, by asking me to speak today? If so, there is a parallel to your conduct. And let me warn you that it is dangerous to copy the example of a nation whose crimes, lowering up to heaven, were thrown down by the breath of the Almighty, burning that nation in irrecoverable ruin! I can today take up the plaintive lament of a peeled and woe-smitten people!

Event Calendar

12/11 – Soul TV
UMass Fashion Show
"Sex Appeal for the Millennium"
Student Union Ballroom

1930

November 22
- Arutheus A. Taylor, teacher and historian, born, 1893
- Elijah Muhammad founds the Nation of Islam in Detroit.

November 23
- Andrew J. Beard patents the "jerry coupler," still used today to connect railroad cars, 1897
- J.L. Love patents the pencil sharpener.
- 1,000 persons from twenty-five states gather in Philadelphia and form the National Black Independent Party, 1980

November 24
- Scott Joplin, composer and musician, born, 1868

November 25
- Suriname Independence Day
- Tina Turner, singer, born, 1941
- Segregation in buses and terminals banned by Interstate Commerce Commission, 1955

November 26
- Sojourner Truth, abolitionist and orator, dies, 1883
- National Negro Medical Association founded, 1895
- Charles Gordone receives the Pulitzer Prize for his play, No Place to be Somebody, 1970

November 27
- Jimi Hendrix, rock musician, born, 1942

November 28
- Richard Wright, author of Native Son and Black Boy, dies, 1942

November 29
- Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., congressman, born, 1908

November 30
- Barbados Independence Day
- Shirley Chisholm, congresswoman, born, 1924

This week in Black History

007 returns in style; James Bond delights again

The World is Not Enough
Directed by Michael Apted with Pierce Brosnan, Robert Carlyle and Denise Richards
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

By Nicholas Pizzolato
Collegian Staff

Let's face it. James Bond is the man. Don't deny it, because you know it's true. He is every man's living, breathing fantasy. This is a guy who can do it all. He not only takes on multiple villains with more guns and ammo then he has, but also kills them all without breaking a sweat. Then he slips into a formal tuxedo, a stiff drink and says those three little words – Bond, James Bond" – that drive the women into a sexual craze, causing them to practically throw themselves right from like bugs to a zapper. The 007 series has created its own type of genre. They are not just movies, but James Bond movies.

The nineteenth installment in the seemingly endless series of Bond movies will not disappoint the many fans of James Bond. With Bond's unique suaveness, Pierce Brosnan jumps into the original international man of mystery's shoes for a third time, complete with wit, sexual innuendo, and a license to kill.

The World is Not Enough begins like all other James Bond movies – with an action sequence that somehow or another gets the story line into motion. After the death of a prominent arms dealer, 007 narrowly escapes a money launderer and a not-so-fatal explosion. Of course, you all know what happens after this. As in every other James Bond movie, revenge seems to be the primary motive for the film's progresses. Bond is sent to protect Elektra King (Sophie Marceau, known for her work in French films as, surprise, surprise, a sex kitten), the heir to her father's multi-million dollar oil industry, as she builds the longest oil pipeline through Turkey, Iran, Russia, and other small former Russian republics. From whom is he protecting her? Why, a super villain of course.

Renard (Robert Carlyle, star of the off-beat, brilliant British comedy The full Monty) is a criminal terrorist who is shot in the head by 009. Unfortunately, this attempt on his life fails and Renard ends up with a bullet in his head. A bullet that was slowly cutting through his mendula oblongata. Unlike Adam Sandler's Waterboy, this bullet cuts off all feeling, including pain.

The things that follow are typical of every Bond film – brilliantly directed and choreographed action scenes. Russians and gadgets are plentiful in this film, along with the new kick-ass Bond car. Where once James Bond drove an Austin Martin with all the trimmings, the new Bond drives a souped-up BMW, which puts every other pimped-out vehicle to shame.

And what would a Bond film be without the women? Ah yes, the Bond women, possibly the most famous women in movie history. Not many men know who Susan B. Anthony or Betsy Ross are, but every James Bond fan knows of Pussy Galore (from the classic Goldfinger) and Octopussy (the female lead of Sean Connery's return as Bond in the mid-eighties in Octopussy). Many of today's stars have jumpstart-

Turn to BOND, page 7

COURTESY KEITH HAMSHERE

James Bond and Sophie Marceau as Elektra King in a tight position from The World Is Not Enough

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

This weekend proved very interesting at the box office, as the top three films all broke box office records in one way or another.

James Bond dominated this weekend's field, as the 19th and latest installment of the franchise became the most successful Bond to date. The World is Not Enough opened to an awesome $37.2 million (better than Pokemon!) on an astounding 3163 screens. Despite the high screen count, the 007 flick still managed a phenomenal $11,761 per-screen average for the weekend. For comparison, Tomorrow Never Dies averaged only $8942 on fewer screens (2807) for a $25.1 million open.

However, it was not Bond's tally that made the weekend special; it was Sleepy Hollow's equally impressive total that set a record. Sleepy Hollow grossed $30.5 million on the weekend, marking the first time in history that two different films have opened to $30+ million in the same weekend. Tim Burton's latest teaming with Johnny Depp averaged $9954 on 3064 screens. These numbers would normally be good enough to top the charts, but Bond was not to be denied this weekend.

The third, and in some ways the most satisfying, record this weekend at the box office was set by Pokemon: The First Movie. After smashing all sorts of box office records on its way to a $31 million weekend, the family film managed only $13.3 million over this past frame. That's an abysmal 57 percent drop, marking the first time ever that a film opening at more than $30 million has lost over half its business the following weekend. Want more bad news? Pokemon's per-screen average fell from over $10,000 to a very banal $4371 on the same number of screens. Ouch!!

The effects of this weekend's two big openers was pretty evident on the rest of the field, as big percentage drops were the rule.

In fourth place was The Bone Collector, a movie that had held up well until now. Its $6.3 million, though, was a 46 percent drop in business from the previous week. Looking at the rest of the top ten, that wasn't bad.

Despite good reviews, a young hip

COURTESY KEITH HAMSHERE

Denise Richards becomes the latest sex symbol to take over the role of a Bond girl.

cast, and an impressive per-screen performance last week, Dogma still tumbled 53 percent into fifth place. Kevin Smith's latest collected $4.1 million this weekend and has grossed $15.8 million to date.

Next, some credit has to be given to Anywhere But Here, which had the smallest percentage drop of any film in the top ten. The Susan Sarandon film garnered $3.3 million on the weekend, which was only 41 percent drop-off. Still, with Thanksgiving coming up quickly, this will likely be soon forgotten.

Anywhere narrowly edged out Michael Mann's The Insider. Oscar buzz and good reviews have kept this film afloat, as it pulled in $2.9 million for the weekend. Despite the respectable 42 percent drop, a film needs to be big, or needs to be there in December to get any Oscar consideration. The Insider looks as if it will be neither.

Moving from a good performance to a hideous one, Luc Besson's latest, The Messenger, was sent a message by audiences and critics alike. The loan of Arc morality tale fell an abysmal 61 percent, meaning that the $2.5 million weekend is the last memory the public will have of this movie.

Likewise, Chris O'Donnell's

Turn to MOVIES page 7

Batman auteur returns with quirky tale, Sleepy Hollow

COURTESY YAHOO.COM

The angelic Christina Ricci stars with the macabre Johnny Depp in another Tim Burton fairy tale, Sleepy Hollow

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Sleepy Hollow
Directed by Tim Burton with Johnny Depp and Christina Ricci
Playing at the Academy of Music

Tim Burton has long since established himself as a master of visuals and a connoisseur of the quirky, making him the perfect person to direct the screen adaptation of Washington Irvine's story, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow." Fog laden villages, headless horseman, wacky special effects - it's all right up Burton's alley. However, it is probably the influence of the first two Batman films, both directed by Burton, which can be seen most in Sleepy Hollow.

That is, Sleepy Hollow is offbeat and very funny. Immediately Burton gives us the staunch, somewhat haughty, scientist Ichabod Crane on the verge of a new century, the 19th, stuck in New York City where brute force prevails over more logical crime-fighting methods. In order to be rid of him, the town officials send him to the small town of Sleepy Hollow, where three murders have already taken place.

Here, the stark contrasts and a whimsical performance by Johnny Depp provide the movie with much-needed humor. The determined city constable is immediately met by the peculiarities of small town politics. Furthermore, Crane's attempts to put forth a facade of authority are constantly thwarted by his own squeamishness and general dislike of blood. In fact, Crane has an unlikely tendency to faint upon witnessing particularly nasty sights. The head being severed and then stolen doesn't jive well with a jumpy Ichahod. The greatest contrast though is between Crane's science-based logic and the fantastic nature of the killer.

Here Sleepy Hollow slips somewhat. Once Crane sees the headless horseman, he accepts the otherworldly nature of the crimes rather quickly. In addition, the movie resolves these issues rather clumsily by having Crane deduce that a human is in fact controlling the horseman, delving into a world of magic and spells. Through the use of flashbacks to Crane's past and the character of Katrina Van Tassel, Ichabod comes face to face with a power beyond his understanding.

Eventually, Crane's investigation leads to Katrina. After all, it only seems logical that a witch who knows how to cast magical spells would be the one to control the horseman. Thereby science comes into conflict with magic, ruining the budding romance between the two. Burton dresses this relationship up nicely, focusing on Depp's jet-black exterior, contrasted with Ricci's newfound blonde hair and pristine clothing.

The rest of the film would like you to believe that this conflict is a focal point, but Sleepy Hollow never really makes it work. Unlike Contact, in which Jodie Foster's scientist and Matthew McConaughey's theologian struggle with such philosophical issues, Ichahod and Katrina just kind of gloss over their fundamental differences.

Still, the combination of Burton and Depp is undeniable. Just as the routine of the galloping horseman is about to become monotonous, Burton reveals another part of the mystery, renewing the audience's intrigue. And Depp is simply mesmerizing in an absolutely ingenious comic role. At once, he's a combination of Michael Keaton, Dudley Do-Right, and Hercule Poirot – hapless, but endearing and brilliant nonetheless.

Sleepy Hollow is entertaining. It's a good mystery, keeping the audience interested to the very end, even if that end is somewhat disappointing. If you're a Tim Burton fan, then you'll definitely appreciate Sleepy Hollow, and if you're not, then the movie is worth seeing anyway. B

FREE DELIVERY

3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99

PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S ®

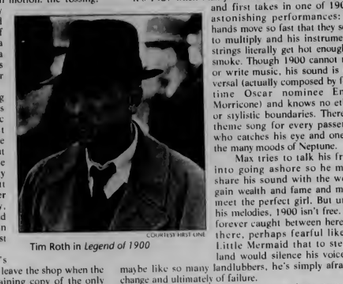
331 Russell Street, Hadley

586-7272

HOURS OF OPERATION:
Mon - Wed 11am - 1am,
Thurs & Sun 11am - 2am,
Fri & Sat 11am - 3am

Now Accepting:
VISA MasterCard OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan

1 LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $6.99
1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99



•Not Valid with any other offer •Valid only at participatin locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax •Additional toppings extra

Tornatore steers Legend of 1900 into powerful, poetic territory

By Rita Kempley
Washington Post

The Legend of 1900, an enchanting, staggeringly beautiful epic at sea, is poetry in motion: the tossing, gently rocking, ever-changing salty rhythms of the Atlantic. Directed by Italy's Giuseppe Tornatore of Cinema Paradiso, the film is a hopelessly romantic fable about a gifted pianist (Tim Roth) who was born on an ocean liner and never once set foot on land.

The story of this ocean-going nomad, who is known simply as 1900, is based on a dramatic monologue by Italian novelist Alessandro Baricco. The movie marks the English-language debut of Tornatore, who also wrote the tender, enigmatic, oddly slangy screenplay. Max (endearing Pruitt Taylor Vince), the jazz trumpeter who narrates 1900's life story, sounds more like one of Raymond Chandler's gumshoes than an aging hepcat nostalgic for the best years of his life.

COURTESY MIST ONE

Tim Roth in Legend of 1900

Max, so hard up that he's pawning his trumpet, is about to leave the shop when the shopkeeper plays the only remaining copy of the only recording 1900 ever made. Upon learning that it came from a rusting ship scheduled for immediate destruction, Max rushes to the shipyard to stop the demolition crew. He's certain that 1900 is still aboard, but must use all of his storytelling powers to convince the crew that the musical virtuoso ever existed.

The legend begins when Danny Boodmann (delightful Bill Nunn), a burly stoker, discovers an abandoned newborn in the ship's first-class lounge. Since the child is born on the first day of the new century, Danny christens him 1900 and lovingly rears him in the ship's great belly. He slumbers peacefully in his tiny hammock as Danny and his crewmates feed the Virginian's engines.

When he eventually loses his adopted father, the devastated boy wanders into the lounge where Danny found him, crawls onto the piano bench and begins to play a mournful, perfectly executed elegy. Time passes quickly as it does in movies, and the prodigy has suddenly become a handsome, immaculately dressed, dizzyingly proficient musician.

It's 1927 when Max joins the band of the Virginian and first takes in one of 1900's astonishing performances: his hands move so fast that they seem to multiply and his instrument's strings literally get hot enough to smoke. Though 1900 cannot read or write music, his sound is universal (actually composed by four-time Oscar nominee Ennio Morricone) and knows no ethnic or stylistic boundaries. There's a theme song for every passenger who catches his eye and one for the many moods of Neptune.

Max tries to talk his friend into going ashore so he might share his sound with the world, gain wealth and fame and maybe meet the perfect girl. But unlike his melodies, 1900 isn't free. He's forever caught between here and there, perhaps fearful like the Little Mermaid that to step on land would silence his voice. Or maybe like so many landlubbers, he's simply afraid of change and ultimately of failure.

Roth, best known for playing thugs, is no stranger to tortured artists, having played van Gogh in Robert Altman's 1990 "Vincent & Theo." But van Gogh was not known for his tenderness, a quality much in evidence in Roth's work here. Furthermore, he has a fine way with a Steinway, looks grand in his swell threads and moves about the ship with the assurance of Rick in Casablanca.

When it comes to his way with women, however, 1900 is awkward, even dumbstruck. (His adopted father told him a "mania" was a fast horse, and that's all he ever learned about the opposite sex.) Forever seduced by the sounds of the sea, there's only one "she" for him, and that is the Virginian. The Legend of 1900 would have benefited from more story and less music, and tends to wear thin before it quite reaches the dock, but it is a ravishing film. Fitanic should have looked so good.

COURTESY KELVIN JONES

Less than a Light Year
Buzz Lightyear (Tim Allen) and Woody (Tom Hanks) finally return to the big screen with Toy Story 2, only two days away.

The latest fashion news

By Maria Blackburn
Baltimore Sun

Sam Calagione isn't known for his wardrobe. He's known for his beer.

The founder of Dogfish Head Craft Brewery, makers of four best-selling Delaware craft beers, usually wears nothing fancier than a dirty T-shirt, khakis, and a pair of low-top Chuck Taylors to work.

So the fact that Calagione appears in a national advertising campaign for Slates clothing, shot by famed fashion photographer Richard Avedon, certainly seems like a leap, especially to Calagione. "I think Richard Avedon would cringe at how I dress in real life," deadpans the brewer, who appears in the ads dressed as a European hipster in a black leather jacket, red shirt, and gray pants.

Slates, which is owned by the Levi-Strauss company, chose Calagione for his entrepreneurial spirit, not his fashion sense. He is one of six young businessmen featured in the campaign to promote "sophisticated, casual" clothing for men. The ads appear this month in Entertainment Weekly, Esquire, and the New York Times Magazine, among others.

Even after the fashion shoot, Calagione – who got to keep the new outfit – wasn't about to change his ways. "The only time entrepreneurs dress up like that is to go to banks to borrow money," he said, laughing.

Slates clothing is available at higher department stores. Visit www.slates.com for information on a store near you.

Remember when blue nail polish turned heads, and black nail polish made strangers stop and stare? Those days are over. Nail polish isn't as popular as it used to be. After three years of double-digit growth, nail polish sales have lost some of their shine. By the middle of the year, dollar sales had fallen about three percent, according to Women's Wear Daily. The first sign of a drop in nail polish sales came in 1998, when sales flattened.

Chanel's 1ump, that deep reddish-black shade introduced in 1995, is credited with igniting the boon in polish sales and changing the color palette in cosmetics from reds and pinks, to blues, blacks, whites, and basically just about anything. A decrease in the number of 10- to 13-year-olds buying nail polish is cited as a reason for the drop in sales. Tanya Mandor of Revlon told WWD recently:

• Young women have moved onto the next thing, she explained: "beaded bracelets."

Crisp, sunny, autumn days are perfect leather jacket weather. And leather skirt weather. And leather pants weather. Some fall trends in leather from the Leather Apparel Association:

Motocross mania. Zip-up jackets with banded collars for women, quilted elbow and shoulder patches for men.

Reversible. Two looks in one. Try leather on one side, wool or fur on the other, in drawstring men's coats and long women's coats.

Shearling. What is old is new again. Shearling (natural lamb pelts) gets updated with raw edges, shaggy fur, embroidery, and handmade-looking seam details.

Give your honey the best Christmas present ever this year – a private jet. That's right, no more fighting for arm rests, no more lousy perky flight attendants, and no more screaming children (except for your own) when you travel by air. The good people at Neiman-Marcus are asking a mere $32.25 million for an unfurnished Boeing Business Jet in their 1999 Christmas Book. The jet has 837 square feet of lounging room and accommodates eight to 25 passengers. Alas, that price does not include pillows and little bags of hones-roasted peanuts. For a custom interior on your jet – a must-have expect to pay about $45 million. Items of note in this wish book to end all wish books include an original manuscript of "The Night Before Christmas" ($795,000), a surrealist chess set by Salvador Dali ($15,000), and an original song composed just for you by famed dance-band leader Peter Duchin ($35,000).

Call 800-NEIMANS for a copy of the Neiman-Marcus 1999 Christmas catalog. And have your credit card ready. The catalog costs $6.50.

movies

continued from page 6

The Bachelor made its final appearance in the top ten. The $100 million premise was only good enough for a $2.5 million weekend and $17.4 million overall. Ironic, isn't it?

Finally, Being John Malkovich brought some much needed fresh air to this week's top ten. The film, which has been well received by just about everyone, finally broke into the top ten with $1.9 million for the weekend on 590 screens. That's an increase of about 150 screens, which means that distributor USA Films is likely eyeing Thanksgiving for its widest release.

Toy Story 2 and End of Days will both hit the box office in a big way this Wednesday, and all during the Thanksgiving weekend.

bond

continued from page 6

ed their careers playing these sex symbols, including Kim Basinger, Denise Richards, the preppy rich girl in 1998's suspense/soft porn movie Wild Things jumps into the role as the new Bond girl.

She plays Christmas Jones, a nuclear specialist who is stationed in a small Russian republic dismantling abandoned nuclear devices, which is not an unusual plot twist for a Bond film. In fact this movie seems to re-use and recycle elements from other Bond films, including a henchmen with metal teeth (oh, this time gold instead of steel. I wonder if the makers of these James Bond films have stopped viewing the plots. They just get ideas for characters, and then put plot elements on a dartboard and throw darts. Whatever they hit is the structure of the next film.

Maybe, it's more like a checklist. Well, we've already used the Media Mogul, the crazy German scientist, and we have Furrst out the character of a runaway Russian officer; however, we've only used the invincible man once.

But no one thinks they are getting an original movie when they go see James Bond films. They go to see James Bond. Movies are meant to entertain and this is exactly what The World is Not Enough does: it keeps the audience enjoying the film and the James Bond franchise.

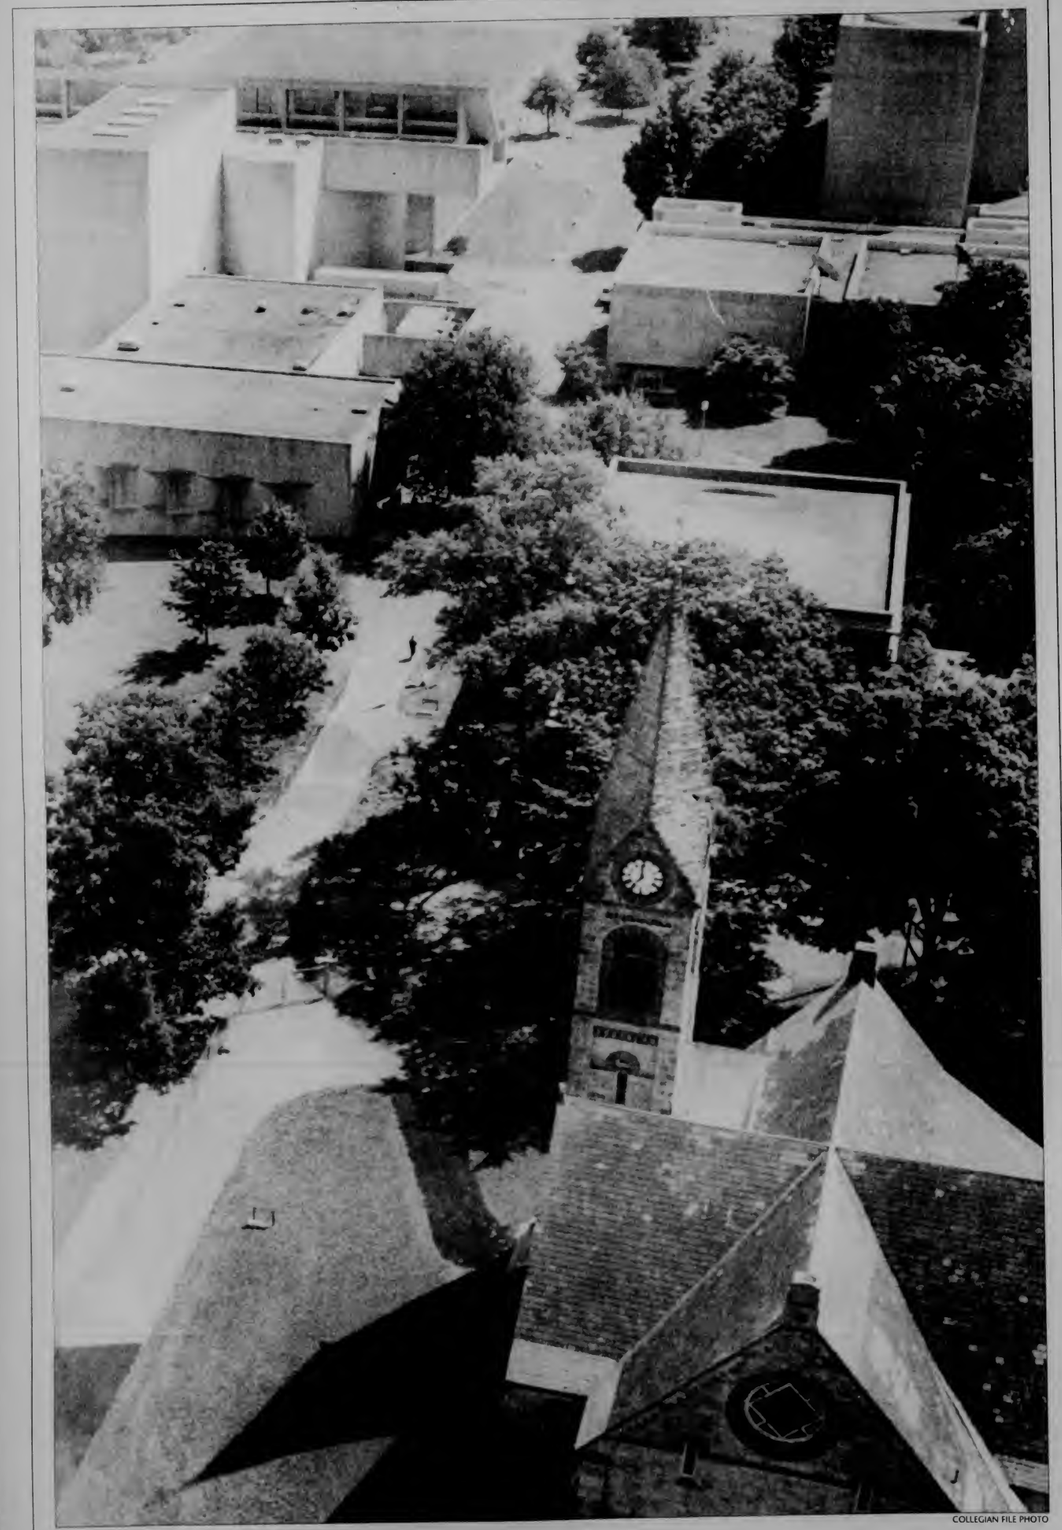
Movie Grade: C
James Bond Movie Grade: B

BRUISED BODY?

Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.

DANA Body Shop

968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass. 586-7250



Before you go home and eat your turkey...

UMass vs University of Vermont

DATE: Tuesday, Nov. 23,1999
TIME: 7:00PM
WHERE: William D. Mullins Center

UMass Hockey

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

A View From The Heavens
The library isn't just for studying anymore. It also offers a wonderful view of the center of the University of Massachusetts campus.

Women's hoops drops pair in southern swing

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Opening the 1999 season with a pair of tough road games must have seemed like a novel idea to the Maroon and White. But after a dismal first chapter, the team is undoubtedly hoping for the plot to twist back in its favor.

The Massachusetts women's basketball team was a story of desire in a pair of Carolina battles this weekend, but couldn't close the book on determined Clemson and North Carolina-Charlotte. The Maroon and White (0-2) fell 67-52 in its season opener with the Lady Tigers at Littlejohn Arena on Friday, then bowed to the 49ers 65-54 at Halton Arena yesterday.

Clemson (1-0) took advantage of early UM foul trouble to distance itself from the Maroon and White in the opening frame of Friday's action. The Minutewomen had rocketed out to a 6-0 lead behind a four-point outburst from sophomore Caroline Nehls, but the Lady Tigers shot back out front at the 13:14 mark behind junior guard Nuria Forns. As Nehls, guard Tonia Thomas, and forward Jennifer Butler found themselves saddled with three fouls apiece over the next ten minutes, Clemson was able to pad its lead behind the explosive scoring of Forns and senior forward Datishella Byrd, each of whom netted 15 points.

The Lady Tigers' edge stood at 36-29 when the halftime buzzer sounded, due in part to UM's 15 fouls in the initial frame.

The Minutewomen did their best to claw back in the second half, but turnovers and inefficient field goal shooting from the Maroon and White kept Clemson out of striking distance. UMass committed 25 turnovers in the contest, while connecting on only 33 percent of its shots from the field.

Clemson	67
Massachusetts	52

UNC - Charlotte	65
Massachusetts	54

The Lady Tigers used an 11-0 run around the 6:38 mark to widen their lead to 17. The Minutewomen responded with a little run of their own, as Nehls went to the rack for a lay-up and senior tri-captain Alison MacFarland connected from three-point range. But Clemson coach Jim Davis made sure his team kept its focus, and cooler heads prevailed as the Lady Tigers converted on 3 of 5 free throw chances to close out the win.

Even in defeat, UM coach Joanie O'Brien had some positive signs to point to from her squad. MacFarland put up excellent numbers in the loss (10 points, eight rebounds), while sophomore Nekole Smith collected 13 boards to accompany her eight point effort. Freshman Butler put on a prodigal performance in her collegiate debut, tallying eight points and nine rebounds for the Maroon and White.

Sunday's showdown with UNC-Charlotte (1-1) saw the Maroon and White once again struggling to put up points amidst a shower of bricks. UMass shot a dismal 30 percent from the field in the first half (10 of 30) including a forgettable 1 of 9 from beyond the three-point line.

Foul trouble was once again a factor in UM's struggles, as the Minutewomen sent Charlotte to the free throw stripe 13 times in the first half. The 49ers led 32-24 at the break, after shooting 40 percent from the field (10 of 25).

Even as the Maroon and White tried to up the ante in the second frame, Charlotte got hot and trumped UMass behind ace guard Tonya Phifer. In 55 minutes of play, Phifer knocked down 20 points on 6 of 10 shooting from the field, while collecting three rebounds and three assists. The foul line was also kind to Phifer; the Charlotte native converted 7 of 8 freebies in the win.

The entire 49er team seemed to have the Midas touch in the second half, as Charlotte shot 50 percent from the field (13 of 26). The Minutewomen responded with a little firepower of their own, courtesy of MacFarland (11 points, eight rebounds) and Thomas (16 points). But UMass was plagued by inconsistency throughout the contest, as Smith and Thomas combined to shoot an atrocious 8 of 27 from the field.

Point guard Kathy Coyner did a bang-up job distributing the ball (eight assists) but never quite found her shooting touch: the Ohio native missed all five of her field goal attempts and had to settle for four free throws as her output for the afternoon.

Butler's performance against Charlotte proved that her breakout in the season opener was no fluke. The Brooklyn original rocked Charlotte for ten points and seven rebounds, shooting a cool 5 of 7 from the field and adding a steal as well. Only two games into her career, the 6-foot-3 Murray Burtraum graduate has already established herself as a legitimate double-double threat for the Maroon and White.

O'Brien's troops will look to regroup tomorrow, when they trek to Worcester for a 6:30 p.m. showdown with Holy Cross.

Alison MacFarland scored 24 points in the Minutewomen's two losses to Clemson and UNC-Charlotte

UM claws past Huskies with 7-4 win

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

It could have been any of a number of factors that inspired the Massachusetts hockey team to victory. Was it the rivalry weekend with Connecticut, playing in front of a home crowd, or just scrapping for a win? No matter what, the Minutemen came out storming and exploded for a season high scoring onslaught en route to their 7-4 domination of the Huskies.

The Maroon and White scored early and often and kept relentless pressure on UConn goalie Marc Senerchia, but the Huskies would not roll over, clawing back to tie the Minutemen at 3-3 and 4-4.

UMass dented the twine twice in a span of 21 seconds with tallies by Martin Miljko and Tim Turner to give the Maroon and White the early lead, a lead that they would have to fight to maintain all night.

"You have to give UConn credit. One thing they did is they fought back. We'd get a goal then they'd get a goal... and we'd get a goal and they'd get a goal. That's the sign of a good, hard-working team," coach Joe Mallen said.

Miljko's goal was not only a great start for a Minutemen team in need of a win, but more important than the lead was the fact that the tally came on the power play, a part of the game that UMass has had little success on this season.

Since Mallen went to four forwards on the power play, the Maroon and White have blistered opposing netminders despite not posting any goals. Kris Wallis was inserted at the blue line against Lowell, and the first of point for his efforts came Friday. Wallis fired a shot that Senerchia stopped, but Miljko was on the doorstep waiting for a rebound. When the rebound popped loose, the sophomore wasted no time lighting the lamp, slipping the puck in for a 1-0 lead.

Even with the power play rejuvenated, the most celebrated goal of the night came from Taylor. The freshman forward's goal was the first of his collegiate career and put the Minutemen up 2-0. After the Taylor goal, UConn called a time out to regroup, and that they did.

Less than a minute after the Huskies chatted at the bench, Evan Stensrud blistered a shot from the point that beat a screened Markus Helanen to cut the Minutemen lead in half.

With the lead at 2-1, the power play once again became a factor.

A Husky penalty at 29 seconds of the second period opened the door for UMass. Miljko took a pass from Jeff Blanchard, a blasted a shot past Senerchia, which gave the Maroon and White a two-goal lead once again. Miljko's goal was his second of the game and his fourth in the last two games.

But those pesky Huskies scored consecutive goals to tie the game at three. Andy Huggett and Matt Herhal tallied the two UConn goals. Huggett's goal came off a face-off deep in the UMass zone. Ryan Murphy won the draw, clean and took a slap shot that beat Helanen. Herhal tallied the Huskies' third goal by finishing great passes from Ciro Longobardi and Mike Anderson. Herhal found himself on the doorstep and made the most of his chance.

Jeff Turner put up the fourth UMass goal on an odd man rush that started off as a 2-on-1 and eventually became a 3-on-2. Turner finished on the pass from Ray Geever and Jedd Crumb. But as quickly as the lead came, it was once again surrendered when Kurt Kamienski beat Helanen on a goal that resembled that of Herhal's.

The turning point of the game came on L. Turner's second goal of the game. With the score tied at four and UConn on the power play, Turner made the save on Blanchard's effort to get to the puck by parking himself in the slot and beating Senerchia.

That was a big goal in question. Stephanchuk said, nice play by Blanchard coming to Turner, nice finish," Wallis said.

The goal turned out to be the dagger for the hearts of the Huskies. Helanen was replaced by Mike Johnson and UMass stepped it up a notch on defense to protect him, giving up only six shots in the third period, just as the defense stepped up, the offense did not subside, tallying two more goals.

Jedd Crumb put in his third of the season and Wallis finished off the night with his first.

Martin Miljko had two goals and Jeff Blanchard had three assists in the Minutemen's 7-4 thrashing of UConn

UM explodes for 7

Miljko leads the way with 2

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

There were plenty of frustrating moments in the offensive end for the Massachusetts hockey team in its first seven games of the season.

Eleven goals a 1-for-37 performance on the power play and, maybe worst of all, a 1-5-1 record to show for their solid efforts.

At the same time that the Minutemen struggled to score it seemed like they were running some bad luck as well. UMass outshot outhit and outplayed its opponent on practically every occasion, but usually came up with nothing to show for it. Even in the one game the Maroon and White won, it took 36 shots and a goal late in overtime to beat Army.

Friday night at the William D. Mullins Center, UMass finally broke through offensively in a 7-4 win over Connecticut. The hosts outshot the Huskies 42-17 en route to a crucial regional victory and their second win of the year.

More importantly though, was the shot in the arm that the Minutemen received by earning two points. For once dominating an opponent translated into a favorable margin on the final scoreboard.

"Like I've been saying all along, we've been playing good. We've been outplaying, outhitting, and outshooting our opponents," UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "It's been tough, but I was happy for our guys tonight."

UMass dictated the pace of the game from the opening face-off, and never gave the Huskies a chance. What was different about this game, though, was what the Minutemen were able to accomplish in comparison to their earlier struggles.

The power play was one of the sore spots for the Maroon and White from the season opener against Colgate. In fact, the lone goal with the man advantage came in a 4-1 loss to Boston College back on Oct. 23.

Friday night however UMass didn't look like a team who had been without a power play goal for almost a month. The Minutemen kept the pressure on UConn goalie Marc Senerchia with an array of screens and deflections. Martin Miljko struck first with a power play goal with 5:33 mark of the game. Then added another tally 1:32 into the second period.

Since single goals get plenty goals in bunches have been tough to come by for the Minutemen this year, what took place after Miljko's first goal is also of great importance. Only 21 seconds after the sophomore forward lit the lamp, freshman winger Tim Turner rattled a shot off the post and past Senerchia for a 2-0 lead. That quick spurt was critical to the layout of the rest of the game, as it allowed the Minutemen to hold the upper hand for the entire game.

"We made some adjustments tonight. With the midfield forwards that the [UMass] had when you give them time and space like we did they're pretty be able to have some success," UConn hockey coach Bruce Marshall said.

Sometimes [illegible] have to be made [illegible] place, like in the case of [illegible] handed goals. Would one of the strong points for the Minutemen this season, it seemed only fitting when Jeff Turner notched the game winning goal with a slam down no-less.

"That goal was [illegible] Anytime you get a [illegible] goal, especially [illegible] when the game was [illegible] it's big," Turner said.

Now as long as the Minutemen continue to put all of the pieces of the puzzle together then the wins will follow right behind.

■ hoops

continued from page 12

left in the game, Mack drained a 15-footer to become the 34th player in Minuteman history to eclipse the 1,000-point plateau. A streak did come to an end, however, as Mack was not in the starting lineup for the first time in his 63-game career.

In his debut as a Minuteman, St. Johns transfer Shannon Crooks came out slow, hitting a baseline jumper with 9:36 remaining in the first half marking his only points before intermission. When Iona built its biggest lead of the evening, a 47-38 advantage with 17:27 left in the game, Crooks came off the bench to score five points as UMass ran off nine straight points to tie the game at 47 apiece with 15:28 remaining. DePina capped the run with a 3-pointer from the left wing.

After a slow start, in which he turned the ball twice in the game's first two minutes, DePina settled down, scoring 11 points and dishing out a team-high four assists. More importantly, he committed just one turnover in the second half.

"He played great tonight. He made some great plays," Flint said. "In order for us to have a good team, we need him to play well."

UMass also must crash the boards like it did in the second half Saturday. Iona had a 24-23 rebound advantage heading into the locker rooms, but the Minutemen responded after the break, outboarding the much bigger Gaels 23-15.

Early on, the game went back and forth until Iona went on a 10-2 run to give the Gaels a 28-21 lead at the 7:13 mark of the first half. Leland Norris drained both free throws after Kitwana Rhymer committed his third personal foul.

Rhymer, in just 11 minutes of playing time, scored a career-high 12 points and added seven rebounds. He fouled out late in the second half, but only after the game was well out of reach.

Complete The Sweep...
Go UMass, Beat UConn!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Boulders. $387 flexible avail. Call Chris 256-1629

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Ford Escort 95,000 miles, 4 DR, auto, perfect condition, no rust $1,700 253-1303

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1989 Chevy Corsica AT, AC, cruise only 91k miles great condition $2600 call TJ 256-2147

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Pentium III 500MHZ, ABIT BEG Motherboard, 128MBSRAM, ATI3DRAGEFURY. Graphics card 24xCD Burner, TOSHIBA6X DVD, 17" MAG Monitor, 56kModem, NEC Superscript870 Lazer Printer, $2100 or BO Jimmy 253-8074 3 weeks old.

Laptop PC Fujitsu Pentium, CD Rom, 32 mRam, 2G Hard drive. $599.95. Michael at 253-0473

COMPUTERS

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Are you a sport or fitness enthusiast? Earn two academic credits for teaching the GPE program. For more information call the GPE Office at 545-2338

TUTORS/ TRANSLATORS

Bilingual/for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Bengali, Hungarian, Japanese, Khmer, Korean, Mongolian, Portuguese, and Tibetan. Call ESL Office at 413-549-9857 Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/ Equal Opportunity Employer

December Grads: Entry-level position with great opportunity for advancement and responsibility available. Need high GPA and interest in high-tech industry, interviewing on campus Dec. 1st. send resumes to gel@scientific.com www.scientific.com/joinSPI

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards no experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Business Internships Available Not limited to business majors. Earn up to $15,000 this summer. Call 1-800-390-4848 Ext. 100 ASAP or visit www.univ-paint.com

Bartenders Make $100-$300 per night no experience necessary call 1-800-440-0155

Personal Care Attendent for male quad mornings $9.50/hr. Call 546-0666

Part-Time Outdoor Specialty Sporting goods. Experience in the outdoors and retail helpful. Call 253-0473 For more info.

ONE SUMMER. A LIFETIME OF EXPERIENCE. I could spend this summer learning someone else's business. Or I could be running my own. For more info visit our website and register to win a palm pilot. www.collegeproedge.com or call 888-277-7962

Office staff needed for a booming Internet company. Learn skills and pay your bills. Many positions available. Call 549-1441

Campaign Jobs For The Environment $300-$400/wk, F/T, P/T, + Career opportunities. Call Jesse 256-6434

EMPLOYMENT

Talent Search: We need new faces for amateur modeling opportunities. Must have a good attitude and a desire to have fun! $30.00+ per hour, no experience necessary. Call 584-4665

Earn $500 weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Work from home up to $25 an hour part time to $35 an hour full time. Mail Order 1-888-300-5070

Home Health Aids, excellent pay & benefits. Opportunity to help people in local area. 1-800-229-5075 ext. 281

Take the Power Back! Clean Water Action is hiring environmental activists. Best job this side of the vanishing ozone layer. $7.30-$9.00/hr. Eve/Wknd hours. Call 413-584-9830

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE

All East Season Passes only $350. Ski + Board 7 mtns all season anytime Hurry! Offer ends Dec. 5 call Mark 413-527-3524

Car Stereo Pioneer CD Player perfect condition $150 Call Joanna 253-6829

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. On bus route. Call 256-0364

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bdr in 4 Bedroom House Oil Heat. No pets. Non-smoker. 10 mins from Amherst in Belchertown $263/month, utilities extra. Call Chris 323-0899 Leave a message

ROOMMATE WANTED

One Bedroom in 3 Bedroom Available Dec. Mill Valley. Heat + Ht.Wtr. Included $440+ a month. Sarah 253-1793

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

LAGNAF In Quebec Dec 3-5 Party/Ski only $149! Call Ski N' Board Club 5-3437

Party with UMass Ski N' Board Club for the Millennium Quebec City/Hilton 5 nites/4days $299 Dec28-Jan2 Social opportunity age is 18 sign up now, space is selling out bus option available... call 545-3437

Ski Breckenridge Co. 1/3-1/10 from $769 Roundtrip airfare 7 nights lodging 5 day lift ticket UMass Ski N' board Club 545-3437

TRAVEL

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Pricel 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

The Classifieds... Your answer!

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Volunteers needed for Exercise Science study. Must be female, age 20-25. Receive information about fitness level and 50% off spring membership to UMass Body Shop. Contact Shannon at 545-9443

Can I Help You?

Maybe The Collegian Classifieds Can!!

Call 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, NOV. 22

Monday, Nov. 22

Rally – There will be a walk-out rally entitled "Hands Around the Pond" at 12:30 p.m. on the Student Union Lawn.

NOTICES

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Duyst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multidimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*Not Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Hosting Services Cable Network

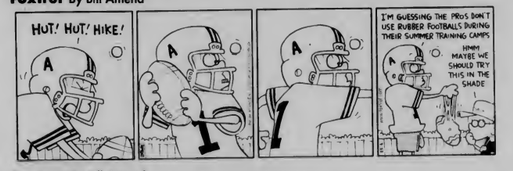
HSCN Bulletin Board		NBC/22 Springfield	Great to Gavel
CBS/3	Hartford	CNN Headline News
CBS/4	Boston	CNN
ABC/5	Boston	CNN Fn
PBS/57	Springfield	CNN SI
HSCN	Movie Ch.	BET
UPN/20	Hartford	College TV Network
Weather Channel		Univision
NBC/30 New Britain		Comedy Central
Fox/61	Hartford	Cartoon Network
PBS/24	Hartford	TV Land
WGBH & HSCN International		C-Span
Univ. Academic TV		ESPN Classic
WB/New Haven		History Channel
Sundance		HSCN Programming
The Learning Channel
UVC-TV19
ABC/40 Springfield

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 22, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (R)		Frontline "Apocalypse!" (In Stereo)				"John F. Kennedy"
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King		Raymond	Becker	Family Law "Hot vs. Hot"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Entertainment	King		Ladies Man	Ladies Man	Family Law "Hot vs. Hot"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		NFL Football: Oakland Raiders at Denver Broncos (In Stereo Live)				News
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven "Dirty Laundry"		Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel of Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Moesha	Parkers	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Edde	News	Real TV (R)	Change-Heart	Caroline
WVIT	40	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Friends (R)	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Fraser	Seinfeld	Friends	Time of Your Life (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal "Troubled Waters"		News		Friends	Fraser
WWLP	22	News	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Friends (R)	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (R)		NFL Football: Oakland Raiders at Denver Broncos (In Stereo Live)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fraser	20/20					Fraser	Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld		NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Carolina Hurricanes. (Live)						"Forever Young" (1992) Mel Gibson.
WTBS	29	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Forever Young" (1992, Fantasy) Mel Gibson, Jamie Lee Curtis.						Law & Order "Benevolence"
A&E	59	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Poison by"		Biography: Kris Kristofferson		Investigative Reports		Poirot "Wasps' Nest"		Sports	Moneyline
CNN	30	Moneyline Newshour		Moneyline Newshour	Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Daily Show	Stein's Money
COM	26	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Armed and Dangerous" (1986, Comedy) John Candy.				Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	63	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Wild Asia		On the Inside "Macy's Parade"		Ultimate Guide "Crocodiles" (R)		Shark Attack Files II (R)		On the Inside "Macy's Parade"
ESPN	27	(5:45) Sportscenter		Monday Night Countdown				College Basketball: N. Carolina vs. S. California				Timber Series	ESPNews
LIFE	62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Beyond Chance		Model Mission (Head Trip		Road Rules	Road Rules	Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	65	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	64	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats				Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days
SCIFI	66	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Outer Limits "Birthright"		Outer Limits "Regeneration"		Outer Limits "Sarophagus"		Outer Limits "To Tell the Truth"		Poltergeist: The Legacy
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	Happy Days Reunion (R)		Paramedics "Tough Love"		World's Greatest Child		Incredible Hostage Rescues		Paramedics "Tough Love" (R)
TNT	67	Due South "Juliet is Bleeding"		ER "Days Like That" (In Stereo)		WCW Monday Wars (In Stereo Live)						"3 Ninjas Kick Back" (1994)
USA	69	Baywatch "A Little Help"		JAG "War Stories"		Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw		WWF War Zone		Walker, Texas Ranger
HBO	45	(5:45) ★½ "Turner & Hooch" (1989) PG		Worst Witch		★★ "Good Morning, Vietnam" (1987) Robin Williams. R		★½ "Shadow of Doubt" (1998) Melanie Griffith.		★★ "Lethal Weapon 4" (1998)		Hoop Life
MAX	46	★★ "How Stella Got Her Groove Back" (1998) Angela Bassett.		★½ "Mr. 3000" (1998, Adventure) Bernie Mac.				Oliver Grainer. R		★½ "Pandemic" (1995, Drama) Leon Isaac Kennedy.		★ "Pandemic II" (1982, Drama) Leon Isaac Kennedy.
SHOW	44	★★ "Cousins' Heat" (1991) Dori Arnache. PG		Movie News		★★½ "Pandemic" (1979) Leon Isaac Kennedy.

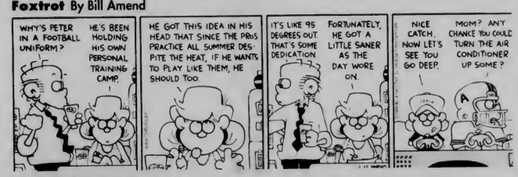
Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

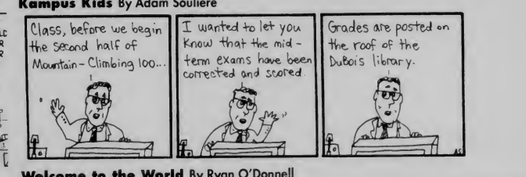


Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Foxtrot By Bill Amend



Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – The potential for both profit and pleasure is high today, but you'll have to make an important decision during the a.m. that may change things.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – What seems to be a game at first is likely to prove quite serious when all is said and done. You don't want to get caught in a trap today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You and a teammate may be having some difficulties communicating at this time. See if you can develop a compromise that will ease tensions.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) You're not interested in following the rules today, but you mustn't make waves for others even as you behave in a rebellious fashion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Concentrate on yourself today, and spend time in and around the home working with family members and other loved ones.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Don't pass judgments too quickly today, and be willing to listen to what others have to say before you decide what should be done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Nothing is likely to be offered to you "gratis" today, but you'll be able to scrape together just enough to satisfy a particular desire.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Someone you know well really means business today. You mustn't make the mistake of thinking that this is just a passing fancy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You may be going through a crisis of confidence, but today is not the day to let your own doubts keep you from tending to your primary duties.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You're in no mood for physical labor today, but perhaps you can get by with doing the planning without getting your hands dirty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You've been neglecting your own creative energies recently, and today it's time to get back on track and follow a course that can really pay off.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Remain open-minded today, and be willing to help those who are battling a formidable enemy. Your involvement can make all the difference.

Quote of the Day

"This sucks."

–Keith Mutsman, 1999 English major graduate, currently unemployed

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

Leold's second Personal Ad

Looking for someone who has absolutely no sense of their own personal worth. Would be willing to relocate away from friends and family, refuses to see a psychotherapist under any circumstances, has a family history of physical infirmity and has already suffered from post traumatic stress disorder at least once.

for picnics. 555-3453

ACROSS

1 Semiprecious stone
5 Muffler
10 Football's Aikman
14 — vera
15 Babe Ruth specialty
16 Hoarfrost
17 Damage
18 Tolerate
19 St. crossers
20 "Do — others"
21 Minister's house
22 Minimum —
23 Hybrid citrus
25 J.R.'s town
27 "Social" ending
28 Cape — cottage
29 Uxmal resident
33 Impetus
38 Roman road
39 Stairs
41 Steal
42 Guinevere's lover
44 Nag
45 Tub
48 Casual shirt
49 Maintenance
52 Where ale is made
56 Bring up a child
57 Provocative one
59 Actor Grey
61 — Strip
62 Excuse
63 Jane Austen novel
64 Child of Aphrodite
65 Booth
66 High notes
67 — gin
68 Tea sweetener
69 Weight units

DOWN

1 Honolulu's island
2 Act like a farmer
3 Important artery
4 Defective car
5 Embarrasses
6 Deep blue
7 Type of acid
8 Cincinnati nine
9 FDR's four —
10 Fishing line
11 Opponent
12 Last Greek letter
13 Affirmatives
24 Card-player's call
26 Fruit drink
28 Dirty Harry, e.g.
29 Wire measure
30 — loss for words
31 Impulse
32 Curve
33 NYC opera house
34 To the — degree
35 Paving material
36 Guitarlike instrument
37 Cat's sound
39 Hasty and careless
40 Small child
43 Pre-holiday night
44 Make a seam
46 High-pitched
47 In a weird way
48 Tries to persuade
49 Oyster byproduct
50 Musical toy
51 Clean the slate
52 Skater Boitano
53 Throw out forcefully
54 Juliet's beloved
55 Sana's nation
58 Choir voice
60 Aberdeen miss

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

G	A	Y	S		M	I	T	T		S	M	O	G
O	B	O	E		O	R	I	O	N		P	E	E	R
T	O	G	A		S	I	L	O	S		I	L	I	E
S	U	I	T	C	A	S	E		T	A	R	T	L	Y
			A	T		A	R	I	A
P	U	B	L	I	C		W	O	R	K	S
A	L	L	E	N		C	H	I	C		L	O	U
E	T	A		W	A	I	S	T		L	Y	E
A	R	S		E	A	T	S		S	W	E	E	T
N	A	T	C	H	E	R		E	L	I	N	O	I	S
		R	A	K	E		A	D	D
T	H	R	I	L	L		J	A	V	E	L	I	N	S
W	O	E	S		I	D	A	H	O		O	R	A	L
O	M	N	I		E	L	D	E	R		B	O	M	A
S	E	E	S		S	I	E	M	S		K	N	E	W

11-22-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Chicken a la King
Caponata Pocket Sandwich

DINNER
Native American Night

Worcester

LUNCH
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Chicken a la King
Caponata Pocket Sandwich
Tofu a la King

DINNER
Native American Night

Hampshire

LUNCH
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Chicken a la King
Caponata Pocket Sandwich

DINNER
Native American Night

Berkshire

LUNCH
BBQ Pork Sandwich
Chicken a la King
Caponata Pocket Sandwich
Tofu a la King

DINNER
Native American Night

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Vanessa Walker
Photo Technition	Barbara Bradbury
Copy Editor	Samantha Poulten
Production Supervisor	John Burt
Production Staff	Tereza Rodrigues, Alan Basque

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Monday, November 22, 1999

Weekends were made for the Minutemen

Football pummels UConn 62-20 en route to share of Atlantic 10 crown

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Last season, the Huskies of UConn laughed all the way home as they left McGuirk Alumni Stadium with a one-point victory. Clearly outplaying, but the Massachusetts football team, more or less, handed them the game with costly turnovers and missed opportunities.

Saturday was just a laugher.

It wasn't even close. Never. For 60 full minutes, the Minutemen ran straight through the Huskies, taking a 53-point lead in the third quarter and coasting to a 62-20 victory in Amherst.

The victory was the team's seventh in a row, earning UMass a berth in the NCAA I-AA Tournament for the second consecutive season. The Minutemen drew Furman and will travel to Greenville, S.C., on Saturday to take on the 9-2 Paladins. With the victory, the Minutemen also tied James Madison for a share of the Atlantic 10 Conference crown. Last season, the Huskies marched in and out of McGuirk with the victory, taking with them UMass' hopes to win the conference.

UMass (8-3, 7-1 A-10) jumped out to a 38-0 halftime as a blistering hot offense went unchallenged by the conference's worst defense. Marcel Shipp led the charge, scoring the game's first two touchdowns, both from a yard out. Shipp would add another early in the third quarter, his 20th on the season to break the school record for most touchdowns in a season.

In their third possession, the Huskies finally picked up their first first down of the afternoon, but were forced to punt. This time around, Todd Bankhead tossed a 41-yard touchdown pass to sophomore Eric Bross to open the lead to 21 points. Bross and Bankhead would hook up again later in the quarter on a nine-yard connection.

Bankhead was on again, completing 19 of 24 passes for 232 yards, and the two scores to Bross. After three interceptions in the first half against Delaware, Bankhead hasn't taken a step back since, throwing for an average of 275 yards in the past four games, all of which the Minutemen have won.

While still in the game at 21-0, quarterback Luke Richmond quickly cancelled that notion as Jerard White intercepted his pass at the UM 40 and returned it 60 yards down the right sideline to take the wind out of UConn's sails after a pair of Husky first downs.

On Senior Day, it was music to 15 graduates' ears, as they had gone 1-3 against the Huskies in their careers, the only win coming three years ago. Last season, two losses to the hands of the Huskies stung until Saturday when a bandage was quickly placed on the sore.

The Huskies did not score until the 8:38 mark of the third quarter, when replacement Brian Hoffman hit John Taxiluridis on the right sideline, and he scampered into the end zone from 37 yards out to finally light the scoreboard on the UConn side.

At that point, salt was already added to the open wound. By the time Taxiluridis had found an answer for UConn, the Minutemen had scored 14 more points since halftime. With the game out of hand at 45-0 after Shipp completed his hat trick, the reserves joined in as Kevin Quinlan went in from 17 yards out on the left side to provide the Minutemen with their biggest advantage.

The future of the Minutemen was on display late as Deshon Hardy caught a 26-yard touchdown pass from redshirt freshman Kelly Seibert to open UMass' lead to 59-6. Seibert found Hardy on a crossing pattern, dropping the ball perfectly in front of the freshman wide receiver, each registering his first career touchdown.

Richmond, just a sophomore, was unimpressive, completing just three of 17 passes for 60 yards and two intercepetions. However, he did not get help from his receivers, especially junior John Fitzsimmons, who had 5-8 catches to date. Fitzsimmons dropped three passes in the first quarter, including a potential scoring pass in the right corner of the end zone. Hoffman, who hurt the Minutemen for 413 yards in the Huskies' triumph in Storrs last season, provided too little too late, firing two scoring strikes in the second half.

COURTESY DAN SANTELLA

Marcel Shipp ran for 142 yards and three touchdowns to lead the Minutemen in their 62-20 rout of rival UConn.

Thanksgiving in Greenville, SC: Minutemen draw No. 7 Furman

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Unlike last year, the Massachusetts football team was calm after the first two brackets were reported on the NCAA Division I-AA Tournament Selection Show.

With three losses in 1998, the Minutemen waited anxiously as each playoff participant was announced, hanging onto the commentator's every word as he listed the teams that would be playing the following week. The UMass players let out a cheer of both relief and excitement when they were named as the 11th seed, to be playing McNeese State in the opening round of the tournament.

This time around, Massachusetts knew they would be playing. They didn't know who, and they didn't know where, but they knew they would be playing. And so when the first two brackets were released, the Minutemen didn't get worried. When the third out of the four was shown, and UMass wasn't yet announced, the team laughed and conversed comfortably.

"(Last year) the kids didn't know, we didn't know," Massachusetts coach Mark Whipple said. "It was just kind of like when they saw the first bracket, it was kind of like, 'Aw, we didn't get in,' and then they saw the second bracket; 'Aww.' Then all of a sudden they're in the third bracket and there was kind of an anxiety. (This year) they didn't want to see anyone else's highlights; they knew they were in. So it's a little bit different."

With an 8-3 record and a split of the Atlantic 10 title with a 7-1 mark, the Minutemen will be taking the playoffs' 10th shot, and a seven-game winning streak to South Carolina where they will do battle with No. 7 Furman.

It's no secret that last time UMass beat the top two teams in the tournament on its way to the National Title. Unlike last time, the Minutemen have playoff experience. Like last time, though, few people expect Massachusetts to win it all in 1999.

"Going into the season, all I heard from Georgia Southern and some other people is that we got lucky," Minuteman quarterback Todd Bankhead said. "Everyone was kind of overlooking us. There was a lack of respect. People in our conference didn't even respect us at times, especially after we started out 1-3. We just need to go out and play our game. If there is a lack of respect out there, maybe that will play to our advantage."

"The talk since we won the National Championship last year was that it was a fluke and all that," UMass tailback Marcel Shipp said. "They can say what they want to say, what matters is that we've got the National Championship, and we're going to play like National Champions come Saturday."

On Saturday, the Minutemen will be taking on a team that went 9-2 and beat up on Division I-A North Carolina 28-3 on Oct. 30. Furman boasts five players who have over 300 yards rushing, including Louis Ivory with 1,376 and Justin Hill with 807. Four of those players are averaging more than six yards a carry while two of them have 12 or more touchdowns. The downside? Hill, the starting Paladin quarterback, has only 80 completions over the course of the entire year.

"I think they run some I-power and some option," Whipple said. "I don't think they want to throw the ball. I think they're going to try to run it."

In comparison, Bankhead has connected on 209 passes to total 2,492 yards. Shipp betters Ivory with his 1,576 yards and UMass-record 20 scores. When traveling to McNeese State, though, the Minutemen were without their star runner's services and still came out on top 21-19.

"People want to compare it to last year; it's nice that Marcel Shipp walked into this room," Whipple said. "Last year, he couldn't even get out of bed, so we know we're going with No. 5. I think that's a positive over last year."

Georgia Southern, the team that Massachusetts bested in the title game last year, enters this year's tourney ranked No. 2, behind Tennessee State. If UMass defeats Furman and GSU beats the 15th seeded Northern Arizona, there will be a rematch of Hofstra, who is responsible for one of the Minutemen's three losses, handing Massachusetts a 27-14 decision in Amherst on Oct. 2, picked up the No. 3 spot and will host Lehigh, who came to Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium in round two last year.

James Madison University, which captured the automatic bid from the A-10, was seated two slots below UMass, strangely enough, and will travel to play No. 5 Troy State, who upended Division I-A Cincinnati in the season's first game.

"We're just anxious to get it started," Shipp said. "Last year, we didn't really know what to expect, but this year we're going in with more confidence and momentum behind our back. We're ready to go out there and do what we do best."

UMass to face No. 7 UConn Huskies

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

Labeling it the third annual "MassMutual U-Game" stifles the real meaning of tonight's game between the Massachusetts men's basketball team and the defending national champion Connecticut Huskies at the Harry A. Gampel Pavilion.

It is going to be a matter of pride and of cross-state rivalry for the two teams, whose fate will be broadcast at 7:30 p.m. on ESPN2. Marking the 102nd game between the two, the Huskies are managing a decisive 83-38 advantage in the series that dates back to the 1904-1905 season. They also hold a 3-0 lead in the seven-year U-Game series.

"UConn is UConn. They just keep on bringing them in," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "I think they are a little different because they can pound you inside."

Last year marked the first U-Game meeting at the William D. Mullins Center, with the Huskies pulling out a 59-54 win. Albert Mouring led the Pack with 13 points in 20 minutes off the bench. Lari Ketner topped all UMass scorers with 15 points and Monty Mack tacked on ten points.

On Saturday night, the Minutemen opened up their season with an 85-77 victory over the Iona Gaels. Mack chipped in 21 points, enough to tip him over the 1,000-point scale in just over two years at UMass. Mack has been on the rebound from a stress fracture to his foot that he suffered last month. Co-captain Mike Babul, an All-Atlantic 10 Defensive Team for the past two seasons, returned from a back injury just in time to put the clamp on Iona standout Tariq Kirksay.

"We played great, everybody made a couple of big plays," said Bruiser. "We did a good job running what we wanted to, but our timing wasn't there."

The No. 7 Huskies dropped their season-opener to Iowa in the Coaches vs. Cancer IKON Classic, 70-68, but have since regrouped to improve to 2-1 with wins over Duke (71-66) and Vermont (89-52). They are currently riding a 65-game winning streak against non-Big East New England rivals.

Coach Jim Calhoun is currently in his fourteenth season at Connecticut where he is 306-121 all-time. The winningest NCAA Division I coach in New England history with 556 career wins, Calhoun also spent 14 years at the helm of the Northeastern Huskies.

Led by pre-season Big East Player of the Year Khalid El-Amin, who is averaging 20.7 points per game, UConn does not expect to lose much footage off of last year. The 5-foot-10 junior from Minneapolis became only the third player in Connecticut history to tally over 1,000 points as a sophomore.

Springfield native Kevin Freeman, who was the Big East Tournament MVP in his junior campaign, had a double-double with 15 points and 11 rebounds in the Duke match-up. Senior Jake Voskuhl and Mouring have also made significant contributions for the Huskies.

In order for the Minutemen to be successful, they will have to showcase the well-balanced offensive attack they did against the Gaels. Senior co-captain Chris Kirkland, who scored a quiet 15 points in between diving for loose balls and shooting 7-for-8 from the free throw line, should be the go-to-guy inside.

Joining Kirkland will be big man Kitwana Rhymer. The junior added 12 points and seven rebounds in the balanced effort. Sophomore Shannon Crooks and junior Jonathan DePina took turns at the point, each scoring 11 points. Pacing the offense will also be Mack, as Babul will look to shut down UConn's hot hand of the evening.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Kitwana Rhymer and Kevin Freeman will square off tonight as the Minutemen invade Gampel Pavilion to take on the defending champion UConn Huskies.

Men's hoop outlasts Iona

Up-tempo game proves too much

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. – Monkey?

This was a large ape.

Weighing heavily on the shoulders of the Massachusetts basketball team was the omi-nous prospect of mediocrity, a point it reached last season with a 14-16 record.

Massachusetts	85
Iona	77

In hopes of retracting that thought, the Minutemen opened the 1999-2000 season at the Mulcahy Center Saturday night to take on the University of Iona. After falling down early, balanced scoring and timely free throw shooting took over as the Minutemen avenged last season's 19-point loss to the Gaels with an 85-77 victory in New Rochelle.

It took a spectacular second half effort to leave the arena with a victory. After a basket underneath by Iona's Nakiea Miller with 2:01 left to cut the lead to four, Jonathan DePina answered with a 15-footer on the left baseline to give UMass a 75-69 advantage with 1:40 remaining.

The Gaels would never get any closer to the Minutemen, coming up empty on their next two possessions while the Minutemen continued to score on the other end.

Iona's Jermaine Small tied the game at 56 with a pair of free throws at the 10:23 mark of the second half, but his joy was short-lived. After a Monty Mack layup off an inbounds pass, Chris Kirkland came up with a steal and would seemingly go uncontested the other way for an emphatic dunk. Small, however, was called for a flagrant foul in trying to stop him, but Kirkland muscled the ball through and sank the two freebies to give UMass a 62-56 lead.

"It was a well-officiated game, but I didn't agree with the call," Iona coach Jeff Ruland said. "It was a turning point in the game. He hustled down and I thought he went for the ball."

Iona went as leading scorer Tariq Kirksay went, the senior scoring 15 of his 20 points in the first half. Five late free throws separated Kirksay from a scoreless second half, as A-10 Defensive Team staple Mike Babul blanketed Kirksay, who was held in check last year, scoring just nine points.

"I was just trying to deny him in the post," Babul said. "I wanted to push him off the block because he's a different player from out there."

"He played great 'D' in the second half," Kirksay said of Babul. "Everywhere I went, he was there. He did what he did best and he stopped me."

Almost a polar opposite from last season, the Minutemen gutted Iona with key free-throw shooting down the stretch while the Gaels continued to give them away. After shooting under 60 percent from the line last season, the Minutemen went 13-for-19 from the line in the second half while the Gaels made just 15 of 26 attempts.

"We made foul shots when we needed to," head coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "Last year, we stepped up to the line and it was an adventure."

Mack, after sitting out both exhibition games to nurse a stress fracture in his left foot, came off the bench to score a team-high 21 points, including four 3-pointers. The senior was questionable until game time, but came in to replace DePina just 2:34 into the game. Mack was the team's only double-digit scorer in last season's contest, netting 16 in a losing effort.

The record book also felt the impact of Mack's return. With 11:22

Turn to HOOPS, page 9

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 54

Tuesday, November 23, 1999

Students reclaim pond, campus responds to violence

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is nationally ranked third for forcible sex crimes, according to a study by the Chronicle of Higher Education last May. Some students are questioning whether the administration is doing enough to change this statistic.

In a reactionary rally, concerned students took action yesterday to reclaim their pond, their campus and their space. As they joined hands around the pond as a conclusion to an afternoon of outrage and proposed actions a final chant was heard through the center of campus:

"Take back the campus, take back the pond.

Two, four, six, eight, we won't tolerate."

The message set forth by the rally was clear: students want action and they want it now. The rally, organized by a group of disturbed students and social thought and political economy majors, was the forum for over 300 students to express their continued dissatisfaction with actions taken by the administration.

Although the organizers agreed with some of the measures taken to enhance safety on campus, they feel that, overall, more could be done. Petitions were passed among the crowd to demand heightened security on campus around the clock. Locations for increased security include parking lots and every floor of each library, and more receptionists were requested to be on duty in the dorms. The group wants further emphasis put on walking and van escorts and complete access to all information regarding the situation.

As they marched around campus, through the halls of the Whitmore Administration Building and back to the Student Union lawn, the administration and its actions seemed to be in the forefront of the marchers' minds. The organizers and others in attendance said they were not only sacred for their safety, but were angry about the situation.

"I'm not sure what this march is going to do. What we're asking for is pretty basic," Heather Hume, a freshman political science major, said. "It's all stuff that should have been done before."

The massive crowd stormed through the doors of Whitmore, screaming and shouting, "Wherever we are, wherever we go, yes means yes and no means no."

"I think it [the march] sends a message that we are willing to do something. I agree the administration has done things, but that the nature of the crimes can create hysteria," Danielle Tagg, a junior English major, said. "More can always be done."

The group continued on as they approached their final destination. Discouraging comments could be heard throughout the crowd as the group passed police officers patrolling campus on horseback.

"Look at them, they are more worried about us causing a riot," one marcher, who wished to remain anonymous, said. "I've protected myself, I have pepper spray, my whistle and a shriek alarm."

The idea of students having to take safety measures into their own hands has upset many, and as a spokesman for PondWatch said. "Students should not need to be the police. They should not need to volunteer to protect each other. This is not okay."

Arlene Avakian, a women's studies professor, addressed the group as a keynote speaker for the end of the rally. She expressed that there is no individual solution and that no one woman alone can stop the violence of this society, or this campus in particular. Speaking directly to the men in the audience, she said it was a collective issue that should involve both men and women.

"The problem is that women are not safe because men dominate women in this culture," Avakian said. "The problem is that men rape women. We need to change this society so that women are valued."

Students have already taken this statement to heart and are working to create their own sense of safety. It was announced at the rally that the

Turn to RALLY, page 2

DAN SANTELLA COLLEGIAN

About five hundred people marched on Whitmore after the rally outside the Student Union.

GSS contributes $500 to assault reward

The Graduate Student Senate (GSS) at the University of Massachusetts donated an additional $500 to the Crisis Reward Fund at their meeting last week.

The fund, which was established in response to four assaults on campus in the past three weeks, is now at a total of $3000. The donation made by GSS adds to prior donations made by the Student Government Association (SGA), WMUA 91.1 F.M., the campus radio station, WRNX 100.9 F.M., of Holyoke, the Panhellenic Council, University Productions and Concerts, and the Graduate Employee Organization. The reward fund was established in the hope that the individual or individuals responsible for the on-campus violence would be quickly apprehended. According to an SGA press release, if no one assists in the arrest and conviction of those involved in the crimes, the Crisis Reward fund will be donated to the Everywoman's Center located on campus.

Any donations to the fund can be sent to SGA Crisis Reward Fund, c/o Tix Unlimited, 416 Student Union, Amherst, Mass., 01003. Checks should be made payable to the University of Massachusetts/SGA Crisis Fund. "

Individuals within the UMass administration had expressed interest in offering matching funds to match those donations made by other organizations.

—Melissa Hammel

Walmart set to open new store in Hadley

By Andrea M. Peers
Collegian Staff

January 2000 will mark the grand opening of retail giant Walmart in the Mountain Farms Mall. The new Hadley store will join the 2,471 existing stores, nationwide. Walmart has been in the business of retail since 1962, when the first store opened in Rogers, Ark.

Moving overseas, Walmart has opened over 900 stores in over nine countries as of this October. These include units in Brazil, Argentina, Canada, Puerto Rico, the United Kingdom, China, Korea, Germany and Mexico. Walmart is also involved in a joint-venture project with CIFRA, a company responsible for retail businesses in Mexico. Together with CIFRA, Walmart has opened many units throughout the country.

Director of Community relations Keith Morris said the Hadley store will cater to the needs of the Amherst and Hadley communities.

"People would drive to Springfield or the Holyoke Mall to go to these retail stores," Morris said. "We saw a void in terms of where these customers were shopping and wanted to offer a store that people could shop at on a weekly basis."

Together with the complete construction crew, the total number of people working on the project is estimated at 100, according to Morris. The construction for the store did not begin until April of this year due to meetings with the town and state boards, which took a little over a year to approve the new Walmart. Morris said the site was "in synergy with the other commercial development in the area."

The new store, measuring in at 93,000 square feet, will contain 36 departments ranging from sporting goods to health and beauty aids. Also included in the store is a pharmacy, one hour photo lab and a snack bar. Regular departments will carry apparel, electronics and other household needs. The push for the grand opening in January is coming along with the finishing touches of plumbing and electrical work in the final stages, which is expected to be completed within the next three to four weeks. After the main components are finished, inventory staff will come to stock the store with all items for sale and complete the final phases. In the meantime, parking lots are being paved and shelves are going up.

Turn to WALMART, page 2

U.S. serious crime drops 10 percent

By Nick Anderson
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – Serious crime nationwide, on the wane since a 1991 peak, plunged another 10 percent in the first six months of 1999, and the murder rate fell an even sharper 13 percent, according to an FBI survey based on crimes reported to police.

A six percent average decline in serious crime was reported in cities with populations greater than 1 million.

The figures released by the FBI Sunday, the first to look nationwide at the first half of this year compared to the first six months of 1998, found reductions of 8 percent in violent crimes and 10 percent in property crimes – the two categories of serious crime.

"Obviously we're elated," said Carole Florman, a Justice Department spokeswoman, who claimed part of the credit for the decline goes to such Clinton administration programs as hiring another 100,000 police officers nationwide.

But police officials and criminal justice experts say a range of factors accounts for the 7 years of falling crime reports.

"No. 1, the economy is good," said Sgt. Raul Luna of the Santa Ana (Calif.) Police Department, which reported a serious crime drop of 6 percent. Luna also cited a decline in the population of teen-agers and young adults who are most prone to crime, as well as the recently enacted "three-strikes" law in California that automatically puts repeat felons behind bars.

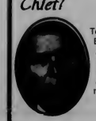
Whatever the cause of the decline, one result is clear to authorities: A falling crime rate helps police fight crime. Lighter caseloads help to both free up officers and detectives to solve older crimes and as well as up community patrols, said Officer Eduardo Funes, a Los Angeles Police Department spokesman.

"Every time an officer makes an arrest, obviously it takes him away from the patrol in the streets," Funes said. "Just by being around more often, that in itself reduces crime."

The FBI statistics were culled from reports forwarded by more than 9,300 law-enforcement agencies that account for roughly two-thirds of the nation's population. They provide a preliminary snapshot of public safety in the half-year, combining reports of violent crime and property crimes such as burglary, larceny and auto theft.

A more in-depth survey on 1999 crime statistics is due next spring. In May, FBI figures showed that reported crime in 1998 had dropped 7 percent compared to the year before – the seventh straight year of such declines.

KIMBERLY FENLASON/COLLEGIAN CORRESPONDENT

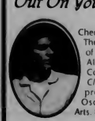


Walmart will become a new addition to Hadley at the turn of the century.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 66 LOW: 41	HIGH: 62 LOW: 39	HIGH: 54 LOW: 33

SOURCE: ENN.COM

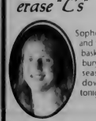


Our next Commander in Chief?

Texas governor George W. Bush, according to a Los Angeles Times poll, is in the front of the race for president. Read more about politics inside news.

NEWS PAGE 2

I've Taken A Contract Out On Your Life



Check out our review of the Theatre Guild's production of Reckless.

Also, see what the Collegian thought about Cloud 9 at Smith and a preview of this year's Oscar contenders. Read Arts. It's grrreat.

ARTS PAGE 3

Nehls looks to erase "C's"

Sophomore Caroline Nehls and the rest of the women's basketball team will look to bury the bitter taste of two season-opening losses by downing Holy Cross tonight in Worcester.

SPORTS PAGE 8

Arts & Living 3
Comics 7
Crossword 7
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 8

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Annoying Behavior
Nov. 18
An unwanted sexual conversation on a computer chat line was reported.
Nov. 17
An individual reported being followed by another individual in Lot 21 west of the Whitmore Administration Building.

Assault and Battery
Nov. 21
Michael B. Tamberino, 21, of 2 Conroe St., Danvers, was arrested and charged with assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon, possession of a dangerous weapon and possession of an electrical weapon.
Nov. 16
A woman reported being assaulted in a parking lot near Skinner Hall. Police are currently investigating the case.

Disturbance
Nov. 17
A heated argument between two individuals in the Student Union was reported.
An individual was reportedly being disorderly in an office in the Student Union.
Nov. 15
A fight in Hampshire Dining Commons involving several individuals was reported.

Larceny
Nov. 16
A laptop computer, valued at $1600, was reported stolen from a room in Dwight Residence Hall.

Drug Law Offenses
Nov. 18
James P. Dougherty, 21, of 52 Bradley Rd., Pomfret Center, Conn., was arrested at Lot 25, across from the Physical Plant Building, and charged with possession of and intent to distribute a class D drug and possession of a class E drug.
Nov. 16
Joshua T. Norton, 19, of 41 Robert Rd., Marblehead, was arrested at Gorman Residence Hall and charged with possession of a class D substance and possession of a class B substance.

Vandalism
Nov. 21
Graffiti and a swastika were reported written on hallway walls in the Student Union. A PondWatch sign-up sheet was reportedly defaced with a swastika and degrading, made-up names were added to the list. The case is under investigation.
Nov. 18
Graffiti was reported on the Concourse level of the Campus Center.
Nov. 17
Graffiti related to recent alleged assaults was reported on Van Meter Residence Hall.
Spray painting was reported on the sign and driveway near the Chancellor's House.

Health and Safety Hazard
Nov. 17
A large window was reported broken in John Quincy Adams Residence Hall.

Fraud
Nov. 17
Counterfeit money was reportedly used in the University Store.

Traffic Stop
Nov. 18
Edgard A. Hernandez, 26, of 128 Newland St., Springfield; Herman J. Santana, 18, of 17 Basil Rd., Chicopee; Felix Escobar, 21, of 585 Oakland St., Springfield and Roel E. Burgos, 19, of 133 Oakwood Terrace, Springfield were arrested on University Drive and charged with nighttime breaking and entering, larceny over $250, possession of a buglarious instrument and disorderly conduct. Santana was also charged with speeding, failure to stop for a police officer and reckless operation of a motor vehicle. Escobar was also charged with possession of a class D drug.

Weapons Violations
Nov. 18
A toy gun, used for a prop in a play, was found in a hallway in Herter Hall.

World wide web is holiday madhouse

By Leslie Walker and Stephanie Stoughton
Washington Post

Internet shoppers, start your mice. The World Wide Web is decked out and waiting for you to click through its many linked holiday madhouse. What you will not expect to find? Probably less than you want in price discounts and free shipping, but more than you might find in product selection, gift services and live customer help.

If you choose to buy gifts online, you will be clicking into an all-out e-tailing war among the dot-coms, whose numbers have multiplied since the last holiday season. As these companies scramble to build sales fast and establish themselves as category leaders, they are throwing in shipping for free, giving away gift certificates and, yes, holding down prices.

Though retailers are selling at or below cost that all online merchants are feeling the heat. The pricing pressure is intensifying as price-comparison tools such as mySimon and R U Sure get smarter about zeroing in on bargains.

The payoff – in sales volume, if not profits – could be huge. Current forecasts for online holiday spending vary widely, but most show a doubling from last year – for instance, Jupiter Communications predicts $6 billion in spending for this month and the next.

It's an ulcer-inducing time for many Internet retailers, analysts say, as investors are watching to see whether they can handle holiday sales volume and avoid the site outages, poor product selection and customer service glitches that disappointed shoppers last year.

Traffic at e-commerce sites has already spiked, causing some to slam their doors shut as too many people try to log on at once. In the past six weeks, the number of people visiting Web toy stores doubled, as the number shopping by cybermalls and superstores jumped more than 70 percent, according to Nielsen/NetRatings.

"The jump in mall traffic tells me that people want to enjoy the value of efficiency that the Internet offers," said Allen Weiner, vice president of Nielsen/NetRatings. "I can shop for everybody on my list at the same time at these online malls, and it saves time."

The Internet's major gateways are banking on people thinking like him. America Online, Yahoo, MSN.com and others are trying to offer a unified shopping experience to consumers by renting space to an abundance of retailers. Yahoo now provides checkout counters for more than 7,500 merchants, while AOL will be steering its 19 million subscribers to 275 well-known retailers.

The gateways also are offering digital "wallets" that collect customers' credit and shipping information, then hand those details over to such retailers as Lands' End and Gap. This is the first year that these software wallets are widely available.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

LISTEN.
Nick Vuona, senior Theatre major, stoically displayed his message at yesterday's walkout.

KEN MCDONALD/ COLLEGIAN

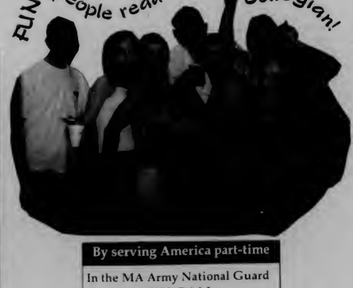
Ever watchful.
Officer Brian Johnson keeps an eye on the crowd that grew yesterday afternoon.

rally

continued from page 1

brothers of Gamma Phi Sigma and the Office of ALANA Affairs have set up an additional escort service. There is a service chart being distributed that gives the names, numbers and available times that the brothers can escort women.

Avakian said she did not see escort services as the only solution.



"We need to be safe so we don't have to look for an escort," she said.

Other responsive programs are planned for the rest of the week to address issues of safety on campus. The Student Government Association is holding a rally today at noon on the pond side of the Student Union. During the rally, petitions will be signed, and a wall will be created that, through words and pictures, artistically expresses the feelings of students. The wall will remain in the center of campus.

Avakian commented that it is essential that students continue to play an active role in making positive changes for women. She said she hopes this crisis will bring light to those needed adjustments not only for today, but for permanent change in the future.

"Activism isn't just standing here today, it's everyday," Avakian said. "People need to work to find how and when they can become active."

The conclusion of the rally marked a unified front as the marchers stood together, attempting to take their part in the role of activism.

By serving America part-time

In the MA Army National Guard
YOU CAN...
- Get free undergraduate/ graduate tuition
- Earn from $400-$800 for one weekend
- Receive a $5000-$8000 cash bonus
- Repay your student loans
- Develop leadership ability
- Build a POWERFUL resume

Call Today!
1-800-GO-GUARD
or visit
www.1-800-GO-GUARD.com
ARMY NATIONAL GUARD
YOU CAN

Walmart

continued from page 1

Walmart was featured in Fortune Magazine this past February in a survey of the top 100 best companies to work for. Walmart placed at number 66, making it the only retailer on the list. Morris spoke about the employee benefits as well as the involvement that Walmart has with their communities. The Hadley store is expected to make 175 new jobs available to people, 75 percent of which will be full-time positions. The store will also offer all employees a profit sharing program, which puts funds into employee accounts for extra money. Along with the benefits that employees receive, they will also get the chance to give back to their community through the Walmart non-profit organization fund. All employees can form groups in which they decide on an organization such as a soup kitchen or a battered women shelter to which they wish to donate money. Last year, Walmart donated $127 million dollars to organizations in the United States alone.

"This enables our workers to give back to the community, and who knows better than the people who live and work there," Morris said.

This store will follow the Walmart slogan "Everyday low prices." Morris said the purpose behind the everyday low prices is that shoppers should always be able to find good buys without having to wait for a sale, an idea which he said should appeal to the towns and the large population of college students.

Walmart is also looking to build a store in the existing Caldor site in Northampton, according to Morris.

Cold?
.....get warm
PEOPLE'S MARKET EST. 1973
Funkadelicious products to fill your Belly and get you Warm.
Bagel & C.Cheese..... 1.00
Small Coffee..... 1.00
Tropicana..... 1.40
Fresh Samantha..... 2.00
Tea..... 1.50 (all sizes)
Cliff Bars..... 1.79
and much much more!
The People's Market will be closing at 12:00pm tommorow.
Happy Thanksgiving! from People's
A student-run collective at UMASS Amherst.

ANTHONY'S
#1 Club for Adult Entertainment
WEDNESDAY NOV. 24th
14th ANNUAL THANKSGIVING BOOTY BASH!!!!
— Over 25 Entertainers —
Special 18+ Seating!
FREE BUFFETT
NooN 'till ???
Get here early!
500 New Ludlow Rd. - South Hadley, MA
CLUBline 413/532-3621
HOTline 413/538-6969
Visit Us At — www.anthonys.net

Academy getting coal for X-Mas

By John Anderson
Newsday

Listen: are those sleigh bells we're hearing? Could be. Either that, or it's somebody's cell phone telling us the Holiday Movie Season has begun. It's certainly a big, bulging bag of would-be blockbusters and/or works of art—39 will open between Wednesday and New Year's Day. There's no question that the whole gluttonous cornucopia is quite keeping with the seasonal sentiment of excess. Where Santa and the movie season part company, of course, is that the former is expected to bring Pokemon cards, Earth's last Beanie Babies and bottles of 20-year-old scotch; the latter, for all its probable bounty, will inevitably include the cinematic equivalent of rehydrated fruitcakes and velvet paintings of Donald Trump. And, unlike Santa, the movies take things back: This year's 11th-hour premieres include more than the usual number of films opening only for week-long, Oscar-qualifying runs before reappearing during the depths of winter.

But the overriding fact is, it's trophy season, the time when the studios release the hounds, aka the films most likely to do well in the months-long sweepstakes for critics' prizes and the positioning of their Academy Awards campaigns. Given what a crapshoot the year-in-awards is turning out to be, the tension should be thick enough to cut with the edge of a press release: With the exception of American Beauty (most categories), Being John Malkovich (screenplay) and Boys Don't Cry (direction and actress Hillary Swank), there seem to be very few films that have anything close to what you'd call popular momentum. When you factor in Oscar's constitutional abhorrence for the fresh and the weird, American Beauty seems to be running unopposed.

That may change in the next few months, but from this early vantage point, nothing on the movie menu has the look of a Saving Private Ryan or a Shakespeare in Love about it. Oscar will find something to like, of course, but every indication is that this is going to be a year of standout performances, rather than standout movies. Among the most talked-about best-actor candidates is Jim Carrey for Man on the Moon, Milos Forman's bio-pic about the late, radical comedian Andy Kaufman. Even people who don't necessarily like the movie say Carrey will likely be going head-to-head with American Beauty's Kevin Spacey. Physical transformation is always a plus in the awards race, and even those of us who've seen only the stills have to admit that Carrey has achieved something.

Among the women? The field, as usual, is a lot less jammed, because roles for women are a lot less plentiful. However, Janet McTeer—the Tony-winning actress in A Doll's House—would seem to be among the clear favorites for her role in Tumbleweeds, the mother-daughter dramedy that will probably benefit from opening so closely behind the similarly themed Anywhere but Here. Sigourney Weaver, who hasn't had the chance to do an Oscar-level part in some time, may give McTeer headaches with A Map of the World, in which she plays a schoolteacher falsely accused and imprisoned for child abuse. Likewise, Jodie Foster, who like Hanks and Meryl Streep, is a more or less perennial nominee, and in Anna and the King follows in the footsteps of Irene Dunne and Deborah Kerr by invading Siam.

This year has seen a crop of movies whose overall quality seems to be better than in recent years, while the number of films that really inspire passion and partisanship have dwindled (will anyone even remember Star Wars: Episode One—The Phantom Menace at year's end?). It's precisely the kind of year to prompt critics' awards—always viewed as a barometer and/or instigator of Oscar sentiment—to be all over the map.

Bryn Manion and Jake Lillien skirt around sex and gender issues in Smith College's production of Cloud 9.

Smith plays gender games in Cloud 9

By Kristi Ceccorossi
Collegian Staff

CLOUD 9
directed by Emily Grimes
Hallie Flanagan Studio, Smith College
November 19, 1999

I don't like TV. I try not to watch it unless The Simpsons or The Cosby Show is on. I like theatre a lot. It lacks the mind numbing effect of TV and usually functions in the opposite way. Still, I think I suffer from the attention span deficiency that I've heard is the result of TV, and I long to see the richness, familiarity, and dimension of character represented in the Cosby family (even Vanessa) transferred to the stage. And while sitting in Smith's Hallie Flanagan Studio Theatre for 2.5 hours this weekend all I could think was, this is really, really long and I don't care about anything that is happening.

Everybody loves gender issues, especially theatre going audiences. In their production of Caryl Churchill's Cloud 9, Smith explores them in one of the most colorful and complex ways possible. The play is almost two plays in one. The first act takes place during the middle of the 19th century. The second act is set in the modern world. Although over a hundred years have passed during intermission (for reasons never explained) the characters only perceive the difference as twenty-five years. Save a few new additions, almost all of the characters we meet in the first half of the show return in the second half, only twenty-five years older. Oh, and some of roles that were played transgender in the first act are now being played by anatomically correct actors in the second half. And vice versa. But all of this stuff isn't really confusing as much as it is annoying. This gender swap game, in the context of the play, is clearly a device used to express the playwrights challenging notions of male and female types. In fact, the whole play is a device for Churchill to exhibit unconventional ideas about sex and people. So, instead of a united, deeply developed set of characters, Cloud 9 presents a set of symbols and arbitrarily yells out messages. The play becomes tiresome. And while this is a fantastic experiment in playwriting, as it tests our ideals, it still needs to make sense — and it doesn't.

But as for Smith's production, the cast was decorated with a few actors who understood the nature of the play's material and still managed to convey emotional responses and ease with an almost completely deflated script. Because every actor portrayed a different role in the second act, it was easy to see how varied (or monotonous) each performance could be. For example, Bryn Manion as Mrs. Saunders in the first half of the show maintained a shining presence, strength, and an outstanding consistency. But, when she returned in act two as an older version of a different character from the first act (Betty) she made no effort to recreate the mannerisms and tone already established and instead replayed the same attitude she founded in Mrs. Saunders. Despite her generous opportunity to step up her performance, Rebecca Shaeffer as both Ellen and Lin never quite produced enough of an interest in her characters to get the audience to listen or care about what she was saying.

But the cast should not go without some praise. Certainly worth noting was the sensitivity and sincerity Joe Thoron delivered as Edward. Maggie Wood was impressive as Victoria, but failed to stir anything as Maud. Similiarly, Jake Lipman as young Edward perfectly carried all the boish charm and energy necessary for the role. When she returned later as the Soldier she couldn't naturally perform her monologue with the excessive vulgarity it contained. Jason Pizzarello and Jake Lillien stood out in both acts. Pizzarello should be commended for his excellent comic timing and Lillien for his obvious grasp and intelligent presentation.

The choreography of the show flowed well. Director Emily Grimes designed her stage pictures beautifully and did a fine job guiding almost all of her actors. Grimes, a sophomore at Smith, set up a fine platform for Caryl Churchill to drop her somewhat oblique philosophy from. Set designer Kiki Smith and lighting designer Rebecca Makus both warrant recognition for their contributions; without them, the play would have been interrupted by a number of lengthy set changes without any discrepancy. And drummers, Maddy Frey, Lily Orr, and Shana Smulyan, responsible for the eerie, mood evoking rhythms of the show, should also get their props.

Despite the somewhat unexpected turns of the script, Cloud 9 has some worthwhile things to say. Breaking down gender traditions is a war far from over. With a little more fine-tuning and focus within the cast, as a whole, might have felt a more far reaching impact. But, even without that, Smith has assembled another respectable college production.

Guild brings dark humor and little else

By Julie Burrell
Collegian Contributor

RECKLESS directed by Matthew Cavanaugh
Bowker Auditorium
November 18, 1999

The dark and funny world of Craig Lucas' Reckless, directed by Matthew Cavanaugh and presented by the UMass Theatre Guild, revolves around Rachel, a woman who is forced to leave her home on Christmas Eve because her husband, Tom, tells her he has taken a contract on her life. The life of domestic happiness she once had is shaken so that she does not return to her home, but instead moves in with strangers. Lloyd, a man also running away from his shady past, and Peaks, a paraplegic deaf woman (so she says) who has something to hide, take Rachel in. From then on life is, well, reckless with Rachel, and she is forced to keep without really looking at where she is headed.

Lucas' darkly comedic script tinged with sadness, wacky humor, and coincidental events that fit together as much as an episode of "Seinfeld", pulls you in and forces you to examine the honesty of human relationships, and, of course, makes you laugh. Every plot turn is a genuine surprise and the interest that is evoked for each character Lucas created was the driving force behind the Theatre Guild's performance.

Jennifer Bean, as Rachel, deserves much praise and credit for leading an otherwise awkward cast. She combined the vulnerability and strength that Rachel possesses, along with playing the zany and poignant moments with grace.

The supporting cast lagged behind where Bean excelled, that is, in portraying the complexity of character. The funny moments were very funny, but the more serious moments came off as either forced or just fell flat. During the scenes in which the characters should have been the closest, the connection was not there. But, again, in the lighter scenes, the ensemble was tight and the chemistry between them was strong. However, the meeting between mother Rachel, and son, Tom Jr., although solemn, was one of the most strongly acted in the show. Mike Dwan as both Tom and Tom Jr. played an unconvincing husband in distress, but pulled off his college-aged son with ease, and making a real connection with Bean as his mother. Chris Manz was comfortable and convincing as the loving humanitarian Lloyd, but when his role got serious, he was visibly distant from his character. Emily Ackman played Peaty quite well, but faltered when the role called for more than being the sweet and generous woman she had been hitherto.

Most of the supporting cast played multiple roles and besides costume changes and absurdly large burdensome wigs, the characters never really distinguished their own personas. Sara Collins, as six different psychiatrists, played only caricatures of people, not evoking real sentiments, only frantic hand movements. Brian Girard, notably funny as the sleazy game show host Tim Tinsko, was the exception.

Hieu Nguyen and Thomas Laquith, the set designers, and Jennifer Bean, the sound designer, deserve special recognition. The entire technical and artistic team did an excellent job with this production.

Although some acting was inconsistent, the cast made most scenes work, especially the funny/slightly disturbing moments. Craig Lucas' script was truly the glue that held the inconsistencies together, but when the cast and direction were at top form, they meshed so well that real people and genuine feeling took shape out of the scripted characters and words. I have the feeling that if Cavanaugh had only inched his cast a little more in the right direction, it would have been a near perfect presentation of a wonderful play.

Mike Dwan tries to save his wife's (Jen Bean) life, after hiring a hit man to kill her in the Theatre Guild's production of Reckless.

$ATTENTION$
February 2000 Graduates
If you are a member of the February 2000 graduating class who received Federal Perkins Loans while enrolled at UMass you should have recently received certified letter about those loans.
We know this is a very busy time for you so we've mailed this information rather than having you attend a meeting.
$
However there are serious consequences if you fail to return these documents by 11/30/99 as instructed in our letter.
If you haven't received our letter but think that you should have or if you have any questions about what you did receive.
$ Call 545-2377 $

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

1/2 PRICE Appetizers
• Buffalo Chicken Wings
• Mozzarella Sticks
• Chicken or Beef Nachos
Sunday - Thursday
9 p.m. - Midnight
Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
700 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 253-3799

Yeah Arts! Read Arts...Do it for the kids!

I control my diabetes so I'll be around to see the next Jackie Robinson.
Controlling diabetes makes a huge difference.

My granddaughter means the world to me. So I'm controlling my diabetes. That means I keep my blood sugar close to normal by watching what I eat and walking every day. I always take my medicine and test my blood sugar.
With my diabetes under control, I feel a lot better and have more energy. Best of all, I'm going to be around for my family... for my friends... for life.
Call 1-800-438-5383 to learn more. Or visit us at http://ndep.nih.gov
NATIONAL DIABETES EDUCATION PROGRAM
A joint program of the National Institutes of Health and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
Control your diabetes. For Life.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday, November 23, 1999

Catch 22

Rated "R" Restricted. Under 17 requires accompanying parent or adult guardian. Once teens reach the age of seventeen, they throw off this shackle of restriction, attached to most movie advertisements as an afterthought, thereby opening the doors to gratuitous violence, strong sexual innuendo and the like. The other night, however, I was reminded of how it feels to be treated like an insignificant child.

Two friends, my girlfriend and I tried to attend the 9:45 showing of Dogma at the Showcase Cinemas in West Springfield. After my companions had purchased their ticket, I stepped forth, money in hand, to buy two tickets for the same show. Much to my surprise, the cashier (let's call her Miss Piggy to protect her identity) asked to see some identification. This seemed odd to me, especially since my friend, who could have been sixteen for all they knew, had just purchased a ticket without any such request. Anyway, I scoured through my wallet and soon thereafter triumphantly produced my driver's license proving my age; twenty years old. This should be the end of the story. Miss Piggy looked at my license closely, then stood there shaking her head, refusing to sell me the ticket.

Adam Martignetti

Somewhat perturbed, I asked for an explanation. Miss Piggy tells me that you need to be at least 21 years of age to buy two tickets for a movie rated "R" unless the other person has an ID. OK, here's my girlfriend's UMass ID. Can I have the tickets now? No. Slightly more animated, I demanded to know why? Miss Piggy kindly informed me that she could not sell us the tickets unless my girlfriend had a picture ID with proof of birth, though she was not nearly as eloquent as that. "She's 22 years old," I said. Miss Piggy retorts, and this is a direct quote, "It doesn't matter. It's against Federal Law to sell someone tickets without seeing an ID."

Having just done what she said she wouldn't (I believe the word here is hypocrite), Miss Piggy apparently didn't realize the glaring discrepancy. By her own admission, she had just broken "federal law" by selling tickets to my companion. When this was pointed out to her, Miss Piggy did not coalesce, but rather stubbornly refused to sell me the tickets. Mind you, we all came together in a group. Now infuriated, I got into a heated argument with Miss Piggy, at the end of which she told me to call the police. (Eventually, I did).

Later that evening, I talked to Mr. Tom Sanford, the manger of Showcase Cinemas, West Springfield, and immediate supervisor of Miss Piggy. He defended Miss Piggy, as if you couldn't see that one coming, on two grounds. First, Mr. Sanford corrected his misguided employee, saying that it was not a "Federal Law," but merely company policy. If that was true, which it was quite obviously not, then why isn't the policy applied evenly to everyone? Mr. Sanford reasoned that Showcase Cinemas could not possibly card everyone because the lines would be out the door. Normally, I would buy this argument, but at the time we were the only four people in line. In fact, the place was pretty much abandoned. In addition, a few extra minutes seems like a small price to pay for enforcing such a stringent "company policy."

Then Mr. Sanford explained that it was a "judgement call." He was even so bold as to say that he would have carded me also, because we looked young. Well, if Showcase Cinemas has discovered a way to detect age, then I would certainly like to know about it. Their track record proves otherwise, though. Even if they were right about my friend, and I'm not saying that they were, they were still dead wrong about my girlfriend and me. Thirty-three percent. Showcase Cinemas admits people into rated "R" movies based on a stellar 33 percent ability to "judge" people's age by simply looking at them.

The following day, I called the National Amusement headquarters (they own all Showcase Cinemas) in Dedham, Mass. to lodge a formal complaint. There, I spoke to Mr. Towey in "operations" and presumably the superiors of not only Mr. Stanford and Miss Piggy, but also many other Showcase Cinema employees. After explaining the above to him, he informed me that Miss Piggy, Mr. Sanford, and Gary Elliot (another manager-type to whom I spoke) were all wrong and that they had no reason whatsoever for not selling me the tickets. Well, thank you Mr. Towes, I'd just like to inform you that your employees have no clue how to do their jobs. He apologized and then expressed that he was sorry.

Well, so am I. I'm sorry that I drove half an hour to see a movie, which I was entitled to see, but didn't, because of Showcase's incompetence. I'm sorry for parents that have kids who will get into movies because their kids "look" old enough. I'm sorry that I'll never attend another Showcase Cinemas, ever. Most of all, I'm sorry that a system, designed to protect the public, is in fact working against it.

Right now, many of you may be wondering how old my friend, who didn't show an ID, is. Well, I would tell you, but it doesn't seem to matter at this point, does it?

Adam Martignetti is a Collegian Staff member.

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Doonesbury

Read this Column!

It is now time to act. It is time to rid this campus of the slime that has come over it in the last week. Now is the time to turn the heat up and start pounding the pavement to ensure the safety of the population of this campus. The men of UMass need to step up and reclaim the campus from trash that has taken it away. We have thousands of males here on campus and the majority of these want to help. Our police force is doing the best that they can but with 57 sworn officers and 25 safety officers they are limited on what they can do. We are not.

Brian Lohnes

Our numbers are so overwhelming that we are almost required to help. Please contact PondWatch in the Student Union because they are organizing student patrols around campus at night. Another untapped resource that we have is our Greek community. These organizations are brotherhoods and brothers, your sisters need help. If anyone messed with my sister I know what I would do and now someone is messing with all of ours. Use some of your manpower and some of your money to help out this situation. Rent a van, walk the campus, set up check tables around campus, anything at all will help this situation. If there was ever a time to band together and look past all our differences it is now.

Everyone needs to play a role in stopping these horrifying attacks. It has been said a hundred times and it will be said a hundred more, walk together. If you are leaving a bar, pair up with someone, or better yet, a group of people and go where you need to go. Meet new people in your classes because the more people you know, the more people will be there to help you if you ever need it. Guys, it's time to stand up for ourselves and not take this lightly. We are looking bad here; a few sickos are making the rest of us suffer for their crimes. It's time that we get mad and go out to stop this from happening again. No one wants to think about it, but it could be your girlfriend or your next-door neighbor that is the next victim. I do not want my girlfriend to have to worry about her safety at 2 p.m. I do not want to have to worry about her at 2 a.m. either. This is why anyone that is able to, should contact PondWatch to get this campus back on track.

The police need to be commended on their efforts. They want to catch these monsters just as bad as the rest of us, and you can be sure that they are putting in some extra hours on this one. I have never been in a situation like this before, where so few people have caused fear for so many. It is beyond any decent person why anyone would do such a thing as this, but it does happen. This is an inescapable fact, but one that we have to deal with. The police can't be everywhere, but we can. If we can join together for the final days leading up to Thanksgiving we can give people the security that they need. No one should have to run from place to place, no one should have to look over their shoulder at night.

It is not enough to just talk anymore. Sometimes I'm up, Sometimes I'm down, Comin' for to carry me home;

It is time for action. It is time for us to do the right thing and rid the campus of fear and violence. Please try and volunteer any time that you have to walk around campus and help out those people that need it. You will be providing them with more than just a walking partner, you will give them peace of mind. This campus needs to unite. We need to be around for each other and lend a helping hand for our fellow students. This problem will not go away on it's own. We need to stop it, we need to make it go away. This is not the time to start to point fingers at the administration, this is the time for stopping the problem. Changes can be made only after the problem is solved to make sure we are better prepared for it, but now is not that time.

So get involved, me and act. We can do it. We can make the difference and it is on our hands. If you or anyone you know has been affected by this, do it for them. Do it to end the threat of anyone you know being put in danger, and do it for yourself. Make a difference and let's take back what is ours.

Thanks to the "Silent Majority" for taking the "high road."

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

A Few UMass (Negligent) Points of Pride: Housing Services

Family Housing is the off-campus version of Housing Services at the University of Massachusetts consisting of North Village and Lincoln Apartments. These units were originally designed for student parents so they could be located close to campus, have cheaper rents and be part of a community.

There are many policies and procedures that have digressed from the mission of helping student parents achieve their degrees, and currently Family Housing is actually a roadblock for many student parents. Let's bring to light one such policy and a list of discriminatory and negligent practices that will exemplify the institutionalized classism and exploitation embedded in one of the most crooked departments on campus – Family Housing.

If a student is late on their rent, Family Housing can utilize a policy called academic withdrawal to extort the rent from tenants. This policy literally withdraws the student from the University whereby an individual cannot register for classes, receive loans, or maintain health benefits for their family until their rent is up to date. In other words, Housing Services extorts the rent from their tenants by threatening them with their academic standing at UMass.

As a land grant institution, the University of Massachusetts has a commitment to provide affordable education to its citizenry. This is achieved by having academic support programs, affirmative action policies, financial assistance (besides loans), access to affordable housing, etc. The current policies and procedures of UMass Family Housing are the antithesis of the University's mission statement, and more importantly, they are a threat to affordable, land grant, public education.

The blatant administrative attack on affordable education by the elimination of viable means of accessibility – such as affordable housing – is slowly backfiring by the administration's inability to hide its draconian practices. In trying to maneuver through the Housing Services constellation of inefficiency, we have uncovered some startling facts.

Foremost, Housing Services is not responsible to report to anyone. It seems as though the director of Housing Services, Michael Gilbert, is the dictator when it comes to decision-making. If you have a problem with Housing, guess where you go to file a complaint – Housing. If you are treated unfairly, where can you go to appeal? Once again the answer is Housing. If you are academically withdrawn, even after your tuition is paid, where do you go to "make a deal" (this sounds like a Scorsese film)? – that's right, Housing.

Last year alone Housing Services lost $130,198 on vacant apartments alone (which is $11,314 more than the total yearly 1999-2000 rent increase), meanwhile, a hundred people sat on a waiting list for more than a year while apartments stayed vacant for an average of 59 days. Faculty members live in family housing while they save money to buy a house. A rent increase of $32.00 went into effect on July 1 of this year with the rationalization of market value, but the University does not pay any property tax for their units. Housing illegally billed residents in July and August an amount in excess of the 1998 lease agreement.

Jon Zibbell

This summer, UMass police officers got lost in North Village due to the poor labelling of the apartments. Many Lincoln tenants whose apartment numbers end in 11 (ex. 611) live above boiler rooms. In the summer these rooms are extremely hot, loud, and unbearable, and when asked, Housing Services refused to relocate tenants even though there were many vacant apartments. Parking Services has tripled the parking fee for residents (yes that is correct, rent does not include parking). There is no pedestrian crosswalk in front of the North Village north bus stop, resulting in a dangerous situation for families using the PVTA. This summer the potholes were supposed to be filled at North Village, but the paving crews were called away to pave the Chancellor's driveway. As a result of the ongoing digging at North Village, when it rains there are deep ditches in sidewalks, yards and near play areas. Loose gravel left on sidewalks has already caused several accidents with children on bicycles. Students are forced to use a long distance phone service that is exceedingly higher than AT&T, Sprint and the like, and with a population of 75 percent international students the ability to choose cheaper phone rates is crucial, but the University will not allow tenants to choose their long distance service providers.

Currently, Family Housing uses tenant late fees and fines to pay for tenant functions, such as Halloween parties, which means that Housing Services is financing their events on the backs of low-income student families. The rusty decrepit old dryers were finally changed this summer, but the new ones have less drying time per dollar, so that student parents are paying more to dry their clothes than they would at any other laundromat.

According to the lease, the electricity is included in the rent. However, Housing Services walks around recording who has air conditioners so they can charge an extra $25.00 to tenants. In other words, electricity is included in the rent, but the tenants are policed in how they use it and they cannot use too much without an extra charge.

Before University Housing builds any new housing units on or off campus, some institutional practices, policies and procedures need to be changed and/or implemented within the current services to provide solutions to the existing problems before the University moves to something new.

Rent needs to be separate from academic standing: eliminate academic withdrawal for late rent!

- Family Housing needs to be more affordable and subsidized by the University, thereby affirming its stated commitment to low-income students. This means that rent needs to be below basic market value and not further subsidized by graduate fees.
-Student parents should not pay more than 25% of their income on rent; stop raising the rent!
-Give tenants the ability to choose their long distance service provider.
-Implement more bus routes and extended hours of the PVTA going to Stop and Shop so families without transportation have more time options to go food shopping; including holidays, school breaks and summers.
-Three and four bedroom apartments are needed so larger households are not cramped into one or two bedroom apartments.
-Acknowledge the existence and importance of a tenant organization and implement their demands in a timely manner.
-Have a representative from the tenant organization on every University committee that concerns family issues, such as childcare, housing, etc.
-Provide an on site, full time, day care/drop-in center.
-Build a large community center with study rooms available to all tenants.
-Create a drop-off library book service.
-Stop the unwritten administrative academic standing: eliminate academic withdrawal for late rent!
-Stop the unwritten student families in a condescending manner.
-Provide safe playgrounds for the children.
-Acknowledge the habitability issues addressed and documented by S.T.O.P. (Student Tenants Organized in Protest) and implement policies for their correction.
-Provide public housing services in an efficient manner; we do not need to privatize housing to ensure efficiency.

We need to hold the housing fuehrer, Michael Gilbert, and his housing regime accountable for administrative practices that utilize extortion tactics and negligent discriminatory practices to get results. Also email and/or call Chancellor Scott and Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs Javier Cevallos and ask them to initiate an inquiry into the negligence of family housing. Hey Michael Gilbert, start shredding those documents – the campus is on the move.

Jon E. Zibbell is a UMass graduate student.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager

Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Natty Yaqudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holshen Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Ben Alamed Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1921, the Weekly Collegian in 1934 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Jewish Affairs

Tuesday, November 23, 1999

Speaker discusses origins of hatred

By Anna Faktorovich
Collegian Staff

Noted Harvard professor Gregg Stern discussed the origins of Christian medieval anti-Jewish hatred in Europe last Thursday at the University of Massachusetts.

The lecture, titled "Blood Libel or Blood Fact?" addressed Israeli historian Israel Yuval's "major new interpretation of the myth of Jewish ritual murder."

According to Yuval's theory, anti-Jewish hatred originated in the Rhineland towns of medieval Germany, from explicit accusations that were made by Christians against Jews based on a "delusion that Jews are ritually slaughtering Christian children."

Stern said his main goal was to call scholars' attention to Yuval's theory, which he feels is being ignored by historians outside of Israel.

Stern further compared Jewish and Christian interpretations of the Jewish child. He highlighted Yuval's theoretic point by saying that there is a "connection in the collective religious imagination of medieval Christians between the delusion that Jews ritually slaughter Christian children and the fact that Jews ritually slaughtered their own."

According to Jewish sources presented, "They [Jews] bound their children in sacrifice as Abraham did his son Isaac," as a reaction to the Crusades in the late 11th century. "The only way to escape death at the hands of these mobs was to convert to Christianity," said Stern.

"Delusional construction" of Christians' conceptions was the reason Stern suggested to explain the misconception that Christian children were killed by Jews.

This Christian misinterpretation comes from a "passage from the Passover Haggadah, which asks God to pour out His wrath upon the Gentiles as well as other expressions of the hope for eschatological revenge," said Stern.

"What impresses the reader most," Stern said, "is the neatly opposing conceptual symmetry between the loving slaughter of a child to arouse divine vengeance against crusaders, and the ritual murder of a child as a heinous act of revenge – as imagined by Christians thereafter."

REBECCA BEDNICK / COLLEGIAN

Speaker Gregg Stern discusses early origins of anti-Jewish sentiments during his lecture last Thursday.

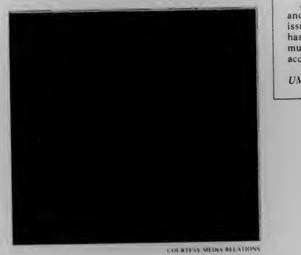
Swing Low Sweet Chariot

Swing low, sweet chariot
Comin' for to carry me home;
Swing low, sweet chariot
Comin' for to carry me home.

I looked over Jordan, and
What did I see,
Comin' for to carry me home?
A band of angels comin' after me,
Comin' for to carry me home

Swing low, sweet chariot
Comin' for to carry me home

If you get there before I do
Comin' for to carry me home,
Tell all my friends I'm comin' too
Comin' for to carry me home



Swing low, sweet chariot
Comin' for to carry me home;
Sometimes I'm up,
Sometimes I'm down,
Comin' for to carry me home;

Yet still my soul feels heavn'ly bound,
Comin' for to carry me home

Swing low, sweet chariot
Comin' for to carry me home

The song "Swing Low Sweet Chariot" offered hope to the black individuals of the slave period. Getting through a day was often only feasible because of the help of such positive thoughts. The black individuals needed to escape the "band of angels," the white slave owners, in order to reach "home." Black individuals were slowly gaining freedom from slave owners, and many slaves felt that they too could reach "heaven," the haven of safety and freedom.

Poem interpretation by Dana Drutz and Jeremy M. Goldberg, UMass students.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Today, African-Americans still cope with demonstrations of hate groups, such as the KKK in South Carolina.

The black struggle for equal rights

"Proclaiming that black churches taught their congregations how to manipulate the welfare system and procure government subsidies, the Klan set up shop in 1994 in a field near Macedonia Baptist Church. Its members were forced to listen to the Klan's message of hate as it blared through the church windows. One of the young white men listening outside, a friend and neighbor of Macedonia parishioners, helped burn the church."
- from www.pbs.org

They came in wanting blacks out, aiming for a minority. The Klu Klux Klan implemented in Manning, S.C., what many believe to be antiquated thoughts. The KKK used black individuals as scapegoats, proclaiming that African-American political initiatives were manipulative and unjustified. Forced to listen to such uneducated ideals, blacks suffered from what many hoped, by now, would be a problem solved.

Unfortunately, this incident replicates the problem of past white supremacy when the KKK exhibited a superior role. Burning crosses and threatening individuals, the Klu Klux Klan gained unjustified power, influencing many weak individuals in its favor. The members of the KKK, although free to live within society, are still infringing their beliefs upon people who do not choose to agree with their morals.

Because this rebellion, although not legal, still occurs, the KKK maintains an ultimate power that many cannot defeat. Rather, the battle must be won before the ideas of the Klu Klux Klan dominate the personal lives of innocent, free-willed citizens of the United States.

Dana Drutz and Jeremy Goldberg are UMass students.

'Blacks and Jews: Sharing a Common History'

You might wonder what Black individuals, who represent a race, and Jewish individuals, who represent a religion, have in common. Why, even though they appear so different, do the similarities prevail so greatly?

Historically, both cultures faced oppression and struggled to gain equality. Although the discriminations of the Holocaust and the Slave Era occurred in separate places and different times, the two groups are still struggling with equality issues in today's society.

Over time, both Blacks and Jews have relied on their personal voices for healing, through poetry, songs, and other expressions of thought.

These representations have universally informed others about the personal emotions of Holocaust and Slavery survivors, documenting significant events of history. This parallel allows Blacks and Jews to be a source of education for current and future generations.

The unifications within both the Black and Jewish heritages were essential in order to overcome their oppression. This harmony is equally important today to overcome anti-Semitic and anti-racial groups.

Unfortunately, the divisions within the Black and Jewish cultures today prevent further education for humanity, consequently due to inner-group conflicts. Many Black and Jewish individuals have lost the motivation to unite due to society's misconceptions of equality. When such groups as the NAACP and pro-Zionist organizations were formed, the passion and determination to succeed could not be defeated.

As many Americans have become passive and unaware of current social discrimination issues, the fight for education and awareness has diminished. Representatives of such groups must lead the citizens of America to a peaceful acceptance, so that history does not reoccur.

Dana Drutz and Jeremy M. Goldberg are UMass students.

'America'
Little dark baby,
Little Jew baby,
Little outcast,
America is seeking the stars,
America is seeking tomorrow.
You are America.
I am America.
America-the dream,
America-the vision,
America-the star-seeking I.
Out of yesterday
The chains of slavery;
Out of yesterday,
The ghettos of Europe;
Out of yesterday,
The poverty and pain of the old, old world,
The building and struggle of this new one,
We come
You and I,
Seeking the stars. [1-20]
-Langston Hughes

Langston Hughes, the literary genius of the Harlem Renaissance, wrote about unity, indifference, change and adaptation. The parallels that many of his poems portray about the Jewish and Afro-American relationship display both cultures' need to "seek the stars," or gain equal rights.

Poem Interpretation by Dana Drutz and Jeremy M. Goldberg, UMass students.

Hillel Calendar of Events

Tuesday, Nov. 30
Rosh Chodesh & Menorah Making
7:30 p.m., Hillel House
Sponsored by the Jewish Women's Collective

Wednesday, Dec. 1
Jewish Student Union Elections
6:30 p.m., Location TBA

Thursday, Dec. 2
Go See "Company"
7 p.m., Hillel House (walk together Student Union Ballroom)
$4 for tickets with Student ID

Friday, Dec. 3
Hanukkah Menorah Lighting
5:30 p.m. front lawn of the Hillel House each evening of Hanukkah.

Shabbat Service
6 p.m., Hillel House Lounge
Dinner 7:15 p.m., Free for UMass Students

Saturday, Dec. 4
Shabbat Morning Service
10:30 a.m., Hillel House

You who live safe
In your warm houses
You who find, returning in the evening
Hot food and friendly faces:
Consider if this is a man
Who works in the mud
Who does not know peace
Who fights for a scrap of bread
Who dies because of a yes or a no.
Consider if this is a woman,
Without hair and without name
With no more strength to remember,
Her eyes empty and her womb cold
Like a frog in winter.
Meditate that this came about:
I commend these words to you.
Carve them in your hearts
At home, in the street,
Going to bed, rising:
Repeat them to your children,
Or may your house fall apart.
May illness impede you,
May your children turn their faces from you.
-Primo Levi

Primo Levi was arrested during World War II and deported to Auschwitz in 1944 for being part of the anti-Fascist resistance movement. Levi's experiences in Auschwitz and his ensuing travels throughout Eastern Europe became the topics of various memoirs, essays and poetry.

His powerful literature is filled with disturbing images aimed to educate the people who were not part of the Holocaust. It also commemorates the memory of those who perished. Levi's recollections tell the individual to "carve them into your hearts," making it a duty to never forget those murdered for their religious and cultural affiliations.

Poem interpretation by Dana Drutz and Jeremy M. Goldberg, UMass students.

Confronting anti-Semitic graffiti

"In late October 1998, school officials at Peabody High School found racist, anti-Semitic graffiti scrawled on school walls. The graffiti was removed, but continued to reappear sporadically in different parts of the building for more than four weeks. In order to present a united front against bigotry, the Anti-Defamation League organized a press conference with various community officials, while students spearheaded a task force to address diversity issues. Three students were eventually charged with separate racist scrawling, although the identity of the authors of earlier, more severe messages, were not found."
- From www.stopthehate.org

Threatened with blatant forms of discrimination, a public high school faced controversial issues that resulted with pro-active measures to address the problem. The anti-Semitic slurs were not only a discrimination against Jewish individuals, but the graffiti also defaced property.

The school administration may have blindly headed the discriminating thoughts due to their ill representation of mutual respect. The school's failure to include cultural awareness issues within the curriculum allowed for an educational gap within the system.

Teenagers, easily influenced by social groups, are the individuals most likely to succumb to such powerful, dominant beliefs. The anti-Semitic graffiti closely sympathizes with Nazi ideology during WWII. Knowing that these modern beliefs might be a direct influence of individuals like Adolph Hitler, it is apparent that teenagers are not fully educated about such hate groups.

Until cultural awareness education prevails, we as citizens will continue to be affected by such discrimination. If awareness is implemented at the teenage level, then anti-Semitic and other racial discriminations will decrease.

Dana Drutz and Jeremy M. Goldberg are UMass students.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Primo Levy wrote about the importance of remembering the Holocaust's painful lessons for years to come.

In response to UMass assaults: trying to heal

This week, rather than discuss the Torah portion, as I usually do, I would like to discuss an issue that has presented itself recently. Two rapes and two non-sexual assaults have occurred in the past month, as most of us know. The women who suffered these attacks should have a "refua shalayma" (complete recovery) and the attackers should be punished to the fullest extent of the law.

I have no experience in these matters, and to these women I can only offer my sympathy and well wishes. Yet, something needs to be said, and only being able to write from my own experience, I address this article to all the men of the campus community.

We as guys have really messed up the past couple thousand years. One of the primary "avodot" (divine services) incumbent upon us this generation is to begin healing the wounds we have created, specifically in the realm of re-affirming the feminine in our world. That means appreciating feminine energy, and respecting women, the physical embodiment of this energy. I don't know all the details this involves, but I am aware of a few, and the following article offers a Jewish perspective on one that can be applied in many situations.

In the book of proverbs, King Solomon said, "Hashem founded the earth with wisdom ('chochma'); He established the heavens with understanding ('binah'); through His knowledge ('da'at'), the depths were cleaved and the heavens dripped dew."

Kabalistic teachings relate that chochma is likened to masculine energy, representing the first transcendent spark of intellect, binah is likened to feminine energy and represents the internalization and refinment of this intellect, and da'at represents the ability to apply it to a practical situation.

We also learn in Midrash N'eelam of the Zohar that it is the nature of physical things to desire to dominate others. "The earth" in our context can be read as the corporeal world, and can thus be equated with the desire for domination. It is created with the masculine energy, chochma. The nature of masculine energy is then understood to include the drive for domination.

"Nature" in Jewish thought is relatively inconsequential. A "nature" towards domination is no excuse to oppress people; rather, nature is a tool with which to grow. Thus natural desires for domination do not justify subjugation, but rather him that essentially man must dominate himself In control of self we are secure, and can take the next step.

Chochma, wisdom, masculine energy, is only effectual (thus totally true) when it is absorbed and processed by binah, understanding, the feminine attribute. This feminine attribute then "gives birth" to da'at, the ability to apply wisdom to our world. Thus we read "through His da'at the depths were cleaved and the heavens dripped dew."

That is, when the masculine element, the earth allows itself to be assimilated into the feminine, the heavens (da'at is produced, the depths (earth) are "cleaved," and the heavens "drip dew." Meaning that life can now occur as we understand that a tree cannot grow unless the ground is opened, the roots entrench themselves, and are watered by the sky.

Now, my holy brothers, I know how hard it is to let go of our egos. We always want to be right, always want to have things go our way, but acting on or even thinking these impulses is the beginning of domination. Domination leads to oppression and oppression to violence.

On the inside, everyone wants to do good things with their lives, wants their relationships to create new life and beauty, and elevate each partner higher than they ever were alone. Therefore, understand that when we persist in our ego-based demands, they will probably be indulged by our lovers, who all to often accept such things to their own detriment.

Yet this, despite transitory pleasure, is not what we want from life. Chochma must be internalized and processed by binah before da'at can be revealed. If binah, the feminine attribute, were to be nullified through the influence of chochma, this da'at could not exist.

We already understand that da'at is the practical principle. It gives us the ability to live, to create, to affect our world and our relationships in positive ways. Thus for these changes, it is essential to open space for a woman's innate qualities to have voice. Thes are so subtle, but we can't miss them.

This voice alone is what converts abstraction, a whole world of information from us and the rest of the universe into something concrete and focused, as opposed to random chaos. It is in this concrete truth that life takes root, relationships grow, and light is spread in the world. When as men, we then grasp it and absorb it, we partake in the feminine binah, learn to internalize, refine, "cleave the depths" and transcend our previous boundaries.

Similarly, women become like "heavens dripping dew," that is, they assimilate the attributes of chochma, providing the initial "sparks" which are eventually refined into practical applications, and also becoming more than they were before. It is this process of helping one another perpetually step beyond our boundaries that make relationships worthwhile, and it can only be done when the inherent qualities of both people are given full voice.

When this symbiosis exists, it is the most powerful and beautiful force. When understood on a scale that includes both personal relationships and the balance of men, women, masculine and feminine in the world at large, it has the power to heal the conflicts that have plagued us for a very long time.

I, therefore give us all a blessing that we have the strength to dominate ourselves, and through this, open space for women to absorb all the information, influences, truths and falsehoods around them. Then when they have given birth to something from it all, have the humility to understand that it is good, and that the woman's contribution is essential. Understanding this principle diffuses so much violence and oppression, for understanding the true value of things prevents us from destroying them.

Hayyim Rothman is a UMass student.

Have a Happy and Safe Thanksgiving Break!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Boulders. $387 flexible avail. Call Chris 256-1629

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Ford Escort 95,000 miles, 4 DR, auto, perfect condition, no rust $1,700 253-1303

1989 Chevy Corsica AT, AC, cruise only 91k miles great condition $2600 call TJ 256-2147

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Pentium III 500MHZ, ABIT BEG Motherboard, 128MBSRAM, ATI3DRAGEFURY. Graphics card 24xCD Burner, TOSHIBA6X DVD, 17" MAG Monitor, 56kModem, NEC Superscript870 Lazer Printer, $2100 or BO Jimmy 253-8074 3 weeks old.

Laptop PC Fujitsu Pentium, CD Rom, 32 mRam, 2G Hard drive. $599.95. Michael at 253-0473

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Ware Youth Center Seeks a dynamic, creative person to direct youth activities. Flexible part time hours. Send resume by December 6, to K. Henderson, c/o Valley Human Services, 96 South Street, Ware, MA 01082 AA/EOE

TUTORS/ TRANSLATORS Bilingual/for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Bengali, Hungarian, Japanese, Khmer, Korean, Mongolian, Portuguese, and Tibetan. Call ESL Office at 413-549-9857 Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/ Equal Opportunity Employer

December Grads: Entry-level position with great opportunity for advancement and responsibility available. Need high GPA and interest in high-tech industry, interviewing on campus Dec. 1st. send resumes to gel@scientific.com www.scientific.com/joinSPI

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards no experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Business Internships Available Not limited to business majors. Earn up to $15,000 this summer. Call 1-800-390-4848 Ext. 100 ASAP or visit www.univ-paint.com

Bartenders Make $100-$300 per night no experience necessary call 1-800-440-0155

Part-Time Outdoor Specialty Sporting goods. Experience in the outdoors and retail helpful. Call 253-0473 For more info.

ONE SUMMER. A LIFETIME OF EXPERIENCE. I could spend this summer learning someone else's business. Or I could be running my own. For more info visit our website and register to win a palm pilot. www.collegeproedge.com or call 888-277-7962

Office staff needed for a booming Internet company. Learn skills and pay your bills. Many positions available. Call 549-1441

Talent Search: We need new faces for amateur modeling opportunities. Must have a good attitude and a desire to have fun! $30.00+ per hour, no experience necessary. Call 584-4665

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $500 weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Campaign Jobs For The Environment $300-$400/wk, F/T, P/T, + Career opportunities. Call Jesse 256-6434

FOR SALE

All East Season Passes only $350. Ski + Board 7 mtns all season anytime Hurry! Offer ends Dec. 5 call Mark 413-527-3524

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. On bus route. Call 256-0364

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bdr in 4 Bedroom House Oil Heat. No pets. Non-smoker. 10 mins from Amherst in Belchertown $263/month, utilities extra. Call Chris 323-0899 Leave a message

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Bdr in 4 Bedroom House Oil Heat. No pets. Non-smoker. 10 mins from Amherst in Belchertown $263/month, utilities extra. Call Chris 323-0899 Leave a message

SERVICES

Feeling ripped off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined your favorite suit? Are dept collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

Ski Breckenridge Co. 1/3-1/10 from $769 Roundtrip airfare 7 nights lodging 5 day lift ticket UMass Ski N' board Club 545-3437

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.spring-breakdirect.com

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 CANCUN JAMAICA For 10 years Class Travel International (CTI) has distinguished itself as the most reliable student event and marketing organization in North America Motivated Reps can go on Spring Break FREE & earn OVER $$$$$$10,000! $$$$$ Contact Us today for details! 800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Party with UMass Ski N' Board Club for the Millennium Quebec City/Hilton 5 nites/4days $299 Dec28-Jan2 Social opportunity age is 18 sign up now, space is selling out bus option available... call 545-3437

TRAVEL

LAGNAF In Quebec Dec 3-5 Party/Ski only $149! Call Ski N' Board Club 5-3437

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Need an A Place to Live?? Find it in... The Collegain Classifieds

Need that new Job??

What are you waiting for??

The opportunities are just passing you by!!

Act NOW

Check out The Classifieds... or put in an Ad yourself!!

545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, NOV. 30

Lecture – A lecture involving Indo-Tibetan Buddhist culture entitled "Personal Identity in a Cross-Cultural Perspective: Parfit and Yogacara" will be given at 4 p.m. in the Dewey common room at Smith College.

NOTICES

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Duyst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multidimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

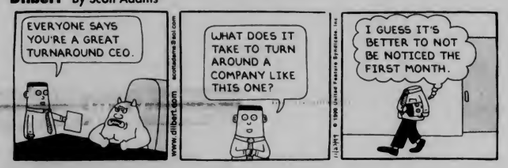
University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs

SORRY NO TV LISTING!

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady



Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Kampus Klds By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Grant others the patience that you are more than willing to grant yourself today and everyone will get along much better.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Long-distance communication is essential to the successful performance of your duties at the workplace and at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – This is a good day to indulge in a fantasy or two with a special friend, if possible. Who's to say fantasy can't become reality?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Provided that you pinpoint your current vulnerability as early as possible, you can avoid any serious emotional pitfalls today.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You may have the time, the money, and the inclination to be a little extravagant as the day comes to a close. Do something special for someone.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)– You'll gain much today through communication with those who share your aspirations but who do things in their own unique ways.

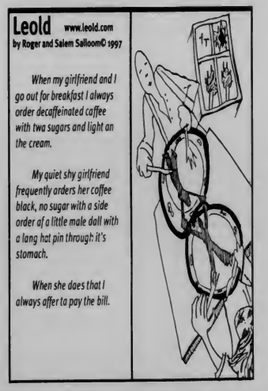
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Your desires are increasing, and you must work hard to balance those urges that are driving you in two or three different directions at once.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – A gathering of friends, family, or loved ones may afford you the opportunity to make clear certain cloudy personal issues.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Someone close to you may be getting a little too close at this time. Don't hesitate to draw the line when discomfort gets to be too much.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – What springs from your own imagination can be more than valuable today – it can be quite essential for the well-being of all around you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You have no use for guilt today, so you mustn't let minor mistakes get the better of you. Maintain a positive, forward-thinking attitude.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You won't satisfy that special someone with the same old attention today. You must be willing to add a bit of panache to your repertoire.

Quote of the Day

"Permanent address...is that, like, your home address?"

–A resident in Kennedy Tower

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Saltoom© 1997

When my girlfriend and I go out for breakfast I always order decaffeinated caffee with two sugars and light an the cream.

My quiet shy girlfriend frequently orders her coffee black, no sugar with a side order of a little male dall with a long hat pin through it's stomach.

When she does that I always affer to pay the bill.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Diablo on Sourdough Roll
Vegetarian egg roll
Vegetable Fried Rice
California Vegetable Chili

DINNER
Cajun fish
Cavatelli Supreme
Bow tie Pasta and Vegetable Casserole

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Diablo on Sourdough Roll
Vegetarian egg roll
Vegetable Fried Rice
California Vegetable Chili

DINNER
Cajun fish
Cavatelli Supreme
Savory Stuffed Peppers
Bow tie Pasta and Vegetable Casserole

Hampshire

LUNCH
Chicken Diablo on Sourdough Roll
Vegetarian egg roll
Vegetable Fried Rice
California Vegetable Chili

DINNER
Cajun fish
Cavatelli Supreme
Bow tie Pasta and Vegetable Casserole

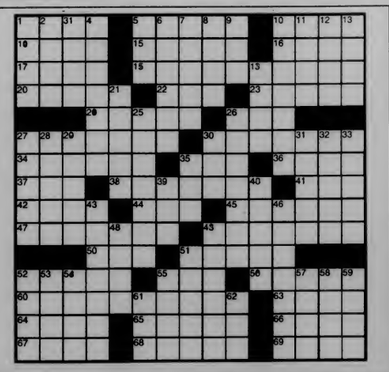
Berkshire

LUNCH
Chicken Diablo on Sourdough Roll
Vegetarian egg roll
Vegetable Fried Rice
California Vegetable Chili

DINNER
Cajun fish
Cavatelli Supreme
Savory Stuffed Peppers
Bow tie Pasta and Vegetable Casserole

Collegian Staff

Night Editor: Seth Koenig
Photo Technitian: Rebecca Reddick
Copy Editor: Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor: Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff: Melanie Thomas, Janine Tangney



ACROSS
1 Territory
5 Diego Rivera specialty
10 Frolic
14 Genuine
15 Mailreat
16 Singer Adams
17 Speech problem
18 Teens' game
20 Saloon sign
22 Alias: abbr.
23 Type of eclipse
24 Expenses
26 Director's call
27 Brings to mind
30 Formal wear
34 Nome's place
35 Ford, e.g.
36 Calamitous
37 Pull
38 Circus performer
41 Cravat
42 Poems
44 Relatives
45 Copied a drawing
47 Snuggled
49 Approximately
50 Charged particle
51 Carried
52 Arthur C. Clarke genre
55 Pouch
56 Talent
60 Wrestling hold
63 Singer Celine
64 Aunt Bee's nephew
65 Bass or alto
66 Poker stake
67 Unwrap
68 Radiant
69 Goulash

DOWN
1 Singer Guthrie
2 Harness piece
3 Compass direction
4 Llamas' cousins
5 Traveler's guide
6 German subs
7 Some biscuits
8 Movie pooch
9 Zodiac lion
10 Disproved
11 Norse god
12 Celadonite, for one
13 Nobleman
19 Constant change
21 "Beer Barrel —"
25 Ease up
26 Museum official
27 Boca —
28 Dodge adroitly
29 Pens
30 Filer's aid
31 Trench
32 Bay window
33 Run-down
35 Cell occupant
39 Disencumber
40 Luggage
43 Make rigid
46 Schedules
48 Kind of roast
49 Ornate style
51 Pesto ingredient
52 Scare the chickens away
53 Dogpatch cartoonist
54 Tennis pro Nastase
55 Trudge
57 "He — heavy . . ."
58 Dove's home
59 Recognized
61 Spacewalk, to NASA
62 Fresh from the showroom

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

O	P	A	L		S	C	A	R	F		T	R	O	Y
A	L	O	E		H	O	M	E	R		R	I	M	E
H	A	R	M		A	B	I	D	E		A	V	E	S
U	N	T	O		M	A	N	S	E		W	A	G	E
	T	A	N	G	E	L	O		D	A	L	A	S
		J	I	S	T		C	O	D
M	A	Y	A	N		M	O	M	E	N	T	U	M
I	T	T	E	R		S	T	E	P	S		T	A	K	E
L	A	N	C	E	L	O	T		S	H	R	E	W
			V	A	T		T	E	D
U	P	K	E	E	P		B	R	E	W	E	R	Y
R	E	A	R		D	A	R	E	R		J	O	E	L
G	A	Z	A		A	L	I	B	I		E	M	M	A
E	R	O	S		S	T	A	L	L		C	E	E	S
S	L	O	E		H	O	N	E	Y		T	O	N	S

11-23-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Tuesday, November 23, 1999

Huskies outlast Minutemen in UGame, 79-65

Mouring's three swings momentum to Huskies

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn.-After front-rimming a three-pointer with 8:25 left in the second half, Connecticut guard Albert Mouring accepted a dish from teammate Souleymane Wane and drilled a second chance trey to raise the lead to six points over the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

That was the closest the Minutemen got to the No. 7 Huskies as they succumbed 79-65 in the fourth annual

Connecticut	79
Massachusetts	65

"MassMutual U-Game" last night at the Harry A. Gampel Pavilion.

"We just made some mental errors, actually," said Flint. "We threw some passes away when you're playing a game you have to take advantage of the things that they are going to give, and they're not going to give you that much."

Shooting guard Monty Mack played the role of savior at times for the visiting squad, tallying a game-high 26 points including a perfect 8-for-8 at the free throw line. The senior, playing in only his second competition since injuring his foot in October, scored 15 of the Minutemen's 31 points in the first half.

"A terrific player and one of the better players we will play against- that's Monty Mack," said Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun. "In the first half he lit us up, in the second half, he still gets up to 26 points.

"But we dealt with the adversity. At first we put Tony (Robertson) on him, then (Kevin) Freeman...I think his (Freeman's) size after a while made the big difference," Calhoun continued.

Connecticut's preseason Big East Player of the Year Khalid El-Amin contributed 18 points in the winning effort; and was his usual dominating self at the point. Three other Huskies were in double digits as Edmund Saunders followed closely with 16 points and Mouring and Robertson closed out the night with 10 and 14 points, respectively.

UMass senior co-captain Mike Babul chopped Springfield native Freeman down to size as the forward could only muster two points at the foul line for the game.

"The one thing I was afraid of was that they would post him up a lot," said Flint. "But Mike did a great job against him in the post. They can say what they want to say about (Duke's Shane) Battier, right, Mike's the best defensive player in the country.

"He shows it every game. He shut down four guys who were first round picks last year. And our thing is, you don't help Mike- Mike just guards the guy," Flint continued.

The Huskies held the advantage over the Minutemen from the opening tip-off with their physical, pound-it-inside play, which accentuated UMass' weak point in the blocks.

Down 18-12 with 10:46 to go in the first half, Mack knocked down his second three-pointer in five minutes to halt a 10-2 run by the Huskies, last over a minute later. Mack netted a third jack to bring the score to 22-15.

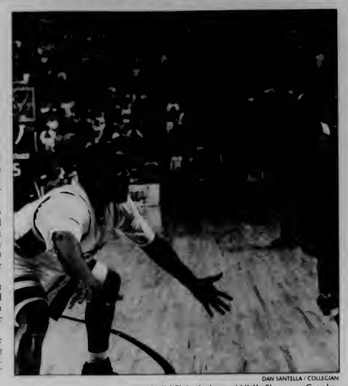
It seemed, however, no matter whether it was a three-point play, UConn had a better response.

"We're going to play against some bigger teams and we're going to have to work on it," said Flint.

The Minutemen kept within striking distance towards the end of the half, after the Connecticut bench was slapped with a technical foul with 1:31 left. The Huskies' Jake Voskuhl scored two of his four points to head into the second half with a 37-31 lead.

UMass' center Kitwana Rhymer proved his effectiveness inside, raking in 10 of his 17 rebounds in the first half. Rhymer added five points and one block in just 19 minutes of play. UConn big men Voskuhl, Wane and Ajou Deng dominated the boards to the tune of a 30 to 18 advantage in the first half.

"Their size, they're just too big for us," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "Our team is different this year, but we missed some layups too, missed some real easy shots in the second half. It's a different ballgame if you make them."



UMass senior co-captain Chris Kirkland, who struggled to get a body on the larger UConn forwards, finished up with nine points and five boards.

"What we have to start doing to him a little bit is letting him face the basket against these bigger guys, instead of playing with them on his back," said Flint.

It was the Wane and Saunders show for the first 11 minutes of the second half with the duo combining for 13 of the first 17 points. Still in the game, UMass' Mack, DePina and Ronell Blizzard rallied back with three treys in a row in just over a minute to cut the margin back down to seven.

But it was the little things that ate up the Minutemen in the end. After Mouring hit his second chance three, Blizzard committed two costly fouls and DePina, one, to permanently change the momentum of the game.

El-Amin proved why he is such a guarded player, stripping DePina in the backcourt for an easy two-point conversion to take a 66-53 lead. Mack returned with a driving lay-up along the left baseline to cut the lead to 70-61, but it was not enough as Robertson tacked on two more points for the final score.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

In the battle of point guards Khalid El-Amin bested UM's Shannon Crooks.

Rhymer stands tall; 17 boards not enough

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

STORRS, CT – He couldn't do everything, but he came very close to doing so.

It was known that Connecticut was big. In fact, the Massachusetts men's basketball team probably won't toe the line with anyone bigger. That apparently was never mentioned to UMass' Kitwana Rhymer.

It was like the Atlas trying to hold up the world. Rhymer roaming the paint without a hint of maroon in sight. While the 79-65 loss clearly was not indicative of how well the Minutemen played, UConn did what it was projected to do. Tough defense kept the Minutemen in check from the perimeter, in turn handing the reins over to the frontcourt.

In the end, Rhymer fought a losing battle, but not before putting on a show. If the Atlantic 10 didn't know about him before last night, it certainly does now. UConn outmuscled the Minutemen on the glass, but that UMass was down by just six points at the half was a huge testament to Rhymer's work underneath.

Through the first 20 minutes, UConn cleaned the boards with ease, outdoing the Minutemen 30-18 on the glass. Ten of the Minutemen's 18 were courtesy of Rhymer.

It almost wasn't fair.

Before it was over, though, Rhymer had himself a career-high in rebounds, corralling a game-high 17 boards, including nine on the offensive end.

This time, the numbers didn't lie. UConn was relentless on both backboards. After all, the Huskies had the arsenal. With five players standing at 6-foot-8 or taller, most of whom came with experience, UConn easily made up for a lackluster performance on the perimeter by crashing the glass in numbers. Often times, it was Rhymer who stood alone in the key to combat the assault on the boards.

He was truly a one-man gang, accounting for nearly half of the team's rebounds in the game. Rhymer did all he could, bodying up with Jake Voskuhl and Souleymane Wane while keeping a third eye on the weak side for potential intruders, much like he did against a much bigger Iona squad on Saturday.

Wane was third on the team in scoring with 14 points, but it was more acredit to the senior Husky than a knock on Rhymer. Wane, whose shooting touch has greatly improved since arriving in Storrs, shot 5-for-8 from the field, most of his points coming outside of the key area.

Many believed Rhymer would be paired with freshman Micah Brand for significant minutes to counteract the Huskies' size advantage, but that was not the case. Brand playing two minutes over the course of two halves.

Rhymer was around to enjoy a late run by the Minutemen which saw them close within three at 54-51 with a Ronell Blizzard 3-pointer. Rhymer played in spurts, writing off the prospect of extended time by continually getting tripped up by foul trouble. His effect was felt against the Gaels, scoring a career-high 12 points and seven rebounds in just 11 minutes, this before fouling out late.

However, his offense must improve. Without a true big man for the first time since the pre-Harper Williams days, Rhymer's offense has shown glimpses of brilliance, but it remains hardly a pillar to lean on. With nine offensive rebounds, Rhymer could muster up just seven points on the night, unable to weave through the trees.

Many questioned Rhymer at the beginning of the season, saying the junior would be unable to take the physical beating of the daily A-10 routine. Last night, against one of the nation's most bruising frontcourts, Rhymer kept on ticking despite fighting a losing battle.

UMass ends campaign with loss to Colonials

By Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

There is only one way to describe this past weekend's events, disappointing. The Massachusetts volleyball team beat up on Virginia Tech, but lost in a heartbreaker with George Washington to end their playoff hopes and their season.

The Minutewomen came out on Friday night ready to execute the Hokies and set their sights on a playoff berth in the Atlantic 10 conference tournament. They did just that, sweeping VT in three games, 15-7, 15-0, 15-7.

Game one saw the Minutewomen jump out to a 7-0 lead behind two service aces by sophomore Lymarie Llovet. The Hokies came back to tie up the affair, before UM went on a 7-0 run. UMass then closed out the game, only allowing four more points to take a 1-0 lead in the match. In game two, the Minutewomen were unstoppable, taking the game without allowing a point behind senior Jill Meyers' five kills. Game three was more of the same, as UM came off the break with a 11-4 lead and never looked back, ending the match on a kill by senior Kari Hogancamp.

"I thought we were outstanding," said head coach Bonnie Kenny in a press release. "We followed our game plan and we executed well. I thought we were very good defensively, and we served the ball aggressively and took them out of their offense."

Hogancamp led the team to the win with 12 kills and 15 digs, notching another double-double. Meyers matched her counterpart with a double-double of her own with 11 kills and 12 digs. Freshman Jennifer Davis had a big night, tallying a career-high 11 kills and 5 digs.

With the victory Friday night, the Minutewomen were primed and ready to blast themselves into the playoffs. However, the Colonials were too much for UMass, as they edged by the Minutewomen three games to two, 9-15, 15-11, 15-6, 11-15, 9-15.

"It was a pretty somber locker room after the match, but I think that they have a lot to be proud of," said Kenny. "They really improved throughout the season and they are the best team we have had here at UMass. It was a very tough loss for us, and I am disappointed that our seniors can't go on into the post-season tournament. But if we can match what these seniors have done for our program, then we are going to be in really good shape."

Both seniors went out fighting. Hogancamp led the team again with a gallant effort of 16 kills and 25 digs, while Meyers put up 11 kills and 16 digs. Hogancamp leaves UMass ranked first in digs, digs per game and in matches with 10-plus digs and 20-plus digs. She has also led the nation in digs per game in the last eight weeks of the season with a 5.18 average. Meyers ends her career ranked first in kills, hitting percentage, block assists, total blocks, and in matches with 10-plus and 20-plus kills. Jill was also recently named to the GTE Academic All-District I Team and is now eligible for the Academic All-America National Team recognition.

"I will miss our seniors," said Kenny. "They gave it everything they had."

The Minutewomen finish the 1999 campaign 16-13 overall and 10-8 in the A-10 Conference.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Seniors Jill Meyers (left) and Kari Hogancamp both played exceptional volleyball over the weekend, but the team ended its season with a tough loss to George Washington.

Women's hoops marches on Worcester

Team looks for return to glory in battle with Holy Cross Crusaders

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

After opening the '99 season with two brutal road defeats, the Massachusetts women's hoop squad is on a mission to convince the rest of college basketball that it is, in fact, a program capable of triumph and glory.

How fitting that its next opponents are nicknamed the Crusaders.

UMass (0-2) will head east to Worcester this evening for a battle with Holy Cross at the Hart Center. The Crusaders (2-0) have jumped out to a fantastic start in their 15th season under coach Bill Gibbons, having bested New Hampshire 86-67 on the road and Siena 74-63 at home.

The Minutewomen, meanwhile, have gotten off to a somewhat shaky start. O'Brien's group showed flashes of individual brilliance in away battles with Clemson and North Carolina-Charlotte this past weekend, but couldn't find the winning formula in either contest. The Lady Tigers rode dual 15 point performances from Nuria Forns and Darishella Byrd to a 67-52 win on Friday, spoiling a 10 point, eight rebound showcase from UM senior tri-captain Alison MacFarland.

Sunday's war with the Lady 49ers was similarly disappointing, as another huge night from MacFarland (11 points, eight rebounds) and a stellar showing from senior guard Tonia Thomas (16 points) were not enough to prevent a 65-54 Charlotte victory.

Tonight's matchup pits UMass against another tempo-driven squad in the Crusaders. Holy Cross has scored a whopping 160 points in its first two games, and established itself as an overpowering second half team: the Crusaders have outscored their opposition by an average score of 48-33 over the final 20 minutes of its two wins.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Nekole Smith

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Caroline Nehls

Having guided Holy Cross to six Patriot League titles and seven NCAA Tournament appearances during his tenure at the Crusader helm, Gibbons certainly knows how to extract the best possible results from his roster. Only one player on the team has registered less than 26 minutes of floor time in the first two Crusader wins, while the team's scoring has come from just everyone in uniform.

Leading the charge for the Crusaders is senior guard Anna Kinne. The 5-foot-6 Monument Mountain graduate has torched the twine to the tune of 18 points per game this year, while bombing away at a .462 clip (6 of 13) from three-point range.

The difference in tonight's battle could very well come in the form of UM's twin towers, 6-foot-2 forwards Caroline Nehls and Nekole Smith. The pair combined for 13 points and 10 rebounds Sunday at Charlotte, after Smith punished Clemson on Friday with an eight point, 13 rebound statement.

Nehls and Smith will battle for control of the blocks with Crusader Katie O'Keefe, a 6-foot-2 freshman from New Hampshire who has racked up 32 points and 13 rebounds in Holy Cross's first two wins this year. Another imposing paint presence for Gibbons' gals is junior forward Monika Rothenhaus, whose 18.5 points per game average paces the Crusaders.

Tip-off for tonight's action is slated for 5:45 pm.

UM women's swimming chews up St. John's

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

After three or four days of recycled leftovers from the upcoming Thansgiving holiday, many people this time of year start to get the feeling that they're swimming in turkey. But after slaughtering its last opponent as if preparing for a feast, the undefeated Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team may be better off saying that it's been swimming with turkeys.

Carving up St. John's University 138-82 on Saturday, the Minutewomen continuing their win streak and a tradition from last year, when they also downed St. John's in a similar situation to remain undefeated at 5-0.

"I think we swam pretty well in our last meet going into the Thanksgiving Holiday," said UM head coach Bob Newcomb. "I always look for a tired team, but we swam some very solid events."

Solid may have even been an understatement, as the Minutewomen were harder to swallow than turkey bones; the Red Storm could not squelch the pool power of the wet Maroon and White in most events.

Leaving St. Johns in their wake, the 400-yard medley relay team of senior Elizabeth Risotto, sophomores Anne Dettloff and Andrea Kazanjian, and freshman Lauren Bulkeley not only took the proverbial checkered flag, but set a new pool record at 4:01.54 to start the day.

"It was really good to start of the meet like that," said Newcomb. "The team came together pretty well."

Dettloff was a part of the relay team would then return later and swim away with the 200-yard freestyle in 1:56.66 and would again find victory in the 500-yard freestyle with a time of 5:11.85.

Another member of the opening relay team, Kazanjian, took the 100-yard free at 54.96 for her first single win of the day. Yet she was soon followed by relay teammate Risotto in the 200-yard backstroke, finishing in 2:08.17 to put another mark in her personal win column.

Bukeley would also win against St. John's in the 200-yard breaststroke to round out the opening relay winners.

However, winning races against the Red Storm would not just be confined to medley relay members. Junior Sarah Newell posted her personal best time in the 200-yard IM to take the race for UMass.

Senior Lisa Lansky then took the 200-yard fly, as she out swam the competition with a time of 2:11.00.

Yet among the regular winners, freshman Molly Buckley would get her first colleague win in the 50-yard freestyle only to be followed by fellow freshman Lizzy Boyle who came in second.

Catherine Getty would also join her freshman point scoring compatriots with a strong second place finish in the 1000-yard freestyle.

Moving above the pool, UMass would go 1, 2, 4 in the three meter dive competition and 2, 3, 4 in the one meter. Freshman Kate Allery would go on to win the three-meter with a score of 254.50.

"I am really pleased with where this team is right now and the effort they are giving right for every single race," said Newcomb.

The Minutewomen will now be off until after Thanksgiving break when they will compete in the Syracuse Invitational to be held in Syracuse, New York. Their opponents will be Syracuse University on December 3-4. Yet until then the Maroon and White will get an opportunity to rest before they meet some of their toughest competition of the season in the Orangewomen who after might just want to be wishing for a win when they break that wishbone on Thursday.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ Issue 55 — Wednesday, November 24, 1999

Students absent from forum on safety

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Demanding safety concerns to be met, University of Massachusetts students requested that the administration take action, but when less than 10 students turned up to an open forum last night in the Student Union Ballroom, the administration was left speechless.

Yesterday afternoon, at a rally in front of the Student Union, students shook fists at Chancellor David K. Scott saying that he and the administration were not doing enough to address the concerns. In response, Scott publicly announced a forum, in conjunction with the Student Government Association (SGA), to be held last night at 7 p.m. He, on the spot, guaranteed a spectrum of faculty and staff members to be present. Even on this short notice, more than 20 administrative members from across campus were present to address concerns from students in their prospective areas.

However, with an indication that most students had left campus for Thanksgiving break, it was concluded that the planning was just an example of "bad timing."

The center of focus for the forum for both students and administration present was on what future steps should be taken to ensure a much safer campus.

Addressing the issue of safety, UMass Police Chief John Luippold said one of the problems the campus is currently facing is a lack of student involvement with campus security in the residential halls.

"We're having a hard time getting students to work our normal hours," Luippold said. "It would be difficult to get additional staff."

According to him, the problem exists within students' awareness. He said all to often, he has observed students propping the doors of residence halls for strangers that don't live in the building. Luippold said he has spoken with Residence Life and housing on arranging for Resident Assistants (RA's) to take the roles of security receptionists in buildings in which they are absent.

Another form of awareness being raised is the statewide Neighborhood Crime Watch. Police officer Black said the movement was started by UMass President William Bulger, the Five UMass Police chiefs and chancellors within the five campus communities.

The organization would focus on curbing crime by getting communities and campuses across the state to unite by taking a proactive approach to safety. In addition to crime prevention, the awareness would help as a deterrent of crime. For example, Black said knowing a location as a crime prevention area will help deter criminals from acting in criminal ways.

Black expressed his concern that students may not take the watch seriously, thinking that such crime prevention measures will not prevent crime altogether.

"They may be saying it's not affecting me directly, but they don't realize it will affect them indirectly," Black said. As an example, if a student breaks a window in the dorm and doesn't report it, housing costs will go up, Black said.

This kind of action, according to Black, includes restricting access only to residences that live in a residence hall. Black said the purpose of card access machines is to provide security for students by limiting residence hall access to its occupants.

"We're not trying to make it Alcatraz," Black said, "We're trying to make it safe... it would make me feel more comfortable to know that only residents and their guests were getting in."

Scott commented that he felt such violence on campuses could be prevented by stopping underage consumption of alcohol. According to Scott, over 94 percent of the violent incidents on campuses in the U.S. are caused by the abuse of alcohol. He said he would be in favor of installing video cameras in the front entrances of residence halls as a means of increased safety.

"If the camera, also in monitoring who's coming into the residence hall, discovers violations of our alcohol policy in residence halls and if people would choose to say that would worry them about revealing improper use of alcohol, that would not be a persuasive argument for me [against cameras]," Scott said.

Some students last night agreed with the chancellor saying that safety is the most important thing. Associate Speaker of the Senate Jennifer Teixera said she would be willing to breach privacy if it means preventing hate crime.

"If we're having hate crime, theft and all these things going on in our buildings, a camera may not be approved by students, but it will help," Teixera said.

However, Ken Campbell, chairman of the Senate Safety Committee, disagreed saying he would be against such a move to monitor students' private lives.

Luippold reminded those in attendance that the ideas discussed last night were only proposed steps that need to be looked into before any final decisions are made. A forum to discuss future safety concerns has been set for Thursday, Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

Chancellor Scott addresses questions last night concerning campus safety.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

The wall outside of the student union allows students to express their sentiments about the recent attacks on campus.

Concerns still high at rally

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The Student Union lawn, where the community first learned of a fourth attack at the University of Massachusetts, was filled with more outraged students yesterday afternoon at a rally marking one week since what some have called hysteria swept over the campus.

Organized by the Student Government Association (SGA), the rally was a forum for students to express their feelings on the situation both vocally and artistically.

Board of Trustees member Peter Lewenberg was in attendance as a representative of the board and to voice its concern for what has occurred on the Amherst campus in the last two weeks.

"I came here today to show support. We're concerned for the safety and health of the students," Lewenberg said. "We will make things happen through deeds, not just words."

Students had the opportunity to reiterate ideas and sentiments that have been expressed by many throughout the past two weeks. They spoke on how students, especially women, still feel unsafe and how they are fed up with the atmosphere of the University. "It's not a new problem and it needs to stop," one student said.

"Why did I come to school to lose my independence? I'm 19 and told I can't walk alone again," freshman Emily Burke said. "I have two challenges for this university. I want these cowards, when caught, expelled from this University and charged with a hate crime. We won't tolerate this."

In addition, Chancellor David K. Scott addressed questions posed by students. When asked about the fact that chalkings were continually erased by the Physical Plant, he said, "We have a policy on campus. We don't allow any graffiti. We have attempted to remove any counter-productive signs." He also said he couldn't respond to the individual messages to which students were referring, but that the University had decided that not all would be removed. He also said he didn't feel this campus was any less safe than any city.

Shouts were heard across the crowd, but the energy and presence did not appear as strong as it had been for previous programs, including Monday's walk-out. Many in attendance said that not enough students were present.

"Three hundred students out of, what, 20,000 is nothing. We need to get more people out here," a woman said, addressing the crowd, as they remained divided between the microphone at the steps and the wall located in the grass adjacent to the pond.

"I'm disgusted with the turnout. We need to work together to stop this," Kristine Fortini, senior communications major, said. "I can't hear you. This is your chance to speak – look around you. I want to hear everyone's voice, the pain you are feeling. This is about everyone."

Despite this discouragement, several events and plans were discussed during the rally, including a program called Campus Watch. The concept, Ken Campbell, chair of the Senate Safety Committee said, is not a new one. "We've been trying to do this for a while and the problem has always been a lack of volunteers. Everyone is very active right now and, in that way, we can get students involved." The idea, although still in the early planning stages, is to have students available in each residential area to walk as escorts. The group would be independent from PondWatch, but together the two groups would increase service to the entire campus.

Representatives from University Productions and Concerts (UPC) also told the crowd that a resource fair is being planned for Dec. 9. The fair, which will be used to educate and help rectify the current issues, will be followed by a concert. The entire event will be free, any donations will be given to the Everywoman's Center.

Staff remaining on campus for Thanksgiving show concerns

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Students are not the only people affected by the violence that has recently been prevalent on the University of Massachusetts campus.

Staff members on campus are also concerned. Their present concern is in part due to the fact that many members of on-campus staff are required to come to work on Friday, Nov. 26, when the majority of the campus will be away for the Thanksgiving break. Many are concerned there will be a lack of security because of the small number of people on campus.

According to Deborah, a member of the UMass staff who requested that her last name not be used, some staff members have planned either to report late to work or take a vacation day on Friday.

She went on to explain that although some staff members are taking vacation days for their own safety, others are required to come to work.

"Most people in this position do not have the option," she said.

She explained that the main safety concern is due to the fact that the number of on-campus personnel would be drastically reduced on the day following Thanksgiving.

Some UMass staff members may be working in buildings alone.

"I really don't feel safe about the situation," she said.

Another staff member at UMass, who wished to remain anonymous, said she too was concerned about the safety situation at the University.

Although the staff had been taking logical precautions such as walking in groups to and from the parking lots, the option would not be available with fewer staff members on campus on Friday. Also, most on-campus residents are required to vacate the dowms at 6 p.m. tonight.

"I am concerned about other people staying on campus," she said.

According to an officer with the UMass police department, the police will be on campus and in full force for the Friday after Thanksgiving.

"We are on-campus 24 hours a day, seven days a week," he said.

Both staff members interviewed wished to remain anonymous due to personal safety concerns.

Security measures increased while awareness continues

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

In addition to campus awareness, the University of Massachusetts administration is increasing the security services and police force.

According to a letter sent by Chancellor David K. Scott to the entire UMass community, the events that have followed over the past two weeks have warranted a need for individuals to take caution when traveling on campus.

Less than a week ago, a large quantity of shriek alarms were purchased by the university to be distributed across campus at residence hall cluster offices. According to Scott, nearly 10,000 personal alarms have been picked up and another 5,000 have been ordered and are due to arrive on campus in the early morning today. These will replenish the supplies at the cluster offices in the residence halls and Commuter Services, for students, and at the Whitmore Human Resources booth and the University Store, for employees.

During last night's forum in the Student Union Ballroom, Scott brought to attention the large number of battery deficient alarms that have been passed around campus by the manufacturer. According to the notice, the alarm can be tested by pressing the smaller button. If the light comes on, the alarm is functioning properly, the notice stated.

In addition, a web page has been created to focus on campus safety. Featured on the web is a map of campus with all HHP bus locations mapped out. The web page also provides updates on what events and issues are occurring on the campus. Scott said he updated the web page just recently.

Since a safety alert was first sent to the campus community a week ago, the library shuttle service has increased as a result of the demand for longer running hours. According to the notice sent out by Scott, as of Nov. 29, the shuttle will begin to park in any space from 4 p.m. to 2 a.m., provided it is not a fire lane, reserved space, or 24-hour service required lots. He said the decision came as a result of budget issues and time when the campus becomes quiet around 4 p.m. a number of persons traveling to their vehicles is less.

The Escort Service is continuing to offer increased services after increasing the number of personnel and walking patrols. For more information or to request a walking escort, call 545-2125.

At Commuter Services, students receive their shriek alarms.

Today: Fog — HIGH: 64 LOW: 52
Thursday — HIGH: 56 LOW: 48
Friday — HIGH: 54 LOW: 44
SOURCE: CNN.COM

Calling for a safer UMass — This week's recent rallies sent a sobering message that the campus is united in a take back effort. — NEWS 5

A Jazzed-up Turkey Day — What do you get when you cross a jazz concert, a look at Thanksgiving in the media, and a best selling novel? You get today's Arts section. Arts: don't spare the gravy. — ARTS PAGE 6

Hollywood Hogancamp — Senior Kari Hogancamp wrapped up an amazing collegiate volleyball career this weekend. Read more about her, and fellow senior standout Jill Meyers, in today's sports. — SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10
ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

Tuesday, November 23, 1999

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Huskies outlast Minutemen in UGame, 79-65

Mouring's three swings momentum to Huskies

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

STORRS, Conn.- After front-rimming a three-pointer with 8:25 left in the second half, Connecticut guard Albert Mouring accepted a dish from teammate Souleymane Wane and drilled a second chance trey to raise the lead to six points over the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

That was the closest the Minutemen got to the No. 7 Huskies as they succumbed 79-65 in the fourth annual "MassMutual U-Game" last night at the Harry A. Gampel Pavilion.

"We just made some mental errors, actually," said Flint. "We threw some passes away...when you're playing a game you have to take advantage of the things that they are going to give, and they're not going to give you that much."

Shooting guard Monty Mack played the role of savior at times for the visiting squad, tallying a game-high 26 points including a perfect 8-for-8 at the free throw line. The senior, playing in only his second competition since injuring his foot in October, scored 15 of the Minutemen's 31 points in the first half.

"A terrific player and one of the better players we will play against- that's Monty Mack," said Connecticut coach Jim Calhoun. "In the first half he lit us up, in the second half, he still gets up to 26 points.

"But we dealt with the adversity. At first we put Tony (Robertson) on him, then (Kevin) Freeman...I think his (Freeman's) size after a while made the big difference," Calhoun continued.

Connecticut's preseason Big East Player of the Year Khalid El-Amin contributed 18 points in the winning effort; and was his usual dominating self at the point. Three other Huskies were in double digits as Edmund Saunders followed closely with 16 points and Mouring and Robertson closed out the night with 10 and 14 points, respectively.

Connecticut	79
Massachusetts	65

UMass senior co-captain Mike Babul chopped Springfield native Freeman down to size, as the forward could only muster two points at the foul line for the game.

"The one thing I was afraid of was that they would post him up a lot," said Flint. "But Mike did a great job against him in the post. They can say what they want to say about (Duke's Shane) Battier, right, Mike's the best defensive player in the country.

"He shows it every game. He shut down four guys who were first round picks last year. And our thing is, you don't help Mike- Mike just guards the guy," Flint continued.

The Huskies held the advantage over the Minutemen from the opening tip-off with their physical, pound-it-inside play, which accentuated UMass' weak point in the blocks.

Down 18-12 with 10:46 to go in the first half, Mack knocked down his second three-pointer in five minutes to halt a 10-2 run by the Huskies. Just over a minute later, Mack netted a third jack to bring the score to 22-15.

It seemed, however, no matter whether it was a three-point play, UConn had a better response.

"We're going to play against some bigger teams and we're going to have to work on it," said Flint.

The Minutemen kept within striking distance towards the end of the half, after the Connecticut bench was slapped with a technical foul with 1:11 left. The Huskies' Jake Voskuhl scored two of his four points to head into the second half with a 37-31 lead.

UMass' center Kitwana Rhymer proved his effectiveness inside, raking in 10 of his 17 rebounds in the first half. Rhymer added five points and one block in just 19 minutes of play. UConn big men Voskuhl, Wane and Ajou Deng dominated the boards to the tune of a 30 to 18 advantage in the first half.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

In the battle of point guards Khalid El-Amin bested UM's Shannon Crooks.

"Their size, they're just too big for us," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "Our team is different this year, but we missed some layups too, missed some real easy shots in the second half. It's a different ballgame if you make them."

UMass senior co-captain Chris Kirkland, who struggled to get a body on the larger UConn forwards, finished up with nine points and five boards.

"What we have to start doing to him a little bit is letting him face the basket against these bigger guys, instead of playing with them on his back," said Flint.

It was the Wane and Saunders show for the first 11 minutes of the second half with the duo combining for 13 of the first 17 points. Still in the game, UMass' Mack, DePina and Ronell Blizzard rallied back with three treys in a row in just over a minute to cut the margin back down to seven.

But it was the little things that ate up the Minutemen in the end. After Mouring hit his second chance three, Blizzard committed two costly fouls and DePina, one, to permanently change the momentum of the game.

El-Amin proved why he is such a guarded player, stripping DePina in the backcourt for an easy two-point conversion to take a 66-53 lead. Mack returned with a driving lay-up along the left baseline to cut the lead to 70-61, but it was not enough as Robertson tacked on two more points for the final score.

Rhymer stands tall; 17 boards not enough

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

STORRS, CT – He couldn't do everything, but he came very close to doing so.

It was known that Connecticut was big. In fact, the Massachusetts men's basketball team probably won't toe the line with anyone bigger. That apparently was never mentioned to UMass' Kitwana Rhymer.

It was like the Atlas trying to hold up the world. Rhymer roaming the paint without a hint of maroon in sight. While the 79-65 loss clearly was not indicative of how well the Minutemen played, UConn did what it was projected to do. Tough defense kept the Minutemen in check from the perimeter, in turn handing the reins over to the frontcourt.

In the end, Rhymer fought a losing battle, but not before putting on a show. If the Atlantic 10 didn't know about him before last night, it certainly does now. UConn outmuscled the Minutemen on the glass, but that UMass was down by just six points at the half was a huge testament to Rhymer's work undemeath.

Through the first 20 minutes, UConn cleaned the boards with ease, outdoing the Minutemen 30-18 on the glass. Ten of the Minutemen's 18 were courtesy of Rhymer.

It almost wasn't fair.

Before it was over, though, Rhymer had himself a career-high in rebounds, corralling a game-high 17 boards, including nine on the offensive end.

This time, the numbers didn't lie. UConn was relentless on both backboards. After all, the Huskies had the arsenal. With five players standing at 6-foot-8 or taller, most of whom came with experience, UConn easily made up for a lackluster performance on the perimeter by crashing the glass in numbers. Often times, it was Rhymer who stood alone in the key to combat the assault on the boards.

He was truly a one-man gang, accounting for nearly half of the team's rebounds in the game. Rhymer did all he could, bodying up with Jake Voskuhl and Souleymane Wane while keeping a third eye on the weak side for potential UMass' muscle. Much like he did against a much bigger Iona squad on Saturday.

Wane was third on the team in scoring with 14 points, but it was more accredit to the senior Husky than a knock on Rhymer. Wane, whose shooting touch has greatly improved since arriving in Storrs, shot 5-for-8 from the field, most of his points coming outside of the key area.

Many believed Rhymer would be paired with freshman Micah Brand for significant minutes to counteract the Huskies' size advantage, but that was not the case. Brand playing two minutes over the course of two halves.

Rhymer was around to enjoy a late run by the Minutemen which saw them close within three at 54-51 with a Ronell Blizzard 3-pointer. Rhymer played in spurts, writing off the prospect of extended time by continually getting tripped up by foul trouble. His effect was felt against the Gaels, scoring a career-high 12 points and seven rebounds in just 11 minutes, this before fouling out late.

However, his offense must improve. Without a true big man for the first time since the pre-Harper Williams days, Rhymer's offense has shown glimpses of brilliance, but it remains hardly a pillar to lean on. With nine offensive rebounds, Rhymer could muster up just seven points on the night, unable to weave through the trees.

Many questioned Rhymer at the beginning of the season, saying the junior would be unable to take the physical beating of the daily A-10 routine. Last night, against one of the nation's most bruising frontcourts, Rhymer kept on ticking despite fighting a losing battle.

UMass ends campaign with loss to Colonials

By Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

There is only one way to describe this past weekend's events, disappointing. The Massachusetts volleyball team beat up on Virginia Tech, but lost in a heartbreaker with George Washington to end their playoff hopes and their season.

The Minutewomen came out on Friday night ready to execute the Hokies and set their sights on a playoff berth in the Atlantic 10 conference tournament. They did just that, sweeping VT in three games, 15-7, 15-0, 15-7.

Game one saw the Minutewomen jump out to a 3-0 lead behind two service aces by sophomore Lymare Llovet. The Hokies came back to tie up the affair, before UM went on a 7-0 run. UMass then closed out the game, only allowing four more points to take a 1-0 lead in the match. In game two, the Minutewomen were unstoppable, taking the game without allowing a point behind senior Jill Meyers' five kills. Game three was more of the same, as UM came off the break with a 11-4 lead and never looked back, ending the match on a kill by senior Kari Hogancamp.

"I thought we were outstanding," said head coach Bonnie Kenny in a press release. "We followed our game plan and we executed well. I thought we were very good defensively, and we served the ball aggressively and took them out of their offense."

Hogancamp led the team to the win with 12 kills and 13 digs, notching another double-double. Meyers matched her counterpart with a double-double of her own with 11 kills and 12 digs. Freshman Jennifer Davis had a big night, tallying a career-high 11 kills and 5 digs.

With the victory Friday night, the Minutewomen were primed and ready to blast themselves into the playoffs. However the Colonials were too much for UMass, as they edged by the Minutewomen three games to two, 9-15, 15-11, 15-6, 11-15, 9-15.

"It was a pretty somber locker room after the match, but I think that they have a lot to be proud of," said Kenny. "They really improved throughout the season and they are the best team we have had here at UMass. It was a very tough loss for us, and I am disappointed that our seniors can't go on into the postseason tournament. But if we can match what these seniors have done for our program, then we are going to be in really good shape."

Both seniors went out fighting. Hogancamp led the team again with a gallant effort of 16 kills and 25 digs, while Meyers put up 11 kills and 16 digs. Hogancamp leaves UMass ranked first in digs, digs per game and in matches with 10-plus digs and 20-plus digs. She has also led the nation in digs per game in the last eight weeks of the season with a 5.18 average. Meyers ends her career ranked first in kills, in away battles with Clemson and North Carolina-Charlotte this past weekend, but couldn't find the winning formula in either contest. The Lady Tigers rode dual 15 point performances from Nuria Forns and Datishella Byrd to a 67-52 win on Friday, spoiling a 10 point, eight rebound showcase from UM senior tri-captain Alison MacFarland.

LAUREN ROSKY / COLLEGIAN

Seniors Jill Meyers (left) and Kari Hogancamp both played exceptional volleyball over the weekend, but the team ended its season with a tough loss to George Washington.

Women's hoops marches on Worcester

Team looks for return to glory in battle with Holy Cross Crusaders

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

After opening the '99 season with two brutal road defeats, the Massachusetts women's hoop squad is on a mission to convince the rest of college basketball that it is, in fact, a program capable of triumph and glory.

How fitting that its next opponents are nicknamed the Crusaders.

UMass (0-2) will head east to Worcester this evening for a battle with Holy Cross at the Hart Center. The Crusaders (2-0) have jumped out to a fantastic start in their 15th season under coach Bill Gibbons, having bested New Hampshire 86-67 on the road and Siena 74-63 at home.

The Minutewomen, meanwhile, have gotten off to a somewhat shaky start. O'Brien's group showed flashes of individual brilliance in away battles with Clemson and North Carolina-Charlotte this past weekend, but couldn't find the winning formula in either contest. The Lady Tigers rode dual 15 point performances from Nuria Forns and Datishella Byrd to a 67-52 win on Friday, spoiling a 10 point, eight rebound showcase from UM senior tri-captain Alison MacFarland.

Sunday's war with the Lady 49ers was similarly disappointing, as another huge night from MacFarland (11 points, eight rebounds) and a stellar showing from senior guard Tonia Thomas (16 points) were not enough to prevent a 65-54 Charlotte victory.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Nekole Smith

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Caroline Nehls

Tonight's matchup pits UMass against another tempo-driven squad in the Crusaders. Holy Cross has scored a whopping 160 points in its first two games, and established itself as an overpowering second half team: the Crusaders have outscored their opposition by an average score of 48-33 over the final 20 minutes of its two wins.

Having guided A'Crosa to six Patriot League titles and seven NCAA Tournament appearances during his tenure at the Crusader helm, Gibbons certainly knows how to extract the best possible results from his roster. Only one player on the team has registered less than 26 minutes of floor time in the first two Crusader wins, while the team's scoring has come from just everyone in uniform.

Leading the charge for the Crusaders is senior guard Anna Kinne. The 5-foot-6 Monument Mountain graduate has torched the twine to the tune of 18 points per game this year, while bombing away at a .462 clip (6 of 13) from three-point range.

The difference in tonight's battle could very well come in the form of UM's twin towers, 6-foot-2 forwards Caroline Nehls and Nekole Smith. The pair combined for 13 points and 10 rebounds Sunday at Charlotte, after Smith punished Clemson on Friday with an eight point, 13 rebound statement.

Nehls and Smith will battle for control of the blocks with Crusader Katie O'Keefe, a 6-foot-2 freshman from New Hampshire who has racked up 32 points and 13 rebounds in Holy Cross's first two wins this year. Another imposing paint presence for Gibbons' gals is junior forward Monika Rothemich, whose 18.5 points per game average paces the Crusaders.

Tip-off for tonight's action is slated for 5:45 pm.

UM women's swimming chews up St. John's

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

After three or four days of recycled leftovers from the original Thanksgiving holiday, many people this time of year start to get the feeling that they're swimming in turkey. But after slaughtering its last opponent as if preparing for a feast, the undefeated Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team may be better off saying that it's been swimming with turkeys.

Carving up St. John's University 138-82 on Saturday, the Minutewomen continuing their win streak and a tradition from last year, when they also downed St. John's in a similar situation to remain undefeated at 5-0.

"I think we swam pretty well in our last meet going into the Thanksgiving Holiday," said UM head coach Bob Newcomb. "I always look for a tired team, but we swam some very solid events."

Solid may have even been an understatement, as the Minutewomen were harder to swallow than turkey bones; the Red Storm could not squelch the pool power of the wet Maroon and White in most events.

Leaving St. Johns in their wake, the 400-yard medley relay team of senior Elizabeth Risotto, sophomores Anne Dettloff and Andrea Kazanjian, and freshman Lauren Bulkeley not only took the proverbial check-ered flag, but set a new pool record at 4:01.54 to start the day.

"It was really good to start of the meet like that," said Newcomb. "The team came together pretty well."

Dettloff was a part of the relay team would then return later and swim away with the 200-yard freestyle in 1:56.66 and would again find victory in the 500-yard freestyle with a time of 5:11.83.

Another member of the opening relay team, Kazanjian, took the 100-yard free at 54.96 for her first single win of the day. Yet she was soon followed by relay teammate Risotto in the 200-yard backstroke, finishing in 2:08.17 to put another mark in her personal win column.

Bukeley would also win against St. John's in the 200-yard breaststroke to round out the opening relay winners.

However, winning races against the Red Storm would not just be confined to medley relay members. Junior Sarah Newell posted her personal best time in the 200-yard IM to take the race for UMass.

Senior Lisa Lansky then took the 200-yard fly, as she out swam the competition with a time of 2:11.00.

Yet among the regular winners, freshman Molly Buckley would get her first colleague win in the 50-yard freestyle only to be followed by fellow freshman Lizzy Boyle who came in second.

Catherine Getty would also join her freshman point scoring compatriots with a strong second place finish in the 1000-yard freestyle.

Moving above the pool, UMass would go 1, 2, 4 in the three meter dive competition and 2, 3, 4 in the one meter. Freshman Kate Allery would go on to win the three-meter with a score of 254.50.

"I am really pleased with where this team is right now and the effort they are giving right for every single race," said Newcomb.

The Minutewomen will now be off until after Thanksgiving break when they will compete in the Syracuse Invitational to be held in Syracuse, New York. Their opponents will be Syracuse University on December 3-4. Yet until then the Maroon and White will get an opportunity to rest before they meet some of their toughest competition of the season in the Orangewomen who after might just want to be wishing for a win when they break that wishbone on Thursday.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Wednesday, November 24, 1999

Volume CVI Issue 55

Students absent from forum on safety

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Demanding safety concerns to be met, University of Massachusetts students requested that the administration take action, but when less than 10 students turned up to an open forum last night in the Student Union Ballroom, the administration was left speechless.

Yesterday afternoon, at a rally in front of the Student Union, students shook fists at Chancellor David K. Scott saying that he and the administration were not doing enough to address the concerns. In response, Scott publicly announced a forum, in conjunction with the Student Government Association (SGA), to be held last night at 7 p.m. He, on the spot, guaranteed a spectrum of faculty and staff members to be present. Even on this short notice, more than 20 administrative members from across campus were present to address concerns from students in their prospective areas.

However, with an indication that most students had left campus for Thanksgiving break, it was concluded that the planning was just an example of "bad timing."

The center of focus for the forum for both students and administration present was on what future steps should be taken to ensure a much safer campus.

Addressing the issue of safety, UMass Police Chief John Luippold said one of the problems the campus is currently facing is a lack of student involvement with campus security in the residential halls.

"We're having a hard time getting students to work our normal hours," Luippold said. "It would be difficult to get additional staff."

According to him, the problem exists within students' awareness. He said all to often, he has observed students propping the doors of residence halls for strangers that don't live in the building. Luippold said he has spoken with Residence Life and housing on arranging for Resident Assistants (RA's) to take the roles of security receptionists in buildings in which they are absent.

Another form of awareness being raised is the statewide Neighborhood Crime Watch. Police officer Black said the movement was started by UMass President William Bulger, the Five UMass Police chiefs and chancellors within the five campus communities.

The organization would focus on curbing crime by getting communities and campuses across the state to unite by taking a proactive approach to safety. In addition to crime prevention, the awareness would help as a deterrent of crime. For example, Black said knowing a location as a crime prevention area will help deter criminals from acting in criminal ways.

Black expressed his concern that students may not take the watch seriously, thinking that such crime prevention measures will not prevent crime altogether.

"They may be saying it's not affecting me directly, but they don't realize it will affect them indirectly," Black said. As an example, if a student breaks a window in the dorm and doesn't report it, housing costs will go up, Black said.

This kind of action, according to Black, includes restricting access only to residences that live in a residence hall. Black said the purpose of card access machines is to provide security for students by limiting residence hall access to its occupants.

"We're not trying to make it Alcatraz," Black said. "We're trying to make it safe... it would make me feel more comfortable to know that only residents and their guests were getting in."

Scott commented that he felt such violence on campuses could be prevented by stopping underage consumption of alcohol. According to Scott, over 94 percent of the violent incidents on campuses in the U.S. are caused by the abuse of alcohol. He said he would be in favor of installing video cameras in the front entrances of residence halls as a means of increased safety.

"If the camera, also in monitoring who's coming into the residence hall, discovers violations of our alcohol policy in residence halls and if people would choose to say that would worry them about revealing improper use of alcohol, that would not be a persuasive argument for me [against cameras]," Scott said.

Some students last night agreed with the chancellor saying that safety is the most important thing. Associate Speaker of the Senate Jennifer Teixera said she would be willing to breach privacy if it means preventing hate crime.

"If we're having hate crime, theft and all these things going on in our buildings, a camera may not be approved by students, but it will help," Teixera said.

However, Ken Campbell, chairman of the Senate Safety Committee, disagreed saying he would be against such a move to monitor students' private lives.

Luippold reminded those in attendance that the ideas discussed last night were only proposed steps that need to be looked into before any final decisions are made. A forum to discuss future safety concerns has been set for Thursday, Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Chancellor Scott addresses questions last night concerning campus safety.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

The wall outside of the student union allows students to express their sentiments about the recent attacks on campus.

Concerns still high at rally

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The Student Union lawn, where the community first learned of a fourth attack at the University of Massachusetts, was filled with more outraged students yesterday afternoon at a rally marking one week since what some have called hysteria swept over the campus.

Organized by the Student Government Association (SGA), the rally was a forum for students to express their feelings on the situation both vocally and artistically.

Board of Trustees member Peter Lewenberg was in attendance as a representative of the board and to voice its concern for what has occurred on the Amherst campus in the last two weeks.

"I came here today to show support. We're concerned for the safety and health of the students," Lewenberg said. "We will make things happen through deeds, not just words."

Students had the opportunity to reiterate ideas and sentiments that have been expressed by many throughout the past two weeks. They spoke on how students, especially women, still feel unsafe and how they are fed up with the atmosphere of the University. "It's not a new problem and it needs to stop," one student said.

"Why did I come to school to lose my independence? I'm 19 and told I can't walk alone again," freshman Emily Burke said. "I have two challenges for this university. I want these cowards, when caught, expelled from this University and charged with a hate crime. We won't tolerate this."

In addition, Chancellor David K. Scott addressed questions posed by students. When asked about the fact that chalkings were continually erased by the Physical Plant, he said, "We have a policy on campus. We don't allow any graffiti. We have attempted to remove any counter-productive signs." He also said he couldn't respond to the individual messages to which students were referring, but that the University had decided that not all would be removed. He also said he didn't feel this campus was any less safe than any city.

Shouts were heard across the crowd, but the energy and presence did not appear as strong as it had been for several of the previous programs, including Monday's walk-out. Many previous programs, including Monday's walk-out. Many previous programs, including Monday's walk-out. Many

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Demanding action

A petition started by STPEC students and Outrage demand that the administration take more measures to ensure campus safety.

Presidential candidates stay positive with their campaigns

By Howard Kurtz
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – George W. Bush praises his rival John McCain as a "war hero," but he doesn't leave it at that. "John is a good man," he tells Newsweek. "I do think his story is compelling...He's a straight talker."

McCain returns the favor when discussing the Texas governor. "I think he's a very fine and decent person who's been a good governor," McCain says.

What happened to the rough and tumble of a presidential campaign? Where are the harsh attacks and the mudslinging? Why are these candidates being so...nice?

It's early, to be sure, and the temperature is likely to rise later on. But in a marked departure from the last several presidential campaigns, most of the candidates are consciously trying to stay upbeat, muting their criticism and avoiding personal assaults. With the exception of Vice President Al Gore, the major contenders have clearly concluded that going positive is a winning strategy.

"Candidates have discovered you can't use attack ads like a sledgehammer or you run into a backlash," said Darrell West, a Brown University political scientist. "It has become a riskier strategy because voters have wised up and are not as likely to be influenced by thermonuclear blasts from one candidate."

Political analysts say there are several reasons for this era of good feeling, however brief it may turn out to be. Candidates who are less well known to the national electorate often feel compelled to establish their own identity before unloading on their rivals.

In both parties, there are no dramatic ideological differences between the candidates, draining passion from the race. And in a time of peace and prosperity, voters are less receptive to negative assaults.

Still, it's not easy for candidates to stay positive while being pummeled. In the Democratic race, Gore is wedded to attack-a-day aggression, while Bill Bradley is trying not to be drawn into the boxing ring. "People are fed up with negative politics," he told CNN.

Turn to CAMPAIGNS, page 3

World AIDS death toll rises to highest yet at 2.6 million

By David Brown
Washington Post

About 2.6 million people worldwide will die of AIDS this year, the most of any year since the epidemic began, according to a report by the United Nations AIDS program.

The estimate means roughly one in every 20 deaths on the globe is now caused by AIDS, a disease unknown two decades ago. About 16.3 million people have already died of AIDS.

In addition, about 5.6 million new infections with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) will occur this year, raising the number of people currently living with the disease to about 33.6 million.

"HIV continues to spread nearly unabated in many parts of the world," said Peter Piot, director of UNAIDS, an organization run by the United Nations, World Health Organization, World Bank and several other agencies.

The UNAIDS "epidemic update" was released yesterday in preparation for the 12th annual World AIDS Day, which is Dec. 1.

UNAIDS epidemiologists now believe that in sub-Saharan Africa, the home to 70 percent of people with HIV, more women than men are infected. (The ratio is about 12 women to every 10 men, according to the report.) This marks the reversal of a trend.

Early in the epidemic, a relatively small number of female prostitutes infected many men. Over time, the gender gap closed. Now, women predominate, as infected men transmit the virus to their wives and non-commercial sex partners.

Girls aged 15 to 19 years are five times as likely to become infected as boys in the same age group – a fact that reflects both biological and social realities. Male-to-female transmission of the virus occurs more easily than female-to-male transmission. Teenage girls often have sexual contact with older men, who are more likely to be infected than teen-age boys.

"One implication [of the current ratio] is that, paradoxically, we probably need to target men far more in our prevention efforts," Piot said. "We need to start with educating boys... and see if we can do anything with men who are already adults."

Piot said the data will probably also add urgency to finding methods of protection women can control. These include the female condom, which he said is too expensive for most users, and vaginal microbicides, which are not yet perfected.

Among the groups in which infection is rising steeply is drug users in countries of the former Soviet Union. In the Russian Federation, for example, half the cases reported since the epidemic's start were reported in the first nine months of this year alone. Although both past and current numbers are gross underestimates, UNAIDS researchers believe they point to a real trend.

Because of its small population and comparative wealth, the Caribbean has been an overlooked area of HIV growth, Piot said. However, among UNAIDS's official regions, the HIV prevalence there – about 2 percent – is second only to Africa's.

Jackson's latest crusade: activism or opportunism?

By William Claiborne
Washington Post

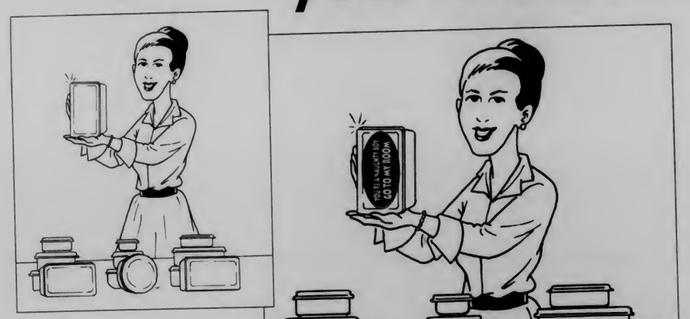
CHICAGO – Back in his home in Chicago after a two-week standoff with school authorities in the central Illinois city of Decatur, Jesse L. Jackson has vowed to continue his battle to win reinstatement for six students who were expelled for fighting at a football game.

Jackson said in an interview that he was waging a war against a "whole national mood of fear," evidenced by the popularity of "zero-tolerance" policies against violence in schools, which he said has fueled public anger against youths generally and black youths in particular.

"We challenged this mood of relegating our youth to the scrapheap, and people are rethinking the policy of zero tolerance," said Jackson, founder of the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition and a two-time Democratic presidential candidate. "I think we have now revived a national debate about this Draconian policy, which is a policy of insensitivity toward our youth."

The Decatur standoff has left some observers of Jackson's 30-year career wondering why such an astute student of public opinion would put so much political capital into a seemingly parochial issue, and then turn it into a personal crusade against zero-tolerance policies.

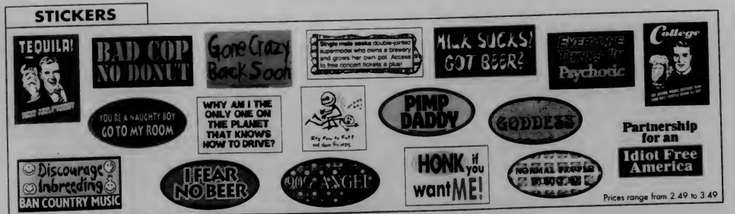
In the wake of mass killings in Littleton, Colo., and other schools across the country, the public appetite for strict sanctions against school violence seems stronger than ever, according to some polls.



Jackson asserted: "Leaders of consequence can't follow public opinion. They have to mold public opinion."

Opinion surveys reflect a sharp drop in public support of the six expelled Decatur students after a brief home video of the Sept. 17 fight in the football stadium's bleachers was broadcast nationally on network and cable television. The video shows the youths storming through one end of the bleachers and beating other students as men, women and children flee in clearly visible fear.

Jackson reiterated his insistence that the melee was a "simple fist-fight" and the punishment did not fit the crime. He said the real issues in Decatur are the unfairness of the "collective punishment" the school board imposed – the six students received the same length of expulsion – and the capriciousness of the zero-tolerance policy, which he said "removes the ability to exercise mercy and judgment."



While repeatedly asserting that race was not an issue – all the alleged perpetrators and the victims in the stands are black – Jackson has nonetheless complained that black students in the Decatur school system have received a disproportionate number of expulsions and that while 40 percent of the school population is black, only 9 percent of the teachers are African American.

Expand your horizons

Stickers spice up any gathering!

STICKERS

Prices range from 2.49 to 3.49

MUSIC • SOFTWARE MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY®

For the Entertainment Superstore nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Visit our music and movie site at www.MediaPlay.com

Sale ends December 4, 1999 Product availability and pricing may vary by location and online.

883391

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Express yourself

Emily Burke, STPEC major, chalks around the rally yesterday where previous chalkings had been erased last week.

Minorities serving in military report racism

By Roberto Suro and Michael A. Fletcher
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Three-quarters of all African Americans and other minorities serving in uniform complain that they have experienced racially offensive behavior, and less than half expressed confidence that complaints of discrimination are thoroughly investigated, according to the largest survey of racial attitudes ever conducted within the armed forces.

On a broad array of questions, whites and minorities offered drastically different perceptions of racial and ethnic relations within the military. While whites generally took positive views of the situation on bases and ships, blacks, Hispanics, Asians and Native Americans consistently expressed more negative assessments.

Overall, the reports of offensive encounters were highest in the lower pay grades. For example, 85 percent of Hispanics in junior enlisted ranks reported experiencing such incidents. But the experience of racial hostility also carried into the senior ranks, with 71 percent of black officers saying they had experienced an offensive encounter with another service member, compared with 46 percent of white officers.

The congressionally mandated survey of more than 40,000 service members was concluded in Feb. 1997, but its release has been repeatedly delayed as top Pentagon officials debated how the results should be portrayed, according to a senior defense official. The military has often strove to project an image of itself as more effective than society as a whole in taming bias and guaranteeing equal opportunity. Through the survey, however, service members rendered a mixed verdict.

Nearly 20 percent of blacks and 13 percent of Hispanics in uniform reported that they had been given inferior assignments or evaluations because of racial bias. Only four percent of whites reported such treatment.

Meanwhile, individuals of different groups said they felt comfortable socializing and establishing friendships with each other. Service members of all groups also believed that race relations were better in the military than in the civilian world.

For example, nearly half of all Hispanic service members said race relations in the military had improved over the past five years, while only a third offered that optimistic assessment about the nation as a whole. And although large numbers of minority service members reported offensive encounters – such as insensitive or harassing language – in the previous year, only a small percentage said they had been subject to threats or physical harm.

"There are positive things going on in the U.S. military, which is not to say that we do not have problems," said William E. Leftwich III, deputy assistant secretary of defense for equal opportunity. "Our insistence on self-examination will bring about the institutional health we need."

As a result of the survey's findings, senior officials said the individual services are considering changes in training and orientation programs for new recruits and in procedures for handling complaints of offensive encounters.

Formal release of the survey, which was conducted by the Defense Manpower Data Center, is now expected as early as Tuesday. An executive summary of the 300-page report was provided to The Washington Post Monday by defense officials.

Defense officials argued that the very different perceptions of race relations reported by whites and minorities simply mirror attitudes in society as a whole. And surveys of the overall population back up that contention.

■ campaigns

continued from page 2

In the last couple of weeks, however, Bradley has increasingly been jabbing at Gore, as he did Monday on campaign finance reform. But he does not frame his criticism in personal terms. Asked yesterday on "Good Morning America" whether Gore's 1996 fund-raising had been unethical, Bradley said: "No, what I am saying is that in '96 there were disgraceful actions by both Republicans and Democrats."

Behind the scenes, where campaigns routinely fax around derogatory information, the game can be a bit rougher. McCain has accused the Bush campaign of spreading stories about his temper but acknowledges that he has no proof. McCain operatives, in turn, were quick to point out instances of Bush eruptions.

"The trick is to attach negative information to your opponent without getting blamed for having gone negative," West said.

Much of the artillery in this campaign has been fired by the media. In a spate of stories and interviews, journalists have questioned Bush's intelligence and possible past drug use, McCain's temperament and acceptance of special-interest money, and Gore's wardrobe, speaking style and choice of consultants.

McCain and Bradley, touted on Newsweek's cover as avatars of "authenticity," have pledged to run positive campaigns. They are running as maverick outsiders – war hero and basketball hero, respectively – who openly disdain negative politics.

"McCain has said from the beginning he's not going to run that kind of campaign, and McCain doesn't have to," said Mike Murphy, a strategist for the Arizona senator. "At this stage of the game, candidates can get a lot further by selling their positives, particularly if they have a story to tell."

Said Anita Dunn, Bradley's communications director: "One of the things Bradley feels very strongly about is that voters are tired of campaigns in which candidates basically seek to make them seem the lesser of two evils."

Nonetheless, Gore has tried to keep the former basketball star playing defense. The vice president has criticized Bradley's support of the drug industry, his backing of ethanol subsidies, his support for Reagan-era budget cuts, his decision to quit the Senate and his health care plan, even charging that the plan would hurt minorities and the disabled.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Outraged

Anthropology major Josiah Campbell voices concerns at yesterday's SGA supported rally.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The culture of rape

Natty Yagudin

The recent widespread fear that has resulted from the attacks that have occurred at UMass has had a bizarre aftereffect: there are no women walking on campus after 5 p.m.

I am probably one of the few women who dare to actually stay on campus and watch this happen. The premises along the pond clear out almost instantly as darkness sets, as if UMass were under a war curfew. Only the very occasional woman, who might have forgotten to leave the library earlier, walks hurriedly by, covered up to her eyes in scarves, terrified of what the evening may hold for her.

Like a setting that has been instantly transported back to the 14th century, UMass looks like a place where women's suffrage never happened. The street, our public arena, is once again solely a man's domain.

That's why I look with sadness at the attempt made by students and the administration to respond to the assaults on women. So they have cut trees and have given out whistles to make us feel safer; then have had a vigil and are bringing a speaker or two to campus. Chancellor Scott sent a letter to my parents, urging them to advise me not to walk alone at night. A casual question my friends now ask each other is: "Do you have someone to walk with?"

Women at UMass don't just need protection. They need respect. Why is it that I have to compromise my independence? Why is it that I need to depend on someone to walk me anywhere? What has been trivialized all along on this campus is a truly meaningful discussion on how our response to the assaults is limiting women's rights.

Indeed, sexual assault at UMass is not a new phenomenon. According to the recent annual police report, total reported forcible sex offenses rose at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst for 1998, while overall campus crime dropped. Fifteen rapes and 13 indecent assaults and batteries were reported for 1998 alone. Still, this figure doesn't include assaults that weren't reported at all. Why does it take raping someone at 2 o'clock in the afternoon for campus initiatives to start taking place?

Our apathy stems from our very culture, a culture of rape. This may sound extreme at first, but if one looks a little closer, one starts seeing just how horribly our modern society has been treating women.

I was watching a movie in one of my classes last week, when the image of a woman's corpse in a garbage can managed to jolt me. At first, I was terrorized to see such a disturbing picture. A second later, I realized what the picture was: it was an ad for shoes.

I was quite disturbed to realize that, had I seen this ad on a billboard or in a magazine, I wouldn't even think about it twice. It is only after the ad was purposely pointed out to me that I caught the full effect of its terror.

This subtle rape of women's dignity has been happening in our society, and the climate at UMass is no exception. Such popularly known places as the "rape trail" have been so engrained in the UMass culture, that it would cease to surprise anyone if a woman was raped while walking from Sylvan to Orchard Hill. I wonder whether a woman might herself be blamed for the rape by virtue of walking the trail alone, or for not shouting loud enough. Would anyone ask a robbery victim why he or she did not shout loud enough?

Another way an institution shows where its priorities lie is how it spends its money. The Student Government Association that conveniently forgot about giving money to the Feminist Majority Leadership Alliance last year is now protesting for women's rights and pumping money into security initiatives around campus. The Feminist Majority Leadership Alliance, one of the only student groups that are devoted to the sexual rights (among other kinds of rights) for women, never received any money in support of its activities for this year, even though it planned an extensive (and convincing) budget request in the spring of 1999. That same student group is now wondering where that support was six months ago.

Stories like this shouldn't be surprising to anyone. Politicians, for the most part, act when it's convenient for them. My worry is: what will happen when the police pack up, the bandits go home, and the shrubs around the campus pond grow back. Will we ever initiate a real, meaningful change in regards to women's rights on this campus? Or will it still be a reality that passers by won't care to notice?

Natty Yagudin is a Collegian staff member.

Thanksgiving revised

Chris Collins

There's something not quite right with this store, I said to myself as I wandered around the nameless book conglomerate that was completely decked out for Christmas. I mean, Thanksgiving hasn't come yet. Why all the green and red?

I was ready to blame it all on corporate America's obsession with taking our money, and the fact that Thanksgiving, for all the food that we buy, is not a corporate holiday in the same way that Christmas is. Yes, I was ready to blame it all on this and move on, but I decided that since I have a chance to have my voice heard, I would expand on this idea and see what exactly the problem is for poor Thanksgiving. In fact, I'm going to offer a few suggestions as to how people can help turkeyday become a more important day, something like Arbor Day or Woodrow Wilson's birthday.

First of all, Thanksgiving has a public relations problem. Look at The Simpsons, and consider that they have done two Christmas episodes and nine or ten Halloween ones, but only one Thanksgiving episode. Or look at the Charlie Brown cartoon specials: the Halloween special had the Great Pumpkin, and the Christmas one had that tender moment where the little tree was made into something beautiful. Now, maybe it's been a while since I've watched the specials, but frankly I don't remember anything about Charlie Brown's Thanksgiving that was all that special.

Of course, this lack of interesting television specials points to a more important problem with the holiday: the story behind it just isn't exciting or scary. Think about it, the Christmas story has a miracle birth, angels, talking animals, shepherds, a jealous king – I mean it's an epic. And who can deny the fact that the ghosts and goblins of Halloween aren't more interesting than the starched-shirt-wearing Puritans that inhabit the Thanksgiving story? Although the history of the interactions between Native Americans and the European settlers makes an interesting, if unfortunate story, the first Thanksgiving is the one instance where the Native Americans and the Pilgrims sat around peacefully and ate together.

Of course, I think maybe it is the story behind Thanksgiving that has given it a bad name. I mean, the Christmas story and its deeper meaning has been lost in consumer America, and Halloween lacks a substantive deeper meaning anyway – the idea of Halloween appeals to everyone primarily because it is a great excuse to buy individually wrapped candy bars.

Unfortunately, Thanksgiving has some ideology behind it, and its meaning has not been corrupted much through time. We use Thanksgiving to take a step back and recognize that some power (call it God, Luck, Fate, Chance or Evolution) has given us a strong work ethic and has been good enough to bless us with all we have. In all honesty, celebrating Thanksgiving is a pretty humbling experience, and being humble went out of style way before platform shoes were considered cool for the first time.

So what can be done to improve Thanksgiving? Well, first of all, I think we should move it to August. Now, I realize it's supposed to be a harvest festival, but come on, there isn't one official holiday in the all of August, so everyone would benefit from celebrating Thanksgiving at the end of the summer. This way, Thanksgiving won't be sandwiched between Christmas and Halloween anymore, which will allow it the freedom it needs to become a holiday on its own, kinda like the way that Gore is trying to break away from Clinton. Also, if we move the thing, the Thanksgiving decorations won't interfere with the Christmas decorations that the stores roll out on Nov. 1.

Another idea is to take some of the cool aspects of Christmas and Halloween and add them to Turkey Day. Just imagine it: everyone sits down at the table, each dressed as a classic monster from the movies, all the food carefully wrapped in green and red with bows, the wish bone hanging above the door like a piece of mistletoe, the children just returned from their turkey-treating clutching bags filled with a weird mixture of turkey, mashed potatoes, gravy, peas, cranberry sauce, pie, and all the rest that have been flung out by neighbors in the same way (except the experience is a little messier) that candy is given out on Halloween. What a beautiful picture – the family sitting down to unwrap their meals, and the children complaining about how the Andersons always give yams on Thanksgiving and how no one likes yams and how can Tommy Anderson live with parents who think that yams are cool?

In addition to borrowing from Christmas and Halloween, I think that Thanksgiving needs to have a new mascot. KFC introduced a new cartoon version of their mascot, so we need something different from Turkey Tom. I was thinking, Lump o' Mashed Potatoes, but then I realized that it wouldn't work unless we gave him a sidekick – Gravy Boat – and two mascots just aren't a good idea.

So I decided that the best idea is to go back to the roots of Thanksgiving and invent Paul Pilgrim. Paul is a great idea – we can make video games where children control Paul as he goes looking for turkeys to eat, we can make action figures with real rifle action. We could also create the character of Paul's wife, Polly Pilgrim who is very upset with Paul for inviting all the Native Americans to dinner without telling her first. We can have Paul Pilgrim posters and Paul Pilgrim postcards. My God, we'll make millions! Millions I tell you!

For which of course, I'd be thankful. Anyway, I hope everyone has a good break and a good Thanksgiving. And buy lots of Paul Pilgrim merchandise.

Chris Collins is a Collegian Columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Newman Center Provides support

To the editor:

The happenings of the past few weeks on this campus have impacted us tremendously. Acts of violence and control are unacceptable behaviors and cannot be tolerated. Rape, specifically, is dehumanizing, frightening, and an intrusion. Respect for all people is a moral mandate.

The Newman Center is joining other groups and organizations on the UMass campus in support of and commitment to building a safe community on this campus. Know that the Pastoral Staff at the Newman Center is available to students, faculty and staff to listen, support and advocate for you in any way we can. Let us all do our part, both individually and collectively to stop the violence.

Rev. Francis P. Lavelle
Director of the Newman Center

Men must Take a stand

To the editor:

I am writing to express my disgust both with myself and the vast majority of the other males on our campus. When I picked up the Nov. 17 edition of the Daily Collegian, I noticed something peculiar about all of the front page photographs taken at the rally on Tuesday, Nov. 16: the only people holding signs were females. I was sad when I saw the pictures; I was angry, and I was disgusted. I still am.

Why are signs so important? For one simple reason: signs are a physical representation of protest against the recent violent attacks against women on campus. Signs do not represent hollow words spoken from behind a podium; they do not represent empty promises from administrators and from police personnel. Signs visibly represent the fact that the sign-holder disagrees with, despises and does not tolerate violent behavior against women.

Why am I sad, angry, and disgusted that only women were holding signs? For another simple reason: it shows to others the erroneous belief that violence against women is only a women's problem, to be addressed by women and solved by women. Yes, I was at that rally. No, I was not holding a sign, and I did not display any other outward form of physical protest. I'm angry with myself today because of that. Violence against women is not only a women's issue. It is a men's issue as well.

I want to challenge every male on our campus and in our community to show physical support for the prevention of violence against women. I want to challenge every male student, faculty member, administrator, police officer, and citizen to take an active role in stopping violence against women. Don't just talk about how things need to be changed and about how horrible these crimes are. Talking raises consciousness about the problem, but it does not solve the problem. Only changes in our public and private behavior can solve the problem.

As males, it is our responsibility to eradicate violence against women because we are the ones who created the problem and we are the ones who perpetuate the problem. For lack of space, I cannot propose any specific immediate solutions. Instead, I suggest two changes for all males, including myself to consider. First, express your intolerance of your friends' public and private verbal and physical objectification of women. Second, actively support other people who express intolerance of such behavior. All I ask of myself and other males is that we think about our harmful words and actions, and then change them. Think about our friends' harmful words and actions, and educate them to change as well. It is that simple.

There are infinitely more, perhaps more important suggestions to be added to my list. I encourage and challenge each of you to add your own suggestions. Do not stop there, though. Take the next step that will help to eradicate violence against women: act upon and follow your suggestions. We as males created the problem and allow it to continue. Please let us now destroy it.

Michael DeCesare
Amherst
Watch out for Each other

To the editor:

Much of the response to the recent assaults on campus has been to urge women to take precautions in terms of their personal safety: don't walk alone; carry an alarm or whistle, etc. Regrettably, such precautions now are a good idea, although they are not necessarily easy to arrange every time a woman needs to walk somewhere on campus, day or night. However, we should not lose sight of the fact that these precautions and restrictions on women's activities should not be necessary, and we should not accept a situation in which we live in fear and normal educational and work activities on campus are severely disrupted. I hope that the University administration and all members of the university community will make one of their primary responses a concerted effort to take care of one another, by encouraging everyone to watch more carefully what is going on around him or her at all times and to be prepared to respond if we see or hear something amiss. I would like to know that if screams or alarms were heard, there would be people on the spot as soon as possible to find out what is happening. Rather than have the perpetrator or perpetrators of these acts succeed in disrupting the University and making us live in fear, I would prefer that we go on with our normal lives while taking care to watch out for one another.

Carol E. Haim
Professor of Economics

A new level of Awareness

To the editor:

It is hard to overstate the importance of awareness. Unfortunately, it has taken an epidemic of assaults to bring this to light. Defined simply, awareness means knowing what is going on around you. In nature, awareness is the key to survival. Animals insure their safety by constantly maintaining a high level of awareness. We can (and must) learn to do the same.

Being aware is a constant choice. It means using all your senses. It means consistently looking around in all directions and noticing everything. It means learning to trust your gut feelings. There is no place where we are truly safe. It is imperative that we do not become complacent and turn off our awareness when we are in a familiar place; that is when we are the most vulnerable.

We all have the ability to be highly aware. Awareness, like any skill, must be practiced in order to reach its full potential and like an unused muscle, will weaken or under-develop if ignored.

A high level of awareness is our best defense against assault. There are predators among us. Let us be aware for safety's sake.

Erik Becker
Northampton

Attention all perceptive writers and thinkers: Ed/op is interested in hearing what you have to say on international, national, local or campus issues.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menchel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Woman's Affairs

UM students respond with words and action

Women these days are walking around campus with a different attitude, and hopefully with a little more awareness. The four assaults over the past three weeks, three occurring in the middle of the day, have shocked and outraged the UMass community. It seems we are all looking for answers. Where can we turn to have our questions addressed?

Students in the dorms may be turning to their Resident Assistant's. Other students are seeking assistance from resource centers, such as the Everywoman's Center. One student on campus actively involved in both areas is Christie Higuera.

Higuera is a Resident Assistant in the Van Meter dorm and also devotes her time and enthusiasm to the Everywoman's Center as an educator/advocate. She has witnessed firsthand the chilling effect the assaults have had on students and the entire UMass community.

"It's no time to freak out, it is time to be rational, even as scared as we are," said Higuera.

As an R.A. and an educator/advocate at the Everywoman's Center, Higuera has been teaching students about sexual assault and personal safety. Higuera distributed shrick alarms to her residents over the weekend and last week she attended a rape workshop in her cluster.

"The workshop really helped. So many people had questions. There was between 50 and 75 people there," said Higuera.

As an R.A. she feels she has an important responsibility to pass along accurate and essential information regarding the recent assaults, especially with a number of rumors circulating around campus adding to the tension already present.

"I guess it happens with anything this frightening, it is going to invoke rumors, but it has gotten completely out of hand," said Higuera. "Basically we [the RA's] have been given a lot of information about safety. Our R.D. (Resident Director) has been great about updating us with information. That's how I judge what is true and what is not."

For further information and support Higuera suggests that students check out the Everywoman's Center, located here on campus in Wilder Hall.

"The center has information about self-defense and different programs going on," said Higuera.

"These are issues we are concerned about all the time. Sexual assault is an issue that is with us all the time," said Carol Wallace, director of the Everywoman's Center.

Wallace is urging students to take precautions to protect themselves.

"Please take advantage of all the safety information out there. First, take steps to ensure your own personal safety, use the call boxes and escort service. Secondly, take responsibility to educate yourself."

Wallace explains that the Everywoman's Center makes recommendations to the administration in regard to necessary changes here at the University.

As a student Higuera feels the University must make changes.

"I think it is important to pressure the administration for long term security. A lot of people are angry. We need to channel that anger into action. And these issues [sexual assault] need to be discussed in the classroom as well," said Higuera.

Last Tuesday, Higuera participated in the rally on campus. She shared a poem, expressing her feelings about the campus assaults.

"I felt so overwhelmed. I felt like art was the only way to respond," said Higuera.

She said to the crowd, "We cannot be afraid of every man or blame every man for the eyes behind the mask. I refuse to be afraid in silence."

She feels all students should become involved with the issue of sexual assault.

"Response on campus from students has been awesome. I would like to see more of it. It seems students are taking a lot upon themselves," said Higuera.

As part of educating about sexual assault, Higuera firmly believes the role of men must be taken into consideration.

"It is not just a woman's issue anymore, it's a man's issue as well," said Higuera.

She feels we must take a closer look at the role of men in our society. There are plenty of opportunities that allow us to examine this interesting perspective. Higuera suggests attending guest lecturers and workshops.

Higuera is tirelessly striving for the community to understand that sexual assault happens all the time, that it is a serious issue that deserves our immediate attention.

In regard to the assaults on campus she asks, "When we catch the son-of-a-bitch, will rape end?"

Christine Connare is a Collegian staff member.

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

Students gathered on Monday to let the administration know how adamant their feelings were in regards to their list of demands.

UMass organizations supply needed sessions

Jackson Katz
Sexual Violence: What MEN Can Do
Campus Center Auditorium
Dec. 1, 1999
4 p.m.

Speak Out Against Domestic Violence
Campus Center Room 911-915
Dec. 2, 1999
1-3 p.m.
Please pre-register for this event

The film Kemba's Nightmare, followed by speakers
Campus Center Auditorium
Dec. 2, 1999
7 p.m.

Domestic Violence Art Exhibit
Is Anyone Listening?
Student Union Art Gallery
Dec. 13, 1999

For more information on events contact the Everywoman's Center at 545-0883

Fear turns to caution

UM students lead campus with support and safety goals

Kathleen Ralls

It has been a week of fright, turned to anger and dissatisfaction for most on this UMass campus. Aware of the dangers of walking alone, many have sought alternative routes to travel back and forth during their daily routines.

For me, the assaults have removed the image of Amherst I have upheld in my three years here, one of a quaint, smart, quiet and safe New England town. No longer do I read a newspaper at the bus stop. No longer do I take the long way past the pond. No longer can I daydream while I walk between classes.

Obviously, I'm not walking by myself. I've been pretty restricted," freshman Melissa Rodgers said at Monday's walkout. "I can't really do anything by myself. When I first got here I felt safe now I feel trapped."

Students have opted to take a stand on the issue organizing rallies and walkouts in the hopes of attracting the attention of the administration to increase safety for good. Defense classes and information sessions on rape and violence are popping up to help students understand the statistics and dangers in order to avoid hysteria and halt unnecessary rumors.

"I have a girlfriend on campus and it's like, she doesn't feel safe and so I don't feel safe having her walk alone. I'm going to try and do whatever I can to make it safe for her. I have a younger sister so I have to watch out for everyone," said junior communications major Winn Cody. "She doesn't really go to the library by herself anymore.

"I live off-campus so she comes with me a lot or she doesn't go to the library, she doesn't feel safe. You know, I pick her up whenever I can," Cody continued.

Many students, one week after the most recent assault, are somewhat satisfied with the additional precautions provided such as the beefed up escort service and the shriek alarms.

"I've taken the alarms then I've given us. I think that was a great idea.

Some of them are pretty extreme. I mean, I know they are doing everything. I think, it just should have been earlier," said Rodgers. "I've seen a lot more cops around which makes me feel a little more comfortable."

There are also new emotions swirling around campus of either disinterest or disgust at those coordinating the rallies or the administration. With no new attacks or leads, each day returns a little closer to normal. Yesterday some male students passing by the pond joked about being raped during a ceremonial reclaiming of the pond.

In truth, the piercing danger has subsided into a reality of caution. More and more females are walking alone every day though the sight of an oncoming male still forces the body into a panic mode. And it is true that a very basic liberty of going where you please has been taken away. It's also true that we will get it back, hopefully in its original form, sometime in the future.

Only, from now on, we will be more aware of our surroundings, and hopefully have learned something about defending ourselves in such a situation. The assaults have linked our campus together, males and females, students and faculty, in an unprecedented way.

"It may not fit in the context of the class, but the demographics of the classes are 50 percent women. I think it's really empowering to see a lot of the men come out, and just the girls here too, just to show we don't have our heads in the sand," said Angela Quitadamo, a senior history and women's studies major who attended Monday's walkout. "I expect 30,000 people to be here, this is an issue that affects everybody."

Together we found out that UMass ranks third in the nation in forcible crimes, according to a study by the Chronicle of Higher Education. And together we will raise the level of security whether it is through our own intuition or with the assistance of the administration.

"I have a very liberal mother so I know, but I didn't know it was this bad," said Cody. "I didn't know we were ranked third, that's just unacceptable for that to happen."

Being aware of the University's and our own shortcomings has been a difficult but important lesson to grasp. Don't mock those who will continue to fight for safety demands on campus. Those individuals are doing it for the safety of all of us, and not just their own.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

Reported crime statistics: See how UMass stacks up

It's time to take a closer look at some serious statistics surrounding sexual assaults at UMass. We've all heard how many rapes and assaults are not reported, one-fourth or one-tenth, it's impossible to be sure. discounting the following information. These are only the incidents that have been reported, gathered by method of the Sexual Assault Centralized Report Form (SACR) from July 1997 – June 1998.

The Sexual Assault Advisory Committee is a group of representatives from on and off-campus agencies that handle those who have been sexually assaulted, whether it is a student, staff or faculty. Some examples of the agencies include Mental Health Services, University Health Services, the Dean of Students Office, Greek Affairs, the Bilingual Collegiate Program and the Victim/Witness Program of the Northampton District Attorney's Office.

In the fiscal year of 1997 – 1998, 192 cases of sexual assault were reported to the service providers at UMass by victims of sexual assault. It's important to first be clear about what sexual assault is. The cases reported include rape and attempted rape, voyeurism, stalking and graffiti.

Location of Assaults
62.50% Assaults On-Campus
22.95% Assaults Off-Campus
14.5% No Response

Frequencies of the Types of Assault

Rape	28
Attempted Rape	4
Sexual Assault-Phys	12
Sexual Assault-Verb	1
Voyeurism	8
Stalk	1

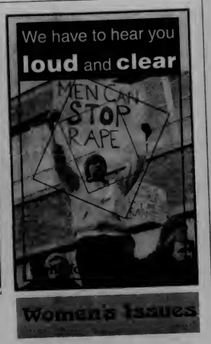
Use of Force in the Assault

Verbal:	54.54%
Physical:	36.36%
Drugs/Alcohol:	9.84%
Other Force:	6.56%
No Force:	16.39%

Results gathered out of 61 assaults and include No Response as a possible answer.

Types of Assault

Frequency
Rape	28
Attempted rape	4
Sexual Assault-physical	12
Sexual Assault-verbal	1
Childhood Sex. Assault	8
Harassment	4
Physical	3
Obscene calls	1
Voyeurism	8
Other assaults	4
Graffiti	1
Stalk	1
Ongoing	3
Total	75



Month of Report Percent

July	1.64%
Aug.	10.42
Sept.	14.06
Oct.	12.5%
Nov.	12.5%
Dec.	7.81%
Jan.	14.58%
Feb.	12.5%
Mar.	7.81%
April	3.13%
May	0.00%
June	0.00%

KEN MCDONALD / COLLEGIAN

A simple gesture
A candle joining with rape whistles in unity of awareness and hope.

NICOLE GOTTWALD / COLLEGIAN

A sign of the times
UMass students outraged by the administration's actions held a rally on Monday to get more involved in the hope that a solution will be found.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

New novel explores life of British lexicographer

By Jane Gordon
Special to The Hartford Courant

In February 1997, British journalist Simon Winchester had just returned from a trip to Antarctica and, much in need of relaxation after a long journey, settled into the bathtub of his 18th-century house outside Kent, Conn. While he soaked, Winchester read Jonathon Green's "Cassell's Dictionary of Slang," a history of dictionary making. He stopped short at a reference to W.C. Minor, a Civil War surgeon educated at Yale.

Minor was one of the most prolific volunteer contributors to the most famous dictionary project of all time, the publication of the fabled Oxford English Dictionary during the 19th century. As it happened, Minor was also one of history's most mysterious lexicographers.

The small mention blazed neon to Winchester. He grabbed the telephone and called a scholarly friend in England.

"What do you know of W.C. Minor?"

Plenty, his friend replied, and if he could finish towel off, dress and get to the fax machine, she would send him what she knew.

With that discovery, Winchester embarked on a search for the full story of Minor and his friendship with James Murray, the legendary editor of the Oxford English Dictionary. Winchester's efforts resulted in "The Professor and the Madman: a Tale of Murder, Insanity and the Making of the Oxford English Dictionary."

The information sent from England cemented Winchester's belief that he had stumbled onto a fascinating and tragic story.

W.C. Minor had been born in Ceylon, educated in New Haven, Conn., and served as a battlefield surgeon in the American Civil War. When the war ended, Minor, struggling with paranoid delusions, left the United States to rest in England, a popular form of escape for well-to-do Americans in the 19th century.

One night on a dark London street, in a fit of paranoia, Minor shot and killed an Irish immigrant who was on his way to a job at a brewery. Minor was convicted of murder by reason of insanity and sentenced to live at the Broadmoor Criminal Lunatic Asylum in Crowthorne, England. After some years there, he connected with the Oxford English Dictionary and began what would become his life's work.

Winchester's pursuit of the tale, along with his penchant for research and investigative reporting, resulted in a surprise hit. Despite little advertising, "The Professor and The Madman" sold its way onto The New York Times bestseller list.

Winchester was among those completely caught by surprise by the book's success. After years of tirelessly writing books that never sold well, he found himself, overnight, a bankable author. The paperback of the "Professor and the Madman" is now out, and plans are in the works for a movie, starring Mel Gibson as the editor Murray, and Robin Williams as Dr. Minor, the madman.

All of this attention has startled the Minor family.

"It's a well-known family story," said John A. Minor, a great-great nephew of W.C. Minor who lives in Riverside, a section of Greenwich, Conn. "But Simon did an incredible job of digging, and he provided probably 70 percent of the detail of what we know."

What John Minor was able to provide were letters from W.C. Minor in Broadmoor to his family in the United States. The doctor wrote regularly to his nephew, who was John Minor's grandfather.

"It's interesting, these letters," Minor said. "If you read them, you would have no idea that there was anything wrong with the man. They are full of wisdom and kindness, sensitivity and love. My father's sister had just been born, and he was writing the letter to acknowledge that fact."

Winchester was just the right man to turn loose on the story of Minor and Murray. He was trained as a geologist at Oxford but abandoned the idea of pursuing geology full time after reading "Coronation Everest," written by London Times correspondent James Morris, about a successful ascent up the Himalayan mountain.

"I was a very keen climber," Winchester said, "and not a very good geologist. I thought I could go to exotic parts of the world and write about them rather than put rocks in bags."

After he abandoned geology, he and Morris corresponded for years but didn't see one another until they met again in 1972, when Winchester was living in Washington, D.C. As seems typical of Winchester, each story has another story beneath it, prefaced by the words: "Well, now, that's a peculiar story."

As in, "Well, now, that's a peculiar story. I came back into North Wales, and he had turned into a woman. Ian Morris," he said. "We even wrote a book together. But it was rather weird when your guru becomes your guru ess."

He won a job at the Guardian, a prominent newspaper that has given many British writers their head, as

(cont. to NOVEL page 7

COURTESY MACOM INTERNATIONAL, INC.

Blue's Big Pajama Party
Blue of the hit kids show Blue's Clues crams for his compsci 105 midterm.

Jazz trio delights crowd at the Calvin Theatre

By Charles Derdiarian
Collegian Staff

Medeski, Martin, and Wood at The Calvin
November 22, 1999

NORTHAMPTON – The improvisational jazz trio Medeski, Martin, and Wood finished up their fall tour Monday night by playing the funk out of The Calvin Theatre to a jam packed and awe-inspired crowd. Seamlessly roaming from one piece to another, MMW dissolved how they can not only jam together with Zen-like grace, but also put on stunning 15 minute solo evocations that left the crowd roaring with approval.

DJ Logic, who appears on several tracks from MMW's latest release "Combustication," opened the night with his newly formed quartet group Project Logic, which was surprisingly impressive for a group driven and fused Logic's slow, methodical spinning provided a haunting background for the group's most adept performer. Casey Benjamin, who played alto sax, flute and keyboards.

Only 15 minutes into Project Logic's set, Chris Wood took the stage with his upright bass. Billy Martin soon followed with his maracas, and John Medeski sat down at the keyboards. Following DJ Logic's lead, the seven musicians played a rambling and rambunctious hour long set.

MMW then took the stage to swarming cheers and immediately began what would become a non-stop two-hour set spanning jazz, blues, funk, and jam rock.

Medeski bounced back and forth like a gyrating octopus between four keyboards, either pounding the keys with fury or gently roaming up and down the scale. Always in motion, Medeski ranged between boards effortlessly and flowed between songs without pausing, never giving the audience more than a second to applaud.

Half-expected Chris Wood to snap one of the strings on his upright bass he was playing it so furiously, and these strings look more like telephone cables than guitar strings. Alternating between the upright, his bass guitar, and another smaller guitar, Wood had to pause at times to cool down his hand, though only momentarily.

The area around Billy Martin was covered with every possible percussion gadget you could imagine. Alternating between countless chimes, rattles, maracas of every shape and size, and a small gong, Martin spent only half of the night playing his more customary drum set, but made every second count when he did.

MMW played many songs off their new album including the upbeat opening track "Sugar Crait," the happy, head-bopping tune "Coconut Boogaloo," and the more mellow "Hypnutized." All songs were greatly improvised though, and often the group would wander off on some terrific tangent, only to return right on track to the original beat, finishing up the song amidst shouts and applause.

DJ Logic appeared late in the set to provide some sonic soup for the band to jam in, and Casey Benjamin took the stage with his sax for the last few songs. Before the band played its encore, Martin asked the crowd to vote by applause for one of the bands two premiere songs, "Bubblehouse" or "Chubb Sub," and reminded them that this would be the last time they would play it in this millennium, or possibly ever. "Chubb Sub" won and the group sank into another soulful tune to end the night and their tour.

By serving America part-time

In the MA Army National Guard
YOU CAN...

- Get free undergraduate/graduate tuition
- Earn from $400-$800 for one weekend
- Receive a $5000-$8000 cash bonus
- Repay your student loans
- Develop leadership ability
- Build a POWERFUL resume

Call Today!
1-800-GO-GUARD
or visit
www.1-800-GO-GUARD.com
GO GUARD YOU CAN

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS

Springfield:	413-731-6910
Worcester:	508-366-8847
Boston:	617-484-1788
North of Boston:	978-777-2253
South of Boston:	508-821-5591
Plymouth:	508-833-1145
Route 3 South:	781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast:	603-926-9813

Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9
Equal Opportunity Employer

DELIVERY HOTLINE
549-0077
Newly Rennovated Sushi Bar!
PANDA
CHINESE & JAPANESE RESTAURANT
103 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 • 256-8924
NOW ACCEPTING OCMP!

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z, A is as important as Z
Buddhist saying
A To Z
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Sports Bar and Dance Club
City Cafe
1 Pearl St. Northampton•584-4100
• 3 BARS • 2 Dance Floors • Gamerooms • Pool table • 19 Tap Line
• Satellite Dish • NE Ticket • KENO • U. MASS Alumnae Owned

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00

Earrings by Ed Levin
The Finest
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS & GEM GALLERY

Turkey Day: Selling out the Pilgrims

Selling out the Pilgrims from Plymouth to New York

Nicholas Pizzolato

Well if you are reading this, congratulations, you are a true student. You stayed here at UMass on Wednesday when most other people went home last night. Such an ambition of learning is what drives you to be the future dominators of our society, or of course, you had a test today that was unavoidable. If that's the case, then you will be home in a matter of hours and have forgotten this seemingly meaningless article in the Daily Collegian.

We are on the verge of Thanksgiving, the day in which we give thanks to our Pilgrim ancestors and their completion of the second permanent colony in the United States. Legend has it that the Pilgrims had help from their friends the Wamponoag tribe and their translator Squanto. To celebrate their newfound friendship, as well as to give thanks for the Pilgrims survival, despite being plagued with illness, they threw a great feast. Thanksgiving was a celebration of survival, which is kind of ironic considering not soon after this the British, French, Dutch, and the U.S. tried to kill off all of the Native Americans that inhabited the country.

Nowadays, Thanksgiving is not as serious. It's the one holiday every year that kids don't get presents, but instead a family shares a bird, bred just for this day, and watches useless hours of television while in a catatonic state. Football is a big hit on Thanksgiving. And you have your choice of two Thanksgiving classics, on FOX, it's the Detroit Lions home game from the Silver Dome and the CBS Dallas Cowboys home game not to mention that ridiculous six-legged turkey. No, I'm not talking about John Madden, but somehow he actually manages to build a six-legged turkey. God only knows how, but it's there and if you want to watch either of those games you have to put up with him moaning and whining about waiting for the game to be over so he can go after that turkey like a crazed linesman assault on a QB.

Other things have also become Thanksgiving television ritual. You can always plan on watching the Macy's Thanksgiving Parade. This has become so much more than just a parade. Yes, you still see decadent floats mobbed with little kids and superstars doing community service. You still have those huge balloons that represent advertising tools for corporate America. And of course Santa always is the anchor of the parade just to remind little Timmy and Samantha that Chrismas is less than a month away, and to start bugging mommy and daddy for that really expensive, but basically useless toy over there in the window. But recently the parade has also included scenes from hit Broadway musicals. Not in the parade itself, but previously taped segments that are spliced in when no one important is in the parade. Does this really make it a parade? No, the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade is now more of a commercial for New York City. Pointing at it's decadence and urban beauty, somehow hiding the problem of pollution, vagrants and crime for four hours, and bringing more people into the city for that day, the next day (the busiest Christmas shopping day) or in the following weeks.

Each network also has its ritual of programs. Of course, there is either a Garfield or Charlie Brown special on – one that has been on so many times that people watch it just to feel safe in tradition. My personal favorite Thanksgiving cartoon is The Mouse on the Mayflower, the story of well, a mouse on the Mayflower. The mice have their own little Pilgrim society that mimics the humans. It may not have much of a storyline, but still they're mice wearing little Pilgrim outfits and that is worth seeing before the consumption of mass quantities turkey.

NBC has bought the rights to the MacCauley Culkin hit Home Alone, and for the last two years have been taking advantage of it. So, for two hours those who are still comatose from the feast have to look at the little brat who divorced his parents because his father was a loon and his mother was a moron. Where is MacCauley Caulkin anyway? I know he got married to another juvenile actress, and last I heard the marriage was going well. According to sources they kiss each other, wash off the cooties, and then go to their respective rooms at the torrid hour of 10:30 p.m. I hear they are looking forward to their first divorce.

I have always been proud of Thanksgiving, because I live twenty minutes away from Plymouth, where the Pilgrims landed. As a child, knowing that my town could have been part of history gave me such a thrill. Maybe the Pilgrims sailed into the inlet that wasn't quite the Cape Cod Canal, and said, "Hark, Mr. Bradford, what if we land there on that shore? Surely we could take that piece of land there."

"No, I don't think so young Timothy. For you see that land there is no distinguishing feature. I want to make an impression on the settlers here. Maybe carve my name or the date 1620 into something like a big rock. But there is nothing there but trees, sand, and grass. Nothing important lies on that land."

"Oh. Forgive me sir, I am humbled by your brilliance."

"Don't fret Tim. I have a better idea, when we send this boat back to England for supplies, we will tell the people of Wareham of a great piece of land that we saw. Those rednecks will come here faster than the wind blows and set up a colony, that all of the other colonies can laugh at. Ha. Ha. Ha."

So the Pilgrims ended up in Plymouth, allowing that town to market the hell out of a sacred voyage. The town of Plymouth has turned the Pilgrims escape for religious freedom into one of the largest tourist attractions on the North Eastern Seaboard. Meanwhile, we in Wareham pay homage to the only two semi-Thanksgiving objects in town, a spiritual gazebo called the Wigwam, and the statue of a half-naked Indian that someone got a grant for in the late eighties. If only they landed in Onset Bay.... if only.

Happy Thanksgiving

COURTESY PARAMOUNT

Who will save their souls?
Jewel and Skeet Ulrich in Ride With the Devil (opening today) do their best to impersonate Christina Ricci and Johnny Depp in Sleepy Hollow.

■ novel

continued from page 6

Winchester calls it. After covering Belfast and Watergate, among other topics, for the Guardian, he went to work for the Sunday Times.

Winchester writes for several American and British magazines, including Harper's, National Geographic and Conde Nast Traveler. He is particularly happy that "The Professor and the Madman" has sold well in the United States, also the scene of his greatest publishing disaster. His only American-based book, "American Heartbeat," sold 11 copies.

Winchester is now busy working on another book, a complex tale of Adolphus Washington Greeley who was involved in a tragic expedition in the Arctic, after which tales of cannibalism surfaced.

Expand your horizons

Colorful sunglasses. Suddenly things look a little more interesting.

25% OFF ALL SUNGLASSES

Many more to choose from.

MUSIC • SOFTWARE MOVIES • BOOKS
MEDIA PLAY®
For the Entertainment Superstore nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Visit our music and movie site at www.MediaPlay.com
Sale ends December 4, 1999.
Product availability and pricing may vary by location and online.
883291

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Boulders. $387 flexible avail. Call Chris 256-1629

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 Chevy Corsica AT, AC, cruise only 91k miles great condition $2600 call TJ 256-2147

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Laptop PC Fujitsu Pentium, CD Rom, 32 mRam, 2G Hard drive. $599.95. Michael at 253-0473

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMLOYMENT

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

Are you a sport or fitness enthusiast? Earn two academic credits for teaching the GPE program. For more information call the GPE Office at 545-2338

EMPLOYMENT

Ware Youth Center Seeks a dynamic, creative person to direct youth activities. Flexible part time hours. Send resume by December 6, to K. Henderson, c/o Valley Human Services, 96 South Street, Ware, MA 01082 AA/EOE

TUTORS/ TRANSLATORS Bilingual/for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Bengali, Hungarian, Japanese, Khmer, Korean, Mongolian, Portuguese, and Tibetan. Call ESL Office at 413-549-9857 Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/ Equal Opportunity Employer

December Grads: Entry-level position with great opportunity for advancement and responsibility available. Need high GPA and interest in high-tech industry, interviewing on campus Dec. 1st. send resumes to gel@scientific.com www.scientific.com/joinSP!

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards no experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

EMPLOYMENT

Summer Business Internships Available Not limited to business majors. Earn up to $15,000 this summer. Call 1-800-390-4848 Ext. 100 ASAP or visit www.univ-paint.com

Part-Time Outdoor Specialty Sporting goods. Experience in the outdoors and retail helpful. Call 253-0473 For more info.

FOR SALE

All East Season Passes only $350. Ski + Board 7 mtns all season anytime Hurry! Offer ends Dec. 5 call Mark 413-527-3524

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

LOST & FOUND

FOUND Purple Jacket outside of LGRT. Call to identify. Call Paul 546-4427

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bdr in 4 Bedroom House Oil Heat. No pets. Non-smoker. 10 mins from Amherst in Belchertown $263/month, utilities extra. Call Chris 323-0899 Leave a message

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Bdr in 4 Bedroom House Oil Heat. No pets. Non-smoker. 10 mins from Amherst in Belchertown $263/month, utilities extra. Call Chris 323-0899 Leave a message

SERVICES

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesss

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

LAGNAF In Quebec Dec 3-5 Party/Ski only $149! Call Ski N' Board Club 5-3437

Party with UMass Ski N' Board Club for the Millennium Quebec City/Hilton 5 nites/4days $299 Dec28-Jan2 Social opportunity age is 18 sign up now, space is selling out bus option available... call 545-3437

Ski Breckenridge Co. 1/3-1/10 from $769 Roundtrip airfare 7 nights lodging 5 day lift ticket UMass Ski N' board Club 545-3437

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.spring-breakdirect.com

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sun-splashtours.com

Your Ad could be right here!!

The Collegian Classifieds... Read By Thousands

Where are you going to place your next AD?? Call 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, NOV. 29

NOTICES

Lecture – A lecture involving Indo-Tibetan Buddhist culture entitled "Personal Identity in a Cross-Cultural Perspective: Parfit and Yogacara" will be given at 4 p.m. in the Dewey common room at Smith College.

Play Reading – There will be a reading of the play "Wit" at 7:30 p.m. in Earle Recital Hall Sage Hall at Smith College.

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Dayst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multidimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Send us your FYI announcements!

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,™ you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 24, 1999

C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH 2	10	Women's College Basketball		Business Rpt.	Women's College Basketball: Connecticut vs. Kentucky			Norman Rockwell: Painting America			Van Gogh's Van Goghs
WFSB 3	3	News	CBS News	inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Celine Dion: All the Way		Two Babies: Switched at Birth (1999, Drama) Melissa Gilbert			News	Late Show
WBZ 4	4	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Celine Dion: All the Way		Two Babies: Switched at Birth (1999, Drama) Melissa Gilbert			Nightline
WCVB 5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl	Whose Line?	Drew Carey	Norm	20/20	News	Late Show
WLVI 6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Roswell "Blood Brothers"		News	Friends	Nanny
WHDH 7	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing "The Short List"		Law & Order "Patsy" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Judge Levine	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	7 Days "The Collector"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Real TV	Caroline
WWJY	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing "The Short List"		Law & Order "Patsy" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC 11	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing "The Short List"		Law & Order "Patsy" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WWLP 9	12	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Norman Rockwell: Painting America		Rockwell		"Pepper's Pow Wow" (1995)	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY 57	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Two Guys-Girl	Whose Line?	Drew Carey	Norm	20/20	News	Nightline
WGGB 40	26	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Nashville Predators, (Live)					Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)
WSBK 38	4	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	NBA Basketball: Portland Trail Blazers at Minnesota Timberwolves (Live)					NBA Basketball: Jazz at Lakers
WTBS 72		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Biography: Tony Randall		Investigative Reports (R)		American Justice	Law & Order "D"
AAE 43		Simon & Simon	Law & Order "Memory"		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline
CNN 45	27	Judge Levine	Moneyline	Newshour		World Today		Larry King Live		South Park	Men Show	Dairy Show
COM 53	36	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Shipwreck! "Deep Sea Rescue"		Sole Survivor (R)		Pole Position - NASCAR Story		Shipwreck! "Deep Sea Rescue"
DISC 52		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery	Family	College Basketball: Preseason NIT Semifinal – Teams TBA					College Basketball
ESPN 46		College Basketball: Preseason NIT			Semi – Teams TBA			"Stompintopia" (1996, Drama) Eva LaRue, Angie Dickinson			Golden Girls	Golden Girls
LIFE 50		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Ricki Lake"		100 Years of Women		Model Mission	Head Trip	True Life (R)	True Life (R) (In Stereo)	Tom Green (R)
MTV 59		Global Grooves	House of Style	10th Annv.	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days
NICK 55		Sponge	Sponge	Sponge	Sponge	Sponge	Sponge	Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days	Happy Days	Pottergeist: The Legacy
SCIFI 63		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sliders "Roads Taken" (R)		Sliders "Revelations" (R)		Sliders "The King Is Back"		Fire in Flight-Spark		Extreme Machines (R)
TLC 62	24	Home Again	Home Again	Bradymania: Very Brady		Extreme Machines (R)		Near Miss				"Father Hood" (1993)
TNT 54		Bill "Bill Confidential" (In Stereo)		PGA Golf: Grand Slam of Golf (In Stereo)							Walker, Texas Ranger
USA 60		Baywatch "Deep Trouble"		JAG "Rivers Run" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		"Kindergarten Cop" (1990, Comedy) Arnold Schwarzenegger			Walker, Texas Ranger
HBO 65		4:45) "Dance With Me" (1998)		"Rudy" (1993, Drama) Sean Astin, Jon Favreau				"White Men Can't Jump" (1992) Woody Harrelson, Wesley Snipes			Chris Rock	Robert S.
MAX 67		"Silent Rage" (1982, Suspense) Chuck Norris, Ron Silver				Sabotage" (1996, Drama) Mark Dacascos		"Wild Things" (1998, Drama) Kevin Bacon, Denise Richards			Pleasure Zone
SHOW 68		"For Love or Money" (1993, Comedy) Michael J. Fox				"Ringmaster" (1998) Jerry Springer		"The Opposite of Sex" (1998, Comedy) Christina Ricci			Beggars

HSCN Holding Services Cable Network

HSCN Bulletin Board — Good to Good
CBS/3 Hartford — WMG/33 Springfield
CBS/4 Boston — Open Vacation News
ABC/5 Boston — Chile
ABC/57 Springfield — Chile
MSG/57 Springfield — Chile
NSCN Mono/38 — Chile
UPN/20 Mono/38 — Chile
Weather Channel — Chile
NBC/30 New Bedford — Chile
Fox/61 — Chile
FBS/24 — Chile
WGCH & WNOH — Chile
Entertainment — Chile
UMass Instructional TV — Chile
WB/New Bedford — Chile
Syndicate — Chile
The Learning Channel — Chile
UVC-TV/19 — Chile
ABC/48 Springfield — Chile

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You're not likely to be as interested in the performance of your duties today as you are in the quite study of your own motives and methods.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Your luck is likely to increase today, but this does not mean you should throw caution to the wind. You should play it safer than usual.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Now is no time for you to sit back and relax and let opportunities pass you by. You have many choices to make, and one or two may surprise you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – This is a good day to restate your commitment to a project or a person in simpler, more direct terms. Let others know what you're up to.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – This is a good day to tabulate recent earnings and expenditures in order to formulate a new and improved cash-flow strategy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You may be unusually harsh today when it comes to other people's feelings, but during the evening hours someone is sure to penetrate your shell.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You mustn't let a negative outlook keep you from trying and moving forward today. Do everything you can to build and maintain momentum.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – You'll be most content today making efforts to please others. Domestic activities will bring you much satisfaction – and an opportunity to socialize.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Your personal power is on the rise, and you should be able to fashion quite a dramatic rise from your current position in little time at all. Start now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – A random approach is not for you today. You'll want to have every move planned with great care, minimizing the chance that an accident will occur.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Good luck and good timing work in your favor today, but nothing can take the place of increased effort on your part. Don't let down quite yet!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – It's up to you to provide others with certain key needs at this time. Never fear – your efforts will not go unrecognized or unrewarded.

Quote of the Day

"Turkey for me and turkey for you, we can eat turkey and my big brown shoe."

–Adam Sandler

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

Boy, it takes a while to forget your old girlfriend.

The other night I was waiting in the ticket line at a movie theater with another girl and a nearby public phone was ringing and I really thought it was my old girlfriend calling me to ask if I wanted to meet her for an ice cream later on that night.

Really, after a while my old girlfriend and I weren't any good anymore, anyway.

I'd better start a hobby.

Maybe I'll paint very tiny figurines of the combatants of the Zulu war of 1879.

Yeah, that'll do it.

I'll paint lots of little things I can barely see.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
International Burger
Garden Burger
Hot & Spicy Wings
Grilled Cheese

DINNER
not open

Worcester

LUNCH
Fried Clams
International Burger
Garden Burger
Curried Vegetable

DINNER
Veal Patty
Chef's Choice
Southern 6 Bean Stew

Hampshire

LUNCH
Fried Clams
International Burger
Garden Burger
Curried Vegetable

DINNER
not open

Berkshire

LUNCH
International Burger
Garden Burger
Curried Vegetable
Couscous

DINNER
Veal Patty
Chef's Choice
Southern 6 Bean Stew

ACROSS

1 "Amazing"
4 Wise person
8 Has 12 Poet Teasdale
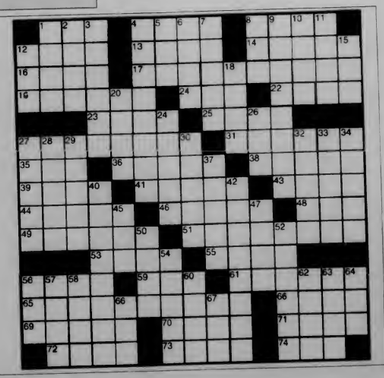
13 Tall tale
14 Gowhand's rope
16 Stared at
17 Robin Hood's sweetheart
19 In dreamland
21 "The Raven" author
22 Napoleon's place of exile
23 Dock denizens
25 Electrical unit
27 Rose quartz, for one
31 Doc, Sleepy, etc.
35 Once named
36 Like Mensa members
38 Soap —
39 Curved entrance
41 Proofs
43 "Out, Tabby!"
44 Kitchen tool
46 Malice
48 Writer Tan
49 Jumped
51 Waterproofing material
53 Warty one
55 Sword fight
56 Diva's song
59 Fish catcher
61 It's brewed
65 Turns, slangily
68 Director Clair
69 English racetrack
70 — of Wight
71 Compelled
72 Glass unit
73 Type of earring
74 Do christies



DOWN

1 Methods
2 Pitcher Hershiser
3 Fishing boots
4 Indications of sickness
5 Motorist's org
6 Seize firmly
7 Provide funding for
8 Mouths, in biology
9 Hidden listening devices
10 Finger part
11 Attempt
12 Adriatic, e.g.
15 Anecdote collection
18 Hoover Dam's lake
20 Tastes
24 Ginger cookies
26 Deuce
27 Tree knot
28 Unearthly
29 Saudi city
30 Burst forth
32 Sum up
33 Picture holder
34 Half-man, half-goat
37 Group of three
40 Seven-sided figure
42 Swaggered
45 Antique auto
47 Weapon used in 55 Across
50 Actor Carvey
52 Frightens
54 Food shops
56 "Sol"
57 Grate
58 Machu Picchu dweller
60 Exam
62 Bill
63 "The King —"
64 "Gosh!"
66 Fr. holy woman
67 Cold-weather malady

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

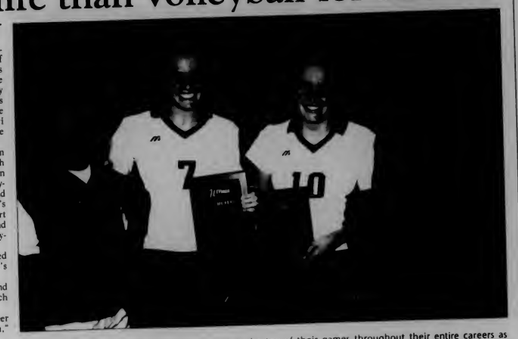
A	R	E	A	M	U	R	A	L	R	O	M	P
R	E	A	L	A	B	U	S	E	E	D	I	E
L	I	S	P	P	O	S	T	O	F	F	I	C	E
O	N	T	A	P	A	K	A	L	U	N	A	R
			G	O	S	S	I	P	G	U	I
R	E	C	A	L	L	S	T	U	X	E	D	O	S
A	L	A	S	K	A	C	A	R	D	I	R	E
T	U	G	A	C	R	O	B	A	T	T	I	E
O	D	E	S	K	I	D	N	A	G	E	D
N	E	S	T	L	E	R	O	U	G	H	L	Y
			I	O	N	B	O	R	N	E
S	C	I	F	I	S	A	C	K	N	A	C	K
H	A	L	F	N	E	L	S	O	N	D	I	O	N
O	P	T	I	C	S	V	O	I	C	E	A	N	T	E
O	P	E	N	A	G	L	O	W	S	T	E	W

11-24-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Ken Mc Donald
Photo Technition	Nicole Gothwald
Copy Editor	Mary Grein
Production Supervisor	Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff	Lovee Garg, Roberto Delgado

Sports



Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday, November 24, 1999

More to life than volleyball for seniors

By James Piehl
Collegian Staff

Jill Meyers and Kari Hogancamp were at the top of their games throughout their entire careers as Minutewoman.

Volleyball at the University of Massachusetts here in Amherst is over, at least for this season. The crowds will cheer again in the Curry Hicks Cage next year as the UMass Minutewomen take the floor. The one difference is, seniors Kari Hogancamp and Jill Meyers won't be there to lead the squad.

UM is not only losing its right arm but its left arm too, and possibly both legs to stand on. They are more than arguably the two best volleyball players in UMass history. They are far and away the greatest tandem to hit UM's volleyball floor. They are the heart and soul of volleyball at UMass. And all good things, even storied volleyball careers, must come to an end.

After all they have accomplished here, one question is left: What's next?

There is more to Hogancamp and Meyers than just volleyball. Beach volleyball is out of the question.

"I wouldn't want to make a career out of that. I just play it for fun," Hogancamp said.

"I'm not very good in the sand. I mean it's fun but that's not what I want to do," Meyers said.

The future plans for Hogancamp are uncertain. Maybe traveling the United States for a while or possibly remaining a resident in Massachusetts seem likely for her. The Huntington Beach native could possibly head back to the golden shores of California, but for right now, she doesn't want to think about it. She just wants to enjoy the rest of her senior year at UM.

"I'm not sure what I'm going to do, I'll probably live here for a while. Maybe travel. I don't know," Hogancamp said.

Meyers has different plans for after graduation. She plans on continuing her education in England at Oxford in the criminology program. She may even play and coach volleyball there. She's just waiting to see if she'll get the Rhodes scholarship she applied for.

"Hopefully I can go to Oxford. I want to study criminology there. I hear they have a pretty weak volleyball program too. Over there they have a player/coach deal. Maybe I can do that, hopefully," Meyers said.

The most memorable thing that will be missed at UMass for these girls isn't volleyball. It has been a fantastic outlet for them, but the reality is it is just a game. A game they dominated for four long years. They do agree on what they both will miss.

"I know it sounds cheesy but I'm going to miss my friends. I met a lot of great people here. I had a lot of fun," Hogancamp said.

"The friends and faculty I've met here. They've all been so great. I've really enjoyed it. Kari has helped me a lot here. I don't think I would have enjoyed it as much if she wasn't here," Meyers said.

Even though this tenacious twosome lived in the same town they weren't always friends. They played opposite each other in high school. Even when they played for Power (a volleyball club in California) they said they more or less just carpooled because they were in the same town. Their friendship blossomed at UMass and so did their volleyball skills. That is when their off-court friendship made volleyball's top tandem excel.

"I definitely think our friendship helped our game. I know when I'm on the court I can always give Jill the ball and she'll get it done. I think she feels the same," Hogancamp said.

"I love Kari to death. She's such a good friend. I think our friendship definitely helped our game. She's always there when you need her," Meyers said.

This amazing pair works so well together that they hold more than just volleyball records. They are the reigning undefeated tag team champions of pudding wrestling.

"We did it because this guy on the polo team said it was his dream to see some pudding wrestling. We said we'd do it and he was like, 'no way.' But we did it and it was fun," Meyers said. "I'm weak so I'd have to have Kari come in and clean up. It got pretty competitive. Kari even got injured. So we're retired. We'll probably just hand the crown down."

When these two exit the hills of Amherst they'll take with them some rich experiences. Some of volleyball, some of friends, but all of them about fun. They'll leave behind their names and history. They'll leave here forever, the yin and yang of UM volleyball.

It is true that there is life after volleyball, but will there be volleyball after the dynamic duo of Hogancamp and Meyers has left the building? Tune in next year.

UM loses all three slip away; leaves with a 3-3 tie

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

Jeff Blanchard and the rest of the hockey team left the Mullins Center with the distaste of a 3-3 tie.

Letting one slip away, that's all there is to it.

The Massachusetts hockey team fell victim to a questionable delay of game penalty with just 56 seconds remaining in the third period that resulted in the game-tying goal.

The call came on a loose puck in the crease and just as it was about to be cleared the net was knocked off its pins. Vermont made the most of the opportunity that was given to them by the Minutemen when J.F. Caudron beat goalie Mike Johnson five-hole to even the score at 3-3.

"It was a tough call on the penalty shot at the end of the game, but you got to live with it and go from there," coach Joe Mallen said. "It's one of those games when we outplayed them, outshot them, and outhit them, and out hustled them and still came out with the tie."

The Maroon and White dominated play for much of the game, but came out on the short end of the stick. UMass took a 1-0 advantage just 25 seconds into the game when Martin Miljko collected a rebound in front of the net and beat Shawn Conschafter.

Even with the early goal the Catamounts did not fold, getting the equalizer just four minutes later. A turnover by Samuli Jalkanen on an outlet pass was taken at the blue line by Matt Sanders who fed Mike Torney and the odd man rush was on. Torney then found Bryson Busniuk who beat Johnson five-hole.

The score remained the same until the second period when the Minutemen killed a 5-on-3 early in the period and momentum was with the home team once again. On the penalty kill the Maroon and White found themselves in alone twice on Conschafter.

Forwards Jeff Blanchard and Nathan Sell had the first chance. Conschafter robbed Sell on the doorstep. Seconds later Blanchard found himself in alone and Conschafter once again kept the puck out of the net.

With momentum on their side, UMass continued to carry the play and Jeff Turner made the Catamounts pay for their lackluster efforts. Turner took a feed in front from Kris Wallis and beat a sprawling Conschafter top shelf to capture a 2-1 lead.

Six minutes later, Turner was celebrating after his second goal of the night on a shot from the slot. The junior forward scored his fourth goal in two games on a beautifully set up play from Blanchard and Miljko.

But just as the Minutemen looked as if they would win their second game in as many chances, Vermont shattered their hopes beating a complacent Maroon and White squad twice in the third period to escape with the 3-3 tie.

"In the third period we lost our momentum," Mallen said.

The second Catamount goal came on a blistering shot from Jerry Germander on yet another 5-on-3.

"It's a tough one to swallow. We just have to learn from our mistakes and learn to bury teams," Turner said. "A positive in the game, guys are starting to put the puck in the net, that is going to win us some games down the road."

Men's swimming earns Empire State split

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

Here's a little Thanksgiving humor: Why did the turkey cross the road?

It was the chicken's day off.

This past weekend, the University of Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team seemed to have taken the day off as it lost its first dual meet of the season on Sunday afternoon to Columbia University at the Joseph R. Rogers, Jr., Pool.

It's almost as bad as waking up to the sound of an annoying alarm clock on Monday morning and realizing that you have a class at 9:05 a.m. It's the feeling you experience when you are hit with the first loss of a season and it doesn't go away until you come up victorious again.

Eastern champion Gered Doherty led a rally that gave the Lions its surprising first victory of the season, 173-137. The win upped Columbia's record to 1-2 on the season.

Columbia had been up by as much as 19 points, following a sweep in the 100-yard freestyle, as Doherty, Russell Perkins, and Mark Schultz capped the victory. UM fought back, knotting the score at 113 when it finished 1-2-6 in the 500 free. Doherty led a 1-2-4 finish in the 100 butterfly, in 50.05, as Peter Armstrong was second in 52.74, and Matt O'Donnell was fourth in 53.51. Mark Fichera, also a defending Eastern champion, won the 3-meter dive with a score of 324.66.

At 141-123, the Lions locked the door when freshman Arpad Sebe won the 200 individual medley in 1:57.05. Although the meet had already been clinched, Doherty added the cherry on top when he anchored the Lions' 400 freestyle relay to victory.

Juniors Chris Arsenault and Billy Brown each won two events for the Minutemen. Arsenault won the 200 yard-free in 1:45.25 and the 200 yard-back in 1:54.55. Brown captured the 100 yard-breast with a time of 58.19 and the 200 yard-breast in 2:05.78. Justin Houck took the 1000 yard-free in 9:57.99. Tommy Keane won the 500 yard-free in 4:44.61.

On the plank, senior Ed Hefferon won the one-meter with a score of 292.35, and took second in the three-meter with a score of 316.65.

On Saturday, UM prevailed over the Red Storm of St. John's 147-86. In the 400 yard-medley relay, the team of Arsenault, Brown, Carlos Ramos, and Henry Turner set a pool record with a time of 3:30.02. Arsenault picked up two victories in the win, completing the 200 yard-free in 1:44.57 and the 100 yard-free in 47.54. Ramos won the 50 yard-free in 21.79, and Brown won the 200 yard-breast in a time of 2:08.68. Keane was victorious in the 500y-free.

In diving, Hefferon won the one-meter with a score of 295.28 and the three-meter with a score 255.30.

Yesterday, Arsenault and Houck were both honored by the Atlantic 10 conference. Arsenault was named the conference's Performer of the Week after picking up four individual first-place finishes in the Minutemens' two meets this weekend. Houck was named Rookie of the Week after finishing in first and third once each and in third place twice over the weekend.

UMass returns to action on Dec. 3-4 at the Syracuse Invitational, hosted by Syracuse University. The teams will take the marine pit at Nottingham High in Syracuse, N.Y.

'Skins try to use Westbrook more

By Mark Maske
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Washington Redskins Coach Norv Turner said Tuesday he expects wide receiver Michael Westbrook to be more involved in the offense in the coming weeks.

Westbrook, playing with a cast over the broken bone in his wrist, had only one catch for one yard in Sunday's 23-13 triumph over the Giants. But Turner said Westbrook wasn't intended to be a decoy.

"I think he'll be able to do more," Turner said. "With the way he practiced, he'll be able to do more and more as we go along."

Davis was picked as the NFC's offensive player of the week. He is the first Redskins running back to win the award since Terry Allen in 1995. Quarterback Brad Johnson has won the award twice this season.

UM heads to Furman
Defense will be challenged

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Last season was supposedly a fluke. This season, the Massachusetts football team is trying to make it a streak.

The Paladins of Furman will try to halt the Minutemen's roller coaster ride as it heads up the slope for another run for the roses.

Furman comes in 9-2, gaining an at-large home date with the Minutemen. After losing their opener to Elon, the Paladins won nine of its final 10 games, its only loss coming to conference foe Georgia Southern.

When the NCAA I-AA brackets came out Sunday afternoon, the Southern Conference was licking its chops. Not only would the Massachusetts football team see Furman in the first round, but also Georgia Southern assuming the Cowboys win in their opener. Last season, the Minutemen disposed of GSU in the championship game and the Paladins will play a similar style in trying to knock off the Minutemen.

The grand finale at McGuirk Alumni Stadium on Saturday went exactly to plan, 15 seniors saying farewell to Amherst with a 62-20 victory over Connecticut. The win capped a seven-game winning streak to end the season, a streak many believed was good enough to bring a home game to Amherst, but the committee thought otherwise.

UConn came in with little fire, yielding a 52-0 lead before finally getting on the board. The Huskies had no answer for either facet of the UMass attack, as Marcel Shipp and Todd Bankhead marched the offense forward at will. Bankhead tossed two scoring passes to sophomore Eric Bross II, the first half, while Shipp, after a 210-yard afternoon against William & Mary, galloped for 142 yards on 24 carries to balance the offense.

The Tribe, in fact, is the only common opponent for the squads, UMass winning two weeks ago, 25-16. The Paladins won in convincing fashion in the second week of the season, rushing for 509 yards en route to a 52-6 pounding in Williamsburg. All seven touchdowns came on the ground, five from different players

Furman goes as the running game goes, rushing for an average of 304.6 yards per game, led by Louis Ivory, who ran for 1376 yards on just 250 carries, which equates to six yards for every attempt. The Paladins will run the option, the second-leading rusher being quarterback Justin Hill. Hill threw the ball just over 10 times per game, staying mostly on the ground much like GSU's Hill, Greg Hill, who burnt the Minutemen for over 200 yards rushing.

The focus immediately centers on the UMass defense, which will try to combat the unpredictable running game with outstanding quickness on offense. Kole Ayi led the team with 129 tackles, 92 of which were solo. The Nashua, NH native is a finalist for the Buck Buchanan Award, given out annually to the nation's best defensive player. However, the Minutemen will be without the catalyst of last year's defense against the option, Khari Samuel, whose physical specimen consistently plugged the holes inside, holding GSU's Adrian Peterson at bay in the championship.

The consensus is that the Atlantic 10/Southern Conference clash will light the scoreboard early and often. While UMass contends with the option, Furman must find an answer for its yearlong defensive woes. The Paladins are eighth in the run-oriented conference in pass defense, giving up 170 yards through the air. UMass comes in third in passing and fourth in rushing in the A-10.

Todd Bankhead nearly doubled Furman's Hill in the passing column, throwing for 2,496 yards through the air, including 14 touchdown passes. Against the conference's worst pass defense, Bankhead had arguably his best performance of the season, completing 19 of 24 passes for 292 yards.

The victory that jumps out on the schedule is the Paladins' 28-3 thrashing of Division I-A North Carolina in Chapel Hill. Furman ran for 274 yards, but beat the Tarheels with the deep ball. Hill hit Desmond Kitchings from 60 and 49 yards out to keep the UNC defensive secondary on its heels. In the Minutemen's only take at the I-A level, they fell handily to Toledo, 24-3.

UMass loses war with Crusaders

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

WORCESTER – Holy Cross, Batman!

The Massachusetts women's basketball team came into the Hart Center last night on a quest for redemption, but ended up crucified by the host Crusaders, 78-65. The Minutewomen (0-3) outplayed Bill Gibbons's Holy Cross crew in several offensive categories, but allowed the Crusaders to shoot .471 from the field (24 of 51) and build a 40-25 halftime lead from which UMass simply couldn't recover.

"We're really struggling defensively right now," UM coach Joanne O'Brien said. "We're reacting to what our opponents do, instead of setting the tone ourselves."

The tone in last night's action was set early by Holy Cross (3-0), which like UMass, was playing its third game in less than a week. After losing the opening tip and conceding the Minutewomen the game's first score via a Caroline Nehls bank shot, the Crusaders cruised into the Maroon and White end and went to work on establishing an inside game. HC freshman center Katie O'Keefe spotted a seam in UMass' two-three zone defense, and employed a nifty hop-step move to blow past Nehls and teammate Amber Sneed. O'Keefe couldn't get her initial shot to drop, but an aggressive offensive board and put back by HC's Amanda Abraham locked the contest at 2-2.

Holy Cross went on a 13-0 run beginning at the 15:24 mark in the opening half. The Crusaders got rolling off a trifecta from senior standout Anna Kinne, after which UM's Nekole Smith came up with a dynamic steal at half-court and streaked toward the Crusader end for an uncontested lay-up.

But in a sequence indicative of the Maroon and White's evening-long woes, Smith bricked the gimme and the Crusaders stormed back onto the attack. Abraham showed devastating range by rolling off a pick atop the UM key and burying a three-pointer, after which a trio of unanswered hoops from HC's Monika Rothemich pushed the Crusader cushion to 17-6. Abraham then closed off the run by canning a 12-footer from the left baseline, giving Holy Cross a 13 point lead with 10:08 to play in the half.

On the ensuing possession, the Minutewomen finally awoke offensively, as freshman Jennifer Butler knifed along the baseline for an easy lay-up off a well-executed inbound play. UM senior tri-captain Alison MacFarland then back-rimmed a 10-footer with Crusader Veronica Jutras draped all over her, and Butler showed poise that belied her inexperience by snaring the offensive board from between two Holy Cross defenders.

"Their number 21 is one heck of a basketball player," said Holy Cross coach Gibbons of Butler. "I don't think she knows yet how good she is, or how good she's going to be."

But despite out-rebounding the Crusaders 21-18 over the first 20 minutes of play, UMass coughed up the ball 15 times en route to a 40-25 halftime deficit.

"We were just way too passive in the first half," O'Brien said. "We missed a lot of opportunities to throw the ball inside, and use our strengths."

Hoping to narrow the deficit, MacFarland and point guard Kathy Coyner broke out of their early funks and started finding the net, as the Maroon and White finally began to utilize its strengths in the second half. UMass chopped the Crusader edge down to 55-45 with 9:19 remaining in the fight, behind four MacFarland jumpers and a Coyner three-point bomb.

But as much as Holy Cross bent under UM's pressure down the stretch, it was the deadeye shooting of Kinne, from both the free throw stripe and beyond the three-point arc that kept the Crusaders from breaking. After drilling her third trifecta at the 5:48 mark to restore the home team's lead to 14, Kinne converted 6 of 9 foul shots over the final five minutes of play to seal up the win for Holy Cross.

Although the defeat may create a sense of disappointment for the Maroon and White, O'Brien and company could point to a few key contributions that may be telling for the team's future success. MacFarland shook off a discouraging first half of shooting (1 for 8) to finish with 18 points, while Coyner's 14-point, four-rebound and four-assist showcase earned the Ohio native the WMUA / Kennedy Screen Graphics Player of the Game award.

UMass will return to action this upcoming Saturday, when it takes on Boston College in its home opener at 2 p.m.

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ Issue 50

Monday, November 29, 1999

Campus safety still an issue
Public awareness should continue

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

More than a week has passed since the last alleged sexual assault was reported on the University of Massachusetts campus, which caused fear for the campus community and precautionary steps to be taken. According to some students, the real fear has just begun.

Many students interviewed yesterday evening said the nationwide media attention on the campus has caused them to realize the seriousness of the issue. As a result, they said that the Thanksgiving break has led them to question the future safety of the campus and whether the administration will continue to act to ensure that safety measures are met.

The reports of sexual assaults and rapes began on Nov. 2, when a female student reported being raped at 5:30 p.m. near the Campus Pond. On Nov. 9, a female student reported being pulled into some bushes and raped near the Metawampee Lawn at 2:30 p.m. On Nov. 14, a female student reported being pepper-sprayed and punched by three individuals before she was able to break free and escape. And on Nov. 16, during a rally at the Student Union, a woman was attacked with a knife around 2:30 p.m. in Lot #62, next to Skinner Hall.

Students like senior Kelsey LeBrun said the events that have been reported during the last few weeks have drawn a lot of nationwide attention to the campus. However, she is becoming more and more fearful as time passes that the University will become less concerned with the issue.

"I think that the CNN coverage brought quite a lot of attention to the campus," LeBrun said. "I think the nation's reacting now, but I think what is most disconcerting is that the more time that passes, the less the public will be concerned about it."

As an example, LeBrun said that on Friday night around 11 p.m., she was waiting for an on-campus Pioneer Valley Transit Authority (PVTA) bus, but she said the University buses were not running that evening because of the holiday.

The Student Government Association (SGA) passed a motion on Nov. 17 allowing excused absences and full academic clemency to be recognized by faculty for the period of Nov. 15 to Nov. 30, but LeBrun pointed out that despite the clemency ending on Tuesday, students like her are still feeling unsafe.

"I don't see how you can put a deadline on when you can be safe," LeBrun said.

LeBrun's feeling that students are no longer aware or concerned with the issue was perhaps reflected last Tuesday night when less than ten students attended an open forum in the Student Union Ballroom. The meeting was called Tuesday afternoon by Chancellor David K. Scott during a rally in response to student accusations that Scott and the administration were not doing enough to address the concerns.

In response, Scott publicly announced the open forum for that evening, and guaranteed a spectrum of faculty members from across campus be present to address these concerns. The meeting lasted for approximately an hour. Scott said he hoped the lack of attendance was a reflection of "bad timing" as a result of Thanksgiving break and not because of a lack of concern among the students.

Junior political science major Andy Kepple said students should continue to be concerned about the campus safety issues recent incidents have raised.

"I hope people haven't forgotten about it and think that it's over," Kepple said. "I hope people are taking the same precautions and walking together and taking the Escort Service...I thought a lot of people might be blowing it off since it's been a while and I hope that hasn't happened."

Kepple said he feels the public has reacted positively with the amount of support the students have given to the issue, and it is his hope that it continues.

Students like junior psychology and elementary education major Lynette Swanton said her family and friends were most concerned for her safety. She said these kinds of situations are not the faults of the students or the University and that UMass has received a lot of negative attention by the press.

"I think it's bad for UMass because it makes it [the attacks] seem like a UMass thing, and the publicity hasn't

Turn to REACTION, page 3

KARA STORES-COLLEGIAN

Season's change

Amherst High School student Julia Hunter and Amherst local Joe Lamonica decorate the exterior of Accents, a new home, garden, and gifts store, in the center of town yesterday.

Hampshire students protest SOA

By Jason Spears
Collegian Staff

Forty-nine students from the five colleges, along with between 8,000 and 12,000 others, traveled last week to Fort Benning, Ga., to participate in a two-day protest against the School of the Americas.

The School of the Americas (SOA) was originally founded in 1946 with the mission of promoting democracy in South America by training Latin American soldiers. Since the school's opening, SOA's graduates have been linked to numerous atrocities in Latin America, including the killing of Archbishop Oscar Romero and the El Mozote massacre of 900 civilians.

Began in 1995 with 23 people, the SOA Watch has been holding an annual demonstration against the SOA. The event has blossomed into a two-day rally with estimates of thousands of participants.

"I was impressed by the diversity of the people — Catholics, young students, the very old, blacks and whites," said Hampshire College student Justin Jackson, who attended the rally.

The rally started on Nov. 20, and continued throughout the next day with speakers and performers, including educator Father Dan Berrigan, actor Martin Sheen, musician Pete Seeger, and a survivor of the El Mozote massacre, Rufina Amaya.

"I was really touched by the speakers, particularly a woman who spoke about losing her children [to the SOA]," Hampshire College student Sheila Sunder said. "She came to Georgia to talk about her loss and how the SOA effected her, and to tell the truth about what they are doing."

The speakers denounced the SOA and the current reforms of the school, which SOA Watch founder Roy Bourgeois called, "little more than an image-polishing exercise." Speakers were clear in stating their disapproval with the principals behind United States foreign policy in general, and explained that the SOA was symbolic of these principals.

Protesters who desired to participate in a memorial funeral procession on to the grounds of Fort Benning the next day were required to take civil disobedience training. During the civil disobedience training, protesters were explained their legal rights and the possible legal consequences for walking on to Fort Benning property on Sunday, according to Hampshire College student protesters. Protesters were asked to respect police officers and to remember the need to follow the principals of non-violence. They were offered the option of using passive resistance against authorities, such as going limp and requiring police to physically move them off of Fort Benning property, which was not an option at last year's protest.

On Nov. 21, 4,408 protesters walked in the memorial funeral procession on to Fort Benning, according to SOA Watch estimates. The procession was led by protesters wearing black "mourning shrouds" and white "death masks," and carrying coffins to symbolize those killed by the SOA graduates. The other protesters carried crosses with the names of people who had been killed by SOA graduates. At the same time, the names on the crosses were read one at a time over a loudspeaker with the protester saying "present" after each name.

"When we were inside in the base we were so focused," Hampshire College student Amanda Jones said. "There was so much energy."

After walking about a mile, the protesters were halted by police officers and the army, according to rally participants. The army threatened to criminally process everyone, and asked for people to voluntarily get on the buses provided to drive them off the fort. This demand later shifted to the army announcing that they would not process anyone, and for everyone to get on the bus. The army then announced that at 6 p.m. the road would be opened to traffic and the protesters would be left at the side of the road. Finally, the army announced that everyone would be removed by 6 p.m. Protesters were given the options of leaving by bus, walking off, or risking six months in prison and possibly $5000 worth of fines if they decided to stay on the fort.

According to Hampshire College participants, the protesters became confused by the army constantly changing its demands and the large size of the group of protestors. People organized themselves into small groups based on who they had traveled to Fort Benning with to try and decide what to do.

"Because [SOA Watch] did not have a way of organizing people on the ground," Hampshire College student Laura Anderson said, "the army was able to manipulate everything and disperse people."

Eventually, according to attendees, most people got on the bus, except for 65 protesters who refused and were arrested. Of the 65 arrested protesters, 23 had crossed on to Fort Benning in previous protests and will be prosecuted on charges of trespassing on federal property. The other protesters were bussed to a baseball park two miles from Fort Benning. During the bus ride away from the fort, protesters sang "Solidarity Forever" and drummed on the sides of the buses.

After two days of protest, the protesters went home. However, SOA Watch promised to continue to come to Fort Benning until the School of the Americas is closed for good.

Public pressure against tobacco industry increases

By Joan Biskupic
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The Supreme Court this week will begin deciding on the government's most formidable effort ever to stop smoking, as public pressure against the tobacco industry increases.

In 1996, the Food and Drug Administration broke with tradition and proposed regulating nicotine in cigarettes as a drug. In a plan to cut down on teen smoking, the agency issued rules that would restrict the marketing and selling of tobacco products to youth. It was a decisive moment for the government in the national controversy over a product that medical experts consider the primary cause of preventable disease and death. But after a lawsuit by tobacco companies, a federal appeals court ruled that the FDA lacked the authority to regulate tobacco.

The case has arrived at the Supreme Court, where it will be argued on Wednesday. An eventual decision by the justices will not only determine the fate of the program to prevent youth smoking, but, more broadly, will test a comprehensive federal endeavor to restrain a once-powerful industry that is now under constant governmental, legal, and societal assault.

In the four years since the FDA proposed its regulations, cigarette companies, once impregnable in court, have lost several high-dollar, personal-injury lawsuits, including the first phase of a Florida class-action dispute that could cost the industry billions of dollars.

In 1994, Mississippi, followed by a majority of the states, sued tobacco companies to recover health expenditures for smoking-related illnesses. The suits were settled last year for $246

Turn to SMOKING, page 3

Palestinians arrested for criticizing Arafat regime

Los Angeles Times

JERUSALEM – Palestinian security forces yesterday arrested a group of professionals and intellectuals who issued a scathing petition accusing Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's regime of "tyranny, corruption and injustice."

Five people were arrested and two others – a mayor and a former mayor – were placed under house arrest, according to families and officials.

They were among 20 academics and lawmakers who called on their fellow Palestinians to "confront tyranny, corruption and injustice." They complained that Arafat, president of the Palestinian Authority, was allowing their homeland to be sold out and

Turn to ARAFAT page 3

KARA STORES-COLLEGIAN

Inanimate town

The holiday left few roaming Amherst's streets this weekend, allowing the oddly wrapped Zanna mannequins full run of town.

Questions are roadblock to survivors' reparations

By Josh Getlin
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK – In a life filled with unspeakable tragedy, Elizabeth Roth has found a quiet haven: Once a month, she and other elderly Holocaust survivors gather at a small kosher restaurant in Brooklyn where they drink coffee, exchange small talk, and deal with the traumatic past on their own terms.

A frail woman who lost her family at Auschwitz, Roth now wrestles with the medical and psychological burdens of advancing age. She rarely leaves her small apartment. The hours she spends at the Coffee House, hosted by a local Jewish relief agency, are one of the few bright spots in her world.

In recent weeks, however, a cloud has been hovering over these gatherings. As word spreads of $1.25 billion in assets that two Swiss banks will return to Holocaust victims – an agreement that a court may ratify this week – Roth and others have learned that they must fill out a long, unwieldy questionnaire to get cash payments of roughly $500 to $1,000 each.

One stark question in particular has awakened painful memories: "Please describe, in as much detail as you can, where the Subject was during the years 1934 through 1945," reads item D on page three of the six-page legal form approved by the U.S. District Court for New York.

To lawyers and bureaucrats, these are formalities, basic facts to be compiled before Swiss banks return the money that thousands of Jews deposited during the 1930s, as the Nazi threat grew more ominous. But in Brooklyn and other communities, the questionnaire has forced many aging victims of Hitler's concentration camps to confront horrifying moments they have spent years avoiding – and it highlights larger problems plaguing America's most vulnerable survivors.

"I am having difficult time."

Roth says in soft, broken English, as trays of pastries are cleared away. "After the Holocaust, I take care of a blind sister until she dies, and then a husband until he dies. I raise three children who grow, and now I am all alone.

Today Tuesday Wednesday

HIGH: 41 LOW: 28 | HIGH: 30 LOW: 23 | HIGH: 34 LOW: 16

Campus safety concerns you

Thanksgiving break hasn't assuaged students' fears of campus violence. Read more on continuing safety measures in News.

NEWS PAGE 1

To infinity and beyond!

Woody, Buzz Lightyear and the gang return in Toy Story 2, which had highest box office gross for a Friday ever. Check out this and more in Arts.

ARTS PAGE 5

All hands on deck

Tailback Marcel Shipp sent Furman packing with a one-yard touchdown dive in overtime that lifted UMass to a 30-23 victory Saturday.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Comics 9
Crossword 8
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

SORRY

SORRY YOU'VE HAD TO PAY INFLATED DRINK PRICES

SORRY YOU'VE HAD TO EAT PUNY FLAVORLESS WINGS FOR SO LONG

SORRY YOU HAVEN'T BEEN GETTING WHAT YOU'VE PAID FOR SORRY IT TOOK SO LONG...

NOW EVERYTHING WILL BE O.K.

THE HANGAR Pub and Grill

GRAND OPENING WEEK
55 UNIVERSITY DRIVE

•23OZ. COORS LIGHT $2 EVERYDAY
•15 FLAVORS OF WINGS AND BONELESS WINGS
•ALL YOU CAN EAT WINGS MON. TUES. WED. FIVE BUCKS

• GRAND OPENING SPECIAL - GUINNESS PINTS $1.50

KARA STORES/ COLLEGIAN

Art imitating life

A mural behind the main street of Amherst is admired by the real thing.

■ smoking

continued from page 1

billion.

Finally, in September, the Justice Department filed a lawsuit seeking compensation for the medical costs to the government of treating smokers, and accusing tobacco companies of conspiring to defraud the public about the health risks of cigarettes.

"There is no question that the world in which the tobacco companies operate is changing," said former FDA Commissioner David Kessler, who had signed the proposed rules to regulate nicotine and has closely followed the case. "No longer can they claim that tobacco is not an addictive substance. It is children who are becoming addicted, and the industry's major defense that smoking is a matter of adult choice is no longer credible."

But lawyer Bert Rein, representing Brown and Williamson Tobacco Corp., counters that the case before the high court is not about the health consequences of nicotine but about what kinds of regulations the FDA is authorized to set down. "We don't think this is a public health case," he said. "This is an effort by the FDA to grab power that the Congress never gave it."

Forty states are siding with the agency, saying that despite the multibillion-dollar settlement struck with tobacco companies last year, a comprehensive national plan to prevent teen addiction is needed. Their "friend of the court" brief notes that smoking among young people is on the rise and refers to "the decades-long conspiracy by the tobacco industry to conceal the deadly and addictive nature of its products."

"There is no shortage of attempts to attack and vilify the industry," said Scott Williams, a spokesman for five major cigarette companies, adding that the real issue is whether the agency, rather than Congress, has the power to take the initiative against tobacco.

For decades, the FDA resisted pressure from public health groups to regulate tobacco, saying it lacked the authority. But in 1996, the agency changed course, declaring the nicotine in cigarettes a drug that it could oversee based on the 1938 Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act. The law gave the FDA jurisdiction over drugs and devices "intended to affect the structure or any function of the body."

The FDA concluded that the way nicotine affects the body (for example, as a sedative, stimulant, or appetite suppressant) was clearly "intended" by the cigarette makers. The agency said it reached that conclusion partly as a result of newly disclosed industry documents that it saw as showing that cigarette makers engineered their products to enhance the delivery of nicotine.

Acknowledging that it was difficult to take on adult addiction, and faced with evidence that smokers get hooked in childhood, the FDA aimed its initial regulations at teen smoking. It would have required retailers to check the IDs of cigarette and smokeless-tobacco buyers under age 27 and would have prohibited cigarette vending machines except in bars and other adult-only places.

■ Arafat

continued from page 1

their people to be terrorized, humiliated and exploited. The 13 members of the group who were not detained face possible reprisals as well.

Most of the members of the group, some of whom belong to Arafat's Fatah organization, are known for their opposition to the peace deals signed by Arafat and Israel, which they argue give too many concessions to the Israelis.

Arafat has little tolerance for criticism and frequently cracks down on dissidents, according to human rights activists. Corruption in his regime is rampant and is a frequent target of a small number of critics struggling to hold their government accountable.

Ahmed Abdel Rahman, a senior aide to Arafat, defended the arrests, saying the criticism was unacceptable and the signatories to the petition had "strayed from the national path."

In their petition, the group said a cabal of Arafat's supporters is profiting from the peace process while most Palestinians languish in poverty, bereft of social, health, and educational institutions.

"Alarm bells should ring in every village, city and refugee camp, and everywhere there is a store, a house, an office," the petition said.

■ reaction

continued from page 1

focused on other areas like Amherst College where it's the same situation," Swanton said. "Whenever you put a huge group of students together, a lot can happen and it's not always the fault of the students."

Amherst College reported two alleged attacks on females around the same time as the first two reported attacks at UMass. Senior biology/premed major Cecilia Deandrade said rape and assault is an issue that occurs everywhere and is not always reported on.

"The media is to blame for the misinformation, but while there is always a reason to be afraid, it will not prevent me from living a normal life," Deandrade said.

KARA STORES / COLLEGIAN

Ice cream and snowflakes

Bart's is one of many local establishments that have already prepared for the winter holidays by hanging garland and lights.

Our internships aren't easy to get into.

Then again, neither is college.

Congratulations. All the cramming, isomnia and junk food breakfasts have paid off, you're in college now - and soon, you'll be facing questions about your life like what to do with the rest of it. One thing is for sure, if you're a student of color, with an INROADS internship you can have a serious job every summer while you're still in school - making contacts and gaining experience in your chosen field of study. Hey, it won't be easy, but then again if you wanted it easy you wouldn't be reading this right now.

web site_www.inroadsinc.org

Join us cn November 15 for an informational dinner at the New African House starting at 6:30p.m. Inroads will also hold on-campus interviews on Tuesday, November 16 from9a.m. - 2p.m. at the Campus Center Building, Room 811.

INROADS

MEN, WOMEN, SEX, VIOLENCE

The recent campus assaults by men against women are just the visible edge of a massive problem. Boys' and men's violence against girls and women (murder, battering, dating violence, sexual assault) is an epidemic in our society

THESE ARE NOT JUST "WOMEN'S ISSUES."

These are issues that we all (as individuals, as men and women, as a community) have to confront. Men (the vast majority of whom are non-violent) have a special responsibility and obligation to deal with the violence directed by men against women.

But how do we help? What steps can we take?

"Preventing Sexual Violence: What MEN Can Do"
With Jackson Katz
4pm
Wednesday December 1
Campus Center Auditorium

Jackson Katz is a former all-star high-school football player and an alumnus of UMass. He is the founder of MVP Strategies, an organization that offers gender violence prevention training to many groups (colleges, high schools, professional and college sports teams, community groups, corporations and the U.S. military - including the first world-wide program in the history of the Marine Corps). He has lectured at hundreds of schools and colleges across the nation.

We, the undersigned, urge everyone - men and women - to come and hear Jackson Katz discuss these issues.

DAVID SCOTT, Chancellor
JAVIER CEVALLOS, Interim Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs
JAMES 'BRUISER' FLINT, Head Basketball Coach
MARK WHIPPLE, Head Football Coach
ROBERT MARCUM, Director of Athletics
SETH AVAKIAN, Student Trustee
JEFFREY HOWE, President, SGA
GRANT INGLE, Director, Office of Human Relations
JACK LUIPPOLD, UMass Police Chief
JON KAPELL, Interim Director, Greek Affairs
JOSEPH LARSON, Secretary, Faculty Senate
GLEN GORDON, Dean, Social & Behavioral Sciences
JOSEPH BATTISTA, Director, Residential Academic Programs
JOHN BRACEY, Professor, African-American Studies
SUT JHALLY, Professor, Communication
MARTIN ESPADA, Professor, English
ANDY ANDERSON, Professor, Sociology
DAN CLAWSON, Professor, Sociology
PETER ELBOW, Director, Writing Program
JAMES SHAW, President, Graduate Employees Organization

The usual suspects

For those of you who haven't heard, upwards a number of automobiles in the Southwest parking lots were seriously vandalized during the night of Wednesday, November 10th. Or at least that's what two UMass police officers told me when they came to my room, claiming that I was a suspect. It was all news to me, but I was interrogated as part of their so-called investigation.

It was about 5:30 p.m. when I woke up on the afternoon of Thursday, November 11th to start my day. I ordered a bleu zone and hopped into the shower. I returned from the shower with a thirst that my empty refrigerator couldn't fulfill, so I went two doors down to Tom and Andy's room to make some lemonade. I brought their Brita water filter to the sink on our floor, and I heard someone say that there were cops on the floor. I didn't care much because I hadn't done anything wrong. I was about to fill the pitcher with water when I noticed the two officers knocking on my door. I heard them ask for me, so I put a halt to the lemonade in order to see what was going on. My roommate was in our room at the time, as shocked as I was, and we showed the officers our IDs as requested.

"May I ask what this is regarding?" I asked one officer, who just looked at me as though I knew for sure why they were here. After one officer asked me a few irrelevant questions, they proceeded to read us our rights. My roommate and I just stared at each other. At one point I wanted to laugh because the first officer couldn't read his rights card, so he had to pass it to his partner. Real professional! If it took any longer, I would have grabbed the card and read it myself.

After that, they asked to speak to me privately. They closed the door almost completely and tried to intimidate me by revealing the amount of damage involved and saying that they were giving me a chance to tell them all I knew. I told them all I knew, which was nothing, but they insisted that they needed to know everything that I did Wednesday night. I knew they were going nowhere from the start, but I told them everything I did anyway.

When the officers interrogating me couldn't think of any more case-cracking questions to ask me, they noticed a pair of my shoes on the floor. They decided to pick up the shoes and look at them. This was a sight to see. One officer actually had one shoe right in front of his face and was shining his flashlight on it. He said he was looking for glass particles. All I could do was smirk. I guess there were footprints on the car as well because they studied the tread of my New Balances. After reassuring them once again that I lacked knowledge of any vandalism, they said that they were going to take my shoes with them as evidence. Evidence of what? I take an intro to law class, so I know my rights on seizure of property, but if two cops want to waste their time studying the tread of my shoes then I'm going to let them.

They also said I should go to the station for fingerprints. I told them I'd drop by in the next few days, but they insisted that I go right then. I was escorted out of JQA with sandals on my feet, and one officer carrying two pairs of my shoes. To tell you the truth, I was more concerned that I was going to miss my calzone than anything else at this point.

When I got into the booking room where everything is videotaped and audiotaped, the officer read me my rights again. Once again, I just stared at him. He fingerprinted me, and I think he put my right fingers on the left finger chart, but I didn't want to say anything, because no matter what, cops always assume that they're right. Then the officer started up with the mind-numbing questions again – the same ones that he asked me in my dorm room. Since I was on camera, I figured I might as well collect some evidence myself. So I asked the cop if I was a suspect because of an automobile incident that happened last year. When I asked him the same question in my room earlier, he claimed that a female witness saw me in the parking lot and gave my name as a suspect. Again, he assured me that my previous involvement had no part in this investigation. I knew it was a lie because I was nowhere near the Southwest lots that entire night.

Finally they let me go home shoeless and called my friend Jeff to the station for some questions. He was also clueless as to why he was being questioned. When I talked to him later in the evening, I was shocked because the officer at the police station lied to Jeff by saying that I had already told them that I was in the lot Wednesday night. Jeff kept saying "whatever" since he had no knowledge of anything either. The officer also told him that I was trying to use him as my scapegoat. Intimidating and lying to people who know nothing, and making them go down to the station in the cold to answer questions – who does this to innocent people? Apparently the UMass police do.

Perhaps the worst news of all came when I returned to JQA hours later. My roommate, Alex, sold my calzone to Tom, and there was still no lemonade made. Unbelievable. At that point I was already starting to feel the effects of trekking around in sandals and I had no food to eat, no lemonade to drink. Rest assured, the first thing I did was order another bleu zone.

A day passed and my feet really started to hurt. I became the center of many shoe jokes, and I couldn't help but laugh at the ridiculous situation. When I called the police station on Saturday afternoon to get my shoes, I discovered some more interesting information. The two officers that interrogated me weren't on duty at the time so I talked to another officer. When she pulled up the pending investigation, she told me that they ran a check on past automobile vandalism cases and my name came up as a suspect. Hmm... It sounds like the officers lied again. Remember they previously assured me that it had nothing to do with the past.

When I asked for my shoes, the officer said that all evidence might not be released until court cases are resolved. I told her that there wouldn't be any court cases involving me because I didn't do anything. She said that was my opinion, and I corrected her by saying that it was fact. She then asked if I had a pen and paper to write down some information. I asked her to hold while I got some, and she replied by saying, "Of course you're not ready, you're a student." Who says that? I asked her if I was a bad person for not having stationary near me and there was nothing she could say. Grow up. I would never insult anyone for not having a pen, and I expect the same treatment in return.

Here I am shoeless and totally cooperative when I didn't have to be, and how does the UMass police system repay me? They lie to my friend and me, try to intimidate us, read me my rights twice for no reason, and keep me from eating my calzone on time. Oh yeah, they took my shoes too. This whole thing was asinine. How am I going to trust the justice system on campus now?

I eventually got a message from one of the officers simply saying that I can pick up my shoes. Whoo hoo, they're letting me go. All I want is an apology for the inconvenience. The UMass Police Department is probably too proud to give me one, though. I don't even know if I want to step foot in the police station. Maybe I'll have one of my friends get them for me. Either way the damage is done. How can I be sure that something like this won't happen again? The police can apparently claim that I'm a suspect whenever they want. All they have to do is tell me that "someone" gave my name as a suspect.

I do know two things, though. My feet are sore and my trust is lost. From now on, I suggest that you all keep some thing in the back of your minds: "Whatever you do, take care of your shoes."

Mike Antolini is a UMass student.

Patience is a virtue

A horrible time is upon us, Amherst. The school, traditionally a most warm and inviting place, has been gripped by the coldest of hands. Over the past three weeks, four cases of assault and/or rape have been reported here at the University. Our very safety has come into question. Both men and women are afraid to venture across campus, fearful of those who lurk in the shadows and hide in the bushes. The most wretched detail of the misdeeds is that no one, not the chancellor, not the chief of police, has the slightest of clues as to the attacker's identity.

William F. Larkin

In response to this blanketing anxiety, the school has initiated several deterrents, hoping to prevent any more violent attacks from occurring. According to the new web site designed by the university, campus authorities have increased foot, bike, and mounted patrols, especially in the areas around the Campus Pond and Student Union Building. The Escort Service is now operating 24 hours a day with additional vans. An additional HELP phone has been installed by the campus pond. The chancellor has even purchased personal "shriek" alarms which will be made available free of charge. According to Chancellor Scott, "We have to be vigilant and we have to work harder to make this campus safe." Yes, Chancellor, this is an excellent idea. It sounds very noble and patriotic. You have done an excellent job of calming the concerned amongst us. Unfortunately, your words do nothing more than state the obvious. They are representative of the panic that is spreading across our school. And it is this panic that suffocates us.

On Thursday, Nov. 18, the Faculty Senate passed a motion to allow frightened students to miss classes from Nov. 15 to Nov. 30. This is senselessness. We should not live in fear, hiding from that which threatens us. If the assailant is not apprehended, will exams be cancelled? Will there ever be another class again?

We cannot retreat from this terrifying menace. The University is doing a commendable job of responding to the assault. But no matter what is done, no matter what preventative measures are installed, the school will never be completely safe. A tragedy such as this could occur at any time, at any place.

Hibernation is not the answer. Chances are, the attacker or attackers may not be caught. Should we sleep forever? Maybe we should all just go home. After all, we'd be safe there, right? No one is safe from rape. As much as it pains us all to admit, there is no haven, no retreat where social and criminal ills such as rape and assault do not exist. From Boston to Worcester, Amherst to Cambridge, there are those heathens who lack the morality to restrain themselves, to shy away from violence. We are the inferior faction in this microcosm. The criminals are free to run about and wreak havoc, and all we can do is run away. Our only defense is the support of our friends and families. Unfortunately, the passion of our loved ones is abstract; but we all know too well that the danger of the assailants is concrete. Campus rallies cannot block gunshots; they cannot shield knife thrusts. Lisa Saunders, an economics professor here at the university, said, "I can't stress how important it is that you show that you are concerned." The students do need to be concerned. Rape and assault are two of the more wretched vices that contaminate our existence. However, the efforts of our student body are highly misdirected. As the Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs said, "This is not a student issue; this is not a women's issue, this is a campus issue."

We cannot allow this 'issue' to confuse the focus of our efforts. There are signs and graffiti all across campus that question the efforts of the school and criticize gender roles of men and women in today's society. Last week, Northeast residential area was littered with propaganda taunting the criminals. This is not the answer. We do not need to goad the assailants into further action. Concerns over the objectification of women in today's society have no place in this crusade. The university is doing the best it can to end this horror. Through adherence to the safety warnings and tips, we will be safe. Eventually the heathens will tire of their restrained miscreancy, and things can return to normal.

We must resume our natural state of order. Panic and fear will do nothing to pervade this looming threat. I, for one, will not miss class on account of the amorality of a few. Join with me students. We will walk to class together, we will face the dangers as one. Please don't secede to the madness of the scourges who have momentarily contaminated our university.

Let's take the school back, Amherst. Do not let the monsters win.

William F. Larkin is a Collegian columnist.

Is China evil, or just ripe for American movies?

Since last week witnessed a breakthrough in negotiations between the United States and China on trade, there has been something of a debate regarding our stance toward the very large nation across the Pacific. A lot of people have been screaming about doom and compromising American values, but I think I will throw my lot with the folks preaching cooperation and conciliation with China. Allow me to elaborate.

Firstly, many Republicans and some Democrats say that we should not deal with China because they practice bad human rights violations. Now, the typical response to this is a smokescreen of relativism saying that the U.S. does bad stuff, too, and we're hypocritical for pointing fingers and so on. I don't like either of these positions.

I say we should deal with China and let them into the World Trade Organization because it will help America out. We will be able to keep them from cheating and using protectionism, and we will be able to sell our sparkly consumer items to the thousands of millions of people waiting to buy them.

I don't care if they treat their people badly in this case because it is a lost cause to try and stop it right now. China is a powerful nation, not one that will roll over, even if we show our fangs. Besides, isolating China economically will just hurt both of us without solving anything. How do you think we would react if France threatened to cut ties with us if we didn't abolish the death penalty, or something similarly domestic? We would tell them to piss off!

Paul Kitchin

If you are worried that China will become powerful and challenge the U.S., then we should pursue trade with them even more aggressively. Let China get entangled in the great web of American trade. Let them buy jeans and hamburgers and Backstreet Boys' albums; slowly force them to identify with America, and maybe we can all get along. And speaking of American culture...

And new movie news: Sleepy Hollow is big piece of eye candy – YUMMY! Bond is...well it's Bond. It's a genre really. The World is Not Enough fits the form well, but it has downsides. Firstly, the 'holiday' joke was awful – I can never celebrate that most joyful holiday the same way again. Also, were the silly Bond jokes more juvenile than usual, or am I just getting older? One friend of mine pointed out correctly that Bond is moving away from the traditional mad-genius/evil-scientist-as-villain, which is a shame. The last decade has watched Bond defeat drug lords, terrorists, and a media mogul.

Where is Doctor Evil?! What about the insidious plot to carve his initials on the moon? What about the genius plot to flood the whole world and hole up in the Himalayas? Where have all the evil merrymakers gone? Doesn't a volcano need tampering with? Why must everything now revolve around former Soviet nuclear warheads? Who stole the world's supply of tan M&Ms?

Istanbul can burn in a lake of fire. I just want my initials carved on the moon.

Paul Kitchin is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor–in–Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanne Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Karn Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Ion Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Forrencue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Beck gets post-Odelay groove
Vultures, tighter and zanier

COURTESY CHARLIE GROSS

Out late and partying hard. Beck takes an eclectic ride with his number one album, Midnight Ventures.

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

Beck
Midnight Vultures
Geffen

The short-sighted music critics, who labeled Beck as a one-hit wonder after radio stations devoured the folk hip-hop tones of "Loser" off of his 1994 album Mellow Gold, found themselves eating their words when he released Odelay in 1996. The album spawned several successful singles, and earned enormous praise for its completely unique style and the seamless blending of genres Beck had achieved. Beck's mellow and completely under-appreciated 1998 album Mutations (which his record label was quick to declare as a side-project and not the official follow-up to Odelay) demonstrated Beck's love of folk and country. Despite critical acclaim, however, Mutations failed to interest the general public – it seemed people were still digging the slick grooves of "Where It's At" and were holding out for Beck's official post-Odelay effort. With the release of Midnight Vultures, Beck returns to the world of free-form hip-hop, although attaching any label to Beck's music is always risky.

If Odelay demonstrated Beck's interest in mixing styles and playing with bizarre musical textures, Midnight Vultures demonstrates how those textures have come to mastering that idea. The songs are much tighter than those from Odelay; there is less overt sampling, less gratuitous noise, and a closer attention to stylistic cohesion within a song. Having said that, however, this is still Beck, and none of the zaniness has been lost. Refined and channeled, perhaps, but not lost.

Midnight Vultures opens with the highly danceable first single, "Sexx Laws," driven by a combination of Stax-Volt horns, piano, and (as a delightful example of Beck's ear for creative musical arrangement) a banjo. The track is pure fun, beginning to end, and sets the tone for the rest of the album. Following that is the second song, "Nicotine & Gravy," an irresistibly obtuse groove with a

Turn to BECK, page 6

Toy Story: they're back
Pixar sequel proves undeniable

Toy Story 2
Directed By Colin Brady
with Tom Hanks, Tim Allen
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

This second installment of the immensely popular animated series was originally scheduled for a direct to video release. However, when Disney and Pixar realized that they didn't have an enormous blockbuster scheduled for this Thanksgiving, they rescheduled and upgraded the project to a full-scale theatrical production. Right about now, they're looking pretty good.

First, a brief recap. After storming the box office four years ago as the first completely computer-animated movie ever, Toy Story went on to capture an Academy Award for technical achievement, in addition to spawning a slew of merchandise. After seeing Toy Story 2, not much has changed. The technology has improved, which is quite evident in the movie, and the franchise remains equally appealing to children and adults alike.

Tom Hanks and Tim Allen resume their roles as Woody and Buzz Lightyear, respectively. This time around though, the two have reconciled their rival differences. Also returning are Bo Peep (Annie Potts), Slinky the dog (Jim Varney), Mr. Potato Head (Don Rickles), this time married thanks to (Estelle Harris of Seinfeld fame), Hamm the piggy bank, Rex, and the lovable green soldiers.

The story starts when Woody, inadvertently placed at a yard sale, is kidnapped by a giant toy retailer for the express purpose of completing his "Round Up Gang" set. Of course, Buzz and the gang set out to rescue their endangered friend. Pressure from two new characters, The Old Prospector and Jessie the Cowgirl, force Woody to choose between an aging Andy and immortality in some Japanese toy museum.

The second Toy Story proved about as entertaining as the first, even if I am four years older now than when I saw the original. As in the first one, the writing was efficiently savvy. The dramatic narrative was enough to keep the kiddies interested, while the pop cultural references and humor appealed to the adult audience. The latter ranges from parodies of Jurassic Park and The Empire Strikes Back to keen observations about kid culture. The proliferation of video games based on children's toys, the magazines necessary to beat those games, the exploitation of kid's toys for profit, and the constant to "upgrade" all fell within Toy Story 2's reach.

Still, watching a movie with little plot development and an inevitable conclusion is not that appealing once you reach adolescence. And, I miss the banter between Woody and Buzz. This newfound friendship may be family friendly and good for marketing, but it eliminates some of the best comic material that the original Toy Story had to offer.

It's also pretty obvious that the movie was originally made for a direct-to-video release. About an hour and twenty minutes of material was stretched into an hour and fifty minutes of screen time, ideal for a theatrical release. Among the particularly poorly conceived scenes was Jessie's flashback montage to her former home and former owner. The prolonged scene, complete with light flashing through trees while a car drives past in slow motion, was obviously out of place in a what should have been a lighthearted affair.

Still, the people at Pixar impressed enough to prevent even constructive criticism. With Toy Story 2, we get people that actually look like real people, rather than video game simulations. Plus, I'm sure Pixar included a bunch of unnecessary scenes just to show off their technical talent. Among these were one with the neighborhood paperboy, a bunch with the family dog, one involving the various gadgets of a toy restorer (arguably the most enjoyable sequence of the film), and even some daring airplane stunts.

People did and will continue to eat up Toy Story 2 mostly because it's more of the same. It's a good, clean, and often entertaining family film backed by impressive visuals. It's not as good as A Bug's Life, but it's light years better than any movie based on a fury yellow creature that also stars in a syndicated T.V. show. Basically, it's cute if you like that sort of thing. B-

Buzz Lightyear watches pensively as Woody discovers his previously unknown fame as a member of the "Roundup Gang."

IN SHAPE NUTRITION
Nutrition Supplement Discounter
Great Products, Great Prices, Great Service!
END OF THE MILLENNIUM BLOWOUT SALE!
November 29th-December 31st
65 University Drive, Amherst 549-7434
Get coupons online @ www.inshapeonline.com

Write for Collegian Arts.

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Lots-A-Weigh Potato Skins 7.99 4.00
Black Bean Dip w/chips 5.99 3.00
Nachos 6.99 3.50
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
UCMP WELCOME HERE
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Jon Bon Jovi reads Arts... You should too.

Work During Break
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS
Springfield: 413-731-6910
Worcester: 508-366-8847
Boston: 617-484-1788
North of Boston: 978-777-2253
South of Boston: 508-821-5591
Plymouth: 508-833-1145
Route 3 South: 781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast: 603-926-9813
Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9
Equal Opportunity Employer

安琥中国饭店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 = 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

SPRING BREAK 2000!
CANCUN BAHAMAS
JAMAICA FLORIDA
EAT, DRINK & TRAVEL FREE*
CALL FOR DETAILS & A FREE BROCHURE
ONLY USA SPRING BREAK GIVES YOU:
• FREE BEACH PARTIES
• EXPRESS BAR ADMISSION
• DISCOUNTS AT RESTAURANTS
• FREE/DISCOUNTED CLUB ENTRY!
1-888-777-4642
www.usaspringbreak.com

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Toys rule; Arnold left helpless

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Two movies entered this past weekend, vying for the Thanksgiving box office crown. When the dust settled and the receipts totaled, one emerged the clear winner. Tous rule... again!

Toy Story 2 trampled two action pictures (End of Days and The World is Not Enough) to claim not only the Thanksgiving Day box office banner, but in fact the entire weekend's top spot.

After tallying $25.4 million combined on Wednesday and Thursday, Pixar's latest animated offering set the box office record not only for the best Friday this year, but also for the highest grossing Friday ever. Toy Story 2 did $29.1 million on Friday alone, thereby eclipsing the previous record set by The Lost World ($22 million).

It went on to gross an astounding $57.7 million for the weekend frame and $81.1 overall. (The Phantom Menace only did $486 million). Also, the movie put its 3256 screens among the many records (most screens ever) Buzz and Woody toppled. Do the math and that equals a $17,851 per-screen average (better than Pokémon). More comparison reveals that the original Toy Story opened at $29.1 million for the weekend and $39.1 million for the same five-day period four years ago. That's almost double. Yet the weekend and more than twice as much for the five days. What about I Bugs Life? Well, Toy Story 2 improved by nearly 25 percent on its 36.11 weekend, just last Thanksgiving.

Bond, installs a Thanksgiving endeavor anyway, showed decent holiday legs, falling only 32 percent from last week's total. The World is Not Enough grossed $24.3 million, which earned it second place over newcomer and alternate action pic, End of Days. Bond has grossed $76.3 million to date.

Arnold Schwarzenegger truly proved it was the End of Days this weekend. That is, the days that he will be acting. The mucho man with the bad accent pulled his latest film, about an epic battle with Satan, to only $19.8 million over the weekend, and $31.1 million for the Thanksgiving frame. The film opened on 2592 screens, which was only good enough for a $7639 per screen average (not even as good as Dogma's opening week end).

Last week's other $50 million dollar opener, Sleepy Hollow, did not fare as well as Bond. Tim Burton's latest made $18.8 million over the three day weekend, which translates into a 37 percent drop for the horror flick. Normally, this is fairly impressive, but the holiday times are definitely more demanding.

And if anyone doubted that Pokemon was an absolute fluke, this Thanksgiving eliminated any such thoughts. The critically-panned but media-lauded film managed only $7.1 million for this weekend. That's another huge (especially for a family movie period) 43 percent tumble. Also consider that in its first five days, Pokemon made $51 million and it will likely not make $40 million more for the next three weeks.

The Bone Collector actually finished its month-long run this weekend, just in time for a Thanksgiving boost. Its $5.2 million weekend brought its total to $53.6 million overall, a pretty good 3.21 multiplier. As a general rule, Thanksgiving hurts openers, but helps returning films.

Spots six and seven saw familiar faces. Kevin Smith's Dogma made $3.5 million for the weekend. Here's a great example of the holiday factor, as Kevin Smith's latest fell a meager 12 percent from last weekend. It's grossed $21.5 million to date. Anywhere but Here followed suit, falling only six percent from its previous week and collecting $5 million for the Thanksgiving weekend.

The Insider also finished its month-long run at the box office with $2.5 million, bringing its total to $22.1 million overall. It opened at $6.7 million, which means a very impressive 3.3 multiplier. Credit Oscar buzz and Thanksgiving here. Are you beginning to notice a pattern?

Surprisingly, USA Films, distributor of the tenth film on this week's list, did not opt for wider expansion this week. Being John Malkovich continues to linger in the top ten with a $2.2 million weekend. Although the per-screen average ($3755) is not that impressive for a limited release film, Malkovich has grossed $12.1 million to date. USA is just hoping it can hang around long enough for end-of-the-year awards.

Outside the top ten, the weekend's final opener made its debut. Robert DeNiro stars in the comedy Flawless, about sexual stereotypes and human redemption. The film, which opened on only 478 screens, made $1.6 million for the weekend, an unimpressive $3347 per-screen average.

COURTESY DISNEY

Rex, Slinky the Dog, Hamm, and Mr. Potato Head are all aghast at Toy Story 2's amazing box office performance this Thanksgiving.

Alanis mellows; good results on Unplugged

By J.D. Considine
Baltimore Sun

When Alanis Morissette first leapt into the limelight back in 1995, the word most often associated with her work was "angry."

Thanks largely to the emotional resonance teen-age girls found in the vengeful intensity of "You Oughta Know," Morissette's breakthrough single, the singer was hailed as a new kind of feminist hero, an angry young woman who stood as the distaff equivalent to alt-rock's tortured young men. Never mind that many of the songs on Jagged Little Pill, her debut album, didn't quite fit this pigeonhole; as far as the pundits were concerned, Morissette's aesthetic could be boiled down to "you live, you learn, you rage, you burn."

Morissette, however, would not be so easily categorized. Supposed Former Infatuation Junkie, released just over a year ago, supplanted her first album's fury with spirituality and self-reflection. Now, MTV Unplugged goes a step further and recasts the wrath of those early songs as wisdom and transcendence.

Not for nothing does the album open with the low-key jauntiness of "You Learn." As her hand eases into an almost jazzy shuffle, Morissette advises, "I recommend getting your heart trampled on/To anyone."

Where once the lyric seemed infused with the bitterness of hard-won experience, Morissette now presents the song as a saga of goodness and growth. It's almost as if she believes that the only way we can become better is by occasionally doing stupid things, and that she who dares most, gains most.

Or, to quote the second verse: "I recommend biting off more than you can chew/To anyone." MTV Unplugged itself doesn't find Morissette biting off much in the way of new material. Although three of the album's dozen titles are making their first appearance on CD, none are exactly new. The moody, discursive "No Pressure Over Cappuccino" made its first appearance in Morissette's repertoire during the lagged Little Pill tour, while "Princes Familiar" and "These R the Thoughts" were written for (though not included on) Supposed Former Infatuation Junkie.

Then again, this album seems less about breaking new ground than shattering old stereotypes. After a year on the road, touring behind the Infatuation Junkie album, Morissette has settled into a comfortable, confident groove, offering a stage presence as powerful as on her first tour, yet operating on an entirely different wavelength.

Nowhere is this more evident than on the hits. "Ironic," reset in an easy, mostly acoustic arrangement that emphasizes not the momentum of the melody but the space between notes, has become a cosmic joke that has even Morissette chuckling to herself, while "Head Over Feet" undercuts its own self-importance with a delightfully incompetent harmonica solo. Even the most serious songs have been given a new take. Although "You Oughta Know" is still shot-through with rage and revenge, Morissette doesn't burn so much as smolder, switching the focus from the protagonist's feelings to the misdeeds of her former lover. By scaling the arrangement down and pulling the energy back, Morissette lets us hear the song, not the fury, and that makes a world of difference.

Of course, it doesn't hurt that she prefaces "You Oughta Know" with a cover of the old Police song, "King of Pain." Perhaps because she herself has been portrayed as a Queen of Pain, Morissette sees through to the self-mockery at the song's core and presents it with wry humor that respects the melody while asking us to think about the lyrics.

It's entirely typical of what Morissette does on her MTV Unplugged, and one more reason for us to reconsider our sense of the singer

COURTESY MAVERICK

A pensive Alanis Morissette redefines herself with her MTV unplugged album.

■ beck

continued from page 5

classic. Beck chorus: "I think we're going crazy/Things don't even faze me/The left eye is lazy/Nicotine and grace/Miracles amaze me/She looks so Israeli."

Beck's most noticeable improvement over earlier records is in the vocal department. His rapping is more direct, solid, and considerate of tone. His singing has improved immensely, both in the cleanness and range of his voice, and in the addition of a remarkably successful falsetto.

The middle of the album may seem to drag in places, but like any Beck album, Midnight Vultures takes several listens before the unique appeal of his music presents itself entirely. In addition to the first two songs, highlights include "Beautiful Way," a country-ish song that sounds as if it belongs on Mutations, and the last song, "Debra." The latter is perhaps the most surprising track on the album; it's a wonderful mock-up of a slow jam love song, complete with a spoken verse, a la Barry White: "Girl, I only want to be down with you, 'cause you got something I just got to get with." The rest of the song is sung in a hilarious falsetto, and the chorus is pure goofiness: "I want to get with you, and your sister, I think her name is Debra." Despite the lyrical silliness, though, "Debra" is an entirely enjoyable song with a well-thought-out instrumental arrangement and the sort of cross-genre catchiness only Beck can do.

For fans, Midnight Vultures is a must-have, and a welcome addition to Beck's already considerable body of work (anybody out there own One Foot in the Grave?). For the uninitiated, the album is an excellent place to begin appreciating Beck's talent for producing completely original music that defies categorization, and manages to work its way into your head until it's all you want to hear. B+

No locks in Hall of Fame voting

By Jack O'Connell
Hartford Courant

NEW YORK – Ballots for the 2000 Hall of Fame election will be mailed this week to more than 500 tenyear members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America. Voters have the month of December to make their choices, with the results to be announced Jan. 12.

The ballot has 30 players, and is decidedly less glamorous than last year, when Nolan Ryan, George Brett, and Robin Yount gained entry, the most first-year candidates to do so in the same year since the first election in 1936, when five players were elected.

There are 14 new names on the ballot, joining 16 holdovers.

None of the eligible players have the credentials of Ryan, Brett, or Yount, and about half probably won't receive the required five percent of the vote to remain on the ballot. Several, however, have intriguing resumes which could result in an eventual election.

Of the holdovers, those closest to the door are Carlton Fisk and Tony Perez. Both were on more than 60 percent of the record 497 ballots cast in the previous election. Players must be named on 75 percent to gain entry. Fisk's 330 votes (66.4 percent) were particularly impressive because it was his first year on the ballot and the field was strong. Perez received 302 votes (60.8 percent).

No candidate this year is in his 15th and final year on the ballot. The closest are pitchers Luis Tiant (15th year) and Jim Kaat (12th), both of whom are longhots because their support ranges from ten to 20 percent and their time is running low.

Other than the three electees, Fisk and Perez were the only players on the 1999 ballot named on more than half the ballots, which means it will take a huge jump for a holdover to move into solid contention. It is in an election such as this that advances can be made because obvious choices are few. Yet those same advances can get knocked back when the ballot is thick with glamorous names.

Perez, for example, received 19 fewer votes in the 1999 election than he did in 1998 when Don Sutton was elected. Also suffering significant drops were: Jim Rice, who went from 203 votes in '98 to 146 in '99; Gary Carter, 200 to 168; Steve Garvey, 195 to 150; Bruce Sutter, 147 to 121; Tommy John, 129 to 93; Kaat, 129 to 100; and Dave Parker, 116 to 80. And 42 more ballots were cast in '99 than '98.

Voters may vote for as many as ten players, which 101 voters (20.3 percent) did in '99. The trend in recent years has been to vote for more rather than less. A year ago, two-thirds of the ballots submitted contained more than five names.

Generally, players tend to fall into three categories: those with an above-average chance at election, those with a below-average chance, and those with no chance. That last category is the biggest. While it may seem harsh, be mindful the 75 percent standard was designed to be strict.

Sizing up this year's ballot:

Above-average chance: Fisk and Perez, with each having a strong chance to make it this year. Fisk's finish last year was astonishing, considering he received twice as many votes as Carter, his equal in many aspects. Perez's chances are boosted by the Veterans Committee naming Orlando Cepeda last spring. While many voters make a distinction between the players elected by the BBWAA and those chosen by the Veterans Committee, it is likely more voters will find Perez acceptable now that a player with similar career statistics has been enshrined.

Goose Gossage and Jeff Reardon are attractive first-year candidates, and it will be interesting to see how they do, compared to their fellow closer Sutter, who has struggled to get 25 percent. Sutter's detractors point to his losing record (68-71) and relatively short career (12 years), but totally ignore the fact he developed a pitch, the split-finger fastball, that revolutionized the game over the past 20 years.

Reardon also had a losing record (73-77), but so did Rollie Fingers, who was elected in 1992. Losing records are an occupational hazard for closers because they'll either save a game or lose it. Gossage's extraordinarily long career – 22 seasons – and high profile as one of the most feared presences on the mound in his prime make him precisely the type of player for which the museum in Cooperstown, N.Y., was designed.

Jack Morris is the most attractive of the starters on the ballot for the first time. He was acclaimed as the pitcher of the 1980s with 162 of his 254 career victories in the decade. Morris was also a major factor on three World Series championship teams ('84 Tigers, '91 Twins, '92 Blue Jays), and was 4-2 with a 2.96 ERA in seven Series starts. His 1-0, 10-inning victory for the Twins over the Braves in Game seven of the '91 Series was one of the best postseason pitching performances in history. But Morris was a 20-game winner twice and never won the Cy Young Award, which carries a lot of weight with voters. While Morris' victory total is admirable, it's considerably short of 300. The 300-game winner may well be on his way out, but there have been too many in recent Hall elections (six in the past seven) to make Morris' career look special. He should make it some day, but if it took Sutton four years, it's reasonable to assume it will take Morris at least that long.

Carter, Rice, and Garvey should do better than in the past, but unless they make big strides this year their chances will continue to dissipate.

■ basketball

continued from page 10

high 36 minutes of action, Murphy netted 14 points, eight rebounds, and six assists, while Stepherson used her quickness to keep Minutewomen Coyner and Jaywana Bradley from driving inside and finding Butler and the UMass front line. According to Inglese, her team's defensive prowess effectively neutralized the Maroon and White's strengths over the course of the contest.

"UMass is a scrappy, physical team," Inglese said. "Obviously, they do a great job on the boards. We knew we had to focus on shutting off the inside, and forcing them to shoot from the outside."

The Minutewomen managed to chop BC's lead down to 11 in the game's waning moments, on a jumper from Coyner, and a pair of free throws from MacFarland. But the comeback bid fell short on the defensive end, where Eagles Kim Mackie and Jamie Cournoyer converted open looks to keep Boston College out front for good.

"We were playing extremely passive on defense," O'Brien said. "We were letting them do what they wanted to do, and we can't play like that."

Even in defeat, O'Brien and the rest of the UMass coaching staff could point to the team's relative youth, and its valiant effort against a nationally ranked program, as prophetic toward what the Minutewomen can become with more experience.

"We're a young team, and we're at that fine line right now," O'Brien said. "We've got some kids who have the ability to become great players. It's just a matter of practicing hard and working at it."

The team heads back to the hardwood tomorrow night at 7 p.m., when it hosts the University of New Hampshire.

A franchise in waiting?

By Don Markus
Baltimore Sun

HOUSTON – There is a lot here to remind Steve Francis of home. The suburban sprawl puts this Southwestern city right up there with Washington when it comes to horrendous rush-hour traffic. The record amassed so far by the Houston Rockets is right down there with the Washington Wizards, among the worst in the NBA. Wait until the humidity hits next summer.

By then, Francis will likely be back in Takoma Park, Md., back with his beloved grandmother and the rest of the family that helped convince him that any other NBA city was better to play in than Vancouver, British Columbia. By then, the Rockets might be Francis' team.

For now, they still belong to Hakeem Olajuwon and Charles Barkley, aging warriors playing out their Hall of Fame careers, still game but increasingly gimpy. For now, Francis is caught in the middle of this transition period for a team that won back-to-back NBA championships in 1994 and 1995. Olajuwon is the storied past; Francis is the promising future.

The present is downright depressing.

But in Francis' mind, the situation could be worse. He could be playing for the Vancouver Grizzlies.

"I know a lot of people are saying, 'This is what he deserved,'" Francis said recently. "But since this is going to be my job, I've got to fight for what I want. And things couldn't have turned out better."

It has been nearly five months since the former University of Maryland star was picked second behind Elton Brand in the NBA draft. Francis posted that night on national television when he heard NBA Commissioner David Stern announce Vancouver had drafted him. Francis then warned that the Chicago Bulls had made a mistake by not choosing him and snubbed the Canadian city considered one of the most beautiful and livable in North America.

"I'm a very emotional person," he said, recalling that night. "If I'm happy, I'll show it. If I'm angry, I'll show that, too, just like I do on the basketball court. I was upset because I left Chicago (the week before) thinking I wanted to go to the Bulls and they wanted to pick me. When they didn't, I was ticked. And when I reacted the way I did, people seemed to say, 'We're going to bash him for this.'"

While things have quieted down back home, where Francis was widely criticized for his draft night tantrum at MCI Center, Vancouver has not forgotten what happened. Nearly two months after being the centerpiece of an 11-player, three-team trade, Francis will finally play his first game against the Grizzlies on their home court, General Motors Place, tonight.

He comes in with impressive personal statistics – a team-leading 17.2 points and 6.5 assists a game – that seem to camouflage the bumpy adjustment he has had to make from shooting guard, the position he played with the Terrapins last season, to the point.

The NBA doesn't keep numbers on points allowed, but starting with Sam Cassell's 35-point outburst on opening night, Francis has been burned consistently by opposing point guards. He is also averaging more than four turnovers a game while shooting 43.6 percent from the field.

"Last year, people were asking me, 'Why don't you take the game over?' and this year they're saying I should be more like an Allen Iverson and take more shots," said Francis, who was told that recently on his weekly one-hour radio show. "But that is not how you earn the respect of your teammates or the fans."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Guard Jonathan DePina will be looked to for an added spark off the bench in tonight's battle. Last year, UMass suffered an 88-66 road loss at the hands of the Herd.

UMASS MEN'S HOOPS GEARS UP FOR SWEET REVENGE AGAINST MARSHALL

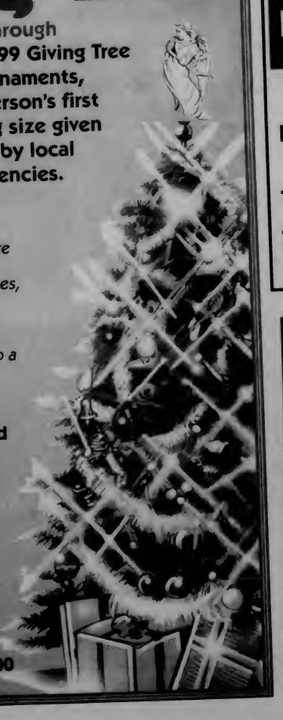
COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

UMass point man Shannon Crooks will have a big load to shoulder tonight, directing the offense while controlling Marshall's Travis Young.

As the Minutemen's leading scorer, two-guard Monty Mack will be the focus of practically everyone's attention when he takes to the court tonight.

The Newman Center invites you to Participate in our annual

Giving Tree



From November 28th through December 17th, our 1999 Giving Tree will be adorned with ornaments, each baring a young person's first name, age and clothing size given to the Newman Center by local churches and social agencies.

Undergraduate and graduate students, fraternities, sororities, sports teams, offices, departments and families are welcome to take an ornament and give a gift of clothing to a needy young person.

The Giving Tree is located in the Chapel of the Newman Center
472 North Pleasant St., Amherst

Please drop off gifts no later than Sunday, December 19, 1999

Call or stop by with any questions (413) 549-0300

BRUISED BODY?

Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.

DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

FREE DELIVERY
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
HOURS OF OPERATION:
Mon - Wed 11am - 1am,
Thurs & Sun 11am - 2am,
Fri & Sat 11am - 3am
586-7272
Now Accepting:
OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan
MasterCard VISA
3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99
1 LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $6.99
1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99

$ ATTENTION $
February 2000 Graduates

If you are a member of the February 2000 graduating class who received Federal Perkins Loans while enrolled at UMass you should have recently received certified letter about those loans.

We know this is a very busy time for you so we've mailed this information rather than having you attend a meeting.

However there are serious consequences if you fail to return these documents by 11/3099 as instructed in our letter.

If you haven't received our letter but think that you should have or if you have any questions about what you did receive.

$ Call 545-2377 $

ATTENTION: COLLEGE STUDENTS
Earn College Credits During Your Winter Break
Wintersession
Day and Evening Classes
One & Two Week Courses
Classes Guaranteed to Run
Art, Biology, Communications, Education, English, History, Management, Movement Science, Music, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Women's Studies, Credit-Free Computer Courses, Debt-free Living Seminar
Call (413) 572-5224 for registration information
Westfield State College
www1.wsc.mass.edu/dgce

DO YOU NEED YOUR WISDOM TEETH REMOVED?
If so, patients are being enrolled for a wisdom teeth research study. Your wisdom teeth can be extracted by a Board Certified Oral Surgeon. Financial compensation will be provided for your opinion on a research pain medication.
For more information call:
SCIREX Corporation at (860) 285-0569
Outside Windsor call toll free 1-800-285-0569
SCIREX

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
club
Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9
2 Miles East of Town Center
256-6446

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Ford Escort 95,000 miles 4 DR. Auto perfect condition, no rust. $1,700 253-1303

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Pentium III 500MHZ, ABIT BEG Motherboard, 128MBSRAM, ATI3DRAGEFURY. Graphics card 24xCD Burner, TOSHIBA6X DVD, 17" MAG Monitor, 56kModem, NEC Superscript870 Lazer Printer, $2100 or BO Jimmy 253-8074 3 weeks old.

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Bartenders Make $100-$300 per night No expierence Necessary. Call 1-800-981-816 ext:205

Need Expierence (and Money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus representative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No expierence, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

EMPLOYMENT

Cool Candy Company on bus route in Amherst seeks outgoing phone sales reps. You can work around your classes with our flexible schedule: choose one of two daily shifts (four hours each), minimum of three shifts per week. Shifts are 10am-2pm or 1pm to 5pm. Earn up to $10 an hour with base salary plus commission. Requires some sales experience, but personality is most important. Don't miss this great opportunity - call Beth right now to set up an interview! 1-888-556-5599

Native Speakers of Spanish wanted for phonetics experiment 1 hr: $8ph 545-6837

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

Are you a sport or fitness enthusiast? Earn two academic credits for teaching the GPE program. For more information call the GPE Office at 545-2338

EMPLOYMENT

EXCELLENT compensation for marketing college products at BEST prices. Go NOW to: http://www.adademos.com/campusrep

Human Services - Residential support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults. Permanent hours (full and part time) and relief. Hours include evenings, weekends, and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for Permanent). Locations in Belchertown and South Hadley. Call (413) 774-2281, ext. 11 (ask for Mary). AA/EOE

Campaign Jobs for the environment $300-$400/wk, F/T, P/T, + Career opportunities, Call Jesse 256-6434

Spring Break Staff Wanted for Cancun and Mazatlan 6 to 10 weeks in Mexico all expenses paid and salary. Respond to Email address Aanders@catavel.com

Summer Business Internships Available Not limited to business majors. Earn up to $15,000 this summer. Call 1-800-390-4848 Ext. 100 ASAP or visit www.univ-paint.com

EMPLOYMENT

Ware Youth Center Seeks a dynamic, creative person to direct youth activities. Flexible part time hours. Send resume by December 6, to K. Henderson, c/o Valley Human Services, 96 South Street, Ware, MA 01082 AA/EOE

December Grads: Entry-level position with great opportunity for advancement and responsibility available. Need high GPA and interest in high-tech industry, interviewing on campus Dec. 1st. send resumes to gel@scientific.com www.scientific.com/joinSPI

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards no experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

LOST & FOUND

FOUND Purple Jacket outside of LGRT. Call to identify. Call Paul 546-4427

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bdr in 4 Bedroom House Oil Heat. No pets. Non-smoker. 10 mins from Amherst in Belchertown $263/month, utilities extra. Call Chris 323-0899 Leave message

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Bdr in 4 Bedroom House Oil Heat. No pets. Non-smoker. 10 mins from Amherst in Belchertown $263/month, utilities extra. Call Chris 323-0899 Leave a message

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica, Florida, and South Padre. Call USA SPRING BREAK for a free brochure and rates and ask how you can EAT, DRINK, and TRAVEL for FREE! Call 1-888-777-4642 www.usaspring-break.com

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.spring-breakdirect.com

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Party with UMass Ski N' Board Club for the Millennium Quebec City/Hilton 5 nites/4days $299 Dec28-Jan2 Social opportunity age is 18 sign up now, space is selling out bus option available... call 545-3437

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Need to Advertise?
The Daily Collegian Classifieds
Read by THOUSANDS of students...
Call TODAY!!
545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, NOV. 29

Lecture – A lecture involving Indo-Tibetan Buddhist practice entitled "Personal Identity in a Cross-Cultural Perspective: Parfit and Yogacara" will be given at 4:30 p.m. in the Dewey common room at Smith College.

Play Reading – There will be a reading of the play "What I Believe In" in Earle Recital Hall, Sage Hall at Mount Holyoke College.

TUESDAY, NOV. 30

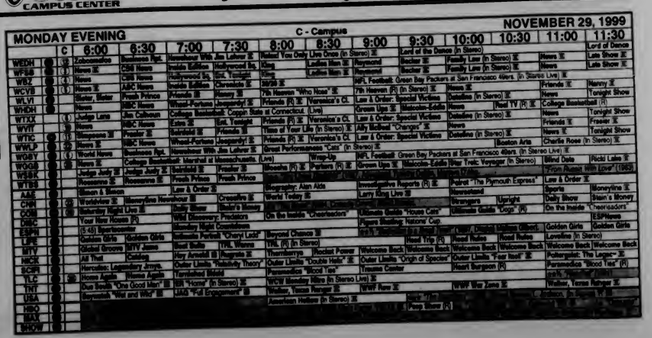
Concert – There will be a concert entitled "A Stairway to Paradise" at 12:30 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, at Smith College.

Lecture – A lecture entitled "Human Rights in Tibet, Part I" will be read as part of the three-part five college lecture series at 4 p.m. in Dewey Common Room at Smith College.

NOTICES

Art – An exhibit by artist O. Denenge Akpem entitled "Duyst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.



Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks
Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!
*See Store for Terms and Conditions
University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%
We give all of our profits to support University Programs

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

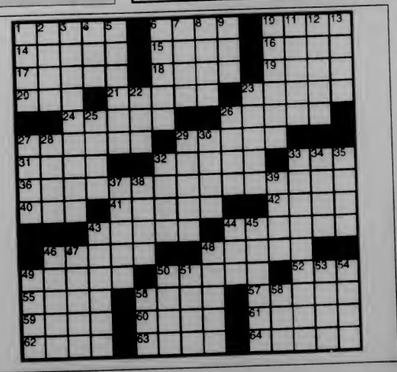
Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Correct decisions regarding your own financial affairs will prove difficult today, but they are certainly not impossible. Someone'll be there for you. These five words I swear to you.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Gather your forces today and you'll be ready before you know it to make that big push toward an important personal goal.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Something you've been planning on for some time may seem rather unpromising now that it is looming directly ahead of you.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – On the surface, this may not seem to be a highly romantic day. Underneath, however, your passions are beginning to demand special attention.
ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Unexpected developments abound today, but you are better equipped than most to stay on top of it at this time. Try not to get shot through the heart.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You mustn't be too aggressive, demanding, or possessive today. Give those in your charge the time to explore things on their own.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Concentrate on putting the pieces of a puzzle together before nightfall. Then lay 'em down on a bed of roses.
CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Insincerity will surely erode what's left of a faltering relationship. Today, you have one more chance to turn things around and make amends.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Issues concerning brothers and sisters, in-laws, parents, and other family ties predominate today. You won't be able to ignore domestic tension!
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Now is no time to throw caution to the wind. On the contrary, you'll want to travel a conservative path, avoiding those which can be slippery when wet.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You are likely to be quite stable today, despite the emotional atmosphere you find yourself in at work and at home. You're livin' on a prayer today, baby!
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You must be willing to live up to your duties and obligations today. Someone wants you, dead or alive!

Quote of the Day

"Whoa-oh, we're halfway there...
Whoa-oh! Livin' on a prayer!"
–Bon Jovi

Menu: Wanted Dead or Alive



ACROSS
1 Thighbone
6 "Perry Mason" star
10 Mesa
14 Tickle pink
15 Diva's melody
16 Kind of salad
17 Like most winter jackets
18 Ski resort's need
19 Suspense writer Ambler
20 Table part
21 Robbery
23 Celebration
24 Quit sleeping
26 Oklahoma city
27 Contribute
29 Horses' gaits
31 Fontas and Saperstein
32 Baby grand
33 Brew it!
36 Fantasy
40 Society-page word
41 Districts
42 Entertainer Adams
43 Lazy —
44 Rub away
46 Spa amenity
48 Tree knot
49 New Zealand birds
50 Light wood
52 Clever one
55 Like a pin?
56 Corsica's neighbor
57 Boot-shaped country
59 Fairy-tale giant
60 Right away
61 Not at any time
62 Unwanted plant
63 Small earring
64 Birds that honk

DOWN
1 Toppled over
2 Writer Wiesel
3 Metal used in steel
4 Colorado Indian
5 Small, cinnamon-flavored candy
6 Musical Count
7 Coffee servers
8 Brawl
9 Uncooked
10 Burglarizes
11 Contented sounds
12 Elsberg of films
13 Risque
22 — out make ends meet
23 Spool
25 Scrub
26 Writer Morrison
27 Early time
28 Theater award
29 Giant
30 Cheers
32 Type of bargain
33 Seacoast peril
34 Oklahoma town
35 "A Death in the Family" writer
37 Woodland deities
38 — Minor
39 "Quo Vadis" co-star
43 Fitted
44 Reply abbr
45 Making a sheepish sound
46 Attack on a castle
47 Mindful of
48 Thyroid, e g
49 Be familiar with
50 Pat dry
51 — Ben Adhem
53 Islands in the Seine
54 Phoenician port
56 Mountain curve
58 Sporty shirt

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

H	I	N	T		P	L	O	P		E	L	S	A
I	D	E	A		O	O	N	A		M	E	W	L	S
C	H	A	M		L	O	T	S		O	G	I	V	E
K	E	R	A	T	I	N		T	I	T	A	N	I	C
		L	U	C	Y		R	E	G	E	N	T
R	A	R	E	L	Y		G	O	O	D	Y
A	B	Y	S	S		M	O	R	I	N		B	Y	E
Z	E	E		A	G	E	L	E	S	S		O	A	F
E	D	S		H	A	L	O		T	R	E	N	T
		B	O	O	T	Y		Q	U	I	R	K	S
L	A	B	O	R	S		A	U	N	T
E	L	E	V	A	T	E		M	A	T	U	R	E	D
S	P	L	I	T		E	M	I	R		A	I	D	E
S	H	O	N	E		L	O	S	T		L	O	G	E
A	M	E	D		S	A	S	S		S	T	E	M

11-29-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff
Night Editor/Drums Vanessa "Tico Torres" Walker
Photo Technition Kara "Slippery When Wet" Stokes
Copy Editor/Keyboards Samantha "Dave Bryan" Paulson
Production Supervisor/Guitar John "Richie Sambora" Burt
Production Staff/Lead Vocals Tarasse "Jon Bon Jovi" Rodrigues
Production Staff/Bass Allan "Alec John Such" Benzon

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

Monday, November 29,1999

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Football continues wild ride

Shipp's endzone dive in OT sinks Furman

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Both teams missed chances, but in the end, it was the Massachusetts football team that would emerge victorious after the 30-23 overtime slugfest in the opening round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs against Furman.

With a chance to win as the clock wound down, Paladin kicker Jason Wells could not connect on a 37-yarder, leaving UMass (9-3) with overtime to work with. The kick would have had little significance had Minuteman running back Marcel Shipp gotten into the end zone late in the third quarter, when he fumbled after a 15-yard run at the one-yard line with Massachusetts up 23-20.

"That was the worst thing that could happen," Shipp said. "I saw the end zone and just wanted to get the ball over. I knew (in overtime) I had to go back in there and make something happen."

Shipp, the first team, All-Atlantic 10 runner, got the chance that Wells didn't get. In overtime, the tailback found redemption on the other side of the goal line, as he vaulted into the end zone from a yard away for his second score of the game to put the Minutemen ahead by a touchdown on the extra period's first drive. The Furman kicker, on the other hand, never took the field again, as the Maroon and White defense dug in and stopped the Paladins (9-3) when the hosts got their chance from the 25. UMass defenders Aaron Parker and Matt Dawson each pushed Furman back with tackles for losses of four yards apiece, before Paladin signal caller Justin Hill misfired on two attempts to end the game.

"I felt like our offensive line was really controlling them, and I wanted to get the ball to No. 5," Massachusetts coach Mark Whipple said. "I know what a competitor he is and what a great player he is."

Despite his fumble, which was eventually converted into the game-tying field goal, Shipp was again a force on offense. The Walter Payton Award candidate churned out 170 yards and two touchdowns on 36 carries, besting Paladin pacer Louis Ivory, who had 143 on the ground. The UMass horse galloped past the goal line with just under five minutes remaining in the third period for his first of the two scores to put the visitors ahead, 16-14, after Furman fullback Derek Russell spent the first half punching in two touchdowns, each from the one-yard line.

Massachusetts	30
Furman	23

One of Russell's tallies came on the first Paladin drive of the ball game to put Furman ahead 7-0 for a brief time. Minuteman quarterback Todd Bankhead retaliated quickly, however, completing all five of his passes on the opening UMass drive, finally hitting fellow All-Atlantic 10 player Adrian Zullo from 15 yards away to tie the game. Zullo collected 10 catches for 121 yards on the day.

In the second quarter, Massachusetts kicker Jason Cherry hit a 34-yard field goal to make the score 10-7 in favor of the Minutemen, but Russell would go take another carry into the end zone before halftime, leaving UMass down, 14-10.

The Maroon and White's other kicker wouldn't have such luck, however, as Doug White's extra point try after Shipp's third quarter score was blocked by Paladin Walter Booth to leave Massachusetts up by only two, 16-14.

Furman would grab the lead one more time, on yet another Russell one-yarder, before Bankhead found another of his 10 All-Atlantic 10 teammates, tight end Sean Higgins, for a 31-yard touchdown pass.

Despite his nose for the end zone, Russell only racked up 13 yards on nine carries, averaging a meager 1.4 yards a try.

Bankhead, UMass' all-time leading passer would finish the epic with 287 yards in the air on 28 completions out of 41 attempts. He found the end zone twice, while Hill connected on 15 of his 25 passes for 183 yards and one interception, passing efficiently in the Furman's option offense. He also moved the ball on the ground in that context as well, picking up 40 yards on 19 attempts rushing.

The road to their second straight National Championship will look somewhat familiar next week for the Minutemen, as they take their nine-game winning streak into Georgia to take on the Eagles of Georgia Southern. The 10-2 powerhouses were 14-0 last year before they ended up on the business end of a 55-43 score in the Division I-AA title game. The Eagles, ranked No. 2 in the tournament to Massachusetts' tenth seed, prepared for UMass with a 72-29 throttling of Northern Arizona in round one.

Information from the Associated Press and www.gazettenet.com was used in this article.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

The UMass football team rode a one-yard touchdown plunge by tailback Marcel Shipp to a thrilling 30-23 overtime victory over Furman Saturday.

Men's hoops looking for revenge in home opener

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

Here's to maintaining tradition during the holiday season.

The Massachusetts men's basketball team (1-1) will host Marshall University (2-0) in its season opener at the William D. Mullins Center tonight with a tip-off slated for 6:45 p.m.

The abbreviated series has a funny twist to it with each team recording one victory apiece at home without a road win.

The timing of the meeting is the schedule reversal of last year, when UMass faced the Thundering Herd a game before it dropped to UConn, 59-54.

One year ago in Huntington, W. Va., the Minutemen suffered an 88-66 loss, their largest margin of defeat during the 1998-1999 season. A game that UM coach James "Bruiser" Flint would most like to forget, Winston Smith was ejected for a flagrant foul, and Anthony Oates replaced former senior Lari Ketner at center.

The last time the Thundering Herd came to town, UMass slid past them 61-59 despite then-freshman Travis Young's 19-point explosion.

Both teams will have to accentuate their strengths in order to gain advantage in a lopsided match up. The Minutemen will rely on their speedy backcourt and prowess on the perimeter.

Marshall, which was picked to finish fourth in the conference, is oversized with eight players standing at least 6-foot-7.

Monty Mack has picked up right where he left off last season for the Minutemen, after healing a stress fracture in his foot which he suffered before the season started.

The senior shooting guard poured in 21 points in the first game against Iona, before lighting up then-No. 7 Connecticut for 26 points last Monday.

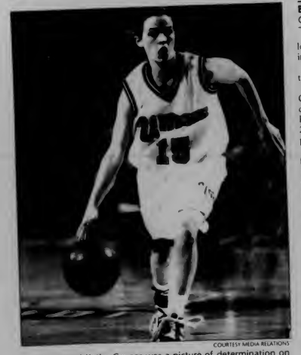
Fellow guards Jonathan DePina and Shannon Crooks have been steady at the point. Shaping up to be UM's preseason most improved player, the poised DePina has stepped in to knock down a three-pointer when needed. Crooks, in his first season at UMass since sitting out after transferring from St. Johns, has proven to be an adept ball-handler who will have to slash more in the paint to shake up the offense.

While senior Chris Kirkland struggled against the Huskies' 6-foot-11 centers Jake Voskuhl and Souleymane Wane, and 6-foot-10 forward Ajou Deng, he will have a game of experience behind him to utilize his agility and hit the open jumper at the top of the key.

Upfront with Kirkland will be Kiwana Rhymer, who raked in a career-high 17 boards last week.

Defensively, senior co-captain Mike Babul will be the marquee player after flattening UConn's Kevin Freeman to just two points. The two-time member of the All-Atlantic 10 Defensive Team is making a name for himself across the country as a top stopper.

In his freshman campaign at Marshall, VanHoose became the first player in school history to lead the team in both scoring (14.7 points per game), and in rebounding (8.1 per game), and was nabbed first-team freshman All-Mid American Conference and Honorable Mention All-MAC team.



Against Canisius in the season opener, the former Mr. Basketball from Painstville, Ky., racked up 21 points in the win.

Joining VanHoose in the front will be senior Derrick Wright, who could become the all-time leading shot blocker this season, and potent sophomore Tamar Slay, who is averaging 16.0 points per game.

Junior Cornelius Jackson and Young have been starting at guard this season for Marshall. Young was named to the 1999 Honorable Mention All-MAC team after finishing second on the team in scoring with 13.9 points per game. Last year, Jackson led the MAC in assists with 145.

Jackson has also been coined as the Mac's top defensive player after putting the sting on Canisius' and Stony Brook's top offensive threat.

Minutewomen burnt by red hot BC Eagles

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Point guard Kathy Coyner was a picture of determination on Saturday, but the Minutewomen bowed 60-45 to No. 18 Boston College.

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Hosting a nationally ranked team, especially one that has lost two straight games, could be accurately described as playing with fire.

Spot that same team a commanding lead off the opening tip, and it's liable to burn your whole house down.

Despite a career-high 20 points from sophomore forward Caroline Nehls, the Massachusetts women's basketball team dropped its home opener 60-45 to the No. 18 Boston College Eagles on Saturday. The Minutewomen (0-4) spotted BC a 20-3 lead over the game's first 12:31 until an Amber Sneed put-back gave UMass it's first field goal of the contest.

The Maroon and White's offensive famine in the opening frame was a sharp contrast to the feasting of the Eagles (4-2). BC captain Cal Bouchard took advantage of the team's clockwork ball movement to knock down five wide open three-pointers and give her team a commanding early lead.

"If we could have knocked down some shots... we would have been okay," UMass head coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We struggled in the first half offensively, we're a five three-pointers by Bouchard were a real killer for us."

Even as Bouchard and company was heating up, O'Brien's firing squad was kept on ice for much of the opening frame. Forwards Jennifer Butler and Alison MacFarland, who had combined for 25 points in the team's Tuesday loss at Holy Cross, were a combined 1-for-10 from the floor in the first 20 minutes of Saturday's contest. Two-guard Tonia Thomas and forward Nekole Smith, both of whom saw very limited action – all in the first half – due to medical reasons, came up empty on six combined field goal attempts. O'Brien noted that even though her team's shots weren't dropping, it wasn't for lack of open looks.

"We had some good shots early in the game," O'Brien said. "Then we tried to force it later on in the half. Shooting is a funny thing, because it affects everything that you do."

Nehls finally got into her groove as the half was winding down, sticking a pair of jump shots and two free throws over the final three-plus minutes of the initial frame. But BC's deadeye shooting from beyond the three-point arc (6-for-10) and from the free throw stripe (8-for-8) helped the Eagles maintain a 34-18 edge at the break.

The Minutewomen needed a spark in the opening segments of the second half, as BC extended its' lead to 24 points behind another Bouchard bucket, and a pair of layups by 2 sophomore with sharp bounce passes into the paint that Nehls turned into easy points for UMass. Foul trouble for Butler and the second half absence of Smith kept the ball in Nehls' hands on many of the Minutewomen's trips down the floor, resulting in a timely offensive awakening by the New Jersey native.

"My shooting's been off pretty much for the first three games," Nehls said. "Even though I got some good looks in the first half, my shot didn't really come back until the second half."

Boston coach Cathy Inglese recognized the threat of Nehls bringing the Maroon and White back, and began double-teaming the UMass forward whenever she touched the ball. But Nehls kept connecting, and drawing the praise of the Eagle coach in the process.

"She did a real nice job of composing herself against our pressure," Inglese said of Nehls. "She was the best one out there, as far as shot selection goes."

But even as Nehls and Sneed (six points, eight rebounds) were beginning to win the war in the middle, Boston College used its high-octane guard tandem of Alissa Murphy and Brianne Stepherson to attack the Maroon and White's perimeter and apply pressure on both ends of the court. In a team-

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 7

UMass fencers find victory at league tourney

Last weekend, the Massachusetts fencing team participated in a New England club league tournament in Durham, N.H. Opponents included Johns Hopkins, New Hampshire, and Dartmouth for both men and women.

The men's team also competed against Worcester Polytechnical Institute, the women toeing the line with Smith College as well.

The men landed three victories against just one loss, giving reason to believe things are looking up for the Minutemen. They disposed of JHU 16-11 before falling to UNH 15-12. On top of that, they defeated Dartmouth 17-10, and WPI, 20-7.

The women's team was not so successful, taking home a single victory, knocking off Dartmouth, 20-7.

With a very young squad fielding numerous novice fencers heading into the 1999 season, the results are by no means a letdown. Many of these fencers began fencing this fall.

-Moritz Biskup

UM Hockey knocks out Union College on road

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

With this much scoring punch, it's no wonder they're beating up the opposition with ease.

Forward Jeff Blanchard scored a goal and added two assists Saturday night as the traveling Massachusetts hockey team pummeled Union College, 5-1. The Minutemen (3-5-2, 0-4-1 Hockey East) got offensive fireworks from a handful of players and a solid defensive effort from all in the victory.

Massachusetts	5
Union	1

"It was a total team effort," Blanchard said. "We got scoring from five different guys against Union."

The Maroon and White struck early against the Skating Dutchmen, as Blanchard netted his third short-handed goal of the season at the 6:17 mark of the first period. The senior from Stouffville, Ontario took a feed across the crease from junior forward Jeff Turner, and blasted the puck past Union's Brandon Snee for the score.

Michigan native Turner staked the Maroon and White to a 2-0 lead just over two minutes later, splitting the pipes for an even-strength goal just after a Union power play had run out.

Coach Joe Mallen's troops seemed anything but content to rest on their lead, padding their cushion to 3-0 at the 3:06 mark of the second period with a power play goal by sophomore Darcy King. The native of Barrie, Ontario found the net by redirecting a slapshot from the left point by junior Kris Wallis past the bewildered Snee.

The goal was King's first of the season, showing that UM's new-found offensive potency has coincided with the elevated play of many of the team's role players.

"It's very important to have depth in your lineup," Blanchard said. "Especially guys like Darcy, who've worked so hard and really deserve it."

Union finally got on the scoreboard with 1:16 left in the second period, when Skating Dutchman Kris Goodjohn beat UM's Markus Helanen for a power play goal.

The Minutemen built its lead back up to three goals under a minute into the third period, when senior captain Nathan Sell notched his first goal of the year a mere 57 seconds into the frame. The Maroon and White wasn't just striking gold on the attack, either; Blanchard and company brought some fierce checking into the action to neutralize any chance of a Union comeback.

"Guys really stepped up, on both sides of the puck," Blanchard said. "We definitely played a lot more physical in that game, and it paid off."

UM's defense put on an absolute display in the late goings, as the team killed off 1:08 of a Union six-on-three advantage to preserve its lead. Junior R.J. Gates added some insurance with 30 seconds left in the game, notching an open-net goal to cap the scoring.

The Minutemen return to action this Friday at 7 pm, when they host Hockey East rival Boston University. Blanchard cites the team's recent success as a big motivator heading into the showdown with the Terriers.

"We've won two and tied one over our last three games," Blanchard said. "We're starting to play well at the right time, and it's nice to have some momentum going back into Hockey East."

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

The UMass hockey team kept up its explosive offensive attack on Saturday, launching 28 shots in a 5-1 win over Union College.

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Tuesday, November 30,1999

Volume CXI Issue 57

Activists discuss East Timor; protest WTO

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Activists will be convening on campus today to discuss current issues in East Timor, while others will be gathered in the center of Amherst to show their dissatisfaction with the World Trade Organization. Both events will be sponsored by the Radical Student Union.

As part of the Grassroots International tour and the East Timor Action Network, Pamela Sexton will speak today in the Campus Center, room 168C at 1 p.m.

Sexton, a former U.S. Coordinator for the International Federation for East Timor's Observer Project, will discuss her experiences In East Timor during and after the vote for independence. Her second visit to the country was this past April, while her most recent voyage was in August, when she was able to assess the situation in the territory. Having spent several weeks in East Timor, she laid the groundwork for Grassroots International in the area. She will also speak on the present standing of the refugee crisis.

The small territory between Australia and Indonesia, known as East Timor, declared its independence a little over a month ago, and yet the area's problems seem far from over. Between 100 and 150,000 people are still missing, although whether these individuals have moved to other islands, disappeared or are still hiding in the mountains is unknown. An additional 200,000 refugees remain in camps under militia control. For many people of East Timor, life has consisted of rape, torture and death in a battle that has lasted for over 23 years.

Also demanding more humane conditions, local citizens will gather today in the Amherst Town Common to demand changes in the economic system. The rallies are a reactionary movement against The Third World Trade Organization (WTO) Ministerial Conference being held in Seattle starting today. The conference is the highest-level decision making body by the organization in the nation. Its main goal is to "further liberalize international trade and review some current trade rules."

Addressing the unions yesterday, WTO Director-General Mike Moore said that the main cause of bad working conditions is poverty, not trade, and that changes must be met through the expansion of commerce and not by imposing sanctions. He also stressed that he wishes to have continued open conversations about the issues at hand.

The protestors disagree with the possible actions that will be enacted during the conference, which will end on Dec. 3. Some believe that the WTO is not actually working for

Turn to EAST TIMOR, page 2

DAN SANTELLA COLLEGIAN

I want to be a firefighter!

These firefighters add to their repetoire as they train outside the Campus Center.

Philosophy lecture today

Prof speaks on father of calculus

Elana Premack
Collegian Staff

A lecture about calculus may not be every student's dream. Today, the nightmare of some students is part of the passion of one University of Massachusetts professor, who will be delivering the second of this year's Distinguished Faculty Lectures.

Robert C. Sleigh, Jr., a UMass philosophy professor, will discuss the work of the man many credit as being the father of calculus. G.W. Leibniz's work predates that of Isaac Newton, so those who dread calculus might want to keep the 17th century German philosopher's name in mind.

"Leibniz was without question a genius, making seminal contributions to linguistics, geology, historiography, as well as physics, mathematics and philosophy," Sleigh said in a statement.

A professor in UMass's philosophy department for 30 years, Sleigh has focused his research on Leibniz's philosophy. He is the author of Leibniz and Arnould: A Commentary on their Correspondence as well as a number of scholarly articles. Sleigh is editor of the Garland Reprint Series on Leibniz and co-editor of the Yale Leibniz, a series of translations on Leibniz's work. He has served twice as president of the North American Leibniz Society.

Turn to LECTURE, page 2

National Zoo euthanizes Hsing-Hsing, beloved male panda

By D'Vera Cohn
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Hsing-Hsing, the surviving male of a pair of giant pandas who had enchanted visitors to the National Zoo since 1972, was euthanized Sunday after keepers decided that his worsening kidney disease was making him suffer too much.

He and his mate, Ling-Ling, had been the zoo's best-known and best-loved animals since they arrived in Washington under armed guard as a gift from the Chinese government after President Nixon's historic visit to China. People lined up to watch them frolic, listened avidly for news of their mating attempts, rejoiced when cubs were born, sent sympathy cards after each of their five offspring died, and mourned when Ling-Ling died of heart failure in 1992.

Hsing-Hsing was 28, the equivalent of more than 80 years in humans. By the time he died, zoo officials said, he barely recognized his keepers and had trouble moving or summoning energy to eat his favorite foods.

Zoo officials said Hsing-Hsing, whose terminal kidney disease was diagnosed in May, began declining markedly during the past week. Zoo administrators, veterinarians and keepers agreed Saturday to euthanize him but wanted to first offer him a last meal of the treats he liked best. The zoo's chief veterinarian, Lucy Spelman, gave the fatal injection Sunday about 7 a.m. in the Panda House.

No periodicals to be cancelled due to budget increases

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The final state budget for the W.E.B. Dubois Library at the University of Massachusetts has increased and now is at a total of $1.9 million.

The budget, which was previously being deliberated by the state, will allow for a total increase of $900,000 to the already existing budget. According to Emily Silverman, a representative for the library, the added funds will help to "stabilize the budget."

The library, as well as 29 public higher education libraries, receives their budges from a line in the state budget known as Educational and Reference Material (ERM). The library relies on ERM for a majority of the budget that it receives. This year, an increase to ERM from $11 million to $14 million will be shared among the higher educational libraries and makes up a majority of the increase to the budget.

In addition, $1 million is allocated each year to the library from the University itself. This money is consistently contributed to the library, but due to the rapid increase in prices for materials the library has not been able to keep up.

According to Silverman, the money is currently being used to bring back the collection to what it was several years before.

Earlier this year, the library was faced with the concern that the necessary funding might not have been available. Silverman explained that in order to deal with the possible situation, the library was forced to make a list of serials that would possibly be cancelled if necessary funding were not met. Faculty representatives and department heads chose the serials that were projected to be cut with the help of liaisons from the library. The projected cancellations spanned every department in the University and would have affected both undergraduate and graduate students. Serials were chosen for the cut based on the availability at other universities in the area, and based on both faculty and student use of the materials.

According to Silverman, the serials were targeted for cancellation due to the fact that the costs were rising faster than the budget would allow.

But due to the budget increase, the library will now stop the process of the cancellation of the serials.

The recent budget increases can, in part, be attributed to the advocacy campaign that was in place for the library. Students, staff and faculty members that strongly supported the campaign wrote letters to legislators, sent e-mails, made

Turn to LIBRARY, page 2

Military is facing exodus of women

By Paul Richter
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – Sylvia Azriel joined the Army this fall with the kind of enthusiasm the brass loves to see in recruits. She thought the Army was a well-organized, supportive place that would help her "find some purpose in my life."

Before two months of basic training were up, however, the Pensacola, Fla., woman was out the door, acknowledging that she couldn't adjust to military life. "It was totally not what I expected," she said.

With recruiting in a deep slump, the Pentagon is pinning more and more of its hopes on young women like Azriel – without whom, top officials often say, today's military simply could not function.

Yet year after year, women leave the services at higher rates than men, driven out by injuries, family considerations, job opportunities and other causes, including a sense that the military just isn't right for them.

With the services' increasing dependence on women, the early departures signal trouble for the Pentagon. Women now account for 14 percent of active-duty personnel, up from 10 percent a decade ago, and they make up 20 percent of new recruits.

The exodus is particularly unsettling for the Army: 47 percent of its enlisted women are gone, either by choice or involuntarily, before the end of three years, despite having signed up for terms averaging four years. The comparable attrition rate for Army men is 28 percent.

Across all the services, 38 percent of women are out the door within three years, compared to about 33 percent for men.

These numbers raise uncomfortable questions about whether women are failing to find the kind of personal support or job opportunities they had hoped for in the military.

That conclusion would be a bitter disappointment for the services. Smoothly integrating women has been one of their biggest challenges of the decade, and the cause of a series of scandals and political controversies.

The problem has major financial ramifications. The Army, for example, pays about $35,000 to get each new soldier through recruitment and the first stages of training; this month, after the worst recruiting year in two decades, the service authorized bonuses of as much as $65,000 just for signing up.

With these issues in mind, the Army this year began what is apparently the first focused study on the attrition of women, and officials expect the results may lead to recommendations to help lower the departure rate.

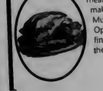
Higher education goes upscale to entice students

By Richard T. Cooper
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – The University of Virginia, which founder Thomas Jefferson considered his proudest achievement, boasts an $18.5 million aquatic and fitness center with three pools, a cafe and a mega-screen projection system enabling students to watch movies while bobbing about in inner tubes. "Jaws" was a recent hit.

Universities small and large, public and private, serving the wealthy and the not-so-well-connected are all seeing a boom in construction of recreational sports complexes, upscale food courts and other amenities designed to make campus life more attractive to prospective students. And behind the boom is old-fashioned free market economics.

No separate figures are available on how much is being spent on amenities, but they are believed to constitute a substantial portion of all college and university construction. Nationwide, institutions of higher learning spent more than $7.3 billion on construction, additions and renovation projects of all kinds in 1998, up from $6.4 billion in 1993, according to American Schools and Universities magazine, which has been conducting annual surveys for more than 20 years. But by the end of next year, the total is expected to more than double, reaching $15.1 billion.

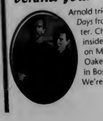


DAN SANTELLA COLLEGIAN

Flip Side

Herter, as well as the cloudy sky line, reflect nicely in the water in front of the Fine Arts Center.

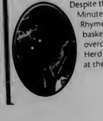
Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 36 LOW: 20	HIGH: 32 LOW: 15	HIGH: 40 LOW: 25



Multicultural Meanings

Students' opinions on the meaning of Thanksgiving make up part of today's Multicultural Affairs page. Open today's paper to find out what else is on the page.

PAGE 4



Hey. Is that Satan behind you?

Arnold tries to stop the End of Days from inevitable disaster. Check out the review inside Arts. Also, read up on Megadeth and Paul Oakenfold's performances in Boston. Read Arts. We're changing lives.

PAGE 5

Gods of Thunder

Despite the efforts of Minuteman Kitwana Rhymer, the UMass men's basketball team could not overcome the Thundering Herd of Marshall last night at the Mullins Center.

PAGE 10

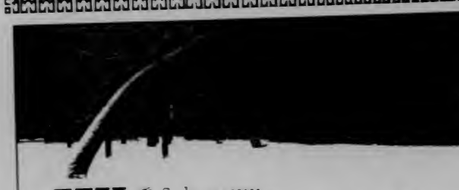
Arts & Living 5
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 3
Diversity 4
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

■ East Timor

■ lecture



■ library

DISCOUNTED APPETIZERS
AND DAILY DRINK SPECIALS
JOIN US ON MONDAYS FOR MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
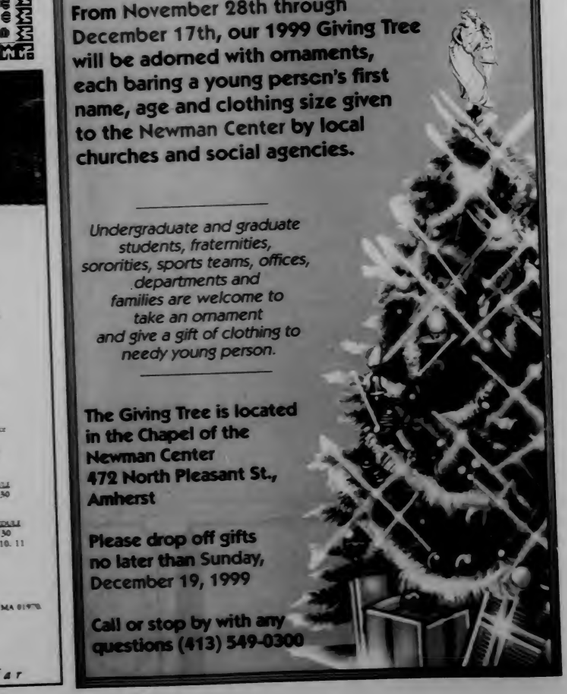
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rt. 9 & Rt. 116, Hadley • (413) 584-6700

EXPANDED HORIZONS
Day Spa
Tanning • Hot Tub • Massage
• Simply the Best Tanning Beds in the Area
• High Powered Tanning
• Improved Results in Less Time
• Lowest Prices on Tanning and Products
• Gift Certificates Available
$99 20 visits
$50 10 visits
20% off Massage *Includes 1/2 hr. hot tub
Ask About Our FREE Body Wrap
31 Union St. • Easthampton
529-9996 LOOK & FEEL GREAT!!!

www.collegian.com



Student Union Craft Center
ANNUAL HOLIDAY CRAFT FAIR
Hand crafted pottery, jewelry, ornaments, clothing, and much more!
Campus Center Concourse
December 1st, 2nd & 3rd
9am - 4pm

Salem State College
WINTERSESSION 2000
GET CREDIT FOR YOUR VACATION!
Vacation is a great time to ACCELERATE your education and add valuable career skills!
DAY CLASSES
6:00 A.M. - 5:00 P.M.
6:30 A.M. - 4:30 P.M.
Meteorology
Special Programs GIS in Science Curriculum*
Human Sexuality
Math for Elementary and Middle School Teachers
American Foreign Policy
General Psychology
Childhood and Adolescence
Child Growth
Principles of Criminology
EVENING CLASSES
6:00 P.M. - 10:00 P.M.
NON-CREDIT
Day Class Schedule
December 28, 29, 30
January 3, 4
Evening Class Schedule
December 28, 29, 30
January 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 10, 11
REGISTRATION INFORMATION
November 22, 1999 Mail-in/Fax or 978/542-6334, TTY 978/542-6100
December 13, 1999 Phone-in 978/542-6334, Walk-in Salem State College, 352 Lafayette Street, Salem, MA 01970
Call 978-542-6300 for more information
Undergraduate Course: $375; Graduate Course: $480. Major credit cards accepted.
www.salem.mass.edu
No Place so Close can Take you so Far

The Newman Center invites you to Participate in our annual Giving Tree
From November 28th through December 17th, our 1999 Giving Tree will be adorned with ornaments, each baring a young person's first name, age and clothing size given to the Newman Center by local churches and social agencies.
Undergraduate and graduate students, fraternities, sorororities, sports teams, offices, departments and families are welcome to take an ornament and give a gift of clothing to needy young person.
The Giving Tree is located in the Chapel of the Newman Center 472 North Pleasant St., Amherst
Please drop off gifts no later than Sunday, December 19, 1999
Call or stop by with any questions (413) 549-0300

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Giving thanks for real

Recently, I was asked by a concerned colleague, Jeanette Santoro, if the crazy, outlandish stories that I tell in these informative forums every week are true. She was skeptical about whether or not the amazing events that I detail each Monday, or, in this case, Tuesday, are fact.

Well, I assured her that there's not a falsity among it, and if any others out there spent any time questioning me, then I assure you, too. All the stuff you read in my columns is true. But Jeanette and you bring up an interesting point: perhaps my real-life accounts and weird anecdotes are too unbelievable for their own good. Maybe my ridiculous tales lose punch because you and Jeanette think I'm making all those things up while all doped up on goofballs.

I'm here to tell you now that I do not write after ingesting large quantities of hallucinogens, and the tales are solid. Enough uncertainty out of you guys.

To illustrate my point beyond any reasonable doubt, I will make a list of thematic reasons for being thankful on the recently-passed Thanksgiving holiday. I don't know how that makes any sense either, but look, I'm trying to make a transition here. Deal with it.

Reason for being thankful No. 1 – Despite barely surviving to this point in the semester because of the food you are forced to eat due to a lack of sufficient funds, and the amount of sleep you miss regularly because of classes that, oddly enough, take place in the middle of the day, you were very likely supplied with exorbitant amounts of food.

Reason for being thankful No. 2 – If you're reading this column, you must be alive. Don't take that for granted: notice Ludwig Van Beethoven doesn't have that capability...

Seth Koenig

Reason for being thankful No. 3 – You're not the chancellor of a big university who has stooped to such a low level that he has no other response to criticisms than to try and make everything seem like it's the local collegiate newspaper's fault. If you are such a chancellor, perhaps you should be thankful that the local collegiate newspaper hasn't done a detailed exposé on how you approved the spending of some abnormal sum of money to make a disgusting-looking Fine Arts Center downright nauseating while several of the older buildings on campus continue to fall apart at the seams. You should also be thankful that the columnist writing about Thanksgiving stopped with that, because he could have very easily gotten petty and started bringing up all sorts of other public relations failures that have begotten your last couple of years at the helm of the big university.

Reason to be thankful No. 4 – You don't work at the Collegian, the one institution on Earth more hated than the Dallas Cowboys... and the people who work there aren't even convicts! If you do work at the Collegian, you have absolutely no reason to be thankful, because, according to the people on campus who aren't capable of keeping their turkey-hole shut, you and each of your coworkers are incarnations of the Antichrist.

Reason to be thankful No. 5 – The current McDonald's theme song... oh, wait... that was for the other column, "Reasons for committing suicide". Sorry.

Reason to be thankful No. 6 – Daisy Fuentes, the model, volleyball player, MTV personality, actress, slicer, dicer and maker of Julian fries, is not only single, but is waiting for a guy to ask her out. Because some people out there (and Jeanette knows who she is) seem to think I am full of bologna (or, perhaps, another, more tasty cold-cut, like salami or turkey), I will validate this story by saying that Daisy said so while being interviewed on NBC's "Later" at roughly 1:55 a.m. Eastern time on November 26, 1999. Men on campus will be significantly more thankful about this than the women, not only because Daisy is a woman, but also because guys tend to believe that they seriously have a chance with beautiful celebrities simply because they're single.

Reason to be thankful No. 7 – You're almost done with this column.

Reason to be thankful No. 8 – You don't have to do this math problem: If one train leaves San Francisco traveling west at 70 miles an hour and another train leaves Miami traveling east at 92 miles an hour, how many calculators would you break trying to figure out when the two trains would simultaneously be level with Chicago, provided that each train can drive under water and never runs out of fuel?

Reason to be thankful No. 9 – You have a column that you can write every week when you have ridiculous, yet real stories you want to share with 20,000 people... oh, wait...

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

What is going on here?

The world is a scary and sometimes screwy place. That being said, recent events should come as no surprise to anyone at all. Anyone who has a web site is a millionaire, anyone who decides to buy a few shares of some obscure company suddenly is bob-knob-bing with Donald Trump (except for me). It also has been the rule lately that any company or person for that matter (Martha Stewart) becomes the golden goose of investing as soon as they are introduced onto the market. UPS, the company where the people drive brown trucks and wear brown uniforms and simultaneously deliver brown packages made about 4.2 bazillion dollars the first day it was offered. I am currently developing a multi colored package delivery service that incorporates lasers and an interpretative dance while delivering a package.

Brian Lohnes

It should also be noted that Donald Trump is getting ready to run for president. Before you dismiss this as another celebrity trying to run for office, be aware that Trump has already said he would spend $100 million of his own dollars to do it. Trump has also been quoted as saying, "My entire life, I've watched politicians bragging about how poor they are, how they came from nothing, how poor their parents and grandparents were. And I said to myself, if they can stay so poor for so many generations, maybe this isn't the kind of person we want to be electing to higher office. How smart can they be? They're morons." Well said, eh? Lincoln, Truman, Clinton... morons? (OK, maybe one is) He certainly does have a way with words. Donald is good at what he does: he makes money, and lots of it. He does not, however, have any experience in or even a very deep working knowledge of how government works. Maybe those morons are a little brighter than you give them credit for, Donald. Oh yes, he also called Bill Bradley a "Marxist" and said that Bradley thought Communism was "just fine". hope all you R.A.I.L. people are reading; you have a winner here.

Communism is playing another important role in our future. It seems that Russia, you know, our bitchy older sister, isn't real sure about their nukes. They aren't totally positive if their missiles, (most of which are aimed at this little country of ours) are going to make it past January 1, 2000. Also, "experts" are saying that Russia is going to be hit real hard by Y2K, to the tune of 28 billion dollars. They also are worried about a potential collapse of government due to computer failure. Generals could seize power and the recent Y2K movie that was on TV could be acted out. The same "experts" at "International Monitoring", a consulting firm in London, predict that Y2K could leave Russia in a similar state as Yugoslavia, Ethiopia or Nigeria soon after all the calamity ends. I guess this is why we have never heard of a Russian-built computer. A quick tip for all those headed to a major city to ring in the New Year, bring a hard hat... and some canned food.

Speaking of food, most of us folk ate a whole lot of it last Thursday. I know many people ate turkey; so many, in fact, that I feel compelled to educate you on some turkey facts collected at "Thanksgiving on the net". "Turkeys have heart attacks" (especially if they are smoked... ok fine... I thought it was funny). This is a fact, turkeys do have heart attacks and as far as I know, they get headaches too. "Turkeys can drown if they look up when it is raining." That is funny. I knew that they weren't the most intelligent animals gobbling around, but drowning in the rain? Come on! "A Turkey has excellent vision, with a range of about 270 degrees. This is why they continue to elude some hunters." Which hunters are they getting away from? The blind ones? Let's be honest. if you can't shoot a turkey, you are not even a hunter to begin with. I think aluminum cans may be more difficult to hunt in the wild. (I have never killed anything, but shooting a big bird in the woods? You get the picture.)

Speaking of pictures, did everyone see the one on the front of the Sports section of the Boston Globe last Sunday? Talk about cool! It was UMass tight end Sean Higgins giving defensive coordinator Don Brown a bear hug after they beat Furman in overtime last week. It was nice to see a little positive light on the school after the events of late. I think it is going to be important to keep a certain sense of school spirit through these times- because we need to stick together. It was a nice surprise to see a team that is under-appreciated in the media finally get their headline. Nice work last week, men. keep it up, we are all behind you!

Hopefully everyone is ready for Christmas, both financially and mentally. I would consider myself none of the above. My wallet is thin and my patience is getting thinner by the day. I am trying to buy all my stuff online. In the process making some sucker rich. It's all a nasty cycle folks, everything is connected to something else and usually someone is turning a profit on it. Happy Holidays (cue evil laugh).

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

Christmas resolutions

You know it's almost Christmas when the Grinch has already been on TV.

Seriously, for those of you who missed it (this would include me, since I was playing indoor miniature golf at the time), "How the Grinch Stole Christmas" was on cable last Saturday, officially marking the beginning of the Christmas season, the Christmas special season and the season of showing the movie about the kid who will shoot his eye out ten thousand times.

This served as a monumental wake-up call for me. Seriously, I really think I heard something about seven-thirty on Saturday, and I still insist that's why I blew that putt on the anthill hole. What this voice said to me was, and I quote, "kill kill kill kill kill." Oh, wait, wrong voice – what the Christmas voice said was "Man, you'd better get your butt in gear because you know you're just going to screw it up again." And this is true.

Yes, by the way, I do realize that this is November and I am writing a Christmas column – what can I say, I just like to get a jump on the competition. I also feel that these words can be a catalyst to stir into action the people like me, who get excited about Christmas right around Easter but don't actually do anything about it until somewhere in the vicinity of December 27th.

I say this because I, like so many of you, have no conception of what it takes to get all the requisite Christmas stuff done on time. Would you like an example? One year, not all that long ago, I got my sister a rock as a Christmas present. Now, my sister and I do not have the very best relationship, in that I consider her a bitch and she considers me an bunghole, but even that does not warrant me wrapping up a rock for her to open with glee on the 25th. It wasn't premeditated, either; I wasn't sadistically scheming in my room to buy her the absolute worst gift ever and make her cry (although now that I think about it I probably should have been doing just that).

No, what it came down to was a craft fair at West Elementary School with Christmas just around the corner and me with no idea of what to get her when I saw a table with the following sign: "Rocks $1." Sweet salvation, I thought to myself as I plunked my Washington down. "She'd like a purple rock." In my deluded, just-before-Christmas state, I think I really believed that. It's kind of pathetic.

"But," you say to yourself, "surely the passing years and higher education have matured you to a point where you can adequately prepare for the upcoming holiday, correct?" Well, sure, I guess you could say that, if it weren't for the fact that last year I got her a pair of UMass socks. I swear I didn't know that they were meant for something along the lines of a four-year-old, and that they wouldn't fit over the big toes of a sophomore in high school. All girls' socks look the same to me. I also got my mother a UMass ashtray, conveniently forgetting that she had quit smoking somewhere along the lines of 1989. Whoops.

Rob Schulze

Not this year, however. Oh no. When the voice came to me and told me to get moving, I realized that this was the year that I could do Christmas right. The first step would be to put lights and a Christmas tree in my dorm room, as a perpetual reminder of the holiday season. So, of course, I forgot the lights and tree back in my parent's house.

I was distraught until my roommate Mike, who actually has more than 2/3 of a brain, broke out the lights that he had actually remembered to bring from home. They're very pretty lights, I must add, and they really give the room a festive sort of cheer, especially in the way that they twinkle and shine off the TV and my head.

So, with the decorations in place and my mind screwed on tight, I am prepared to tackle the holiday season. I will muster every ounce of my energy and brainpower to figure out the perfect gift for each and every one of my loved ones, and then I will go about finding reasonably priced things that I think they might enjoy. I will only use the colored Sunday funny pages for wrapping paper, not the black and white weekday ones (always thinking, that's what I am). I will do my very, very best to force myself not to drink an entire gallon of eggnog on Christmas Eve and throw up all over the tree. I may, just perhaps, sleep past 3:45 on the day itself. But I wouldn't bet on it.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

USE YOUR VOICE

Pet Peeves

Over the years I have adopted many pet peeves. Since I have been at this university, the number has grown remarkably. And since my Boston Sunday Globe was not at my door when I got back to school (at about 1 p.m.), I had to think of what to write about on my own. It's crunch time for classes. I need to have topics given to me. I hope you enjoy.

I was recently talking to a good friend of mine, Sarah, about these pet-peeves. She helped add to my list, as well as giving me inspiration on the ones that I already had.

Out-of-Service buses. I know that people need to finish routes and take the buses back to the bus garage, but Out-of-Service buses are such a tease. It's 6:30 p.m. and freezing out. 30 minutes have come and gone while you are waiting for any bus to town or Puffton/Brandywine, you see one in the distance, and the damn thing turns out to be Out-of-Service.

Slow drivers. By slow drivers I mean the drivers on the entry ramp that you let get onto say 91 or 90 ahead of you, and then they proceed to go 45 miles per hour when the speed limit is 65 mph. And the worst part about it is that they are doing nothing illegal. You are legally allowed to go 20 mph below the speed limit. Then you have to attempt to maneuver into one of the other lanes where people are speeding along at 75 to 90 mph, and end up cursing the whole time while praying that you don't get killed.

Lost drivers. These are the drivers that stop periodically along the road, as if to both test your alertness and to look for the street that they're supposed to turn onto. Yet they never turn. They drive 20 mph everywhere, and then just stop.

The Meal Plan Office. I've only been there a couple of times, but each time I go I've dealt with someone older. These people, along with the older people in housing, should not be able to deny someone from getting off of the meal plan until they've tried to live on the D.C. food for a full semester. A hint to those still on the meal plan: if you cannot tell what it is by looking at it, don't eat it!

Emily Vacanti

TV Clashes. This one is very weird. On "Get Real", a teacher had to resign because she slept with a student. This is very wrong. I agree with her having to leave. But on "Party of Five" Julia, the character played by Neve Campbell, is dating and sleeping with her Professor of writing, the one that is assisting her with her book that he will help put on the shelves. The critics and writers are condoning adultery between a college student and college professor, but are saying that it is wrong between a high school student and high school professor. Both Are wrong. No teacher/professor should be allowed to sleep with his/her student. Be consistent.

Bending the sexual rules. I hate it when someone is so bent on having sex that they are willing to break the rules to make something seem right. For instance, I know someone who was so bent on having sex that she convinced her boyfriend to be psuedo-married so as not to break the rules of his religion so that he would have sex with her. That is pathetic. He probably ended up breaking a lot more rules in his religion to 1 Accommodate her. 2. Have sex.

Line Stallers. These are the people at Burger King, McDonald's, etc. that get in line before they have made up their mind and slowly go through each option before finally choosing a plain hamburger. They look at each side of the menu (both sides are identical, one for each side of the room) as though there is a difference.

Door Hoppers/Droppers. They don't hold the door for you when you're running to catch it, and when you are going through with a crate full of stuff, they might just jump over your stuff. Then they act insulted when you close the door on them. Holding the door for you does not even go through his/her mind. One day I'm going to trip the person that does this just to slow them down.

People who think that TV dramas and sitcoms are a good representation of real life. I went to high school with this girl who couldn't believe that each dorm room does not have a sink in it. She wanted to know why she had to go to a floor bathroom. I tried to explain to her that 90210 is not based on reality, but she just didn't understand.

That just about concludes my column on pet-peeves. I can assure you that there are many, many more I just don't feel like going through any more of them. They are my pet-peeves that many others share. One day I will get over them, but not for a long time.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist.

Write for ED/OP!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joslyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulren Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Multicultural Affairs

Tuesday, November 30, 1999

milLENNYum

Lenny Holston

Thanksgiving is finally over. My dad has sobered up, my mom will be serving us turkey leftovers until Valentine's Day, and grandma has put her bra back on. Yes, it was a memorable Thanksgiving. Now, as we look forward to Christmas, Kwanzaa, Hanukah and all the rest, we must get ready to party like it's 1999.

So, what are you doing? I can spend a romantic evening with my beautiful girlfriend, but I think I will do something fun instead. There is just so much pressure for this night to be good; I cannot waste it watching "Pretty Woman" for the millionth time. Plus, the new millennium does not even start until 2001.

The big question is what does the 21st century hold for us as minorities. For starters, the Latino population will grow and become the largest ethnic group in America. The ethnic population will outnumber the white population in most major cities by next decade's end. Many in America already know that this country is on the verge of "losing its whiteness." This is why politics is moving to the right, corporate America is ignoring us, and the media does not find us a "desirable demographic." It is a preemptive strike.

> "Many in America already know that this country is on the verge of losing its whiteness."

Keeping vigilant should be a priority for everyone. Example: don't worry about Y2K computer viruses. This is just media hype, distracting us from real issues out of sight.

Here are some predictions that you can take to the bank:

- The real numbers of minorities will continue to fall here at UMass, not because of the end of affirmative action, but because Massachusetts is the most racist state in the union and could care less about minority children in its public schools.
- On January 21, 2009, a black man will become President.
- On January 22, 2009, that same black man will get assassinated.
- Organized religion will give way to individual spirituality.
- Amherst College will still have its essentially racist policy of need-blind financial aid.
- Smith College will accept men (no those aren't men that go there now).
- With their members aging, Limp Bizkit will eventually live up to its name.
- And finally, 2Pac's 34th posthumous album will go double platinum.

If we make it past world wars, famine, and DC food, I will see you in the next milLENNYum.

Lenny Holston is a Collegian columnist.

A Thanksgiving for Love

I lay awake in bed listening to the sound of the knife hitting the cutting board and the faint sound of the parade on television. From afar I could hear the roar of the crowd watching the local football team score. I lay there staring at the ceiling listening to these sounds blend into a mush of noise.

"This is Thanksgiving Day," I thought and sat up.

My sister is downstairs sprawled across the couch half watching the parade while chatting away on the phone. She looks up to see me peering around the corner and drops her voice to a soft whisper. I'm obviously not meant to hear.

From in the kitchen my mother is still cutting potatoes, summer squash and yams. The spices from the turkey fill the air dancing with the sweet scent of apple pie baking.

For as long as I can remember this is how it goes: My mother is up before the sun rises preparing all of our favorites. And then by the time we are up she has six things going at once and the house is filled with the sweet scent of home cooking.

Usually I am right beside her

> "I was drowning and gave me the sunset to prove how beautiful life was."

Jennifer Lodge

helping and preparing the desserts but this year she does it all alone. I sat there at the table watching her mix and pour, baste and season this is how it's always been.

As I sat there I began to think of all I had to be thankful for. My family is all together again for the first time in two years and we are all healthy and happy. As much as that, in itself, means there is something else I am as equally grateful for.

At a time in my life when things fell from under me and the world around me caved in, a man came into my life that changed It all. He removed all the barricades that surrounded my heart and showed it what a groundless love could be. He lifted me from the sadness I was drowning and gave me the sunset to prove how beautiful life was. When I had begun to lose faith in all that love stood for he showed me it existed in ways unknown. And though I tried to push him away he held on always understanding and never giving up.

I am so thankful for this heaven sent angel. He has given me a reason to smile and a heart for which to call home. This Thanksgiving Day, I am thankful for all the small things but I am most grateful of all for the person who won't let me be alone.

Jennifer Lodge is a Collegian columnist.

Poem of the week 12/1/99

Acquired...Immune.... Deficiency.... Syndrome,
Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome-
Fight AIDS, Red Ribbon, AIDS Quilt
HIV, AZT, AIDS

They unfolded your lives one by one...they laid out your patchwork under the sun...and people gathered from miles around...
Africa, Latin America. USA is infected with AIDS
To witness your quilt spread on the ground...and then they called out your name...
HIV, AZT, AIDS
Oh yes they called out your name...oh and you will live forever...
D-I-E
You know that I'll be lovin' you just like a patchwork quilt...
Well there were men and women and mothers and fathers sistahs and brothas and daughters and sons and children and babies and lovers and friends...they all lay before me sewn into one...
...AZT break...HIV, AZT, AIDS, red ribbons...
Dec. 1st...
Your lives had meaning, your lives had joy....you touched so many people many more than you will know.
EDUCATE, DEDICATE...donate...L-I-F-E...AIDS
And you wrapped yourselves around me...as I walked down these rows...you're letting me feel your beautiful souls...
Souls for every season, not mine yours...quilts to cover my HIV-AZT-yeah you know me..
I feel the warmth of your lives...I feel the warmth of your lives...
Lives...nine they told me..9 years before it even showed up...AZT HIV...kills.
OH and you will live forever...you know that I'll be lovin' you just like a patchwork quilt...
Love is the easy part...livin' is a whole different story 'cause...
My heart spills over flowin' with tears I cry for your suffering and for your shortened years...
36, 24, 36...that ain't no body size...21, 34...with the youngest at 14...still livin' yet dyin'...
And I'll take you with me as I walk away remembering you who have died with AIDS
Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome..that shit kills? 1989...1999...Yup. Red Ribbon. Fight AIDS.
Yes, I remember your names..oh yes I remember your names..oh and you will live forever...you know that
I'll be lovin' you just like a patchwork quilt...
I'll be lovin' you...
As long as you listen, learn and live. 12/1/99, World AIDS Day...everyday

Tereza O. Rodrigues is a Collegian columnist.

Editor's Note: Italics are song lyrics from, "Sweet Honey and the Rock: Patchwork Quilt"

Celebrate World AIDS Day on December 1st.

Peeling back the label

Don't let my appearance fool you. Seeing me around the campus, I have already been labeled. My yellow skin and almond eyes say that I am Asian-American, but I am automatically more than this. I'm a computer science major or maybe an engineering or business major. I am the studious good daughter, who is passive and quiet or a rebellious, independent "techno girl" who cruises around with her gangster boyfriend. I speak with an accent. My parents own a restaurant; I carry a pager, a cell phone and drive a Nissan or a CRX. Potential attackers will think twice before choosing me as a victim because I will break them into little pieces like Jackie Chan.

I am labeled like Ramen noodles, purely Asian, purely the above description. Ramen noodles are probably the favorite snack of college students, because it's quick, easy, and doesn't taste that bad. If you read the label you'll find out that eating too many packs of Ramen noodles is unhealthy and that there are some weird chemicals in them that you wouldn't expect to see (like wax. It's like eating an entire birthday candle everytime you have a pack). I suggest you read the package next time, it can be rather shocking. It's just as shocking as finding out that I don't speak with an accent, am a pre-journalism major, and I don't know Kung Fu or any other martial art you would suspect.

People that walk around and think people should act their color absolutely make me sick. How do you act a color? I'm just dying to pick up my copy of "Being Asian for Dummies." They make manuals for everything why not a manual on how to act my race? I think the public would actually buy books like this so that they too, can join the flock of lemmings jumping off the cliff into the sea of ignorance.

Stereotypes are a universal problem, transcending all racial lines. The media, as well as our own pre-conceived notions of the way people "supposedly are" and "should be," jade us into believing these lies. The sad part is many of us fall into the trap of literally becoming these society-invented stereotypes, for example the never-ending battle of the sexes. For decades people have believed that women are passive, quiet, and belong in the home whereas men are tough, and don't cry.

While I'm on this subject, why does the all-girls dorm have really big kitchens and no Ethernet, and the all-boys dorm have Ethernet minus the kitchens? Is the school subconsciously reinforcing this sexist stereotype? As UMass students we stereotype each other by our living areas, and by the world we are seen as a party school. We buy into these labels and in the end are brainwashed like sheep once again.

Changing stereotypes is a something that must be done on a personal level. Each person has the responsibility of peeling back the labels to see people as who they are, not merely by their ethnicity and the traits that supposedly go with it. One of my friends had a roommate who was a 6-foot tall black man who looked like a gangster. Little did he know that behind this disguise his roommate was an opera major who hated rap. On a diverse campus such as UMass, this is a challenge to stop and see the beauty behind each individual person. Diversity at UMass is more than just ethnicity, it's the individual personality we each bring to this campus.

Jamie Loo is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY PEPE BOTELLA

Bailamos
Enrique Iglesias' debut English-language CD comes out this month.

WANT TO SHARE YOUR MULTICULTURAL EXPERIENCES? LET 17,000 PEOPLE KNOW BY WRITING FOR THE COLLEGIAN'S DIVERSITY PAGE!!

Reparations: It's too late

By Jonathan Yardley
The Washington Post

It is not uniquely American to believe that all the world's inequities and woes can be ameliorated by monies, but it certainly is quintessentially so. Thus what is really surprising about the campaign now under way to pay "reparations" to African-Americans for the ills of slavery is not the campaign itself-seeking cash for what lawyers and insurers call "pain and suffering" is as American as ambulance-chasing-but that it took so long to materialize.

Whatever the explanation for the belated emergence of this movement, the one certainty is that almost anything anyone says about it will be misunderstood and/or misinterpreted. We tread here not merely on the slippery ground of race but in the misty precincts of history; the first subject raises the hackles of all Americans, whatever the color of their skin, and the second takes Americans into places about which they are willfully ignorant. The chances of having a civilized and unemotional national discussion of the subject are somewhere between slim and none.

Such a debate, we are to believe, is the dream of John Conyers Jr., the Democratic congressman from Michigan who, after a long career as political hack and power broker, has made a leap onto the moral high ground. Conyers regularly places before Congress a bill that, as reported by The Washington Post, would establish a commission to examine slavery and its lingering effects on African Americans and contemporary U.S. society." A federal law authorizing reparations would not necessarily be the result of such an inquiry, but Conyers and some other prominent African Americans, most notably Randall Robinson, believe that is what should come to pass.

Yet as regularly as Conyers introduces his bill, Congress ignores it; in an institution whose members eagerly climb aboard each other's bandwagons at every available opportunity, Conyers has been able to round up only 31 co-sponsors, and their numbers are most unlikely to increase significantly. Introducing the bill no doubt pays political dividends for Conyers back home in Detroit, but it flies in the face of the larger political realities of this country, its potential for divisiveness is considerable, and it is simply wrong-headed.

As it happens I write these words only a couple of days after reading advance proofs of a book called "Soul by Soul: Life Inside the Antebellum Slave Market," by Walter Johnson, about which I will have more to say when it is published early next year. Suffice it for the moment to say that it served as a highly detailed and sobering reminder-as if one were needed -of the injustice and brutality and horror of slavery. That a nation founded upon a commitment to freedom and liberty could have permitted the enslavement of human beings is a stain that can never be removed; it is central to our history.

But history, though it has lessons to teach, is history all the same. Yesterday is not today. For more years than any sober person can care to contemplate, white Americans forcibly imported and enslaved black Africans, but they do not do so now. Whether the sins of the fathers are in fact visited upon the children is for philosophers and theologians to debate, but the inescapable truth is that a vast majority of Americans decline to accept the proposition that they, living many generations removed from the country's slave-holding past, are responsible -least of all in a pecuniary way -for that past.

Another truth is that although the American majority may decline to accept blame for events of long ago, it has in fact shouldered much responsibility for what happened then. The great civil-rights laws of the 1960s were -and remain to this day- guarantees by the country as a whole of rights and opportunities for black Americans that had been all too imperfectly protected during Reconstruction and the Jim Crow era. This is not to say that the implementation of those laws itself has been perfect -far from it -but that they are concrete, purposeful and immensely significant attempts to eliminate all vestiges of slavery, to make the country equally free for all its citizens.

The effect of those laws has been incalculable; the country has changed so much in the 3 1/2 decades since the first was passed that it is almost unrecognizable. But if those changes have moved millions of African Americans into the mainstream, they have also aroused widespread frustration and dissatisfaction. Not all the expectations raised by the laws have been met; grievances still linger and fester, and suspicions about the good faith of the majority remain.

It is to this, I suspect, that the reparations movement can be traced. Social change never takes place as rapidly and all-pervasively as its intended beneficiaries expect. People become impatient and seek other forms of progress and redress. The labor of slaves went uncompensated, so why shouldn't their descendants, struggling for justice and opportunity, be compensated in their stead? After all, weren't Japanese Americans interned during World War II compensated only a decade ago to the tune of $20,000 apiece?

Yes, but those payments were to the survivors, not their heirs. There are no surviving slaves, so there is no one with a just claim on reparations; probably reparations in some form should have been paid in 1865, but this is 1999 and the case is closed. There are, by the same token, no surviving slaveholders, so there is no one upon whom blame and responsibility can be fixed. In brief, there is no point in having a "conversation" or "debate" on this subject, for there is nothing to discuss.

The World Ends with Satan's Baby

By Nicholas Pizzolato
Collegian Staff

End Of Days
Directed by Peter Hyams
Starring Arnold Schwarzenegger and Gabriel Byrne
Playing at Showcase Cinemas

With the coming of the millennium upon us, Hollywood is doing it's best to exploit it. The latest item is the action movie End of Days, in which Arnold fights to protect a young woman, who is destined to do the nasty with the Devil and be the bearer of Satan's child, which will be the catalyst for the coming Apocalypse — or the End of Days. Wait, are you sure this is a new movie? It sounds so much like Terminator 2 and The Devil's Advocate. Is it that Arnold sold out and made a big budget movie so people don't think he is dead? Say it ain't so Arnold, say it ain't so.

Now despite what you might think, End of Days does, indeed, have a plot. It seems that the Vatican has a group of cardinals and priests, led by the Pope of course, who watches out for Satan, in case he decides to try and take over the world. Just imagine the Jedi High Council only with crosses. Back in 1979 a certain image appeared in the sky for a split second. The child that is born under this sign will be the bearer of Satan's child. The pope sounds the God alarm and the priests go into a frenzy and try to find this child. Why doesn't God tell them where the child is? He knows, and so does the Devil, because he tells his people where the child is, and young Christine (do I sense a biblical reference) is marked.

In 1999, days before the end of the century, the Devil appears in New York, and for some reason is attracted to an investment banker played by Gabriel Byrne. We don't know his name or why the Devil picked him out. Maybe he is a devil worshipper, part of the same cult who has been protecting Christine. Perhaps the Devil likes the way he looks in black. The Devil knows that he is an investment banker; maybe that's reason enough. Maybe the Devil saw The Usual Suspects, and liked the way Gabriel Byrne looked as a man in the shadows. For whatever reason, the Devil begins his search for a cult so that they can bring Christine to him.

At the same time, Arnold wakes up and puts a gun to his head contemplating suicide (rip-off alert: same scene found in Lethal Weapon) when Kevin Pollack interrupts him and takes him to work. They work for a security agency that protects important people, and according to Arnold, "I like the slime bahgs, they pay bettah". While protecting his client, who, by coincidence is Satan, but no one knows it, Arnold chases a would-be assassin. When the smoke clears, Arnold is ready to begin his search for a mysterious girl.

End of Days is an action movie, nothing more and nothing less. It recycles other action movies and fills in the gaps with gunfire and special effects. That is what makes this film an Arnahld film. The action scenes are most impressive which show Arnold taking on the Devil single handedly. The witty hunter with Arnold, Kevin Pollack and Gabriel Byrne make the movie bearable and entertaining. Like other action films, there is nothing that phenomenal about the film. The special effects are cool, but not as spectacular as those in T2. End of Days is an entertaining film, something to keep your mind out of the real world for about two hours. Just don't take it too literally, after all, we all know Gabriel Byrne is not the devil. — Michael Fisher is Movie Grade: C

Hey, Arnold. Look out. Lucifer is behind you.

By serving America part-time

In the MA Army National Guard YOU CAN...

- Get free undergraduate/graduate tuition
- Earn from $400-$800 for one weekend
- Receive a $5000-$8000 cash bonus
- Repay your student loans
- Develop leadership ability
- Build a POWERFUL resume

Call Today!
1-800-GO-GUARD
or visit
www.1-800-GO-GUARD.com
YOU CAN

Fake Cash On-Line

Adam Martignetti

In the spirit of evolution, I have once again reshaped this column to be much more site-oriented. That's right; no more news on emerging Internet technologies, which will one day change your life. From now on, I'm just going to give you a few different ways to frivolously waste your time while surfing the Net. In advance, let me apologize for the long delay between columns. Forgive me. I was lost in the Web.

Internet site of the week: http://www.hsx.com

For anyone even remotely interested in movies and/or online trading this site is the perfect fit. Fans of Access Hollywood may recognize the name thanks to the Internet site's recent teaming with NBC. The Hollywood Stock Exchange (HSX) is an entertainment market simulation. While that may sound complicated, it's really not.

Basically, HSX is a game. When you signup (free with any e-mail account. Although you can only have one account per e-mail address), you get 1$2 million or 2 million Hollywood dollars. What do you do with your newfound wealth? Well, a couple of different things.

You can buy either stocks (Movie Stocks to be precise) or bonds (Star bonds) just like on Wall St. Movie Stocks are stocks of movies; whether these movies are in theaters, or about to be released, or just ideas in some screenwriter's mind. Like any stock, the price varies based on demand, but ultimately a stock's price is determined by its box office intake over the course of one month. For example, a movie that makes $100 million at the box office in four weeks is worth H$100.

So, the key is to position your portfolio in movies that will do well at the box office. After a movie opens, stocks are "adjusted" to their projected four-week total. Also, the site implemented short selling to take advantage of stocks (movies) that you think will do down.

Star bonds are very similar. Instead of movie though, they are bonds of stars or actors/actresses. Likewise, their price fluctuates based on demand. A star will "adjust" though when he/she stars in a film. This adjust process is slightly more complex, but a star can either go up or down depending on how well their movie does.

The site also offers a music exchange with similar principles. And yes, you too can own a piece of Britney Spears. Lastly, it's a great place to get info on any upcoming projects.

Sticking with the movie theme, http://www.cinecon.com is another great site for upcoming movies. They've got all sorts of Hollywood gossip, but do manage to land some decidedly exciting stuff. This includes photos from movie still in production, early reviews of films screened only once to a select few and a look at movie posters tan enjoyable, but rare pleasure these days). They also manage to get trailers before they're available in theaters. You can generally skip the articles section, but if you want the latest news on X-Men, Charlie's Angels, or even The Grinch Who Stole Christmas (with Jim Carrey), then this is the place to look.

For more of the same, check out Dark Horizons (http://www.dark-horizons.com). Although the content is relatively similar, DH standouts for the clean page design alone. In addition to all the entertainment news and so forth, DH offers an impressive three-year index starting with 1997. This index includes every movie made in the respective year with images, cast & crew info, plotlines, trailers, release dates, reviews, links and all past news regarding the film.

Lastly, just for kicks surf over to www.ebay.com. Once you signup for free you will receive your e-bay number. This number can be used for two things. First, someone can call your e-fax number and they will be forwarded to a voice mail system.

Turn to FAKE page 6

Lasers, sounds and hype

By Charles Derdiarian
Collegian Correspondent

Paul Oakenfold and Dave Ralph
Avalon Ballroom
Saturday, November 27, 1999

BOSTON — Paul Oakenfold and Dave Ralph mesmerized an ecstatic crowd at the Avalon Ballroom Saturday night, spinning the newest and fastest trance music the world has to offer. From their balcony perch overlooking the dance-floor, the two British-born DJs ignited the nervous systems of everyone in attendance, even painting smiles on the faces of security personnel.

The size of the crowd was impressive for a pre-midnight show, with several hundred people lining up at 10:30 for only a handful of remaining tickets. Oakenfold fans reveling outside the doors displayed homemade laser shows and attempted to catch a glimpse of, or get a hands-shake from, perhaps the most influential DJ on the planet.

Dave Ralph, the night's initiator, set up shop just before 11:00 and immediately set the Avalon ablaze. Pounding house beats overlaid with sensual trance rhythms enveloped the crowd in an embryonic haze. Coming fresh off the release of his first major album, the excellent double disk compilation Tranceport 2, Ralph had people bouncing, grinding and screaming just moments into his set. At midnight Ralph ended his hour-long opus with the standout track, "Fiji" by Atlantis, which is also on Tranceport 2 and will probably soon become a popular club anthem. After waving good-bye to a standing and screaming ovation, Ralph stepped aside so his friend and mentor Paul Oakenfold could take control of the crowd.

Only seconds after assuming his place behind the decks, Oakenfold got the Avalon raging again. On tour to promote both Dave Ralph's new album and his own record label, Perfecto/Kinetic, Oakenfold worked the crowd and the music into an almost frightening frenzy. Amidst bubbles, snowflakes and an incredible laser-light show, the Avalon was sent skywards during this breathtaking two-hour long set. Hints of Pink Floyd were found throughout Oakenfold's set, a group that both he and Ralph derive elements of their sound from. Powerful gospel vocals along with the light show's warm, glowing spotlights created an atmosphere that was downright religious. Oakenfold, one of the most animated

Turn to LASERS page 6

MAKE $100 EVEN BEFORE YOU FIND A JOB!

Enter your resume at www.jobdirect.com/contest for a chance to win $100

www.jobdirect.com
Great Jobs For College Students

$ ATTENTION $
February 2000 Graduates

If you are a member of the February 2000 graduating class who received Federal Perkins Loans while enrolled at UMass you should have recently received certified letter about those loans.

We know this is a very busy time for you so we've mailed this information rather than having you attend a meeting.

$

However there are serious consequences if you fail to return these documents by 11/3099 as instructed in our letter.

If you haven't received our letter but think that you should have or if you have any questions about what you did receive.

$ Call 545-2377 $

GOOD LUCK FINDING TUMS ON THURSDAY

ALL YOU CAN EAT WINGS
MON. TUES. WED. 7PM-10PM
5 BUCKS

THE HANGAR Pub and Grill
55 UNIVERSITY DRIVE
AMHERST, MA

COURTESY CHAPMAN-BADHEER

Good rock never dies, as seen by Megadeth's performance last week.

Megadeth Crushes Avalon

By: Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

Megadeth, Static-X, DDT
Avalon
November 22

It was a head-scratching move when the Megadeth show scheduled for Sunday at the Orpheum was moved to the Avalon on Monday. Rumors floated around the Avalon floor of low ticket sales, but whatever the reason, the move resulted in a much more personal and exciting show for everyone in attendance. And having never been in the Avalon before, I was very impressed by how nice it was, and after about five seconds I didn't miss the muddled acoustics of the Orpheum at all.

Survey the T-shirts in the audience and it is obvious whom the crowd was there to see: Megadeth, on their first local stop since the release of their new album Risk. But there are more than a few supporters of California rhythmic-trancecore artists Static-X, no doubt due to airplay on WAAF and MTV's pathetic clinging to one or two credible metal bands justify that they're still hip. DDT is relatively unknown in these parts, evidenced by the unfamiliarity of the crowd with their songs or even their style.

But this is a fact that will hopefully change very soon, as DDT gave a blistering performance in their criminally short half hour time slot. "Blue Hair Crime," one of the many tracks represented off their latest release Urban Observer, got the crowd familiar with both the rapping style of Corey Perry White, and the melodic vocals of singer Brian Howes. "This next song is about syndication and how syndication sucks!" proved a suitable introduction to "Hey Steve," easily one of the best tracks on the album, which got a few members of the crowd to jump around and show some support. White's constant use of a megaphone to distort his vocals proved tiresome after a while, but his use of it for the hilarious interlude during closer "MCDDT" forgives all. Other memorable scenes from their performance were the hyperactive drum solo and the adrenaline-charged pace of "Pistol Whip." Unfortunately, most of the half-full crowd during DDT's set resembled inhabitants of a morgue, but that didn't deter the band at all, and their high-energy set was appreciated and I definitely am looking forward to their next swing through this area.

I wasn't terribly excited to see Static-X for the third time, as I was getting tired of hearing the same songs from their debut Wisconsin Death Trip. But the opening sounds of "Bled for Days" changed my mind immediately, as this was easily the best performance from this band I have ever witnessed. Back in April at the Worcester Palladium, the band seemed nervous, didn't move around much, and was received with relative indifference from the crowd. But what a difference eight months makes, as the band seems well at home on stage and the crowd was behind them one hundred percent. Songs like "I'm With Stupid" and "I Am" seemed to have new life breathed into them, and new additions to the set list, the title track and "The Trance is the Motion," are more than welcome and sounded excellent. When it came time for the closing sounds of "Push It" the crowd was exhausted but let it all out for a charged goodbye.

Megadeth was greeted with huge applause, and the crushing, stop-and-go guitar riffs of "Prince of Darkness" proved a suitable opener. The band didn't have much luck with the new single off Risk, "Breadline," but the third and final track off the new release, "Crush 'Em," is mindless fun at its best. The opening chords of the epic "Holy Wars...The Punishment Due" whipped the crowd into an unforgettable frenzy, and the follow-up "In My Darkest Hour" kept the momentum going. The band is looking good these days; the Daves, Mustaine and Ellefson are in top form as usual, and guitarist Marty Friedman, despite a new haircut that gives him an uncanny resemblance to Jerry Seinfeld, lets loose gut-wrenching solos with ease. New drummer Jimmy DeGrasso gave a fine performance, but former drummer Nick Menza had an edgy, joking personality that is nowhere to be found, on stage at least, with Degrasso.

Mustaine threw the crowd one final thrash bone in "Hangar 18" before concentrating mainly on selections from 1997's Cryptic Writings. The insane guitar work on both "She-Wolf" and "Use the Man" were both well-received by the crowd, and to slow down the tempo there are few better selections in Megadeth's catalogue than "Trust" and "Almost Honest." The obligatory selections from Countdown to Extinction and Youthanasia were represented in "Reckoning Day," "Symphony of Destruction," and Mustaine's credit to dementia "Sweating Bullets," which has evolved into a classic sing-a-long.

Megadeth closed their set with "Peace Sells...But Who's Buying?" before returning to the stage for an encore that consisted of two cover songs. The biggest surprise of the evening was Megadeth's take on Black Sabbath's legendary "Paranoid," which I have never seen them perform live. The last song of the night was the eternal Sex Pistol's anthem "Anarchy in the U.K.," and Megadeth received some vocal help from the members of Drain S.T.H., who were seen mingling in the club throughout the show and finally took the stage at the end.

■ fake

continued from page 5

where they can leave a message for you. This message is then automatically sent to your e-mail account where you can listen to it. (First, you must download a small software program and you must have a PC). Secondly, anyone can send a fax to your e-fax number and, again, it is forwarded to your email address where you can read it. (This requires Adobe Acrobat, available for free at www.adobe.com).

If you're willing to pay a small monthly fee, then you get bonus features. These include, the ability to send faxes for free by simply using your e-mail account, the ability to respond to voice mail with e-mail or your own voice mail, and the ability to open up faxes and edit them in a word processing program. That's technology. Now find a way to use it!

Adam Marignetti is a Collegian Staff Member.

■ lasers

continued from page 5

DJs around, added to the crowd's intensity by bouncing back and forth between decks, pumping his fists in the air and screaming back at the roar of the dance-floor.

By the time 2:00 a.m. rolled around, people were visibly shaken from an unusually intense show. Due to the size of the crowd, the intensity of the floorshow and the prestige the DJs carried into the club, last Saturday felt like an early New Year's Eve at the Avalon. Through the majestic efforts of Dave Ralph and Paul Oakenfold, it was a night that came very close to perfection.

WRITE FOR ARTS

FREE DELIVERY!
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
586-7272
HOURS OF OPERATION:
Mon – Wed 11am - 1am,
Thurs & Sun 11am - 2am,
Fri & Sat 11am - 3am
Now Accepting:
OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan
1 LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $6.99
1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99
3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS
Equal Opportunity Employer
Springfield: 413-731-6910
Worcester: 508-366-8847
Boston: 617-484-1788
North of Boston: 978-777-2253
South of Boston: 508-821-5591
Plymouth: 508-833-1145
Route 3 South: 781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast: 603-926-9813
Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9

I Refuse to be a Victim.
You Can, Too.
Women; Develop you own personal safety strategy
You Can Refuse to be a victim. Call now for reservations at a 3 hour course to help develop your own Personal Safety Strategy.
Sunday December 5th 9:00 AM to 12:00 Noon.
At The F.C.L.S.C. Field House located on River Road in East Deerfield, MA.
Fee: $20.00
Sponsored by the women of The Franklin County league of Sportsmen's Clubs Inc.
Reservations are required. Call (413) 665-4362 email lanfare@shaynet.com for reservations, course details and directions.
Seating is limited. Call for reservations now!

ATTENTION: COLLEGE STUDENTS
Earn College Credits During Your Winter Break
Wintersession
Day and Evening Classes — One & Two Week Courses
Classes Guaranteed to Run
Art, Biology, Communications, Education, English, History, Management, Movement Science, Music, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Women's Studies, Credit-Free Computer Courses, Debt-Free Living Seminar
Call (413) 572-5224 for registration information
Westfield State College
www1.wsc.mass.edu/dgce

Fall 1999
Eating Disorder Programs
• Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals - with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner. --Confidentiality Assured.
Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2
• Eating Disorder Informational Sessions
Facilitated by a UHS Nutritionist, these drop in sessions will include a video and discussion about eating disorders, where to go for help and learn how to help a friend. Registration is not required for these sessions that will meet 4:00 - 5:30 P.M. on Sept. 21, Oct. 20, Nov. 9, and Dec. 1 in room 302 at University Health Services.
• Residence Hall Worksbops
Body Image and Understanding Eating Disorders Workshops are available upon request. Contact your Resident Assistant to schedule a workshop.

Arts:
the most fun you can have for 4 letters... the one you're thinking of has 3

Violence Against Women
CLASSISM
U.S. Criminal Justice System
Racism
William and Odessa Smith, parents of Kemba Smith and other panelists speak on:
KEMBA'S NIGHTMARE
Does the punishment fit the crime? Was justice served?
Thursday, December 2nd, 1999
7:00 p.m.
Campus Center Auditorium
Sponsored by:
Woman's Studies Department, Graduate Student Senate, Everywoman's Center, Woman of Color Leadership Network, Food For Thought, Josephine White Eagle Cultural Center, Office of ALANA Affairs, Student Activities Cultural Enrichment Fund, WMUA, Black Students Union, SOUL TV

IN SHAPE NUTRITION
Nutrition Supplement Discounter
Great Products, Great Prices, Great Service!
END OF THE MILLENNIUM BLOWOUT SALE!
November 29th - December 31st
65 University Drive, Amherst 549-7434
Get coupons online @ www.inshapeonline.com

MEN, WOMEN, SEX, VIOLENCE

The recent campus assaults by men against women are just the visible edge of a massive problem. Boys' and men's violence against girls and women (murder, battering, dating violence, sexual assault) is an epidemic in our society

THESE ARE NOT JUST "WOMEN'S ISSUES."

These are issues that we all (as individuals, as men and women, as a community) have to confront. Men (the vast majority of whom are non-violent) have a special responsibility and obligation to deal with the violence directed by men against women.

But how do we help? What steps can we take?

"Preventing Sexual Violence: What MEN Can Do"

With Jackson Katz

4pm
Wednesday December 1
Campus Center Auditorium

Jackson Katz is a former all-star high-school football player and an alumnus of UMass. He is the founder of MVP Strategies, an organization that offers gender violence prevention training to many groups (colleges, high schools, professional and college sports teams, community groups, corporations and the U.S. military – including the first world-wide program in the history of the Marine Corps). He has lectured at hundreds of schools and colleges across the nation.

We, the undersigned, urge everyone - men and women - to come and hear Jackson Katz discuss these issues.

DAVID SCOTT, Chancellor
JAVIER CEVALLOS, Interim Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs
JAMES 'BRUISER' FLINT, Head Basketball Coach
MARK WHIPPLE, Head Football Coach
ROBERT MARCUM, Director of Athletics
SETH AVAKIAN, Student Trustee
JEFFREY HOWE, President, SGA
GRANT INGLE, Director, Office of Human Relations
JACK LUIPPOLD, UMass Police Chief
JON KAPELL, Interim Director, Greek Affairs
JOSEPH LARSON, Secretary, Faculty Senate
GLEN GORDON, Dean, Social & Behavioral Sciences
JOSEPH BATTISTA, Director, Residential Academic Programs
JOHN BRACEY, Professor, African-American Studies
SUT JHALLY, Professor, Communication
MARTIN ESPADA, Professor, English
ANDY ANDERSON, Professor, Sociology
DAN CLAWSON, Professor, Sociology
PETER ELBOW, Director, Writing Program
JAMES SHAW, President, Graduate Employees Organization

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apt. Cliffside, Sunderland. $300/mo. Everything included. Call Ito H: 665-8721 W: 545-2108

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

1987 Ford Escort 95,000 miles 4 DR. Auto perfect condition, no rust. $1,700 253-1303

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

December Grads: Entry-level position with great opportunity for advancement and responsibility available. Need high GPA and interest in high-tech industry, interviewing on campus Dec. 1st. send resumes to gel@scientific.com www.scientific.com/joinSPI

EMPLOYMENT

Cool Candy Company on bus route in Amherst seeks outgoing phone sales reps. You can work around your classes with our flexible schedule: choose one of two daily shifts (four hours each), minimum of three shifts per week. Shifts are 10am-2pm or 1pm to 5pm. Earn up to $10 an hour with base salary plus commission. Requires some sales experience, but personality is most important. Don't miss this great opportunity - call Beth right now to set up an interview! 1-888-556-5599

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

Ware Youth Center Seeks a dynamic, creative person to direct youth activities. Flexible part time hours. Send resume by December 6, to K. Hendersen, c/o Valley Human Services, 96 South Street, Ware, MA 01082 AA/EOE

EMPLOYMENT

EXCELLENT compensation for marketing college products at BEST prices. Go NOW to: http://www.adademos.com/campusrep

Human Services - Residential support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults. Permanent hours (full and part time) and relief. Hours include evenings, weekends, and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for Permanent). Locations in Belchertown and South Hadley. Call (413) 774-2281, ext. 11 (ask for Mary). AA/EOE

Campaign Jobs for the environment $300-$400/wk, F/T, P/T, + Career opportunities, Call Jesse 256-6434

Spring Break Staff Wanted for Cancun and Mazatlan 6 to 10 weeks in Mexico all expenses paid and salary. Respond to Email address Aanders@catavel.com

Summer Business Internships Available Not limited to business majors. Earn up to $15,000 this summer. Call 1-800-390-4848 Ext. 100 ASAP or visit www.univ-paint.com

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards no experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deducions? Quesions about subletting/assigning leases? Quesions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

LOST & FOUND

FOUND Purple Jacket outside of LGRT. Call to identify. Call Paul 546-4427

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Bdr in 4 Bedroom House Oil Heat. No pets. Non-smoker. 10 mins from Amherst in Belchertown $263/month, utilities extra. Call Chris 323-0899 Leave a message

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

Party with UMass Ski N' Board Club for the Millennium Quebec City/Hilton 5 nites/4days $299 Dec28-Jan2 Social opportunity age is 18 sign up now, space is selling out bus option available... call 545-3437

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Are you dying to get out of here??

Where are you going for Spring Break?

Find out NOW... Check Out The Collegian Classifieds!!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, NOV. 30

Concert – There will be a concert entitled "A Stairway to Paradise" at 12:30 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall, at Smith College.

Lecture – A lecture entitled "Human Rights in Tibet, Part I" will be read as part of the three-part five college lecture series at 4 p.m. in Dewey Common Room at Smith College

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 1

Lecture – Professors Dettelbach and McGinness will recreate the 1616 audience Galilei had with Cardinal Roberto Bellarmino on the truth of Copernican astronomy, foreshadowing Galileo's condemnation by the Inquisition, in a lecture entitled "Galilei v. Bellarmino" which will begin at 5 p.m. in McConnell auditorium at Smith College.

Workshop – There will be a print workshop featuring artist Georgia Marsh and master printer Maurice Sanchez from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. in Hillyer Hall 17 at Smith College.

NOTICES

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Duyst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Crafts - The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN Support – Al-Anon and Alateen meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card. When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate! *See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Hearing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	31	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	32	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	33	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	34	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	35	CNN fn
7	HSCN Manila Ch.	36	CNN si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	37	TBS
9	Weather Channel	38	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	39	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	40	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	41	Comedy Central
13	WCICH & HSCN	42	Cartoon Network
14	International	43	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	44	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven	45	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	46	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	47	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19	48	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 30, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Homebuyer With Jim Lehrer		Business Rpt.	Women's College Basketball: Illinois at Connecticut (Live)					Jonathan Winters: Comedy Legend		Late Show
WFSB	3	News		CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	CAS "Mother" (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Jonathan Winters: "Crowded House"		Late Show
WWLP	22	News		NBC News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight		CAS "Mother" (In Stereo)		Jonathan Winters: "Crowded House"		News
WRC	4	News		CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight		Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Spin City		Friends
WCVB	5	News		Wheel of Fortune	Jeopardy!	Millionaire		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "Hero"		News
WLVI	56	Home, Maker		Trash Prince	Friends	Nanny		Just Shoot Me	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline (In Stereo)
WHDH	7	News		NBC News	Wheel of Fortune	Jeopardy!		Just Shoot Me	3rd Rock-Sun	News		Real TV (N)
WTXX	16	Judge Lans		NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight		Just Shoot Me	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	News
WYCC	20			Business Rpt.	Wheel of Fortune	Friends		This Time	Dharma-Greg	Spin City		Friends
WTIC	61	News		Inside Edition	Wheel of Fortune	Jeopardy!		Just Shoot Me	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline "Fyi" (In Stereo)
WWLP	40	News		Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight		Just Shoot Me	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Just Shoot Me	Dateline "Fyi" (In Stereo)
WGBY	57	World News		Business Rpt.	Homebuyer With Jim Lehrer			Intimate Strangers				News
WGGB	40	News		Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight		Spin City	Dharma-Greg	Spin City		Friends
WSBK	38			Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince			Biography: Marquis de Sade		Late Show
WTBS	72			Dinette & Bloom			Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Daily Show
A&E	25			Homeshow Homebuyer			Crossfire	Larry King Live		Biography		Daily Show
CNN	24			Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Biography	Saturday Night Live		Investigative Reports (R)		Late Show
CSPAN	18			Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Biography	Saturday Night Live		New Detectives (R)		City Confidential (R)
DISC	26			Year Now Houses (R)		Great Chefs of South America		Great Chefs of South America		College Football: ACC/Big Ten Challenge		Golden Girls
ESPN	27					College Basketball: ACC/Big Ten Challenge				College Football: ACC/Big Ten Challenge		Golden Girls
LIFE	23			Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait	Jackie Smith	The Practice		Chicago Hope "Liver Let Die"		Law & Order
MTV	29			Celebrity Jeopardy		Real Bulls		Wild, Wild Web		Real Bulls		Real World
NICK	28			Rugrats		Rugrats		Rugrats		Rugrats		Rugrats
SCIFI	31			Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sentinel "Warriors" (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Warriors" (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Warriors" (In Stereo)		Sentinel "Warriors" (In Stereo)
TLC	32			Home Again		Home & Garden		Carolina		Trauma: Life in the ER (N)		Trauma: Life in the ER
TNT	30			Ben Smith "The Edge" (R)		Ben Smith "The Edge" (R)		NBA Basketball: New York Knicks at Phoenix Suns (In Stereo Live)				Movie
USA	33			Kenneth "On for the Gold"		Kenneth "On for the Gold"		Kenneth "On for the Gold"		Walker, Texas Ranger		Walker, Texas Ranger
HBO	8
MAX	9
SHOW	10

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Lie low today until you have more information to work with, for a hasty decision and premature action can only be hazardous.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Money matters are in the forefront today. See if you can arrange for increased care of those who are depending on you at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Phone calls and other messages may come fast and furiously today. It is essential that you keep all new information in order and at hand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Planning must be thorough today if you are to win the results you so desire. Take care you don't appear uneasy or defensive in any way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Understanding and cooperation must not be sacrificed today in the name of immediate personal gains. Work together at this time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may be endangering yourself or someone you know at this time, albeit unintentionally. It's time to demand an increased level of sensitivity on your part. You mustn't make too many demands on others at this time.

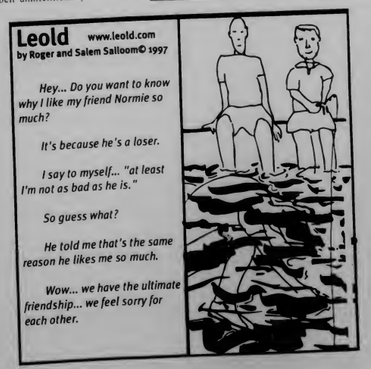
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your fine memory and your willingness to focus squarely on the smallest detail will serve you well throughout the day.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Change is certainly in the picture today, but how you react to it will make all the difference. Good needn't mean good, nor bad mean bad!

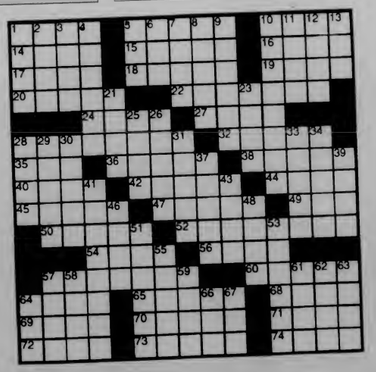
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Domestic issues arise today which increase your own awareness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Given all your options today, you are best to seek out new avenues of expression if you expect to feel truly satisfied and contented.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Practical concerns must not be overshadowed by imaginative wanderings today, as exciting as they may be. A down-to-earth approach is required.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You can add a good deal of excitement to your day by focusing on the needs of a "special someone." You both depend on each other more than you know!

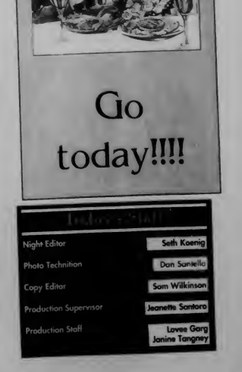


Quote of the Day

"Wait a minute, he kinda looks like a baby!"

–Fat Bastard

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997



ACROSS
1 Seed containers
5 Improvise
10 See socially
14 Former dictator —
15 Type of godmother
16 Bread spread
17 Identify
18 Alpine region
19 Kitchen appliance
20 Say "hello"
22 "The eyes" for "they see," e.g.
24 Alphabet enders
27 Q-tip, e.g.
28 Flowed
32 Winter vehicles
35 Hurry
36 Metal bolt for Rosie?
38 Piece of cake
40 Snake trees
42 Assign (to)
44 Remained
45 Skirt style
47 Juliet's beloved
49 11th mo.
50 Football great Bart
52 Sudden, intuitive realization
54 Horse color
56 "I'm — you!"
57 Support
60 Rescued
64 Rani's garment
65 Soil material
68 Learn by — memorize
69 Verve
70 Go away
71 Place
72 Bird part
73 Barkin or Burstyn

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

DOWN
1 Twinge
2 General Bradley
3 Thin corn
4 Allergy symptom
5 Shipboard direction
6 Calendar unit
7 Italian currency
8 Golf clubs
9 Rules
10 Ring it!
11 Thomas — Edison
12 Swarm (with)
13 Vast time
21 Jag
23 Women
25 Islamic VIP
26 Cut off
28 Mets' stadium
29 Plows
30 Send money
31 "Robinson Crusoe" author
33 Rigg or Ross
34 Descendant
37 Pace
39 Green with —
41 Growing
43 Harmless piece
46 God of love
48 Makes a choice
51 Infant's toy
53 Throaty
55 Staircase post
57 — Ha!
58 Algerian port
59 Factual
61 Null and —
62 Singer James
63 Judge
64 Act like a tailor
66 Night before
67 Study

Good food every day at the DC!!!

Go today!!!!

Index Staff

Night Editor	Seth Koenig
Photo Technitian	Dan Sumiello
Copy Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor	Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff	Lovea Garg, Janine Tangney

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday, November 30, 1999

Men's hoop team stumbles over Thundering Herd, 65-55

Offensive rebounding missing for Minutemen

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

They heard the thunder and it didn't take long for lightning to strike once again.

It was the same story, just a different setting for the Massachusetts basketball team. What some considered a fluke resurfaced in Amherst as the Thundering Herd of Marshall started out slowly but eventually stampeded through the Minutemen, 66-55, at the Mullins Center last night.

The glass was controlled by the Thundering Herd, outboarding the Minutemen 48-33 underneath, including a 21-8 advantage on the offensive side. J.R. Van Hoose himself grabbed nine offensive rebounds, helping the Herd to a 19 second chance points to the Minutemen's six.

Van Hoose tallied 19 points and 16 rebounds, both season-highs. He paired up with Derrick Wright underneath, who grabbed seven offensive rebounds to keep Marshall threats alive.

"Every time we stopped them and made them to take a bad shot, they got it and put it back in. That's the bottom line right there," coach James "Bruiser" Flint said. "Our front line was awful today."

The Minutemen closed within two at 55-53 with 3:20 to go when Kitwana Rhymer dunked the ball home after a beautiful feed from Monty Mack in the lane. The pandemonium in Amherst was short-lived, as sophomore Tamar Slay drilled one of his four second half 3-pointers to open the lead to five, an advantage UMass would not dig in to for the remainder of the game.

Rhymer fouled out of his second game this season, scoring 10 points and 10 rebounds, also registering a career-high six blocks. Like the loss to Connecticut, Rhymer was left alone underneath while Van Hoose and Wright cleaned up.

"You can't keep stopping people and keep giving them second chances," Flint said. "There's only so much defense you can play.

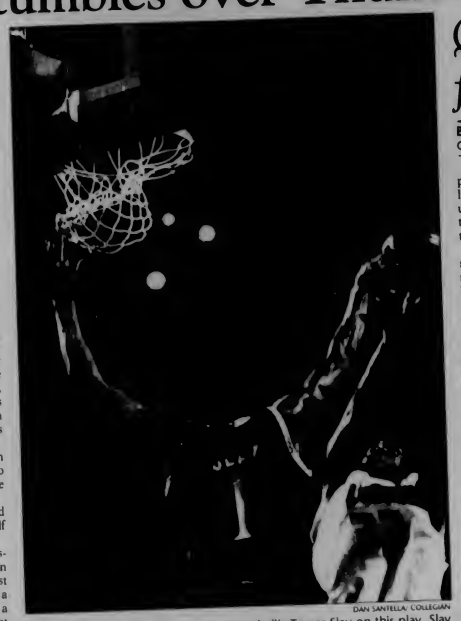
"They outhustled us on the boards. That's the bottom line. They ran them down. They got them all."

Scoring the first four points of the second half, the Minutemen looked to have found an answer for their abysmal 32 percent shooting effort in the first half. Then the drought came. In just over five minutes, the Herd would hold the Minutemen scoreless, stringing together 11 straight points to open up a 39-32 lead with 14:18 to go in the game.

"Guys weren't ready from the opening tip," Flint said. "I thought this was a good learning experience for us."

Last season, Marshall thrashed the Minutemen, 88-66, in Huntington, outscoring UMass 33-14 at the charity stripe.

Mack shot 9-for-19 from the field, but just 5-for-12 in the second half. As a team, the Minutemen made just 11 of 33 after intermission, including just 1 of 9 from behind the arc.



"Tonight I thought we got some decent looks at the basket," Flint said. "We just didn't put them in."

Senior co-captains Chris Kirkland and Mike Babul were held scoreless in the second half, the Minutemen relying heavily on Mack and Shannon Crooks to head the comeback attempt. After averaging 19 points per game in the final six games of last season, Kirkland's point production has dropped severely, the South Carolina native averaging just 11.3 points through three games in 1999.

"I thought they had gaps in the zone and we could have driven to the basket it if we wanted to, but we didn't attack," Flint said.

Jonathan DePina also failed to find the scoring column in the second half in 10 minutes of play.

UMass built a 20-10 lead early, closing out a 13-2 run when Mack hit an open lay-up with 10:37 left in the first half. Marshall responded, launching a 18-8 run to end the half, including a Slay lay-up following a blocked shot that beat the clock to knot the game at 28 through a half.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

Kitwana Rhymer was bettered by Marshall's Tamar Slay on this play. Slay ended the game with 24 points.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

Rhymer got his chance to shine, though, as he recorded 10 points and 10 rebounds before fouling out.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

UMass coach Bruiser Flint said that only Shannon Crooks and his backcourt mate, Monty Mack, took effective shots.

Question of confidence for UMass hoop team

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

After watching Monty Mack net 26 points against then-No. 7 Connecticut last week, Husky coach Jim Calhoun unwittingly summed up the offense of the Massachusetts men's basketball team.

"(Mack) scored 11 points in the second half, but some of the shots made our job a little easier just because he takes so much," said Calhoun.

The key lesson to extract is the amount of shots Mack took, 21 from the floor, and not his point total. Despite being a marked man, Mack's quick release and constant hunting along the baseline earns him ample opportunities to score.

Last night, the Minutemen fell flat on their noses to a young Marshall squad, 65-55, in their season opener at the William D. Mullins Center. It was the Thundering Herd's third win in a row on the road to remain undefeated, as UMass dropped its second straight to stand at 1-2.

"To be honest, I thought we had some decent looks at the basket, we just didn't score on them," said UM coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "I told them to feel bad about this one. We missed a lot of easy baskets – we rushed a little bit."

Led by Mack's 22 points off the bench, four players combined for 50 Minutemen points. Senior Chris Kirkland and junior Kitwana Rhymer each contributed 10 points and point guard Shannon Crooks tallied eight points to equal the 50. Three other players, including two starters, amassed a mere five points.

"(Mack) probably won't come off the bench anymore," said Flint.

Marshall coach Greg White attributed UMass' offensive woes to a continuing struggle to understand the new offense. Scoring a majority of their points in the paint with 28, the Minutemen only converted for 14 fast break points.

"When you're scoring, there's no quick transition. They're caught in between what style they want to play," said White. "They started to lose their confidence in the last five minutes."

Flint disagreed with White, and felt that certain players simply did not step up and knock down the open jumper when they should have. Last night made it clear what the Minutemen were lacking: floor leadership and confidence.

"What we didn't do was; we didn't attack the way we did (in previous games). I thought they had gaps in their zone we could have drove to their basket like we wanted to, but we didn't attack," said Flint.

It's co-captain Mike Babul going 0-for-3 from the floor while raking down just two rebounds in 30 minutes. Despite the senior's billing as a defensive specialist, with just five players on the floor at a time, he has to be able to hit the open jumper or slash to the basket. If not for the obvious purpose of mixing up the offense, at least the penetration might draw a foul.

Junior Jonathan DePina finished with just two points, which he scored at the free throw line, after averaging 10.5 ppg in the first two contests.

Despite shooting a paltry 13-for-33 from the floor, Mack's and Shannon Crooks' shot selection and frequency was satisfactory for Flint.

"Those are the guys that stepped up to take shots – the other guys, if they don't step up to shoot, they don't deserve to get shots," said Flint. "We didn't aggressively attack the basket."

Down 53-49 with 3:58 to go, Mack dribbled the length of the court and danced the baseline past three Marshall defenders for a layup. If not for the urgency of the moment, Mack probably should have slowed down and waited to start the offense, but he must not have seen a reason to wait for the rest of his team.

"I know one thing, those two guys are going to aggressively attack the basket, they're going to shoot balls if they think they can shoot balls," said Flint. "You've have to want to the shot."

Fighting never hurt the NHL; lighten up

Flyers got losing out of the way, Rangers just bad

By Alexander Wood
Collegian Staff

Since the new adoption of four-on-four overtime play in the NHL has been such a huge success, perhaps the league should take a look at improving on one of the old appeals of the NHL: fighting. Not reducing or eliminating it, but rather encouraging it. While the idea may not appeal to the pacifist NHL fan (an oxymoron if ever there was one), the idea seems to have some merit in these times of the all mighty dollar.

While scoring and excitement in overtime have brought the numbers up for the NHL, the league still lags behind its professional counterparts in the ratings. The Lords of the Boards responses to this mathematical problem thus far, have been rule changes and team expansion, which have all met with some successes and mostly failures, i.e. the crease rule and the Carolina Hurricanes. Why not take a page out of the WWF, which is enjoying unprecedented growth and ratings, and bring fighting back onto the ice.

The WWF is nothing but fighting, albeit simulated. Millions of people pay $49.95 to watch a corrupt boxing match that tends to last no more than fifteen minutes. The NFL is really just an organized version of good, old-fashioned shoving and pushing until someone gets crushed to the ground under a heap of humanity. Meanwhile, scoring is up in the usually defense-oriented NBA, and numbers are at an all time low. So it seems that while the general public may appreciate a high scoring affair, people still seem to enjoy a good fight. Which is one of the things the NHL was famous for, toothless goons patrolling the ice, and bench clearing brawls.

Rather than diluting the talent pool further with more expansion into the sunbelt, or tinkering with the rules to turn professional hockey into basketball on ice, perhaps the Lords of the Boards should reduce the fines and restrictions against fighting, and allow the players to attract the fans with some good old-fashioned fisticuffs.

By allowing marshal law on the ice, there would almost certainly be a ripple effect that would create a smoother flowing game, with less hooking and holding, and fewer cheap shots that result in serious injuries. Players would have to think twice before checking someone from behind, when they knew that there would be a price to pay. The problem currently, is that there is a lack of respect among players, and they feel that they are invincible with all the equipment that they wear. As a result, players take cheap shots and there is a lot of sneaky stuff behind the referees' backs, which would be regulated by the tough guys on the ice. And the action may draw the fans and ratings that the NHL so desperately needs.

Alex Wood on the NHL

Let's not get too excited about the NHL's improving numbers, until something is done to attract more of a fan base, teams like the Pittsburgh Penguins and Carolina Hurricanes will continue to lose money and be a blight on the league's economic landscape. Many people weren't even sure that the Penguins would be here at this time last year, until Mario Lemieux stepped up and saved the franchise... again. Something needs to be done to control the escalating player salaries, i.e. a cap. The NHL can't afford to keep paying players at the rate that they currently are, until their revenues start going up... Speaking of overpaying players, let's have a hand for the Ottawa Senators who have told Alexei Yashin to take a seat for he refusing to play out the final year of his contract. This is another sign that a new financial plan needs to be put in place in order to put players like Yashin in theirs.

The Flyers continue their amazing turnaround, sitting at 13-8-4 after their horrid start. Perhaps they decided to get all the losing out of the way at the beginning of the season, and therefore lower some of the expectations and pressure put on captain Eric Lindros' fragile psyche.

As for things in New York, looks like Wayne Gretzky picked the right time to retire. The Rangers are in serious trouble, as the powerplay on a team of all-star veterans sulks at a woeful 7-for-93, and with Brian Leetch on the injured list, coach John Muckler will be canned in a New York minute.

The return of Byron Dafoe seems to have been nothing more of a morale boost for the Bruins than anything else, as Dafoe has yet to be anything more than human in his ten starts, with a 2.39 GAA and .897 save percentage. While John Grahame's NHL leading GAA of 1.72 in 8 games sits on the bench in place of Rob Tallas, who is nursing a finger tip that was sewn back on after being ripped off by a Ray Bourque slapper last week... On the other end of the spectrum, Bob Essensa's run of 6-0-1 has been just what the Phoenix Coyotes needed to replace holdout Nikolai Khabibulin. The 'Yotes traded Mikhail Shtalenkov to Florida for former Hartford Whaler, Sean Burke, who promptly injured himself putting the former Winnipeg Jet, Essensa in the starting role.

Meanwhile on the injury front, doctors said that Montreal forward Brian Savage could have been killed when he fractured at least one vertebra after being crunched by Ian Laperriere. Another argument for allowing fighting back into the game, which would keep the game safer but still keep the excitement... A quote from Gretzky, who was recently inducted into the Hockey Hall of Fame, on the rumors that Toronto thought of signing him back in '96. "Every person who grows up in Southern Ontario – it's such a hotbed for the Maple Leafs – every youngster here grows up dreaming about playing for the Maple Leafs. To be in Maple Leaf Gardens, that's really something special. I loved when I played there. I wish I could have been – some way, somehow – a Maple Leaf. But it just wasn't in the cards." It would have been interesting to see what the Leafs could have done with the Great One in their line-up rather than in the underachieving scenery of Madison Square Garden.

Wonder if Vancouver Canucks' rookie Steve Kariya, who has 6 goals and 13 points in 24 games, remembers that UMass upset of Maine at the Mullins Center last year? I wonder if he likes the fans in the NHL more than the fans at UMass?

UM shoots for first win

Paint play key against UNH

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Winning isn't everything, but losing bites.

The Massachusetts women's basketball team will stare into the jaws of a determined Wildcat squad when New Hampshire invades the William D. Mullins Center tonight at 7 pm. UNH (1-2) will ride in on the momentum of its 76-60 win over Siena on Sunday, while the Minutewomen (0-4) will be on a mission to break into the win column after a slow start. The Maroon and White bowed to No. 18 Boston College, 60-45, in its home opener on Saturday.

"We need to go out and execute," UMass head coach Joanie O'Brien said. "The intensity just wasn't there in our last game, when we missed some good shots early on and really played lax on defense. We need to step it up and get focused."

UMass has defined itself as a second-half team this season, as offensive mainstays Alison MacFarland and Kathy Coyner have typically taken some minutes to find their shooting touch. Early foul trouble, particularly on the part of inside bangers Jennifer Butler and Nekole Smith, has also played a part in the Maroon and White's sluggish starts.

Those factors could be doubly deadly against UNH, which has the capability of exploding off the opening tip. The Wildcats shot an astonishing .586 (17 of 29) from the field in the opening half of their victory over Siena.

"They've shown a knack for quick starts in all their games this year," O'Brien said. "The key for us is going to be pressure. We need to go back to the press, to use up some of the shot clock and keep them from running a quick offense."

The vaunted UMass press starts with its guard corps, a collection of fleet-footed athletes that includes Coyner, MacFarland, Tonia Thomas and Jaywana Bradley. With Bradley having seen limited action this year due to off-court problems and Thomas a game-time decision with health concerns, O'Brien may also implement freshmen Ebony Pegues and Kristin Cannon into the mix.

Cannon saw her first collegiate action on Saturday against BC, when she found herself matched up against All-Big East guards Cal Bouchard and Alissa Murphy.

While the UMass backcourt works to control the perimeter, Butler and the Maroon and White front line will have their hands full with UNH's Orsi Farkas and Aubrey Danen. The pair combined for 29 points and 13 rebounds against Siena, and poses the biggest threat to the Maroon and White's success in the eyes of coach O'Brien.

"The key for UNH is play in the paint," O'Brien said. "Their post players are the two biggest parts of their offense. We've got to work on things like buffing their cutters, to keep them from getting easy shots."

UMass will rely on forward Caroline Nehls for the lion's share of its points in the paint. Nehls netted a career-high 20 points in the Saturday loss to BC, and is currently second on the team with an average of 10.3 points per game.

After battling UNH tonight, the Minutewomen will gear up for this weekend's Gene Hackerman Rice Invitational in Houston, Texas.

DECEMBER

1999

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
New England's largest college daily

Wednesday, December 1, 1999

Volume CVI Issue 57

Women struck in car accident

Two women were injured yesterday when a dark-colored Chevy Lumina struck them on Massachusetts Avenue near the Southwest Horseshoe. The conditions of Courtney Spivack and Lisa Abrams, both residents of Coolidge Hall, have not been released. According to sources related with the Dean of Students, they were taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton and are tentatively scheduled to be released this morning.

The accident, which occurred slightly after 5 p.m. last night, scattered the women's possessions, including a backpack and a blanket, along the street. The University of Massachusetts Police Department blocked off University Avenue completely after the accident. The area of the accident was then cordoned off with police tape.

–Sam Wilkinson

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

The Ultimate

Students prefer the lawn by the pond for their intense ultimate Frisbee match.

ALANA students speak on concerns with SGA

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

In an open forum last night in the Cape Cod Lounge, two actions pertaining to the Asian, Latino, African and Native American (ALANA) students were discussed. The students were able to voice their concerns on a motion that would result in the elimination of ALANA caucus seats and the proposal for funding to be cut from the ALANA reserve.

Junior journalism major Jim Eltringham, a senator of Coolidge Residence Hall, co-wrote the first motion with Student Government Association (SGA) Deputy Attorney General Mark Boniface. Eltringham said it's important to distinguish that the elimination of ALANA seats is not a direct target at this group, but an elimination of all appointed seats in the SGA Senate.

The motion of eliminating appointed seats will be discussed at the SGA Senate meeting tonight. Boniface said he, Pellegrino and the ALANA caucus believe that every student should be represented within the Senate, but that by appointing seats, students are not given the opportunity to elect a representative who they believe will best represent their interests.

However, junior psychology and African American studies major Lanell James is concerned. She said people's voices can only be heard through representation. With 17 percent of the student body consisting of ALANA students, the appointed seats exist so that voices within this community can be heard and represented, James said.

"We want to guarantee to people that their voices can be heard," James said. "The under-representation of people of color in politics is the issue here and we represent the ALANA community's voice."

In any election, Boniface said there may not be a given candidate that will represent a certain group of the student population, but there is a solution.

Malcolm Beckwith, a sophomore social thought and political economy (STPEC) major, said eliminating the number of appointed seats would limit the voice of the community as a whole.

At the same time that this is being debated, another action has been pro-

Turn to ALANA, page 2

SGA to discuss elimination of appointed seats

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

At tonight's weekly Student Government Association meeting, the SGA will discuss a motion to eliminate both ALANA and residential area government appointed seats in the senate.

Asian, Latino, African and Native American students have 10 appointed representative seats in the senate, while each residential area government appoints one seat. The groups control 13 percent of the entire SGA.

Lanell James, a junior majoring in psychology and African-American history, the internal chair of the ALANA caucus, and Malcolm Beckwith, a sophomore majoring in economics, social thought and political economy and women's studies, are both leading the charge against the motion.

"This motion has been around for a while, but two weeks ago it came up in an administrative affairs meeting," Beckwith said. "For at least four years, though, there has been a push to get rid of the appointed seats."

Eltringham, a senator from the Southwest Residential Area and the author of tonight's motion, said that "at its heart, it is undemocratic to have appointed seats."

This issue is one that has concerned the SGA for several years. In 1994, the SGA constitution and by-laws were ratified to include a provision for appointed senators for Area Governments and what was then called the Third World Caucus. The appointed senators represented 13 percent of the Student Senate.

According to both James and Beckwith, they were interested in having an open conversation on the current state of the issue with Eltringham, but he indicated that there would be no compromise. Eltringham, for his part, said that "it is difficult, as a constitutional issue, there isn't a lot of middle ground."

James said that she had talked to SGA trustee Seth Avakian and that he was supportive of pro-student motions. James questions whether this is a pro-student motion.

James said that the idea of representation is "pro-student, and eliminating that voice isn't in anyway pro-student."

Beckwith is worried that there are many new people in the senate, and that they would not be aware of the impact that the motion would have if it was passed.

"I don't really think they know how it would affect campus," Beckwith said.

James said that the motion will almost guarantee that certain students do not have a voice.

Turn to SGA, page 3

Global rallies against WTO come to town

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

AMHERST – At the same time that police in Seattle were fighting with pepper spray to move protestors from the intersection at Seattle's Union Square, protestors in Amherst Town Common showed their support through a demonstration against the World Trade Organization.

"Hey, hey, ho, ho, the WTO has got to go," could be heard chanted across the globe yesterday as protestors gathered together in solidarity against the WTO Ministerial Conference in Seattle where trade discussions are being held.

Protestors wished to spread the message that although they are not against global organization, they are strongly opposed to corporate globalization. Individuals held signs across the Common and leading to the sidewalks on North Pleasant Street. The slogans were short, but their messages were meant to be strong. "No Globalization before Representation," "Jobs with Justice," and "Threat to Democracy," were just a few.

Individuals from the local area gathered together regardless of their age or status within society. Everyone was present to show support for human rights and take a stand against the WTO. "I came today because I feel strongly that the WTO is a negative influence," Rachel Berle, a first year student at Mount Holyoke College said. "It's the fact that its only goal is to limit trade at the expense of the environment. This is not acceptable."

Demonstrators explained that they were in favor of fair trade, but were against the means the WTO uses to attempt to achieve it. James Russell, who spoke on child labor, ended his speech by saying, "The WTO must be abolished."

"The WTO is putting profits before human and environmental needs," Dave Kotz said at the Amherst rally yesterday. "They are different from what they claim."

WTO was created in 1995 by international treaty to define and enforce global free trade between 134 nations. The mission of the organization is to establish a prospering global economy, while increasing the flow of goods and services across the world. In addition, it has the power to enforce international trade agreements.

Opposition believes the WTO is destroying the environment and that its main focus is on profits, not people, despite claims to better trade issues. Overall, protestors not only here in Amherst, but across the nation and globe, feel that the intentions of the WTO are not in the best interest of the world's population.

The conference is being used as a way to express "outrage and dissatisfaction with how workers have been treated globally through globalization," Tim Scott, a member of the Labor Party, said.

Other speakers saw the rally yesterday as a positive step in the battle to reclaim the earth. Susan Dorazil, a member of the Socialist party and one of the organizers of the rally said, "Make today a turning point."

"The fight has just begun, but we can win," Eric Chester, a member of the Socialist party, said.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Protestors of the World Trade Organization rallied yesterday on Amherst's Town Common.

World AIDS Day marked globally

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The 12th annual World AIDS Day, entitled "Children and Young People: Listen, Learn, Live," is being celebrated today around the world.

The event is also being recognized in the Pioneer Valley community. There will be a lecture today in regards to World AIDS Day at Smith College in McConnell Hall at 7:30 p.m. that will include several panelists speaking on the topic of AIDS-related issues.

The World AIDS Day campaign was created in 1988 by an organization called the World Summit of Ministers of Health on Programmes of AIDS Prevention, and emphasizes open channels of communication, strengthening the exchange of information and experience and forging a spirit of social tolerance.

This year's theme was chosen in order to focus more closely on preventing the spread of AIDS in both children and teenagers. The group plans upon focusing more closely on educating both groups on the dangers and the spread of the virus.

The organization supports AIDS awareness in a number of ways. They show support to AIDS victims by wearing a red ribbon, the international symbol for AIDS awareness, and reminding others for the need for a commitment to finding a cure for the disease. In addition, fundraising events for AIDS charities are also held by the organization.

AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Virus) and HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus), the virus that causes AIDS, is a major public health issue. The virus is found in blood, semen or vaginal secretions of an infected person, and can be spread in a variety of ways. The HIV virus is primarily spread by unprotected sex and sharing hypodermic needles with another person infected with the virus.

Also, babies born to HIV infected mothers are also at a high risk for becoming infected. Although there are drugs such as AZT that are used in the treatment of the disease, there is still no cure.

In Massachusetts alone, there are a total of 13,809 people living with the AIDS virus. In the United States 548,102 cases of the disease have been reported, and in the world as a whole it is estimated that a total of 21.8 million people are living with AIDS or HIV. Any person who fears that he or she may have been in contact with the HIV virus can be tested for the HIV antibody by blood test.

Any person effected with the AIDS or HIV virus can call the Massachusetts AIDS Hotline at (617) 536-7733 or toll free at (800) 253-2331 for support.

Observer discusses East Timor's continued struggles

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Activist Pamela Sexton discussed her experiences regarding the crisis in East Timor in the Campus Center yesterday.

By William F. Larkin
Collegian Correspondent

Former U.S. Coordinator for the International Federation for East Timor's Observer Project Pam Sexton spoke to an audience at the Campus Center yesterday about the United States' involvement in the political oppression of East Timor by the Indonesian military over the past 25 years.

Sexton told an audience of 20 students that Indonesia, with its rife natural resources and global sway, was an important ally to the United States during the 1970's. Over the past few decades, several countries with ties to the U.S. have established operations in Indonesia where they work hand in hand with local militias in oppressing citizens both politically and economically, Sexton said.

According to Sexton, Indonesia is an ally "who keeps wages low." Sexton criticized the United States for ignoring the plight of the East Timorese, who suffered severe oppression starting in 1975, when the Indonesian military, which is partially funded by the U.S., invaded the small territory. During the invasion, nearly one-third of the East Timorese population was slaughtered.

Since the occupation, the East Timorese have been subject to oppressive political rule, according to Sexton. She said that the Indonesian regime instilled a "degree of fear that was almost paranoia."

Sexton said that the East Timorese were deprived of self-determination, stripped of their ability to determine the future reality of their lives.

In 1996, Sexton said, the efforts of both students and grassroots campaigns led to a nationwide vote in

Turn to STRUGGLES, page 3

EXTENDED FORECAST

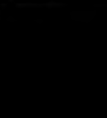
Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 34 LOW: 18	HIGH: 38 LOW: 26	HIGH: 48 LOW: 32

Source: WWLP.COM

It's time to go global!

The International Affairs page debuts today with coverage of recent events in Chechnya, Africa, East Timor and the WTO. Reach out beyond the confines of Amherst and educate yourself on current global happenings.

NEWS PAGE 0



Cottonmouth for the ears

Two excellent releases, and reviews to go with them. So check 'em out already! Awww, yeah!

ARTS PAGE 6

Fantastic Freshman

First year guard Ebony Peques had a huge first half of action last night at the William D. Mullins Center, but the Minutewomen ended up on the short end of a 60-58 score in overtime against New Hampshire.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ Issue 57 Wednesday, December 1, 1999

Women struck in car accident

Two women were injured yesterday when a dark-colored Chevy Lumina struck them on Massachusetts Avenue near the Southwest Horseshoe. The conditions of Courtney Spivack and Lisa Abrams, both residents of Coolidge Hall, have not been released. According to sources related with the Dean of Students, they were taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton and are tentatively scheduled to be released this morning.

The accident, which occurred slightly after 5 p.m. last night, scattered the women's possessions, including a backpack and a blanket, along the street. The University of Massachusetts Police Department blocked off University Avenue completely after the accident. The area of the accident was then cordoned off with police tape.

–Sam Wilkinson

SGA to discuss elimination of appointed seats

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

At tonight's weekly Student Government Association meeting, the SGA will discuss a motion to eliminate both ALANA and residential area government appointed seats in the senate.

Asian, Latino, African and Native American students have 10 appointed representative seats in the senate, while each residential area government appoints one seat. The groups control 13 percent of the entire SGA.

Lanell James, a junior majoring in psychology and African-American history, the internal chair of the ALANA caucus, and Malcolm Beckwith, a sophomore majoring in economics, social thought and political economy and women's studies, are both leading the charge against the motion.

"This motion has been around for a while, but two weeks ago it came up in an administrative affairs meeting," Beckwith said. "For at least four years, though, there has been a push to get rid of the appointed seats."

Eltringham, a senator from the Southwest Residential Area and the author of tonight's motion, said that "at its heart, it is undemocratic to have appointed seats."

This issue is one that has concerned the SGA for several years. In 1994, the SGA constitution and by-laws were ratified to include a provision for appointed senators for Area Governments and what was then called the Third World Caucus. The appointed senators represented 13 percent of the Student Senate.

According to both James and Beckwith, they were interested in having an open conversation on the current state of the issue with Eltringham, but he indicated that there would be no compromise. Eltringham, for his part, said that "it is difficult, as a constitutional issue, there isn't a lot of middle ground."

James said that she had talked to SGA trustee Seth Avakian and that he was supportive of pro-student motions. James questions whether this is a pro-student motion.

James said that the idea of representation is "pro-student, and eliminating that voice isn't in anyway pro-student."

Beckwith is worried that there are many new people in the senate, and that they would not be aware of the impact that the motion would have if it was passed.

"I don't really think they know how it would affect campus," Beckwith said.

James said that the motion will almost guarantee that certain students do not have a voice.

Turn to SGA, page 3

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

The Ultimate

Students prefer the lawn by the pond for their intense ultimate Frisbee match.

ALANA students speak on concerns with SGA

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

In an open forum last night in the Cape Cod Lounge, two actions pertaining to the Asian, Latino, African and Native American (ALANA) students were discussed. The students were able to voice their concerns on a motion that would result in the elimination of ALANA caucus seats and the proposal for funding to be cut from the ALANA reserve.

Junior journalism major Jim Eltringham, a senator of Coolidge Residence Hall, co-wrote the first motion with Student Government Association (SGA) Deputy Attorney General Mark Boniface. Eltringham said it's important to distinguish that the elimination of ALANA seats is not a direct target at this group, but an elimination of all appointed seats in the SGA Senate.

The motion of eliminating appointed seats will be discussed at the SGA Senate meeting tonight. Boniface said he, Pellegrino and the ALANA caucus believe that every student should be represented within the Senate, but that by appointing seats, students are not given the opportunity to elect a representative who they believe will best represent their interests.

However, junior psychology and African American studies major Lanell James is concerned. She said people's voices can only be heard through representation. With 17 percent of the student body consisting of ALANA students, the appointed seats exist so that voices within this community can be heard and represented, James said.

"We want to guarantee to people that their voices can be heard," James said. "The under-representation of people of color in politics is the issue here and we represent the ALANA community's voice."

In any election, Boniface said there may not be a given candidate that will represent a certain group of the student population, but there is a solution.

Malcolm Beckwith, a sophomore social thought and political economy (STPEC) major, said eliminating the number of appointed seats would limit the voice of the community as a whole.

At the same time that this is being debated, another action has been pro-

Turn to ALANA, page 2

Global rallies against WTO come to town

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

AMHERST – At the same time that police in Seattle were fighting with pepper spray to move protestors from the intersection at Seattle's Union Square, protestors in Amherst Town Common showed their support through a demonstration against the World Trade Organization.

"Hey, hey, ho, ho, the WTO has got to go," could be heard chanted across the globe yesterday as protestors gathered together in solidarity against the WTO Ministerial Conference in Seattle where trade discussions are being held.

Protestors wished to spread the message that although they are not against global organization, they are strongly opposed to corporate globalization. Individuals held signs across the Common and leading to the sidewalks on North Pleasant Street. The slogans were short, but their messages were meant to be strong. "No Globalization before Representation," "Jobs with Justice," and "Threat to Democracy," were just a few.

Individuals from the local area gathered together regardless of their age or status within society. Everyone was present to show support for human rights and take a stand against the WTO. "I came today because I feel strongly that the WTO is a negative influence," Rachel Berle, a first year student at Mount Holyoke College said. "It's the fact that its only goal is to limit trade at the expense of the environment. This is not acceptable."

Demonstrators explained that they were in favor of fair trade, but were against the means the WTO uses to attempt to achieve it. James Russell, who spoke on child labor, ended his speech by saying, "The WTO must be abolished."

"The WTO is putting profits before human and environmental needs," Dave Kotz said at the Amherst rally yesterday. "They are different from what they claim."

WTO was created in 1995 by international treaty to define and enforce global free trade between 134 nations. The mission of the organization is to establish a prospering global economy, while increasing the flow of goods and services across the world. In addition, it has the power to enforce international trade agreements.

Opposition believes the WTO is destroying the environment and that its main focus is on profits, not people, despite claims to better trade issues. Overall, protestors not only here in Amherst, but across the nation and globe, feel that the intentions of the WTO are not in the best interest of the world's population.

The conference is being used as a way to express "outrage and dissatisfaction with how workers have been treated globally through globalization," Tim Scott, a member of the Labor Party, said.

Other speakers saw the rally yesterday as a positive step in the battle to reclaim the earth. Susan Dorazil, a member of the Socialist party and one of the organizers of the rally said, "Make today a turning point."

"The fight has just begun, but we can win," Eric Chester, a member of the Socialist party, said.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Protestors of the World Trade Organization rallied yesterday on Amherst's Town Common.

World AIDS Day marked globally

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The 12th annual World AIDS Day, entitled "Children and Young People Listen, Learn, Live," is being celebrated today around the world.

The event is also being recognized in the Pioneer Valley community. There will be a lecture today in regards to World AIDS Day at Smith College in McConnell Hall at 7:30 p.m. that will include several panelists speaking on the topic of AIDS-related issues.

The World AIDS Day campaign was created in 1988 by an organization called the World Summit of Ministers of Health on Programmes of AIDS Prevention, and emphasizes open channels of communication, strengthening the exchange of information and experience and forging a spirit of social tolerance.

This year's theme was chosen in order to focus more closely on preventing the spread of AIDS in both children and teenagers. The group plans upon focusing more closely on educating both groups on the dangers and the spread of the virus.

The organization supports AIDS awareness in a number of ways. They show support to AIDS victims by wearing a red ribbon, the international symbol for AIDS awareness, and reminding others for the need for a commitment to finding a cure for the disease. In addition, fundraising events for AIDS charities are also held by the organization.

AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Virus) and HIV (Human Immunodeficiency Virus), the virus that causes AIDS, is a major public health issue. The virus is found in blood, semen or vaginal secretions of an infected person, and can be spread in a variety of ways. The HIV virus is primarily spread by unprotected sex and sharing hypodermic needles with another person infected with the virus.

Also, babies born to HIV infected mothers are also at a high risk for becoming infected. Although there are drugs such as AZT that are used in the treatment of the disease, there is still no cure.

In Massachusetts alone, there are a total of 15,809 people living with the AIDS virus. In the United States 548,102 cases of the disease have been reported, and in the world as a whole it is estimated that a total of 21.8 million people are living with AIDS or HIV. Any person who fears that he or she may have been in contact with the HIV virus can be tested for the HIV antibody by blood test.

Any person effected with the AIDS or HIV virus can call the Massachusetts AIDS Hotline at (617) 536-7733 or toll free at (800) 253-2331 for support.

Observer discusses East Timor's continued struggles

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Activist Pamela Sexton discussed her experiences regarding the crisis in East Timor in the Campus Center yesterday.

By William F. Larkin
Collegian Correspondent

Former U.S. Coordinator for the International Federation for East Timor's Observer Project Pam Sexton spoke to an audience at the Campus Center yesterday about the United States' involvement in the political oppression of East Timor by the Indonesian military over the past 25 years.

Sexton told an audience of 20 students that Indonesia, with its rife natural resources and global sway, was an important ally to the United States during the 1970's. Over the past few decades, several countries with ties to the U.S. have established operations in Indonesia where they work hand in hand with local militias in oppressing citizens both politically and economically, Sexton said.

According to Sexton, Indonesia is an ally "who keeps wages low."

Sexton criticized the United States for ignoring the plight of the East Timorese, who suffered severe oppression starting in 1975 when the Indonesian military – which is partially funded by the U.S. – invaded the small territory. During the invasion, nearly one-third of the East Timorese population was slaughtered.

Since the occupation the East Timorese have been subject to oppressive political rule, according to Sexton. She said that the Indonesian regime instilled a "degree of fear that was almost paranoia."

Sexton said that the East Timorese were deprived of self-determination, stripped of their ability to determine the future reality of their lives.

In 1996, Sexton said, the efforts of both students and grassroots campaigns led to a nationwide vote in

Turn to STRUGGLES, page 3

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 34	HIGH: 38	HIGH: 48
LOW: 18	LOW: 26	LOW: 32

SOURCE: WWLP.COM

It's time to go global!

The International Affairs page debuts today with coverage of recent events in Chechnya, Africa, East Timor and the WTO. Reach out beyond the confines of Amherst and educate yourself on current global happenings.

NEWS PAGE 0

Cottonmouth for the ears

Two excellent releases, and reviews to go with them. So check 'em out already! Awww, yeah!

ARTS PAGE 6

Fantastic Freshman

First year guard Ebony Pegues had a huge first half of action last night at the William D. Mullins Center, but the Minutewomen ended up on the short end of a 60-58 score in overtime against New Hampshire.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

NICOLE GOTTHARDT/ COLLEGIAN

Philosophy professor Robert Sleigh spoke yesterday as a part of the Distinguished Faculty Lectures at Memorial Hall.

Philosophy professor awarded faculty honor

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

If philosophy is a state of mind, Chancellor David K. Scott stated, then University of Massachusetts Professor Robert C. Sleigh Jr. has achieved a way of thinking that sets him apart from other scholars.

During a presentation yesterday at Memorial Hall, Scott presented Sleigh with the second Distinguished Faculty Award for the 1999-2000 year. In addition, Scott awarded Sleigh with the Chancellor's Medal for Distinguished Service. This award is the highest honor bestowed upon individuals for exemplary and extraordinary service to the University.

Scott admiringly said that it was an honor to be in the presence of an individual who could explain philosophy in the way that Sleigh did.

Sleigh's presentation focused on the work of 17th century German philosopher G.W. Leibniz, whom many credit with having created calculus before Isaac Newton.

Leibniz focused much of his philosophical studies on the monad, Sleigh said. The monad is defined as a simple substance that makes up composites. However, because composites cannot exist within simple substances, Sleigh said, Leibniz believed that the monad was the true atom of nature, the elements of all real things.

Still monads need to have some qualities, otherwise they would not even be in existence. There are never in nature two beings which are exactly alike, and in which it is not possible to find a difference either internal or based on an intrinsic property, Leibniz stated.

"Leibniz was without question a genius, making seminal contributions to linguistics, geology, historiography, as well as physics, mathematics, and philosophy," Sleigh said. "How, from apparently innocent initial assumptions, Leibniz – as rigorous and careful a thinker as one could hope for – reached such amazing and seemingly implausible conclusions as that this is the best possible world and that, in the final analysis, nothing exists in the world except minds, their perceptions, and desires?"

Leibniz believed that every present state of a simple substance such as the mind is a natural consequence of its preceding state. For example, on awakening after a period of unconsciousness, Leibniz argued that we become conscious of our perceptions and we must, without having been aware of it, have had these perceptions immediately before we became conscious of them.

Since 1972, the main focus of Sleigh's research, according to him, has been the study of the philosophy of Liebniz. He has published a book on Leibniz, titled "Leibniz and Arnauld: A Commentary on their Correspondence" and other numerous scholarly articles.

Sleigh has served twice as president of the North American Leibniz Society. His work has been supported by fellowships from the American Council for Learned Societies and the National Endowment for the Humanities.

UM alum Katz to speak on sexual violence prevention

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Jackson Katz, a former University of Massachusetts student and the founder of an anti-violence organization, will speak at 4 p.m. today in the Campus Center Auditorium.

Katz's organization, MVP Strategies, teaches gender violence prevention training to many groups, including the National Football Association and the United States Military.

Katz will present a lecture entitled: "Preventing Sexual Violence: What Men Can Do." Katz, who was also the first man to major in women's studies at UMass, will also be present at workshops after the lecture.

Katz's lecture is part of an ongoing campus effort to educate the community about violence against women. There have already been two rallies, one class walkout, and tomorrow, Chancellor David K. Scott is speaking at Hasbrouck 20 at an open forum. There is also a specialty programming on Housing Services Cable Network for safety information on Channels 2, 7, 9, 15 and 38.

In addition, tonight Channel 9 will be showing rape violence shows including "Waking Up To Rape" at 7 p.m. and "They Never Call It Rape" at 8 p.m. On Dec. 6 at 7 p.m., and on Dec. 7 at 8 p.m., "Against Her Will: Rape on Campus," will be shown, and on Dec. 13 at 7 p.m. and Dec. 14 at 8 p.m., "The Date Rape Backlash" will be shown.

Police presence on campus has also been increased. The Amherst Police Department and the State Police are joining the University of Massachusetts Police Department on campus, and the UMPD has brought in officers from UMass-Boston.

The programming, forums, increased police presence and today's lecture are all in response to four alleged assaults on the UMass campus in the first three weeks of November.

Two students reported being raped near the Campus Center Pond on consecutive Tuesdays, Nov. 2 at 5:30 p.m. and Nov. 9 at 1:50 p.m. On Nov. 14, three individuals reportedly pepper-sprayed a female student near the Campus Center Pond and started punching her before she escaped and fled the scene. During a rally on Nov. 16, a female student was reportedly attacked in Lot 63 and was taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital to be treated after being sliced with a knife. This attack also occurred on a Tuesday.

The attacks are still under investigation, according to UMPD spokesman Jim Lyons, who said that the UMPD was still considering all possible leads.

"This isn't a retaliation for people not showing up, but the effect this just happened to have is that people started to pay a more active interest," Pellegrino said. "This is a problem that we need to talk about and it just happened to come up on a night they didn't happen to show up."

■ ALANA

continued from page 1

posed, in regards to funding. There is a concern that ALANA senators have not been attending the Ways and Means Committee meetings to discuss allotment of funds to different reserves on campus. These reserves distribute money to agencies and RSO's to put on cultural or educational events.

According to Amy Pellegrino, chair of the committee, ALANA has in the past been allotted $10,000 in reserve funding. However, she said it has been an issue in the past in regards to whether ALANA should be allotted a separate fund. This year when the issue arose during a committee meeting, there were no ALANA senators present. The idea was discussed to take the $10,000 from the ALANA reserve and place it in the Finance Reserve, so that it would be available to all RSO's to hold cultural and educational events.

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services

1. A great place to get contacts lenses.
2. Free sample start-up contact lens solutions
3. Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
4. Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases.
5. FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.

Frederick H. Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

BUCCI'S
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-6155

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
McMurphy's Welcomes Guitar Dudes
37 North Pleasant St.

10 THINGS MEN AT UMASS CAN DO TO PREVENT GENDER VIOLENCE

1. Approach gender violence as a MEN'S issue involving men of all ages and socioeconomic, racial and ethnic backgrounds. View men not only as perpetrators or potential offenders, but as empowered bystanders and possible allies who can confront abusive peers.
2. If a brother, friend, classmate, or teammate is abusing his female partner - or is disrespectful or abusive to girls and women in general - don't look the other way. If you feel comfortable doing so, try to talk to him about it. Urge him to seek help. Or if you don't know what to do, consult a friend, a parent, a professor, or a counselor. DON'T REMAIN SILENT.
3. Have the courage to look inward. Question your own attitudes. Don't be defensive when something you do or say ends up hurting someone else. Try hard to understand how your own attitudes and actions might inadvertently perpetuate sexism and violence, and work toward changing them.
4. If you suspect that a woman close to you is being abused or has been sexually assaulted, gently ask if you can help.
5. If you are emotionally, psychologically, physically, or sexually abusive to women, or have been in the past, seek professional help NOW.
6. Be an ally to women who are working to end all forms of gender violence. Support the work of the Everywoman's Center (545-0883). Attend "Take Back the Night" rallies and other public events. Raise money for rape crisis centers and battered women's shelters. If you belong to a team or fraternity, or another student group, organize a fundraiser.
7. Recognize and speak out against homophobia and gay-bashing. Discrimination and violence against lesbians and gays are wrong in and of themselves. This abuse also has direct links to sexism (eg. the sexual orientation of men who speak out against sexism is often questioned, a conscious or unconscious strategy intended to silence them. This is a key reason few men do so).
8. Attend programs, take courses, watch films, and read articles and books about multicultural masculinities, gender inequality, and the root causes of gender violence. Educate yourself and others about how larger social forces affect the conflicts between individual men and women.
9. Don't fund sexism. Refuse to purchase any magazine, rent any video, subscribe to any Web site, or buy any music that portrays girls or women in a sexually degrading or abusive manner. Protest sexism in the media.
10. Mentor and teach boys about how to be men in ways that don't involve degrading or abusing girls and women. Volunteer to work with the Men's Resource Center (call 253-9887 or visit www.mrc-wma.com). Lead by example.

"Preventing Sexual Violence: What MEN Can Do"
With Jackson Katz
4pm
Wednesday December 1
Campus Center Auditorium

Jackson Katz is a former all-star high-school football player and an alumnus of UMass. He is the founder of MVP Strategies, an organization that offers gender violence prevention training to many groups (colleges, high schools, professional and college sports teams, community groups, corporations and the U.S. military – including the first world-wide program in the history of the Marine Corps). He has lectured at hundreds of schools and colleges across the nation.

The Newman Center invites you to Participate in our annual Giving Tree
From November 28th through December 17th, our 1999 Giving Tree will be adorned with ornaments, each baring a young person's first name, age and clothing size given to the Newman Center by local churches and social agencies.
Undergraduate and graduate students, fraternities, sororities, sports teams, offices, departments and families are welcome to take an ornament and give a gift of clothing to needy young person.
The Giving Tree is located in the Chapel of the Newman Center 472 North Pleasant St., Amherst
Please drop off gifts no later than Sunday, December 19, 1999
Call or stop by with any questions (413) 549-0300

■ struggles

continued from page 1

which independence was placed on the referendum. Despite brutal campaigns led by the Indonesian military aimed at preventing the vote from taking place, Sexton said nearly 99 percent of the registered voters showed up on voting day. Of the 99 percent of the voters present, approximately 80 percent voted for freedom.

Sexton, who was present in East Timor at the time of the vote, related the words of one woman: "This is the happiest day of my life, as well as the day on which I was the most scared."

Even after the East Timorese gained their independence, the attacks by their Indonesian oppressors continued, according to Sexton. She said that violence swept the land. Nearly 90 percent of the capital city of East Timor was destroyed by the Indonesian military.

Sexton told the audience the tale of a village located in East Timor that was the site of a wretched massacre the very day she was evacuated from the territory. Moving with the support of a local militia, Sexton said Indonesian troops slaughtered well over 100 East Timorese, most of who were women that were raped by the soldiers immediately prior to their deaths. According to Sexton, some of the victims included priests and nuns.

Despite these atrocities, the U.S. administration did nothing to halt the bloodshed, refusing to cut aid to Indonesia, Sexton said. In fact, Sexton claimed that the United States could have prevented much of the horrors of the East Timor occupation, but they were too concerned with their own interests.

Only after the efforts of several grassroots organizations, including Grassroots International, did the Clinton administration buckle and cut aid to Indonesia, Sexton said. Sexton stressed the gains of advocacy, saying, "the East Timor Action Network showed us what we can do."

"It's not just about a vote, it's how you rebuild your country," Sexton said. Unfortunately, Sexton continued, there are still over 200,000 East Timorese being held in camps in West Timor, which is under Indonesian rule.

Sexton, who spent time visiting several camps in West Timor – a rare accomplishment considering the secrecy surrounding such camps – called those held there "hostages," and not refugees. Sexton said many do not want to return to East Timor, out of fear that they might be killed. They don't want to be labeled an "independence supporter," Sexton said, representative of the freeze-effect prevalent there.

Sexton said, "the struggle is not over." She said that both new and existing organizations must work together to rebuild East Timor from the ground up, both politically and economically. Sexton called for support, not control in response to attempts by the World Trade Organization to rewrite the global economy. "They must rebuild from within," Sexton said.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

while Eltringham said he felt students' voices would be heard more clearly with elected representation.

James said that ALANA students would not have a voice if the motion passes, and that if the SGA eliminates the ALANA voice, it is threatening the student voice. She said that if the motion passes, it will tell certain students that their issues and their needs are not important to the SGA.

"I want student's voices to be heard, regardless of the positions that they take," James said.

"We're not saying that the ALANA voice shouldn't be heard," Eltringham said.

Rene Gonzalez, a member of the ALANA caucus and a junior legal studies and political science major said that the motion would virtually silence all people of color at the University under the guise of democratic reform.

"This is an attempt to legitimize the silencing of minorities on this campus through political reform, and that is morally and ethically wrong," Gonzalez said.

Eltringham maintained that the motion was not an attack on the ALANA caucus, but rather that he was merely against an undemocratic system. He said the motion would also affect area government. He said that ALANA students have been well represented in the past and will continue to be with open elections.

As far as tonight's motion, James feels that anything stands a chance to be passed in the SGA.

"Everything is open to debate, and anyone can present ideas at the meeting, but because it can go either way and because this is such an important issue, people need to know what ridding the campus of ALANA representation would mean," James said.

"The Senate can seriously consider the motion, but the student body will have the final say," Eltringham explained.

Should tonight's motion pass, the student body would have to ratify the change, as the ALANA seats are in the SGA's constitution's by-laws.

James is somewhat worried about the student body voting on the issue, saying that, as opposed to years past, this year's UMass student body is very different, and that she worries that students' votes might be swayed.

"People from all communities need to understand that minorities need to have a voice on this campus, especially on issues of gender, race, and if the framework needs to be changed, okay, but the representation needs to be there, and with the by-laws we have, we can accomplish representation," James said. She said she is worried that a referendum might be held that doesn't totally represent the student voice.

Eltringham said that there is a set of rules to be followed and that the ALANA and area government seats are "outside of those rules."

But before the issue ever gets to the student body, the SGA would have to pass the motion tonight.

"There should be a huge turnout for the meeting," James said. "There is always debate on this issue, as people invite debate by supporting it. People from RSO's (Registered Student Organizations), the ALANA community and perhaps even faculty will be a part of this immense issue."

Eltringham said that he too expects a large turnout for tonight's meeting and he encourages the debate that will surround the motion.

Sam Wilkinson contributed to this article.

Mass graves may hold up to 300 victims of Cartel

By Esther Schrader and James F. Smith
Los Angeles Times

MEXICO CITY – Police and soldiers are preparing to exhume 100 to 300 bodies from two mass graves near the Mexican border city of Juarez believed to contain the remains of victims of a notorious drug cartel, law enforcement officials said Monday.

At least a dozen U.S. citizens are believed to be among the victims, who include former informants for the Drug Enforcement Administration and the FBI, said U.S. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity.

If the mass graves do yield so many victims, it would be by far the most dramatic evidence yet of the heights to which the drug-trafficking violence that has ravaged cities and towns across Mexico in recent years has soared.

The grave sites, on two remote ranches south of Juarez across the U.S. border from El Paso, were brought to the attention of U.S. law enforcement officials just three days ago. Since then, an FBI task force of forensic experts who helped exhume mass graves in Bosnia Herzegovina has been working with Mexican army officials to plan the recovery of the bodies.

Attention Night Graphics!
Look on the bulletin board in Graphics to sign up for the back to school issue, and pick your nights for next semester!

IN SHAPE NUTRITION
Nutrition Supplement Discounter
Great Products, Great Prices, Great Service!
END OF THE MILLENIUM BLOWOUT SALE!
November 29th-December 31st
65 University Drive, Amherst 549-7434
Get coupons online @ www.inshapeonline.com

WE'D PUT A BOW ON IT BUT THAT WOULD WASTE BEER
$1.50 PINTS OF GUINNESS
GRAND OPENING SPECIAL
OUR GIFT TO YOU
THE HANGAR Pub and Grill
55 UNIVERSITY DRIVE
AMHERST, MA

ATTENTION: COLLEGE STUDENTS
Earn College Credits During Your Winter Break
Wintersession
Day and Evening Classes
One & Two Week Courses
Classes Guaranteed to Run
Art, Biology, Communications, Education, English, History, Management, Movement Science, Music, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Women's Studies, Credit-Free Computer Courses, Debt-free Living Seminar
Call (413) 572-5224 for registration information
Westfield State College
www1.ww.mass.edu/dgce
DIVISION OF GRADUATE AND CONTINUING EDUCATION
WESTERN AVENUE • WESTFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

EVERYONE WELCOME
UMASS Health Fair
Sponsored by the Student Nurse Association
WEDNESDAY DECEMBER 1, 1999
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
FREE

William and Odessa Smith, parents of Kemba Smith, and other panelists speak on:
KEMBA'S NIGHTMARE
Does the punishment fit the Crime? Was Justice Served?
Thursday, December 2nd, 1999
7:00 pm, Campus Center Auditorium
Sponsored by Student Senate, Everywoman's Center, Woman of Color Leadership Network, Food For Thought, Writing Fellows, Commuter Affairs, ALANA Affairs, Student Activities Cultural Enrichment Fund, WMUA, Black Student Union, SOLV, TV

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS
Springfield: 413-731-6910
Worcester: 508-366-8847
Boston: 617-484-1788
North of Boston: 978-777-2253
South of Boston: 508-821-5591
Plymouth: 508-833-1145
Route 3 South: 781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast: 603-926-9813
Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9
Equal Opportunity Employer

Student Union Craft Center
ANNUAL HOLIDAY CRAFT FAIR
Hand crafted pottery, jewelry, ornaments, clothing, and much more!
Campus Center Concourse
December 1st, 2nd & 3rd
9am - 4pm
Produced by the Student Union Craft Center with support from the Campus Center/Student Union Governing Board, Student Government Association, Graduate Student Senate
The S.U. Craft Center welcomes all UMass students, faculty and staff. Membership is FREE! We are located in the Student Union, across from the Hatch.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

More than a few good men

How can we get a critical mass of men – at UMass and around the country – to speak out about men's violence against women? How can we make sexist attitudes or behaviors toward women socially unacceptable among men? How can we encourage more than a few good men to work with women on these issues as partners and allies, and not against them as hostile antagonists?

Activists in the movements to end rape, battering and sexual harassment seem to revisit these questions with greater urgency each time we're confronted with high-profile instances of gender violence, as opposed to the vast majority of incidents that devastate individual lives and families, but never make it to the local or national news.

You would think that it would be a fairly straightforward task to find men who are willing to stand up and be counted in the effort to reduce the outrageous level of violence – physical, sexual, emotional – that our mothers, sisters, girlfriends, wives and daughters have to live with. But sadly, it is anything but easy to find men willing to take that step. In fact, there are a number of obvious and subtle forces at work to keep the non-violent majority of men silent.

The obvious forces include policing mechanisms in male peer culture that stifle the voices of men who are uncomfortable with abuses perpetrated by their fellow men. These policing mechanisms include questioning the manhood and heterosexuality of men who would dare take the "women's side" in the supposed "battle between the sexes." Using derisive appellations like "mama's boy," "p-whipped," "sensitive new age man" and "fag" for men who dare to break the masculine code of silence. Men often remind each other that we'll never be considered "real men" if we don't exhibit blind loyalty to our sexclass.

Jackson Katz

A more subtle force that keeps many men from becoming actively involved in the struggle against gender violence is the defensiveness many of us feel at the mere mention of the scope of the problem. When we hear women say they're angry about all of the violence men do to women, some guys respond indignantly, "Hey, it's not all guys. I'm not a rapist," we say, as if we'd been accused of being one. In this case, defensiveness is really a form of denial that allows us to avoid being personally implicated.

Defensive posturing is responsible, in part, for the virulence in some circles of the backlash against feminism. Feminists, of course, have long been at the forefront, in our society and worldwide, of efforts to reduce men's violence against women, and indeed all forms of violence. And yet they are all too frequently labeled "male-bashers." This Orwellian inversion, calling the anti-violence activists the "bashers," or the violent ones, allows us to disregard the urgency of their message. It's a version of "kill the messenger," the time-honored tradition of discrediting the bearers of unpleasant or discomforting news, rather than facing squarely the implications of their message.

Killing the messenger is a tactical cousin of another popular avoidance strategy, blaming the victim. If you believe that somehow the victim caused herself to be violated, you sidestep inquiry into the role of the aggressor. If you're a man who doesn't want to look at the ways that you as a man contribute – through silence or more active means – to a culture where violence against women is so common as to be almost unremarkable, focusing on the victim is a convenient strategy of psychic self-defense.

One of the notable features of the recent spate of gendered assaults at UMass is that because several of the attacks were alleged to have been perpetrated by strangers and took place during the day, it's socially unacceptable to blame the victims. As a result, it appears that a number of men – and women – have been politicized as never before about the pervasiveness of men's violence against women. This is one positive outgrowth of an otherwise tragic series of events, because awareness about the extent of the problem and outrage about it, are some of the first steps necessary for mobilizing large numbers of people to organize for change.

If the perpetrators are caught, however, many people will be tempted to believe that the attacks were the isolated acts of a sick individual and/or group. This is understandable, because it's easier to deal with the concept of some psycho rapist-mugger than it is to look critically at the culture that produces such men at a pandemic rate. We know, however, that most violence against women is perpetrated by men close to them, in their family and friendship circles, men who are "normal" in every superficial respect.

This chilling fact means that if we truly want to reduce the rates of gender violence in our society as we enter the 21st century, we have to work hard to redefine what "normal" means. If we can achieve a society where it is more normal for men to speak out against gender violence than it is for them to commit it, we'll be a much healthier society than we are today.

Jackson Katz was a Collegian columnist from 1979-1982.

A letter to Chancellor Scott

The faculty and staff of the Women's Studies Program wish to bring to your attention a fundamentally important dimension of the recent rapes on campus. These rapes need to be addressed as instances of the pervasiveness of violence against women in our society, and we must view the campus as a microcosm of that society. While we support all the efforts now in place to investigate and repudiate these incidents, and restore a sense of security to our community, we also want consideration to be given to long term changes in our current culture of violence against women.

From that perspective, how could the campus fulfill its educational responsibility toward the creation of a better, less-violent society? What can we do to reduce the normative aggressive masculinity and its attendant association with violence that permeates our institutions?

Marta B. Calas

You are, we are sure, quite aware of these connections. As recently as a few weeks ago we heard your remarks about the need for rapprochement with spirituality in our educational processes. On more than one occasion you have said that the absence of spirituality in our concepts of knowledge is partially due to masculine biases in the idea of knowledge. As contributors to these biases, you include the Cartesian split between mind and body, and the Baconian metaphorical associations of nature and the feminine. You have also acknowledged in this context, the masculinist violence in the language of philosophy and science. Considering this intellectual heritage, it is not difficult to understand how a widespread knowledge with masculinity can perversely play out in the culture of our campuses. That is, it is easy to see how implicit associations of knowledge, power, violence and masculinity, whose origins have long been forgotten, play an immediate role in the devaluation of women and their bodies, not only in the devaluation of their intellect.

There is, no doubt, increasing violence against women throughout society beyond the universities. But it is precisely for this reason that there is an increasing need to articulate, through the educational process, the origin of this violence and its concomitant contemporary institutionalization. We request, then, that as you attempt to restore the wholeness of knowledge beyond its rationalist heritage you consider concretely how to reduce the same masculine orientation so embedded in our institutions. Addressing the historical and philosophical roots in the assumed inferiority of women without further fostering institutional and cultural changes that reproduce normative masculinity is simply engaging in another intellectual exercise that would hardly start to address the mind/body split you so much decry.

What we are asking for is a strong stand on your part, and on the part of other leaders in our academic community, toward changing the culture of violence against women, and toward making this an educational priority. While we applaud your clear message regarding the masculinist bias in science and knowledge, we ask you now to send an equally clear message regarding the consequences of those biases as they play out in the heart of our institutions. This is not an argument for establishing "PC policing." Rather this is an argument for looking into the many ways in which, without even noticing, all men and women contribute to condone the devaluation of women throughout our institutions: how we all engage in micropractices, including in our classrooms but not limited to these, is a necessary first step for changing the masculinist culture that leads to violence against women. However, advocating reflective analyses alone will not do much because there are no other symbolic and material commitments that would help in their realization.

Bringing Jackson Katz to campus now opens a wonderful opportunity to continue with a conference or a series of talks on violence against women, its causes and the reasons for its perpetuation, with nationally known speakers, both men and women. Concurrently, students could run their own conference and workshops on the subject. In fact, the forthcoming conference on spirituality is also a good space to acknowledge the insidiousness of violence in our culture and its origins.

However, these are just some preliminary ideas to use as a springboard for a larger effort. They are simply groundwork for the campus community to reflect upon its current condition and begin identifying practices that need changing. None of these activities would change much unless they are framed within a strategy to be accomplished over a number of years. More fundamentally, we are sure that there are many other potential ideas that can make a difference, yet they will not emerge unless there is a campus wide conversation on the issues.

Thus, here is our proposal; let's give priority to this conversation, and let's do it now. Let's have a big forum at the Mullins Center now, during campus "prime time." Let's cancel classes and have the community get together to think about ways to deinstitutionalize and disenfranchise the culture of violence. Let's together launch a different kind of Campaign UMass. We are ready for it. Are you?

Marta B. Calas is the Acting director of Women's Studies.

Misrepresenting democracy

In its never ending and infinite wisdom, the Student Government Association has gone out of their way to give me another reason to write a column about their brilliance. I twice before have written about how the SGA barely represents this campus – anyway what so ever. So what do they do?

Tonight, the SGA will hear and discuss a motion that proposes to rid themselves of the ALANA caucus, the group of students selected to represent minorities on campus, and the area government representatives.

Now, Jim Eltringham (and let me clarify that when I say Jim Eltringham, I also mean his supporters) is totally behind this idea in the name of SGA progressiveness. The key group here is, really, the ALANA seats, and as the writer of the motion to eliminate them, Eltringham is saying that he is doing this in the name of democracy because there should never, ever be people appointed to represent the masses. The ALANA caucus is appointed by ALANA to represent minority students on campus, as opposed to being voted on by students.

Sam Wilkinson

If there are people who are being appointed to represent students, that is wrong, and if that is how the ALANA caucus is being created, then that is wrong. However, I don't really have issue with the ALANA caucus for reasons that I will get to shortly.

Rather, I have issue with Jim Eltringham's proposal merely to rid the SGA of the ALANA students without, in any way at all, proposing anything different, as if somehow, by merely ridding the SGA of the caucus, the SGA will be all the better. Which is absolutely ridiculous.

If Eltringham is genuinely interested in a fair and representative student government, that's fine and good, but his current proposal is foolishly defended as being democratic in nature without in anyway increasing the supposed "democracy" of the student government. If anything, Eltringham is interested in lessening the democratic reality of the SGA because once the ALANA caucus is removed, the minority voice of the government is more or less eliminated.

The supporters of Eltringham's proposal say that this isn't, in anyway, a race issue, but rather a democratic one, which is both inane and ridiculous. Obviously, the issue is both, and why one side would claim that they are only acting in the best interests of democracy shows their own ignorance about the issue. Eliminating the ALANA seats, even if it is in the name of democracy, is still eliminating seats held by individuals that aren't white, and that's where it becomes a race issue, regardless of Eltringham's actual intent with his motion.

The ALANA caucus is wrong to exist in the way it exists. Claiming democracy when individuals are appointed to represent a certain group on campus is a falsehood, but those students absolutely have to be represented, and as it stands, that won't necessarily be happening. Students need to be represented and there are students who won't be if the ALANA caucus is eliminated. The fact is that eliminating the ALANA seats leaves a Senate with approximately a grand total of zero students who aren't white. And that isn't representation by any definition, including Eltringham's.

So what should be going on? Eltringham, if he is so intent on Democratic reform, needs to be bolder and braver when it comes to changing how representation on this campus, and in that vein, I offer the following suggestion. Change the whole system. Take what we have and absolutely scrap it, and start over. Keep the campus-wide elections of the president and trustee, but throw open the rest of the elections and elect senators campus wide. No more no-name senators from buildings, but campus wide senators voted on by the student body at large. Presidential candidates could run on a ticket, campaigning with a candidate for trustee and other candidates for the senate.

Why change the system in this way? With the ridiculously low voter turnout on this campus, an organized collection of the ALANA students, or any other organized group of students for that matter, could vote in Senators to represent them. The responsibility for maintenance of democracy would be taken out of the hands of people like Jim Eltringham and the ALANA caucus and instead put into the hands of students. Senators would be responsible to campaign in elections that would be campus-wide, and that might actually fix a second problem by bringing out voters. Senators would be responsible to have some sort of platform to run on, a platform that would have to appeal to voters from all parts of campus, thus meaning that the popular guy from whatever building wouldn't win simply because he was popular.

Campaigns could be run in the spring, and while that would leave incoming freshman students without representation, it would be a problem that could be dealt with in the future. Or perhaps freshmen could just be asked to suck it up and the elected senators could be held responsible for representing students on campus. The spring campaigns wouldn't be sprung on students without notice in the way that they are currently done in the fall. Tickets would be high profile, as presidential candidates would bring the spotlight not only to themselves, but the individuals that they are running with. With more candidates being better known, voters might be more inclined to turn out.

In any campus wide election, a group could put together a ticket to run in the campaign. ALANA could attempt to mobilize their constituents, while other groups with a vested interest in an issue could create a ticket to address their issue. Senators could run for their positions based on, god forbid, their ideas for change rather than their mean-nothing names on ballots.

Never mind that, the most important thing is that ALANA would get its chance to have representation within the senate if they could win elections while people like Jim Eltringham would be able to see the democratic process bringing individuals to the Senate that were elected fairly and by the students.

But is the SGA willing to actually work to be a progressive organization? Are the SGA senators willing to risk change in an attempt to make things better? Are they willing to have senators elected based on their ideas and rather their names? Or is the SGA more willing to maintain the status quo, as long as the status quo doesn't include students unfairly chosen to represent an underrepresented group of students?

We shall see.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist

Letters to the Editor

Protests and rallies gone way too far

To the editor:

If you look around you, do you really need to wonder why people have been attacked? How many stupid freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors do you know who are "invincible?" We all know them... the ones who have been sheltered all their whole lives, whose cords have yet to be cut from mommy, and who are still babied to such a point that the rest of the world is nauseated. Sorry, kiddies. Welcome to the big bad world. Scared? Great! Do something about it. Take matters into your own hands. No, take your well being into your own hands.

I earn how to protect yourself. And oh, by the way, that protection will not come through campus walkouts and thousands of ridiculous signs telling us to "Take back our campus." Will that really make you safer? I'd be willing to bet that besides wasting entirely too much paper, the only thing this is accomplishing is giving the rapist/rapists or whoever the satisfaction of knowing they're winning. Congratulations! Please hold your applause until they've taped all the articles devoted to them on their walls.

While you're at it, stop blaming the University for not protecting you. Wash! Obviously the doughnut-devoted personnel are not going to make any kind of difference. Have you seen any of these walkie-talkie toting wastes of our money? I saw a security woman so small the only thing she'd be able to harm would be an assailant's kneecaps. But at least that small bit of damage would be more than a few of the males I saw who couldn't apprehend a twinkie with a limp on a good night. Congratulations again!

And when your bursar's bill goes up another $1,000, just smile... it was all in the name of a few prissy students and their whiny parents. Me and the rest of the world can take care of ourselves.

Carly Sanky
Central

What do you want to say today? ? ??

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

International Affairs

World news: Mali, Ecuador and Uzbekistan

Mali: Richard Holbrooke will start a 11-nation tour on the African continent today in Mali. Holbrooke will be discussing the UN's role in Africa as well as furthering U.S. President Bill Clinton's African agenda. He will visit the Democratic Republic of Congo, formerly known Zaire. A cease-fire in the nation signed by various sides involved in fighting in the nation is in danger of complete collapse after repeated violations of the agreement that was signed in the summer in Lusaka, Zambia. He will also visit Uganda and Rwanda, nations that have been supporting rebels in the DRC, as well and Angola, Namibia and Zimbabwe, supporters of DRC's president Laurent Kabila. The U.N. is considering sending a massive peacekeeping operation to the volatile African nation depending on the viability of the cease-fire.

Ecuador: Volcanic ash from the Pichincha volcano blew into Quito, Ecuador's capital, Monday, closing the Central American capital. It is the second time in two weeks that ash has fallen on the capital's 1.4 million residents after the 15,840 foot volcano erupted last week. No injuries were reported after the second dusting, and schools were allowed to reopen, but the airport remained closed after the dusting. The volcano, which re-awoke last year after 339 year's of inactivity, has spewed ash in the last couple of months. Scientists do no expect the volcano to produce any lava.

Uzbekistan: Uzbek soldiers from Tashkent killed 14 Islamic militants in Yangiabad, a mountain village. Two soldiers also died in the attack. The militants are affiliated with rebels in Chechnya, a breakaway region of Russia. Islamic groups have fought secular governments set up after the collapse of the Soviet Union.

– Compiled by Sam Wilkinson

AIDS: Killing a generation in Sub-Saharan Africa

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff

While the western world waits anxiously for the end of this century, half a continent waits anxiously for the end of an epidemic. While the developed nations celebrate a booming economy, sub-Saharan Africa mourns the loss of a generation.

Ten percent of the world's population lives below the Sahara. Within countries such as South Africa, Zimbabwe, Botswana, Zambia and Namibia live two thirds of all HIV positive people in the world, and 80 percent of all AIDS deaths.

The statistics are staggering and unbelievable. The spread of AIDS in Africa has reached epidemic proportions, comparable to the Black Death of the 14th century. Twenty-five percent of adults in the region are infected right now, with 11 men, women and children being infected every minute.

No one can really know what the long-term consequences of this epidemic will be. However, as death rates rise, the already weak economy sinks deeper into recession and more children are left orphaned as their parents and families die.

It is hard to pinpoint just one reason to explain why AIDS is worse in sub-Saharan Africa than anywhere else in the world, but poverty and denial remain two of the biggest contributors.

Five hundred years of slavery and colonialism severely undermined African society. Many nations within the continent have only gained their independence recently, and governments are littered with inadequate leadership and rampant corruption. Societal structures have been hard to manage and capital flow has been close to negligible, meaning social programs in the areas are abominable.

In countries such as South Africa, the total per capita health care budget is less than 10 dollars.

Africa

COURTESY NG MAPS

Sick people are unable to receive care because clinics are too expensive, too far away, understaffed and genuinely unequipped to deal with such an influx of this infectious disease.

Illiteracy has also contributed to the spread of AIDS. Lack of education prevents the general population from learning of the dangers of unprotected sex, or the means of disease prevention. It has also persisted through the outdated policy of denial. Most Africans refuse to recognize AIDS as a killer. Some even believe that it is a tool with which the Americans can dominate the world. The majority of people are so uninformed that they will not write AIDS as the cause of death on death certificates, for fear that the community will look down upon the deceased. The people will not face the fact that it is not an issue of social class, but instead an issue of sexual behavior.

What is even more discouraging is the society's attitude toward women. Africa has the highest incidence of rape in the world. When it comes to sex, it is the man who dictates when and how sex happens. Many women who are infected refuse to tell their husbands for fear of being beaten up or kicked out of the house. Women have been accused of being promiscuous, when in actuality men have been responsible for the continued spread of AIDS and other sexually transmitted diseases. Men leave their rural villages for months at a time to look for work in the cities, and while they are gone, they look to prostitutes for sexual relief, but refuse to use condoms.

Though progress is slow, there have been efforts to try and curb the disease. Groups such as the Inzia Godlwavo AIDS Council (IGAC), in Zimbabwe, are slowly building up a network of volunteers, most of them peasants, to try and assist in the care of dying patients and their families. The United Nations has enlisted its own taskforce on the continent, UNAIDS, and many communities are banding together through churches or non-governmental organizations to fight the silent assassin.

Motivating the general population is a big job, but it is the most important if strides are to be made in combating the disease and the stigma that surrounds it.

Africans can't do it alone, either. The developed world has already acknowledged a state of emergency in the sub-Saharan. However, western nations are slow to extend a financial hand to the desperate region. In 1997, international countries donated $150 million in AIDS help; that figure is less than the budget for Will Smith's last movie, Wild Wild West.

Last year, 140 million condoms were donated and spread throughout the danger zone. Little by little their usage has increased, but faulty condoms have stunted efforts to contain the infections. Manufacturers of generic condoms have been dumping their reject batches into the continent, leaving people who actually do practice safe sex helpless. Many condoms that have entered the continent have not been tested.

Apart from abstinence and condoms, drug treatments are the only other way to slow down HIV infection. However, the most successful treatment, a triple drug "cocktail," costs upwards of $10,000 per year. Even at discounted prices, the annual estimated cost of putting every HIV positive African on the western medicine would exceed $150 billion.

The drug AZT has been shown to reduce infection from mother-to-child and has been dispersed intermittently in the public health system of South Africa, but the government recently stopped the use of AZT because of cost. At the present time, less than one percent of Africans infected with HIV are being treated with drugs.

While pharmaceutical companies, African governments and international task forces are negotiating the future of the disease and its potential cures, thousands of people die every day.

The epidemic has left the workforce decimated. Employees are dying in the prime of their lives, leaving manufacturing at a low and agriculture dwindling. Firms have begun cutting benefits since they've watched their profits get washed away in medical expenses, funerals, retraining workers and lost hours due to sickness. Some of the hardest losses to face within industry have been middle managers, many of whom are middle class. Civil service is declining, and companies don't tell their shareholders about AIDS [illegible] workforce for fear of losing outside [illegible] severely affected. However, much [illegible] have no models from which to stuff[illegible] term projections can only be speculation.

In the mean time, 30 percent of African [illegible] are being born with the infection. 10,000 [illegible] between the ages of 10-24 are being [illegible] daily. The Worldbank's Africa AIDS Campaign Team for Africa (ACTafrica) reports that there are already half a million orphans suffering in the sub-Saharan. Children are left to the care of [illegible] family members or the already down-trodden community. Some kids have watched both parents, as well as every grandparent, aunt and [illegible] from AIDS. The damage of a generation without parents to the continent will only be seen in years to come, but already the psychological [illegible] of the children are apparent in the depression and isolation that has shrouded the community. With no one is left to take responsibility of these [illegible] ones, they run away or even kill themselves.

It may seem like a dead end, but there is hope. Through international organizations such as the Worldbank, the United Nations, and international organizations like the South African Medical Research Council and IGAC, education and condom use are on the rise. There is much work to be done, but through a global partnership there is hope that the spread of this disease [illegible] will one day be eradicated.

The death toll continues to rise as AIDS runs rampant lin much of Africa.

Freedom's heavy price, an observer reflects on experience

Throughout my time in East Timor, the courage displayed by ordinary people was stunning. I distinctly recall a middle-aged mother earnestly telling me that she would cast her vote for independence no matter what, even if she had to die to do so.

In East Timor, death is no abstract thing. Indeed, this woman proclaimed her willingness to die standing just 50 meters from a place where a young man was murdered just days earlier by the Indonesian military's militias.

Perhaps East Timorese endure violence so courageously because it has been a fact of life for so long. The former Portuguese colony was invaded and occupied by Indonesia in 1975. Indonesia's military ruled with an iron fist until earlier this year, when they were forced to depart after the East Timorese voted overwhelmingly for independence. Indonesia's occupation killed well over 200,000 through outright slaughter, starvation and disease. The death toll represents about one third of the original population – possibly the worst per capita genocide since the Holocaust. Sadly, wealthy countries, led by the United States, have almost completely ignored the genocide in East Timor until very recently.

In fact, U.S. military and political assistance played a critical role in supporting the occupation for years. American business made big money from the natural resources, cheap labor, and large markets in Indonesia. U.S. policy clearly put concern for corporate profits in Indonesia over any regard for human rights in East Timor.

Given the brutal history, I knew that the UN supervised referendum on independence that took place in August would be a truly historic event. So, I jumped at the chance to become an election observer with the International Federation for East Timor (IFET).

Throughout my time there, I was painfully aware that all the international attention on East Timor had not stopped the pattern of intimidation and terror by the Indonesian military. For the sake of public relations, Indonesian troops were now operating covertly through paramilitary militia groups. These militias, simply an extension of the Indonesian army, threatened and attacked civilians frequently while I was there. Again and again, the militias tried to bully the population into voting against independence. The threat was clear: vote for independence and we'll kill you. I saw first hand the consequences of militia violence in Suai, where I was stationed. There was a refugee camp of almost 2,000 who had fled from their villages because of militia violence. My team interviewed one family whose home had been burned down in the middle of the night by the militia while military officers stood guard. We interviewed others who had narrowly escaped being kidnapped, or who had been chased from their homes by gunshots from militiamen.

I left East Timor on the day of the vote, August 30. I knew there was a real danger that the militias would make good on their threats and go on a killing rampage. Tragically, it happened. Within a week and a half of my departure, that killing rampage was in full swing. The militias and the Indonesian military had apparently decided that if they had to leave, they would destroy the place on the way out. Thousands were killed (the actual death toll is still unknown), and hundreds of thousands became refugees. The militias forced at least 200,000 into West Timor, an Indonesian province, where they continue to live in camps guarded by militia. Many towns were almost completely burnt to the ground.

Suai was one of the unlucky towns. At least two hundred people were slaughtered at the refugee camp, as were two priests that my team worked with closely. The same streets where I played Frisbee with children, and where friendly East Timorese kids would call to me, "Hallo Mista," (the only English they knew) had become the scene of mass murder.

Although the situation in East Timor has dramatically improved with the arrival of international peacekeepers and the UN transitional administration, East Timor still faces serious challenges. The infrastructure of the country is largely destroyed, and there is a constant need for humanitarian support. But, the most urgent problem is probably the 200,000 East Timorese who are still living in refugee camps guarded by militias in West Timor. Daily violence continues in these camps. East Timor now has its well-deserved freedom. But, there was a heavy price to pay, and the rebuilding process has just begun.

Simon Doolittle is a U Mass student.

China bids for WTO entry

By Vincent Pepi
Collegian Correspondent

On Nov. 15, China and the U.S. concluded a trade agreement that set the precedent for China's ascension into the World Trade Organization. This is a milestone for China, which has been trying to get in for over thirteen years. Initially, China seemed quite unwilling to make the concessions necessary for entry, but it has recently shown a renewed willingness for cooperation.

The WTO consists of over 100 nations dedicated to free trade. It has three key objectives: to facilitate trade between nations, to achieve further liberalization through negotiation, and to settle any disputes that may arise involving trade. The WTO has expanded on the former Global Agreement on Trade and Tariffs in its role in dealing with trade in services and intellectual property. Intellectual property has been an area in which China has yet to get a firm grip on. Technology theft and illegal alterations have been rampant in China where the strict rules that exist in the United States are almost unheard of.

By concluding negotiations with the United States, China has agreed to begin reforming its economic system to conform to some WTO standards. As a result, China will have secured an honorary seat in the organization, but will not become a full member until the same courtesies are extended to other countries.

Premier Zhu Rongli initiated this process, but it has now become the legacy of Chinese president, Jiang Zemin. Jiang Zemin intends to go through with the process and become a full member as expediently as possible. China will derive great benefits from becoming a member. It will have full access to vital trade information that is difficult to obtain right now. China's market, in turn, will also become more open, attracting more foreign investment. Increased domestic competition in China may initially hurt Chinese companies, but in the long run it will force them to adapt and operate more efficiently.

The agreement will benefit the U.S. in much the same manner. China will be more open to U.S. companies that want to do business there. U.S. products are ensured a certain degree of fair trade practices and freedom from protectionism.

All of these benefits will only occur assuming China abides by the rule. Right now there is nothing to suggest one way or the other. Either way, even small steps will begin to introduce China to the open market.

Chechens struggle for independence Grozny encircled by Russian troops

By Conzolo Migliozzi
Collegian Correspondent

Russian troops occupy Chechnya.

It is estimated that more than 500 civilians have been killed in Russia's most recent attack on Grozny, the Chechen capital. Russia denies this and claims to have struck only rebel strongholds.

On Saturday, airplanes and cannons hit Grozny and 17 surrounding villages, this being the fiercest attack so far.

Last week the Russians bombed southern cities in attempt to cut off the Chechen capital. As of Sunday, the Chechens had launched their first major counter attack and reclaimed the small town of Novogroznesky.

Russia has 80 percent of Grozny surrounded and plans to have it completely encircled by mid-December. The have been attacking from a distance to minimize casualties, a lesson learned in the previous war. Russian military commanders said they would begin pursuing guerrilla forces into the mountains, and predict victory by the end of the year.

Chechnya has a long history of conflict, for the last 200 years Russia has been its largest threat. In 1877 the Chechens struggled to proclaim their independence but were subdued by the Tsar. Later, in 1944 Stalin ordered that all Chechens be exiled to Siberia. Thirteen years later, the surviving few were allowed to return, but were still treated as enemies. Russia continued to keep the area in a tight grip throughout the decades, but eventually the Chechens declared their sovereignty in 1991.

From 1994-1996, they engaged in a bloody battle, which resulted in the death of over 70,000 people. Russia wanted to retain control of the region so as to hold onto power in the Northern Caucasus, but the Chechens refused to let their nation be subdued by the Russian government anymore. The Kremlin eventually yanked Russian forces out after urban guerrillas decimated troops.

Russia's goal is to wipe out the Islamic militants who are blamed for the terrorist bombings in September that killed almost 500 people. Russia maintains that their air raids and artillery strikes are targeting only rebel fighters.

Since August, 2,000 Russian soldiers have been killed or wounded in Chechnya, and the equipment losses have totaled five helicopters in three months. Although the Russians promised their troops effective equipment for fighting, what they are actually being supplied with is old and faulty. One soldier reported that he would carry three grenades in hope that one would work.

The Chechen people want to keep their capital, and Russia does not want to destroy the city, causing more poverty for the already oppressed people. Over 220,000 refugees have fled to neighboring Ingushetia. Conditions are bad right now, and they will worsen as the harsh Chechen winter months descend upon the region.

Russians see the conflict as self-defense, and a chance to reassert military strength in its own back yard, proving that Moscow won't give up its old spheres of influence so easily.

Though the actions have sparked severe western criticism, leaders told the international audience that they have no right to criticize Russia's handling of Chechnya. Yeltsin has been under a lot of pressure from the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OCSE) to answer to the alleged [illegible] violations, however [illegible] have made it clear that [illegible] intervene would be seen as [illegible] betrayal.

Yeltsin met with NATO [illegible] leaders two weeks ago and [illegible] out of the discussion. Angry [illegible] claims that the Russians are [illegible] crimes against humanity. However, OSCE was [illegible] invited to take a political and [illegible] after Foreign Minister Igor [illegible] invited the OSCE chairman to Chechnya. Yeltsin is still [illegible] calling NATO hypocrites due to [illegible] actions in Yugoslavia last spring, although he continues to work [illegible] International Monetary Fund [illegible] its second installment of a $4.5 billion loan on which the country is dependent.

Russia's Prime Minister Vladimir Putin stated that there would be no peace until the rebels have been completely eradicated. Over 6,000 rebels are currently in Grozny.

Rapper Dr. Dre busts loose with Chronic 2001

By David Katzoff
Collegian Staff

DR. DRE
Chronic 2001
Interscope/Aftermath

Dr. Dre has long been a keen observer of both hip-hop and the urban atmosphere. During the primordial days of Andre Young, before N.W.A. and World Class Wrecking Crew, he surveyed rap's soundscape from the perspective of a club deejay and beat junkie, raised on the celebratory soul of the Parliament/Funkadelic, James Brown and Grandmaster Flash. Despite a rather frigid beginning with WCW.C. the collaboration known as Niggas With Attitude which revolved around Dre's hard-hitting, synthesized funk, uplifted hip-hop's musical ambitious and paradoxical genre-conscious rap." Concurrently, both the significance and detriments, which would help define gangsta rap, stemmed directly from its violent, nihilistic imagery. During this period, popular industry conceptions surrounding the producers of rap were in vast transition, as rappers were given a social spotlight and megaphone to voice their environmental realities and braggadocio dramas. Thus, vulgarity, sexism and misogyny quickly infiltrated the fibers of rap's contextual outfit, forever altering the seams of its design. Through these experiences, Dre, the accomplished practitioner, continued to watch and carefully fine tune his observations.

After the high-profile squabble between Dre and Lazy E's Ruthless Records, N.W.A. (and essentially "gangsta rap") disintegrated, creating a sudden commercial void. The industrial and musical landscape of hip-hop was left wide open and Dre strategically plotted the possibilities. Elevating his game, he joined forces with Suge Knight to build the formidable sound penitentiary which eventually became Death Row Records. The label's first release, The Chronic (1992), instantly shattered typical rap conventions and explored acres of uncharted hip-hop terrain. While global listeners were accustomed to the conventional highs of schwag, Dre broke out The Chronic. As true musical sensimillia, his seedless song selection hit the auditory senses with a clear, sedative potency. Again, jovial violence and spunky sex-role degradation were elicited with a prominent (yet still inept) acceptability. Albeit the negative, digressive conceptualism, the path of the next wave was paved, and as pioneers and entrepreneurs, Death Row principally subordinated the music of its time, assembling a handpicked cast of vocalists (Snoop, Kurupt, Nate Dogg, Warren G, Lady of Rage, Daz) to coincide with Dre's prosodic rhythmic consistency. By reinventing the fading principles established by the "gangsta" genre of the mid-to-late eighties, The Chronic introduced rap to "gangsta-funk", the (G-funk) era of the early-to-mid nineties. Transforming the pop-accessibility of concrete Cali aesthetics, (which was a primary force hip-hop's initial explosion.) Dre revamped and further intensified the West Coast sound.

Over the next three years, Dre watched his empire peak (with Snoop's Doggystyle, 1994!) and eventually crumble and combust. Discretely, Dr. Dre cooled off as Death Row's boiling velocity simmered into a tepid pool of obscurity. Times had again changed and the aftermath preceded a few quiet years and a new, appropriately titled label. On the obscure, compilation Dr. Dre Presents The Aftermath, the lone fabulous Dre concerto, "Been There Done That," commemorated Dre's philosophy concerning "fake gangstas" and hypercritical haters lurking omni potently in the shadows, Dre began mapping out his return.

As time passed, we were intermediately blessed by his infallible touch. Although some projects (The Firm) were not quite as successful as others (Eminem), he has maintained his distinct sonic identity. From his quasi-isolated throne, the Godfather persona observed rap culture and decided to gravitate once again to its level - a level that he ultimately created.

With the Chronic 2001, Dre culminates his observations of the eighties and nineties and poses a quintessential question in the process: Can we accept a modernistic version of old, marginalized ideals when the musical recipes of those eras are now seemingly redundant if not defunct? Throughout its play, this question becomes a supremely objective dilemma.

As both super-producer and soothsaying rhymer, the Doc operates at a meta-level of influence over his project. Although ghostwriters and guest stars assist him generously, Dre has the unique ability to sculpt his sound according to the concepts behind his lyrics. With a veterans understanding of grace and maturity, he approaches his subsequent effort as the next Chronic rather than simply album number two. Brilliantly, he balances a removed knowledge of street gangsterism with an "Ain't Nothing But a 'G' Thang" and "Still Dre" mentality. Appropriately, in the radiant duet with Snoop, he asks how he "fell off" when his last album was The Chronic? Point well noted.

Echoing years of eternalized observations, "The Watcher" sparks the track with a series of poignant summations regarding the changing climate for O.G.'s turned family men. Immediately, it becomes transparent that Dre has indeed been watching with extraordinary care and personal intimacy. "Big Egos" continues the melodic madness, with a catchy sentiment appropriate for, and superior to, the iggy vogue-ness of modern rap. On the sharply protruding "What's The Difference," Dre measures himself against the juvenile regurgitation's of your typical mad rapper. While Xzibit steals the show with a ferocious "rhyme of the year" caliber verse, a freshly overconfident Eminem somewhat sours the sauce with his Asymmetrical whininess. Yet musically, 2001 keeps right on flowing. "Light Speed" introduces a smoothed-out, futuristic production style that will undoubtedly transcend hip-hop during the next decade; "The Next Episode" re-teams with Snoop and bounces along with a stingy effort. Lessness; and "Bitch N*ggaz" is a haughty (but ignorant) assault on players playing themselves.

On the wonderfully conceived "Forgot About Dre", Doc experiments with a slow-paced rhythm and a double-time rhyme. Unfortunately, Eminem detracts again from the funky aura with his high treble antics and awkward poetic patterns. Actually, neither protégé, (Slim Shady nor Snoop) advance themselves lyrically, over Dre's meticulously polyphonic beats, and it hardly matters. Consequently, Dre himself largely provides the verbal resonance, with an occasional hand from Hittman who is featured throughout. On "Some L.A. Niggaz," the incredible X to the Z spits another venomous dart, accompanied most eloquently by MC Ren. Defari and King T, who deliberately sever their cadence to appropriate Dre's molasses, staccato drums.

On the whole, the album's quintessential question is left to the listener. True, Dre conservatively reverted back to many of his old, marginally minded themes, but the overall concept of Chronic 2001, designates painstaking attention towards blazing forward and exemplifying his confident maturity. (Check the finale track "The Message"). And despite a myriad of forgettable moments, it is difficult to fault the mortal architect who virtually constructed the very genre from which he speaks. A-

Dr. Dre's looking into the future with his new release, Chronic 2001.

WRITE FOR ARTS & LIVING

Earn 3 credits in two weeks in Mount Wachusett Community College's January Intersession

January 3-7 and 10-14

Two convenient locations - MWCC's Gardner campus and the Leominster Campus & Corporate Training Center.

Day sessions in Gardner and Leominster 9:00 a.m. - 1:30 p.m.
Evening sessions in Leominster 4:30 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.

Courses offered:
Biology of Human Health
Introduction to Computers
Math for Allied Health
Psychology of Self
Human Sexuality
Business Organization
Microcomputer Applications
Film Appreciation
Total Quality Management
Music Appreciation
Litigation
(special scheduling applies to some courses, not all courses offered at both locations.)

For more information or to register, call the Admissions Office today (978) 632-6600, ext. 110

e-mail: admissions@mwcc.mass.edu
Visit our Web site: www.mwcc.mass.edu
Mount Wachusett Community College
444 Green Street • Gardner, MA 01440

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z, A is as important as Z — Buddhist saying
A To Z
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Looking for marketing experience? Love Music and the Internet?

SOUNDSBIG.com, an emerging online music network, is recruiting interns. Our services include Internet radio, MP3s, audio CD's, playlists, artist web pages and a whole lot more. Check us out at www.SOUNDSBIG.com.

Interns will create a buzz about Soundsbig.com. Focus areas include college campuses, radio, music retail, press, tours, and clubs. This is a great opportunity to get involved in an exciting online entertainment business.

If interested, please send resume and cover letter to interns@soundsbig.com.

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
WEDNESDAY NIGHT IS PROMO NIGHT with DJ Fooz
THIS WEEK FEATURES HEINEKEN
TRIP WILL BE GIVEN AWAY NEXT WEEK DEC. 8TH
Last Chance to Register and Win a FREE TRIP TO CANCUN!!
THE ONLY PLACE TO DANCE ON WEDNESDAY WITH A DJ GUARANTEED TO MAKE YOU MOVE
The Monkey Bar Features Cajun and Mediterranean Cuisine
Featuring Daily Luncheon and Dinner Specials
63 N. PLEASANT ST. 259-1600

End of millennium blues

So it's comedown to this. Over two thousand years of human existence and the evolution of an entire species has come to a pinnacle of humanity. Developments in technology, architecture and politics have created a great society of numerous people and thoughts. Who would have ever thought that this time would come? I never thought I would see it, as a child I thought I would be dead by the year 2000. Yet all of our success may be erased by those same four numbers: a two followed by three zeros. Because no one thought of how computers would interpret the changing of the date from '99 to '00, our entire way of life is in jeopardy. Supposedly this global anomaly, now known to the world as the Y2K bug, will crash every computer that isn't 100 percent compliant. The thought is scaring people around the country and globe, allowing the media to try to market people's fear.

Calling it a prophecy of things to come, or perhaps just a cheap way to get through sweeps week, NBC released Y2K: The Movie, two weeks ago. It is the story of what might happen when the clock hits midnight, the ball drops in Times Square, and Dick Clark finally dies. According to the script of Y2K no matter what humans do to prepare, it won't matter because things will still go wrong. So it is up to one man to save the world. I want to meet the person who wrote this script, and I really hope that only one person wrote it. I don't want to think that it took a team of writers to create such an awful plot and scenario for a movie, even a made-for-TV-movie.

Nicholas Pizzolato

"The Simpsons" had a skit during its Halloween episode about Y2K. Basically, the world has updated all it's computers and has avoided Y2K, except for Homer. Because of Homer and his forgetfulness, the entire world goes to hell. We see Dick Clark for what he really is, a robot, as cities come crumbling down. However, at this point in the game, this type of mockery just isn't funny anymore.

Y2K has even influenced the sneaker industry. Nike has released a commercial in which a man who is obviously not a believer of Y2K goes for a jog on New Years Day. As he is running through the streets of New York, missiles are being dropped, looting is happening, tanks drive past and wildlife begins to take over the world again. It doesn't take a brain surgeon to figure out what Nike wants people to do, buy their shoes, because, though the world may be coming to an end, sneakers will always be Y2K compliant.

But let's not forget about all those films that have taken place during the changing of millennium. The recent End Of Days has Arnold battling Satan for the globe. My question is: how is Arnold going to hurt the Devil? Arnold always seems to have access to heavy artillery, but what good does that do against the endless and mystical powers of Satan? Yeah, a bazooka might work against the 1-2000, but it would be like firing a spitball into a flame against the Lord of Evil.

In the 1995 sci-fi/ action film Strange Days the setting is also the final days before the new millennium, and although it's has absolutely nothing to do with Y2K or the Devil, it's a good movie and I highly recommend it for your viewing enjoyment.

What we have to remember about the next century is that we will make it. The only future that exists is the one we create. Maybe if Bill Gates and Steve Jobs had been on the ball, we wouldn't be worrying about our domestic fears of Y2K. Personally, I'm more afraid of what will happen in other countries, like the ones who still have nukes hooked up to Atari's and Commodore 64's. But who worry? According to Dick Clark, this years "New Year's Rocking Eve" will be celebrated all over the world. We can rock the night away in the city that never sleeps.

Nicholas Pizzolato is a Collegian Columnist

Gotham resurrects Bauhaus again

Bauhaus from left: Kevin Haskins, Daniel Ash, David J.

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

BAUHAUS
Gotham
Metropolis

For everyone who caught the "Resurrection '98" tour, and for everyone else, the best band ever to exist, otherwise known as Bauhaus has released the live album that documents this monumental occasion.

Their closest visit to where we stand during last year's tour was where the great tent known as the Harborlights Pavilion once loomed on Boston's waterfront. The recordings contained herein, were committed to vinyl, video and silverdisc at New York City's Hammerstein Ballroom (thence the rather humorous title). This audio/visual delight bears witness to all the greatness that is, was, and will eternally be known as Bauhaus.

Okay, I might be embellishing just a bit – just had to hammer the point home.

Bauhaus, reunited for the first time in 1998 since their abrupt disbanding in 1983, brought two generations of fans together with their "Resurrection" tour. Bauhaus' extreme success as an art/death-rock act was, for the most part, post mortem. The number of Bauhaus fans who were in kindergarten or elementary school when the band broke up was far greater than the first hand/old school fans when the Resurrection shows took place. The eyeliner clad crowd emerged from the subways and the hideous yellow cabs that patrol NYC's streets to snatch up what will probably be their only opportunity to see the quartet perform together again.

The thick smoke and screeching guitars summoned the once deceased spirit that was later reincarnated in another band – Love and Rockets "Double Dare" had David J., Daniel Ash, and Kevin Haskins performing the song on their own, accompanied by the black and white image of Peter Murphy on a video screen, bellowing his vocals from offstage. "In the Flat Field" rounded out the quartet – all four in the flesh this time – to tremendous applause.

Flawed as this recording may be, its imperfections only add to its feeling of authenticity. An aspect of this album which is a relief from other live albums recorded throughout an artist's tour – where only the cuts that sound the most like the studio versions are the ones that make it on the album. "God In An Alcove" "Kick In the Eve," "The Passion of Lovers" and a cover of Dead Can Dance's "Severance," are among the brooding classics that comprise the first disc, closing with "Dark Entries."

Comparing the new incarnation of Bauhaus to the 1980 prototype, it is easy to see that the band Murphy, in particular) has much more control over themselves and their music. Their sound is still jaded, cruelly and just plain hard on the ears at times, too. But their tendency to ham it up has subsided to a tendency to glam it up. Their over the top theatricality does not come off as pretentious or unintentionally laughable as they were accused of during their four year tenure.

The second disc offers covers of Iggy Pop's "Telegram Sam" – and (of course) David Bowie's "Ziggy Stardust." Look for a cover of Iggy Pop's "The Passenger" on the video version. The main attraction of disc two is what has come to be known as the "Stairway to Heaven" of gothic rock. "Bela Lugosi's Dead." This impending doom bass line carries the song almost five minutes before Murphy's voice creeps its way inside. His howling at the end of the song was chilling enough to channel Lugosi's spirit into the room.

The studio version of "Severance" that is heard at the end of the album can be read by some as a glint of hope that Murphy, Jay, Haskins and Ash will work together again. But with the breakup of Love and Rockets earlier this year, that seems less and less likely. Oh well, at least they left some songs by which to remember them. A+

Summer 2000
Research Experiences for Undergraduates
MIT Haystack Observatory

Undergraduate science, mathematics, engineering, and computer science students are invited to apply for summer research positions at the MIT haystack Observatory in Westford, MA. Research projects include radio astronomical studies, atmospheric physics investigations, and hardware and software development for data acquisition, processing, and recording systems. The program extends from June 5 to August 11, 2000 and carries a weekly stipend of $375.00, payable biweekly. Women, minorities and students with disabilities are encouraged to apply.

For further information and application materials see: http://www.haystack.mit.edu/reu/
or write to: Director/REU Program
MIT Haystack Observatory
Off Route 40
Westford, MA 01886-1299
Tel: (978) 692-4764
Fax: (781) 981-0590
Email: jsignorello@haystack.mit.edu

Application deadline is February 7, 1999

I Refuse to be a Victim.
You Can, Too.
Women; Develop you own personal safety strategy

You Can Refuse to be a victim. Call now for reservations at a 3 hour course to help develop your own Personal Safety Strategy.

Sunday December 5th 9:00 AM to 12:00 Noon.
At The F.C.L.S.C. Field House located on River Road in East Deerfield, MA.
Fee: $20.00
Sponsored by the women of The Franklin County league of Sportsmen's Clubs Inc.
Reservations are required. Call (413) 665-4362 email lanlarg@shaysnet.com for reservations, course details and directions.
Seating is limited. Call for reservations now!

Our internships aren't easy to get into.

Then again, neither is college.

Congratulations. All the cramming, isomnia and junk food breakfasts have paid off, you're in college now - and soon, you'll be facing questions about your life like what to do with the rest of it. One thing is for sure, if you're a student of color, with an INROADS internship you can have a serious job every summer while you're still in school - making contacts and gaining experience in your chosen field of study. Hey, it won't be easy, but then again if you wanted it easy you wouldn't be reading this right now.

web site_www.inroadsinc.org

Join us on November 15 for an informational dinner at the New African House starting at 6:30p.m. Inroads will also hold on-campus interviews on Tuesday, November 16 from9a.m. - 2p.m. at the Campus Center Building, Room 811.

INROADS

FREE DELIVERY
3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
586-7272

HOURS OF OPERATION:
Mon - Wed 11am - 1am,
Thurs & Sun 11am - 2am,
Fri & Sat 11am - 3am

Now Accepting:
VISA MasterCard OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan

1 LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $6.99
1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99
•Not Valid with any other offer •Valid only at participatin locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax •Additional toppings extra

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease! Large 2Bdrm, Cheap! Call 259-9153 on bus route

Beautiful 2-Bdrm in NOHO 2-floors, Jan 1 $775+electric Vicky or Angela 586-3132

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apt. Cliffside, Sunderland. $300/mo. Everything included. Call Ito H: 665-8721 W: 545-2108

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Honda Accord LXi 172k, auto, am/fm cass, needs some work. $1000 or B/O. Call Jessica 549-1024

1989 Honda Civic DX 95k miles $2950 or B/O 545-4878 268-3155

1987 Ford Escort 95,000 miles 4 DR. Auto perfect condition, no rust. $1,700 253-1303

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

PENTIUM III 500 MHZ ABII BE6 128 MBSRAM ATI3DAGEFURY 24XCD BURNER TOSHIBA6X DVD 17. MAG MONITOR. 56K MODEM NEC LASERPRINTER AND MORE CALL JIMMY $2100 OR BO 253-8074 3 WKS OLD

COMPUTERS

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Cool Candy Company on bus route in Amherst seeks outgoing phone sales reps. You can work around your classes with our flexible schedule: choose one of two daily shifts (four hours each), minimum of three shifts per week. Shifts are 10am-2pm or 1pm to 5pm. Earn up to $10 an hour with base salary plus commission. Requires some sales experience, but personality is most important. Don't miss this great opportunity - call Beth right now to set up an interview! 1-888-556-5599

Human Services - Residential support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults. Permanent hours (full and part time) and relief. Hours include evenings, weekends, and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for Permanent). Locations in Belchertown and South Hadley. Call (413) 774-2281, ext. 11 (ask for Mary). AA/EOE

EMPLOYMENT

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

BARTENDERS Make $100-$300 per night no expierence necessary. Call 1-800-981-8168 ext 205

EXCELLENT compensation for marketing college products at BEST prices. Go NOW to: http://www.adademos.com/campusrep

Spring Break Staff Wanted for Cancun and Mazatlan 6 to 10 weeks in Mexico all expenses paid and salary. Respond to Email address Aanders@catavel.com

Summer Business Internships Available Not limited to business majors. Earn up to $15,000 this summer. Call 1-800-390-4848 Ext. 100 ASAP or visit www.univ-paint.com

FOR RENT

Great Sublet for Dog Lovers 3 Bedroom house near Smith College Jan-May $675. Reduced form $900 in exchange for care of 2 happy dogs 584-1987

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Learn how to really fight! Don't be a victim. Private boxing lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus. In Amherst on bus route 256-0364

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in three bedroom house available in Hobart rent is 275 a month + utilities 548-8068

Female roommate wanted ASAP. In 3 bedroom Townhouse $330 a month 549-2066

ROOMMATE WANTED

Housemate Wanted for one room in a four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons. Cheap rent, utilities inc. Starting January 1st. 253-2229

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom Apt. 2 people to share big room non-smoker. 3/4 miles from campus. Aprox $300 inclusive. Call Joe 253-4275

Female non-smoker to share apt. with 3 nice girls for Spring Semester. $240 + utilities. Call 253-2378

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

SERVICES

Feeling Ripped Off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; You loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined your favorite suit! Are debit collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Offices today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center

ROOM FOR RENT

Very Cheap Rent 2 large bedrooms in Boulders on bus route. Utilities included furnished, new carpet. Available after Dec 15. thru end of Jan. Call 256-1192

TRAVEL

Browse icpt.com for Springbreak "2000" ALL destinations offered. Trip Participants, Student Orgs & Campus Sales Reps wanted. Fabulous parties, hotels & prices Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Spring Break! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica, Florida and South Padre. Call USA Spring Break for a free brochure and rates and ask how you can EAT, DRINK, and TRAVEL for FREE! Call 1-888-777-4642 www.springbreak.com

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

Party with UMass Ski N' Board Club for the Millennium Quebec City/Hilton 5 nites/4days $299 Dec28-Jan2 Social opportunity age is 18 sign up now, space is selling out bus option available... call 545-3437

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Are you getting stressed about Finals and what to do over Winter Break?

Stress NO MORE!

The Collegian Classifieds has ALL your Answers! Can't find it?? Call 545-3500 and place an AD!!

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 1

Lecture – Professors Dottelbach and McGinness will recreate the 1616 audience Galilei had with Cardinal Robertio Bellarmino on the truth of Copernican astronomy, foreshadowing Galileo's condemnation by the Inquisition, in a lecture entitled "Galilei v. Bellarmino" which will begin at 5 p.m. in McConnell auditorium at Smith College.

Workshop – There will be a print workshop featuring artist Georgia Marsh and master printer Maurice Sanchez from 10 a.m.– 4 p.m. in Hillyer Hall 17 at Smith College.

THURSDAY, DEC. 2

Meeting – There will be a reading group/socialist coalition meeting at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. Contact Rich at 549-0111 to get the reading for more details.

Slide Lecture – Artist Georgia Marsh will discuss the process of creating a limited-edition print at 4:15 p.m. in Hillyer 117 at Smith College.

Workshop – There will be a print workshop featuring artist Georgia Marsh and master printer Maurice Sanchez from 10 a.m.– 4 p.m. in Hillyer Hall 17 at Smith College.

NOTICES

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Dayst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-3201 for meeting times and locations.

Training – The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team, based in the legal studies department, is offering a mediation training session for all students from Jan. 3-7. Students will receive mediation certification, and academic credit is possible. Applications are available in room 225 of the Hampshire House, and are due on Dec. 6. Call 545-5882 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks," you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board		21	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3	Hartford	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4	Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57	Springfield	25	CNN fn
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.	26	CNN Si
8	UPN/20	Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel		28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain		29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61	Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24	Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN		32	Cartoon Network
14	International		33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV		34	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven		35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance		36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel		37	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19		38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

WEDNESDAY EVENING C - Campus DECEMBER 1, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (C		Great Performances: Andrea Bocelli			Visions of Italy: Northern Style			Gardens	Pine Trees
WFSB	3	News (C	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Red-Nosed Reindeer		"The Year of Love" (1999, Drama) Nonia Daamey, William Russ				News (C	Late Show (C
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Red-Nosed Reindeer		"The Year of Love" (1999, Drama) Nonia Daamey, William Russ				News	Late Show (C
WCVB	5	News (C	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (C	Two Guys Girl, Whose Line?		Drew Carey (C (Mom (C				News (C	Nightline (C
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (C	Harvey (C	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo) (C		Roseanne (Heat Wave (C		News (C		Friends (C	Nanny (C
WHDH	7	News (C	NBC News	Inside Edition	Extra (C	Wheel of Fortune (In Stereo) (C		Earth Breaks a the Magic		Law & Order "Blood Money" (C		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Judge Jane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV (C	Ultimate Trivic Moments		Star Trek: Voyager "Pathfinder		News	Real TV (R) (C	Change-Heart	Carolina
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra (C	Ent. Tonight	Christmas-Rockefeller		Earth Breaks a the Magic		Law & Order "Blood Money" (C		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons (C	Frasier (C	Seinfeld (C	Friends (C	##3 (TV) "Harry Hogan" (1996, Comedy/Drama) Tom Cruise, Colin Mochrie (C (In Stereo) (C						News (C	Friends (C
WWLP	22	News (C	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (C	Christmas-Rockefeller		Earth Breaks a the Magic		Law & Order "Blood Money" (C		News (C	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (C		Great Performances: Andrea Bocelli			Great Performances: Andrea Bocelli			Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (C
WGGB	40	29	News (C	Seinfeld (C	Frasier (C	Sabrina, the Teenage Witch (Movie) (C		Drew Carey (C		News (C		ABC News (C
WSBK	38		Judge Judy (C	Judge Judy (C	Seinfeld (C	Frasier (C	Ultimate Trivic Moments		Star Trek: Voyager "Pathfinder"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)	Blind Date	Ricki Lake (C
WTBS	72		Roseanne (C	Roseanne (C	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	NBA Basketball: Houston Rockets at Phoenix Suns (Live)					Inside NBA	"Dr. No" (1962, Sean Connery
A&E	25		Simon & Simon			Law & Order "Custody" (C	Biography: Dick Thornburgh					Law & Order "Menace" (C
CNN	24	22	Wolf Blitzer (C	Moneyline Newshour (C		Crossfire (C	World Today (C		Larry King Live (C			Newsstand (R)
COM	27	36	Saturday Night Live (C		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Sein "Crisis Upon a Critter" (1996, Comedy) John Goodman,				South Park (C	Man Show (C	Daily Show
DISC	48		Your New House (C		Wild Discovery		On the Inside "F.B. Stories" (R)		Bear Attack 3 – Grizzly Bears		Eco-Challenge		On the Inside "F.B. Stories" (R)
ESPN	45		Sportscenter		College Basketball: ACC/Big		Ten Challenge – Mich. St. at Tech		College Basketball: ACC/Big Ten Challenge – Mich. St. at N.C.			Sportscenter (C
LIFE	31		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope "Food Chain" (R		"Something in Common" (1986, Drama			Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	49		Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beer Suits		TRL (In Stereo)		TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Head Trip (R)	Wild ADDs Day	True Life (R)
NICK	46		All That	Caroling	Hey Arnold! (C	Rugrats (C	Rugrats (C	Rocket Power	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back
SCIFI	29		Hercules: Legendary Journ.		Sliders "Into the Mystic" (R) (C		Sliders "Love Don't Be Shared		Sliders "Killer of the Sperm" (C		Sliders (R) (In Stereo) (C	Poltergeist: The Legacy (C
TLC	28		Home Again	Home Again	Turning Point (R)		Ultimate Special Effects		Ultimate Special Effects		Ultimate Special Effects	Ultimate Special Effects
TNT	44		Due South "In Sheep's" (C		ER "The Last In Series" (C		Free "Early Dorothy" (1997, Drama) Jennifer Grey				Free "Early Dorothy" (1997, Drama) Jennifer Grey
USA	32		Baywatch "A Little Help		JAG "Friends" (In Stereo) (C		Walker, Texas Ranger "Blood		Walker, Texas Ranger "Blood		Walker, Texas Ranger (C
HBO	50		5:30 Free "And the Band Played On" (1993) Matthew Modine (C				Stuart Little		Free "Eddie's Wedding" (1998, Comedy) Jon Lovitz, Debi Mazar (C
MAX	51		Free "Deadline Dundee" (1950, Comedy) Paul Hogan, Pat O'B (C				Free "Crocodile Dundee II" (1988, Comedy) Paul Hogan, Pat O'B (C				In "Top Gun" (1986) Katherine Ross, Tim (C		Commandments
SHOW	53		Free "Eraser" (1996, Comedy) Tower Alliance, Pat O'B (C				Free "Whispers" (1990, Drama) Tom Hanks, Eric Roberts (C						Lovelines (In Stereo)

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

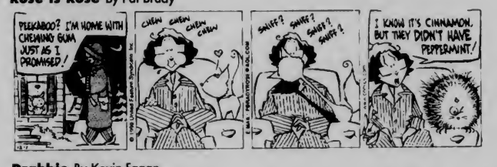
Nina By Anna Faktorovich

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may be called upon to represent the interests of those around you today. Do not hold back. It's important for you to tell it like it is.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You must pay close attention to the passage of time today — from moment to moment and hour to hour. Your instincts are keen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Problems which arise today are directly linked to your inability at this time to make important connections between seemingly unrelated events.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Someone is waiting to do you a good turn today, but you must make yourself available. You never know when something good may come your way.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Someone may be trying to limit your own imaginative process today. Insist that you be given free rein. You're on the verge of something big.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Take advantage of the little things today and you may find that the big things follow close behind. Don't limit yourself at this time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Tension at home may be the cause of unexpected disenchantment in other areas. Discussion and compromise are the keys to harmony.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – This is a good day to review your own record, assess your recent performance, and make any subtle changes in behavior which can increase your returns.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Your swiftly changing moods may make it difficult for others to take you seriously today ... at a time when you credibility may be already on the line.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Do not spend more time on the preliminaries today than is necessary to ensure confidence and enthusiasm. You'll know when to get started.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Intrusions abound today, and you must keep your wits about you at all times to avoid any possible hazards that distraction can bring about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – It's time to employ those special tactics which could very well put you in a better position to snatch the advantage from a competitor.

Quote of the Day

"Celebrate we will, 'cause life is short but sweet for certain"

– "Two Step" Dave Mathews Band

ACROSS

1 Crow cries
5 Halloween sight
10 Meadow rodent
14 Indian nurse
15 Boombox
16 Where Tazio is
17 Opera set in Egypt
18 Watchful
19 Actor Ray
20 Elmo, to Lucy
22 Gulf
23 Game fish
24 Heavy hammer
26 Ranish priest
29 Ill-naturedly
33 Type of dance
34 Uncompromising
35 Affirmative vote
36 Beat soundly
37 Rich candy
38 Bluesnot
39 Tank
40 Brooklyn s — skiing
41 Nonestand
42 Issues
44 Choreographer de Mille
45 TV personality Rooney
48 Indy winner A.J. —
49 Establish the validity of 51 Resupply consists
55 Hoof overhang
58 Elephant explorer
58 Mathew Hunter
59 Affirm positively
60 Lofty nest
61 Tibetan monk
62 Sea swallow
63 Rattlesnake jams
64 Twist

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

DOWN

1 "Brahm's Song" start
2 Peoples girl
3 Dry riverbed
4 Hickory tree
5 Clutches
6 Rings of light
7 River to the Baltic
8 Formal address
9 Little rod
10 Lively to work
11 Paris airport
12 Young mares
13 Rendezvous' Slaughter
21 Prune
22 — lang syne
24 Very humid
25 What George couldn't tell
26 Fine regulator
27 Helen of Troy's story
28 Desert plants
29 Flanks
30 Drip-dry fabric
31 Rans
32 Joins
34 Watery
37 Pantry contents
38 Braids
40 Fern
41 Actor Danny —
43 Pub
46 Hindu mendicant
47 Curved moldings
48 — mess
49 Glowing review
50 In charge of 51 Pee
52 Pango's st
53 Weary volume
54 Cabbage dish
56 Smidgen
57 Female ruff

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

BREAKFAST

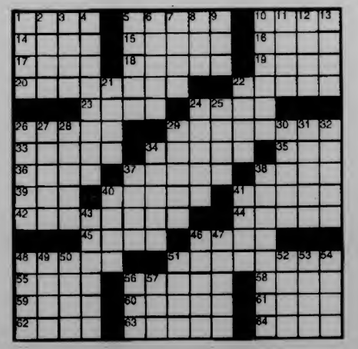
Cream of Wheat
Omelet
Cinnamon Raisin French Toast
O'Brien Potatoes

LUNCH

Soup de Jour

Steak& Cheese Sub
Chicken Hoagy Sandwich
Garden Chili (Berkshire, Franklin, Worcester only)
Broccoli Terazzini (B, H, W only)

Pasta Bar
Salad Bar



DINNER

Soup de Jour

Chicken with Pecan Dijon Sause
Beef & Shrimp Lo Mein
Vegetable Lo Mein
Black-Eyed Peas
Jambalaya (B & W only)

Pasta Bar
Salad Bar

Night Editor: Ken Mc Donald
Photo Technitian: Nicole Gothwald
Copy Editor: Mary Grein
Production Supervisor: Jaylynn Lombard
Production Staff: Roberto Delgado, Melanie Thomas

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday, December 1, 1999

Hokies/Seminoles taste BCS sweets, Herd unheard

Florida State is playing the best competition available for this year's Fiesta Bowl. Fans of the Nebraska Cornhuskers be damned, Virginia Tech, at an awesome 11-0, is the only worthy opponent for an undefeated Seminole squad.

The Bowl Championship System is threatening albeit now only slightly, to keep Virginia Tech out of that game.

Listen to some of the writers out

Sam Wilkinson on College Football

there and one would swear that the BCS would be justified giving Nebraska a shot at the national title. After all, they have more of a following than Virginia Tech, more of a history, more titles, more ability, more reputation, harder schedule, and more whatever else that a national champion contender supposedly deserves.

But Virginia Tech, plainly and simply, went undefeated and Nebraska didn't.

Oh, some whine, that's why Nebraska should get a shot. They played better teams in Texas, Texas A&M and Kansas State. And it is true that Nebraska did play better teams. But Nebraska could not beat those better teams, losing to Texas.

Nebraska, with its national reputation, has better access to recruits than Virginia Tech, often landing more of the young men who want to play football in a big time conference for a big time school against big time teams. Virginia Tech gets what some might call the "scraps."

Frank Beamer turned those supposed scraps into a national title contender, going undefeated against the teams the Big East the Hokies played against, and winning those games. And with the exception of a close win over West Virginia's Mountaineers, they did so in grand style. That is all anyone can ask a college football team to do, and that's what the Hokies did, win.

Because they won their games, they have earned that shot in the national championship, a game where they might just be able to pull an upset over the team to be heavily favored Seminoles of Florida State.

But that leaves only one other team to compete for the national title and it isn't Florida or Tennessee or Alabama or Wisconsin. Rather, it's little-known Marshall University, who currently possesses a 13-game winning streak and are undefeated in '99.

While it's true that it didn't play a single ranked opponent, the Thundering Herd can't do much about that if no one will schedule a game with them. Marshall has perhaps the best unknown quarterback in the nation in Chad Pennington, a passer who should finish a distant fifth in the Heisman voting. But Marshall, like Virginia Tech, deserves its chance because, against the competition it faced, Marshall won football games.

The Herd beat a rebuilding Clemson squad that went 6-5 but could have been 8-3 after losing to, besides Marshall, Florida State and, maybe you already guessed it, Virginia Tech. Then it beat the rest of the competition soundly. The fact that they went undefeated against what was made available in their MAC competition, says that they did what only two other schools in the nation did: win them all.

So what does this all really mean? That the BCS system is absolutely ridiculous. In its attempt to make things better, it still isn't as good as a playoff system.

Imagine, giving tiny Marshall a chance to beat Florida State. If nothing else, the game would be intriguing. Fans couldn't complain, FSU people would get to see a squash of a game theoretically, while MU fans would see their boys playing against the number one team in the nation. If there was an upset? Well, we all love an upset.

The fact is that a championship game should be the product of the best teams in the nation playing against one another to get there. Take the top 16 teams in the nation according to computers, play them into a playoff game, and watch it develop.

Think of the games we might get. Michigan-Florida State. Wisconsin-Alabama. 15 games featuring the top teams in the nation. 15. How could we as fans go wrong?

And complaints that teams would be playing to many games are ridiculous. If the University of Massachusetts football team can handle it, why can't FSU, Virginia Tech, Marshall, or any of the other big name schools this year that would be in the playoffs if playoffs existed?

But now, we can only cross our fingers and hope that Texas puts Nebraska in its place, leaving the Cornhuskers totally out of the national championship picture. And if UN does win, we can only hope that the computer puts the right teams into the game, a game in which Virginia Tech pulls the upset over an unprepared Florida State team.

Wildcats outlast Minutewomen

UMass has the goods, but can't deliver in overtime

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Maybe they should change the name of the venue to the Billy D. Williams Center. After all, last night's loss was about as tough to swallow as a tall glass of Colt 45.

New Hampshire	60
Massachusetts	58

The Massachusetts women's basketball team showed flashes of hardwood mastery in its William D. Mullins Center showdown with the Wildcats of New Hampshire last night, but fell in overtime, 60-58. The Minutewomen (0-5) bested the Wildcats in nearly every offensive category, but shot a dreary 18-percent (2 of 11) from the field in the extra set.

"When things get chaotic, we tend to fall into the trap of backing up," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "We didn't make any plays when we needed to step up and make them."

New Hampshire (2-2) made no secret of its plan of attack, as nearly every offensive scheme somehow went through standout center Orsi Farkas. The senior from Hungary repeatedly threaded her 6-foot-2 body through UMass double teams down low, knifing to the hoop en route to a 26 point, nine rebound showcase on the evening.

"Orsi is as close as you'll get to a complete player," UNH coach Sue Johnson said. "I sometimes think that I'd like to try her out at the three, because her court vision is that good."

The Maroon and White looked impressive off the opening tip, utilizing an aggressive pressing scheme to slow down the tempo and burn up shot clock time. On 12 of UNH's first half possessions, the Wildcats couldn't manage any semblance of a look at the hoop until the shot clock had dipped below 10 seconds.

On the other end of the court, the Kathy Coyner-led Maroon and White attack was finally showing the brash flair it promised in the preseason. Point guard Coyner fearlessly put the ball on the floor and attacked seams in the Wildcat zone, while freshman guard Ebony Pegues made the most of her increased playing time (senior Tonia Thomas rode the pine with back problems) to torch UNH for a team-high seven first half points.

"They kept leaving me open, and I took advantage of it," Pegues said. "I knew that I needed to step up in this game, and my chance came offensively."

Behind the opening frame heroics of Pegues and fellow freshman Amber Sneed (six first-half points), the Minutewomen withstood an eight-point half from Farkas and appeared set to head to the locker room in a 25-25 lock. But a defensive lapse by Coyner on a missed Sneed free throw allowed Wildcat guard Kelly Donahue to streak down the court unchecked, which prompted a length-of-the-court lob from Farkas to give Donahue an easy lay-up. For the fifth time in as many games, the Maroon and White found itself in a hole at halftime.

The early goings of the second set saw an absolute dogfight, as the Minutewomen pulled even with UNH four times within the first 15 minutes of the half. UMass finally grabbed the upper hand at the 3:18 mark, as a 10-footer from Caroline Nehls and a three-pointer from Coyner pushed the Minutewomen up by five, 50-45.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTOS

Sophomore forward Nekole Smith made a crucial hoop in the final seconds of regulation last night to force overtime against UNH. The Wildcats prevailed in the extra set, 60-58.

But Donahue once again proved a thorn in the Maroon and White's side, following up a lay-up by teammate Anna Matthias with a sensational steal and fast break sequence to tie the game at 50-all with 1:23 to play.

A pair of free throws by Farkas left UNH in position to triumph in regulation, until a sweet baseline feed from UMass' sophomore Alison MacFarland set up teammate Nekole Smith with a wide open bank shot to force overtime. Smith had gone scoreless in the first half, making her late offensive emergence all the more critical.

"I was just looking for that rhythm," Smith said. "It definitely didn't come to me until late."

And unfortunately for the Maroon and White, that rhythm would be nowhere in sight during the extra set. Two free throws from Matthias and a pair of inside buckets from Farkas pushed UNH out front by eight, 58-54, with 1:18 left in overtime. MacFarland canned a pair of freebies to cut the deficit in half, and a solid defensive board by UMass freshman Jennifer Butler off a Donahue miss gave the home team the chance to lock the game with under 20 ticks to go.

But in a sequence indicative of the Maroon and White's recent misfortunes, Coyner's dribble into the left corner was slapped off her leg and out of bounds by UNH's Kiki Procter, giving the Wildcats the ball and eventually, the win.

The team will look to regroup over the next few days before flying south to Texas, where it will compete in the Gene Hackerman Rice Invitational over the weekend.

Point guard Coyner sets pace in close loss

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

With 16:16 on the clock in the second half, Massachusetts guard Kathy Coyner struck. New Hampshire point Kiki Proctor was advancing the ball past mid-court and her 5-foot-6 counterpoint caught a glimpse of the dribble... as Proctor was beginning to realize what was going on, Coyner was laying the ball in at the other end to tie the game at 31, bringing the Minutewomen back from what had been as much as a five-point margin.

It would be Coyner who kept the Maroon and White close again almost four minutes later, hitting a floater in the paint to bring the teams to an even 34.

Still, UMass could not overcome the Wildcats, losing by two, 60-58, in overtime. At least according to this game, it would seem that as goes Kathy, so go the Minutewomen.

With the score knotted up at 41 with 9:07 to go, it was No. 15 that took the give-and-go and picked up the foul on the layup to complete the three-point play.

It was also Coyner who was caught off guard by New Hampshire standout Orsi Farkas with 5:1 seconds remaining in the opening half, as the Wildcat grabbed Minutewoman Amber Sneed's missed free throw and bombed an assist to teammate Kelly Donohue, who Coyner left uncovered underneath the UMass basket. UNH went into the locker room with a 27-25 advantage, having quickly killed the momentum that Massachusetts was building with a strong final few minutes of the first half.

Kathy Coyner

"(Kathy) stood and watched the rebound instead of getting back, and the kid made a nice play and went long," coach Joanie O'Brien said.

"Your point guard is normally the one that gets back, and she just got caught up in trying to steal the ball from someone else, and maybe didn't catch the kid going by her."

Coyner continued to mark the team's ups and downs, pushing the Maroon and White lead up to five, 50-45, with 3:17 left in the contest as she drained a three-pointer from the right baseline. Then, at the beginning of overtime, the firecracker hit the deck to knock the ball away from a scrambling Donohue after the tip-off, getting UMass possession and eventually a lead, as Minutewoman Nekole Smith capitalized on the set-up to put Massachusetts in front, 54-52.

Unfortunately for the William D. Mullins Center faithful, though, the game-deciding play with 6.9 ticks to go in overtime did not go Coyner's way. Down by two, 58-56, the ball escaped her grasp and went out of bounds, leaving the possession, and the victory, in the hands of New Hampshire.

"Kathy's solid. She makes solid plays," O'Brien said. "I'm sure she got herself a little tired there at the end, she played the second half and overtime, but she's in the kind of shape where she can do that. It would have been nice if she could've dribbled that ball out and gotten into a little bit better play. I know she was looking for Nekole on that block and didn't have the opportunity to get it there, but Kathy's solid. She gives you everything she has to give every time she steps out there."

TV Sports Broadcast, Internet Action Melding

By Rita Ciolli
Newsday

"We're late, get off this," J.R. Grant commanded tersely into his headset mike, as he stared at a bright wall of control room monitors during the first quarter of ABC's Monday Night Football game between Seattle and Green Bay.

"Three stats in a row is not what I wanted," he said, calling for a profile card of Seattle receiver Derrick Mayes, who had just scored the game's first touchdown.

While shouts, jokes and muttered curses can be standard in the control room of a live television production, this effort offered a very different twist: It was live Internet. Or, as the media conglomerate bankrolling the effort prefers to call it, "Enhanced TV" – a heavily promoted experiment in interactive entertainment by Disney, ABC, ESPN and Infoseek.

In the language of future communications, this is convergence. And the true goal of this media monolith is to distill the elements for a perfect marriage of television and the personal computer.

"The end game is to own your audience, to keep their attention over multiple media," said David Card, a consumer Internet analyst for Jupiter Communications. He said Jupiter's research shows that convergence, or people using their TV and computer at the same time, is beginning to happen on a broad basis. "It is not just kids or computer wizards," he said.

To dramatize that this concept works only when both mediums are being used, Enhanced TV does not exist online except just before and during the Sunday night football game shown on ESPN and the Monday night game on ABC. Those wishing to enter go through links set up at ABC.com, ESPN.com or NFL.com.

Once there, users are offered a variety of entertainment options linked to the live on-field activity.

This includes Prime Time Player, a game that allows you to "play along" by selecting which offensive player the quarterback will give the ball to at the line of scrimmage. A wisecracking referee who provides commentators during the game – some players may be shocked to learn it's a woman – freezes the selections just as the on-field play begins.

Online contestants then get points for making the right choice, and for giving correct answers to trivia questions. The standings are then displayed on a continuing basis, so you can see how you're doing against everyone else registered to play.

Groups of family or friends also have the option of forming their own division and playing against each other, no matter where they are physically located.

The point, according to Jonathan Leess, vice president of Enhanced TV, is: "It's not just the college kids in the dorm – it's age 18 to 45 males across the board" who will want to use this technology. That demographic, he adds, is the filet mignon of the consumer audience for advertisers.

Want more? "Game Stats," an interactive database, is continually updated for individual players and teams as the game moves on. Even if you don't want to play games, you'll get instant graphics and data that the control room decides is the most relevant.

"Make a bar graph," said Grant, who wanted to show that the Seahawks' first touchdown run was for more yardage than the combined gains of the first 24 plays in the sloppy game. Grant swigs mineral water and keeps Altoids by his mouse, telltale signs that he and the seven others staring into monitors had not yet turned 30.

"This is the precursor to interactive TV. We are getting to know what it is," said Kevin Mayer, executive vice president of the Buena Vista Internet Group, the online arm of the Disney Empire. "Learning is critical," he said.

Convergence, while finally moving from predictions to experiments, is still evolving, to be shaped by technological changes and consumer preferences. Will Enhanced TV of the season-long future look like it does now? "I don't know," Mayer said bluntly.

But the network's early sense from very positive user surveys is that it can work and have wide appeal – so much so that Buenva Vista is placing promos for it on the Jumbotron in Times Square. More than 470,000 visitors tried it in October and they stayed at the site an average of 53 minutes. Of the more than 17,000 who answered a survey, 94 percent said they would use ETV again.

And, Mayer said, the plan is to expand and customize it to all types of live ABC programming an interactive Oscars telecast, possibly "The View," a daytime talk show, "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire," a game show, and even news programs such as "Nightline" and "20/ 20."

But before it could even get to the programming choices, ABC had to find a technology that would work as a delivery system. The network learned that when it fumbled in January with the Fiesta Bowl. Within a few minutes of kickoff, 100,000 users subscribed and the rest were shut out. And those who got in experienced delayed stats and sometimes frozen screens.

Deciding to bypass other interactive technologies on the market such as WebTV, the Enhanced TV group turned to Disney's Imagineering unit in San Diego for support. "It was a challenging technical feat. We wanted to build our own infrastructure," Leess said.

What they did is best understood by comparing the computer to the television. Today, no matter how a television signal is delivered – by antenna, cable or satellite dish – the reception or picture on the screen is uniform. However, data sent via the Internet can show up in different formats and at different speeds depending on whether a dial-up modem or LAN line was used, or even whether America Online or Netscape was the browser.

In the beginning "simultasks" of ETV, AOL was initially up to eight minutes behind and the picture and graphics would wind up in a different part of the screen, according to Leess. That's why the control room not only has the network feed of the game but monitors to show how it is coming across on three different systems: AOL and Netscape with a modem, and Internet Explorer with a LAN line.

They also decided to keep it very simple. The site doesn't include any audio or video, and it can be accessed with a 28k modem.

"What they are really doing is learning how to do interactive TV, and they created their own technology to do it," said Card, the analyst for Jupiter Communications.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 58

Thursday, December 2, 1999

Student found asphyxiated

Police investigating Cashin death

A University of Massachusetts student died early yesterday morning after being taken by ambulance to Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Andrew Brown, 19, a sophomore engineering major, was discovered Tuesday night at about 10:45 p.m. in the Cashin Residence Hall. There were no signs of foul play in the death, which has been listed as an unattended death. The cause was death by asphyxiation.

Because the death was unattended, the District Attorney's Office and the state police are also investigating.

Counselors were available to talk to all friends and acquaintances, while chaplains and other resources are available all students, faculty and staff through the Dean of Students office in the Whitmore Building at 545-2684.

Funeral and memorial services will be announced as soon as they will be available.

Brown's death was the second asphyxiation death on campus this year. Arthur Rudolph, a 26-year-old senior history major at the University of Massachusetts died on Oct. 4 of this year after committing suicide by asphyxiation.

–Sam Wilkinson

Death of man found in car ruled asphyxiation

The cause of death of Arthur Rudolph, a 26-year-old senior history major at the University of Massachusetts who died on Oct. 4 of this year, has been released and called a suicide.

According to a representative from the Massachusetts State Medical Examiner's Office, Rudolph intentionally asphyxiated himself. The representative did not specify how the asphyxiation occurred. Rudolph's body was discovered on a Friday afternoon at 1:55 p.m. locked in the backseat of an automobile in a Puffton Village parking lot. The parking lot was adjacent to a Puffton Village swimming pool.

Both the Amherst Fire Department and the Amherst Police Department responded to the call and were forced to smash in the car's windows to gain access to Rudolph.

The State Medical Examiner can take up to six weeks to release a cause of death.

–Sam Wilkinson

Victims released from the hospital

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Two students who were struck Monday night on University Drive near the Southwest Horseshoe have been treated and released from Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Lisa Abrams, a 19-year-old sophomore student in the College of Arts and Sciences, and Courtney Spivack, an 18-year-old sophomore student also in the College of Arts and Sciences, were both injured in Monday's 5 p.m. accident.

Both women live in Coolidge Residence Hall and were reported to be in stable condition before they were checked out of the hospital yesterday morning. They were kept overnight for observation.

Angel Santana, a resident of Puffton Village, drove the vehicle involved in the accident that left the women's belongings strewn across the street.

Turn to ACCIDENT, page 2

TIMOTHY PATRICK/COLLEGIAN

Many gathered to listen to speakers discuss the issue of appointed seats at last night's Student Senate meeting.

Appointed SGA seats saved after five hour debate

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

After much debate, the Student Government Association voted down a motion last night that would have eliminated both ALANA and residential area government appointed seats in the Senate. Although the vote was close, with 28 in favor and 24 against the motion, a two-thirds majority was needed, therefore preventing it from being passed.

Emotions ran high as the senate began the evening listening to non-members speak against the idea of eliminating the seats. Some students felt that by taking the appointed seats away, it would inhibit the representation of minorities on campus.

"It saddens me that senators have brought up this issue. We are a small number on this campus even if we all go out and vote. If our voice is taken away, it is just a horrible thing," Juan Suarez, a junior biology major said. "Keep SGA as diverse as possible."

Others believed that they could not be fairly represented without the appointed seats.

"I want to be represented by members of my race and other races from ALANA," Rene Gonzalez, a member of the ALANA caucus and a junior legal studies and political science major said. "I am demanding that the appointed ALANA seats stay as my representation."

The idea of appointed seats is one that has been an issue for many years within the SGA. Ratified in 1994, the appointed senators represent 15 percent of the Student Senate. It was explained by the co-writer of the motion, Jim Eltringham, a senator from the Southwest Residential Area that the reason the motion came before the senate last night was due to the fact that it is un-constitutional to have appointed seats in a democracy.

"We're in violation of our constitution. The seats and both the issue is whether or not you can say we are upholding democracy," Eltringham said. "We're not talking about eliminating representation."

He went on to further explain that this was an issue that needed to be brought to the student body as a whole. "This is something for the students to decide," Eltringham said. "If you're true to your constituents, you're going to send it to them."

Senator Mark Boniface, the other co-author of the motion, agreed. "If this passes, every undergraduate will make a decision. They will be able to vote," Boniface said. "That's why we brought this motion to the Senate. They [the students] have the final say."

Senators in opposition of the motion disagreed with this sentiment. They felt that the students present should be heard and listened to. Malcolm Beckwith, a senator said, "The people that care have come here tonight and asked you to oppose this motion."

The opposition continued to debate that the issue was one of race and discrimination. "We're not just talking about a by-law or constitutional change. Students fought for these seats and this will have wide implications on this campus," Janell James, the internal chair of the ALANA caucus said.

Senator Jennifer Bishop at first was unclear as to how to vote because she believed in her oath to uphold the constitution, but she ultimately decided that the voice of the ALANA minority was more important to her. "They deserve to have their say. They work hard, their seats are not a free ride," Bishop said. "Why can't we change our constitution?"

The idea of amending the constitution was addressed, but both Eltringham and Boniface could not agree with any proposed amendments last night. They felt that there were other means by which to solve the problem, although a perfect solution had yet to be determined. Boniface did say that the option was open for members of ALANA to both run for a seat in the senate and to vote for whom they wanted to represent them.

Although Chris lives with the virus on a day-to-day basis, she still remains hopeful for the future. "I never thought that I would live to see my grandchildren, and she [her daughter] is having a child in April."

Another speaker was Dr. Anne Morris, a representative from The Community Research Initiative of New England (CRI). The organization is a non-profit agency that sponsors community based research, outreach and education on HIV and AIDS. It was created in 1988 to help link research to the delivery of primary care, increase the accessibility of clinical trials in underserved populations and expedite the evaluation and approval of new drug therapies.

The care network has enrolled more than 600 people on clinical trials, and is the world's largest site for the two trials that led to the FDA licensure of the protease inhibitor Ritonavir.

One of the goals of the organization is to search for a vaccination for the HIV virus. Morris explained, but it is very difficult due to many sub-types that exist within the virus. Therefore, research is much more extensive and takes much longer.

Morris spoke about the medicinal side of HIV/AIDS. She explained the facts about issues surrounding the virus and medications that can be used to alleviate some of the symptoms of the illness.

According to Morris, drugs that are currently available to those infected help to inhibit the virus. Because of HIV therapy, or new drugs available to HIV sufferers mortality rates have declined in the United States. Morris explained that because of these drugs,

Turn to AIDS page 2

Katz: an alum with a timely message

By Andrea M. Peers
Collegian Staff

Encouraging men to join in the battle to prevent violence, University of Massachusetts alumnus Jackson Katz spoke yesterday afternoon in the Campus Center Auditorium. He also urged men to take a stand in a society that holds several gender bias constraints. Katz suggested males should begin "thinking differently" about the way society deals with issues such as rape, assault, battery and other violent acts.

American society historically defines these issues as women's issues, but, as Katz said, every issue that affects women is essentially a part of our society. According to Katz, men categorize such topics as women-related, and therefore feel that the issue does not involve them. Katz argued that every male who has a female companion, whether it be a mother, girlfriend or sister, is a possible victim of violence, therefore it is impossible for men to displace themselves from an issue which involves us all in one way or another.

"It is more than just a cliché to say that we are all in this together. It's not enough today in 1999 to say 'I'm a good guy. I don't abuse women,'" Katz said. "Everyone should have the right to live their own lives. No one should be assaulted whether it be men or women."

Katz also discussed the constant reinforcement of male-related stereotypes and how they inhibit American culture and media today. Misconceptions about gender have been fed to our culture for centuries, and Katz said it is through the realization of such damaging images that we can break the pattern of male domination, and redefine the essence of what it takes to be a man. Katz argued that homophobia is a problem when it comes to women and violence. Men feel that if they take a stand they will automatically be categorized into a sexual preference, other than the one they really are.

"This is absolutely critical in this situation," Katz said. "There is a common misconception that if men take a stand, they will become 'homophobic,' but is that really true? Think about the logic. So, because I'm standing up for women, I want to have sex with men?"

Katz conducted an exercise with the audience to prove his point of the reinforced male qualities that men feel they must acquire in order to be a "real man." He started asking the men in the audience what safety precautions they take to prevent sexual assault. The men in the room all responded "nothing." Then Katz offered the same question to the women, who in turn gave a wide variety of answers. Through the exercise, Katz showed that after a number of women offered their safety precautions, the men began to admit to similar safety measures they take as well, such as checking the back seat of a car. His point was that males feel they are the only ones who do these things, therefore, they are afraid to admit it because of the fear of rejection by other males.

"When males take an initiative to take care of themselves, and they are made to feel somehow ashamed, because it is not considered masculine, this is a self destructive pattern. I think men really need to put aside their defensiveness, and move beyond the next step," said Katz.

Katz graduated from UMass with a major in philosophy and a minor in women's studies. He later went on to Harvard University to study education. Katz combined his work to organize and found many organizations dealing with men and violence. The purpose behind his organizations are to allow male role models to step forward in order to take the first step in repairing the damaged images which the media pushes at males. One such group is the MVP, which offers violence prevention and training to many groups.

Yesterday, Katz offered solutions for both males and females in order to stop the ongoing violence in today's society. He stressed the importance of involvement and experience.

"Men need to reevaluate their own experiences as men, and begin to take a stand. If you really care about your women friends, speak up for justice, and realize that you are a part of this," Katz said. "If you can look at yourself in the mirror every morning and feel good about yourself, then nothing else really matters."

Katz's advice to women also offered hope to what seems like a nationwide problem.

"While it has really been a few dark weeks for women on this cam-

PAM FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

Jackson Katz speaks about what men can do to prevent sexual violence.

Turn to KATZ, page 3

Program discusses World AIDS Day

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

A conference was held at Smith College yesterday to observe World AIDS Day, and spread awareness about AIDS and HIV.

The program included information about the advancements made in medicine and the treatment of the virus, as well as a more personal view of the disease.

Chris, a student at Mount Holyoke College, shared her personal experiences with AIDS. She was infected with the HIV virus in 1992 after her husband's death from the disease.

"I still had sex with him. I still shared needles with him," she said. "AIDS was something that would not happen to me."

Following her diagnosis, she lived in a six-month state of denial, believing still that she was not infected with the disease. "My health went down, my T-cells went down. AIDS just didn't go away," she said.

She explained that her behavior was not uncommon among others that lived with the virus.

"Nobody I know that has the virus ever thought that they had it," she said.

She went on to explain that she later went into rehabilitation for her drug problems, tried to straighten out her family problems, and went back to college. Yet, she explained that she was still suffering from AIDS.

"It is something that I can't fix," she said.

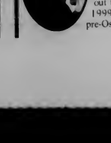
Although Chris lives with the virus on a day-to-day basis, she still remains hopeful for the future. "I never thought

Turn to AIDS page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 41 LOW: 28	HIGH: 50 LOW: 28	HIGH: 50 LOW: 32

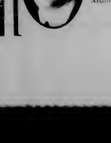
SOURCE: CNN.COM



Faculty Profile

Blending the worlds of organizational management and feminist theories, Marta Calás heads the women's studies department at the University of Massachusetts. Read more about her work inside today's news section.

NEWS PAGE 2



The Best of Film 1990s

In a very special Arts cover, we take a look at the very best films of the 1990s... and you may be surprised at some of the results. Plus, we sort out the muddled mix of 1998's crop with some pre-Oscar speculation.

A&E PAGE 5

All bark, no bite

Mike Babul and the Massachusetts men's basketball team will look to put the clamps on the Boston University Terriers tonight at the Mullins Center.

SPORTS PAGE 16

Arts & Living 5
Comics 15
Crossword 15
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 16

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Faculty Profile

Professor Marta Calas: Combining Women's Studies and Business

PAM FITZPATRICK / COLLEGIAN

Professor of Organizational Studies and International Management and acting director of Women's Studies, Marta Calas.

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

Feminism and the business world aren't generally thought of as overlapping academic fields. Yet Marta Calás, the acting director of the Women's Studies department, is a professor of Organizational Studies and International Management as well as an adjunct faculty member in the Women's Studies department, and has been teaching students in both disciplines for years.

"Many people are very surprised when they learn that I work for Women's Studies," she says. "People think of the School of Management as only being concerned with corporations and making money."

The truth isn't quite as simple. Calás explains that as a professor in the SOM, she must teach her students to critique the industries they work for.

"In order to be able to critique a certain institution in society," she says, "it's very important to know the argument from the inside. As an insider in the School of Management, I know the details of what we prescribe. I know the discourse very well. You can stand up and say you know what business people do, but you don't know exactly [unless you've been on the inside]. There aren't people saying, 'Let's see how we can make the rich richer and the poor poorer.' What's happening is that we want people to be paid on the basis of merit."

She goes on to say, however, that business is "problematic in itself, because it doesn't have a critical lens to analyze itself". Feminist theory, Calás explains, is the space that allows her to step outside the organizational field, and act as a critical lens.

"What we have to think about is, 'How is merit created?' and 'How do we guarantee that merit is what's being judged?'" she says. "When you reward, you are really making choices that have no 'neutral' support. Why are corporations so male-oriented? It's not that people are saying, 'I only want to hire males.' It's that the selection process is unable to be neutral. Instead of saying, 'How can we make the measures of merit more valid?' we should critique what 'merit' is."

In instructing her students, Calás does more than simply relay standard concepts. "I teach them the straight discipline, and I also teach them to analyze the premises and assumptions behind what I am teaching," she says. "I tell them, 'This is the way you go about setting up an international organization.' Then I ask, 'Where does this come from? What may be absent here?' I teach them not to believe everything they've been told."

In "Feminist Theory and Organizational Studies", a graduate women's studies course Calás co-teaches with Ann Ferguson, she explains that she would introduce typical arguments, like the inability of women to climb the corporate ladder. "The assumption," Calás says, "is that most women want to be at the top, and that there's no problem with having a top and a bottom. But if you take the issue from a radical feminist perspective, you'd see that having leadership from the top to the bottom is masculinist in itself."

Calás's approach is a unique one – one that would have been unheard of ten years ago. But despite the non-traditional nature of her work, Calás has made ground-breaking achievements. She and fellow management professor Linda Smircich received a grant to gather 6 feminist scholars to teach 30 leading organizational experts the art of critical analysis, a seminar which won her national [as well as international] attention.

"It's not possible to do what I do alone," Calás says. "More and more people in my line of scholarly work have become supportive."

While Calás has been outspoken in her opposition to many administrative decisions, particularly Chancellor Scott's decision to reduce the use of race in admissions policies, she maintains that she is deeply appreciative of the backing the University has given her.

"When I go to talk in other places, I always get the question, 'How do you do this sort of work in a business school?' she says. "I always answer, 'I can do this because I am at UMass.'"

■ aids

continued from page 1

"the immune system can fight the virus more effectively."

Although HIV therapy is very helpful to many currently living with the disease, Morris explained that the drugs do have their downsides. Some complicating factors that exist in HIV therapy are toxicities, side effects and drug interactions.

Even though there are new drugs that can be used to help treat both HIV and AIDS and to prolong lives, a cure has not been found, Morris explained that although the advances have been made that in order to stop the disease from spreading, it is necessary to educate and act safely.

"Prevention is the key," Morris said.

■ accident

continued from page 1

No citations have been issued in the accident, but it remains under investigation, with the state police accident reconstruction team assisting in the investigation.

Abrams and Spivack are the fourth and fifth individuals hit in the area this year. Ruth Abrams, a visiting professor at UMass in Judaic and Near Eastern Studies, was struck by an automobile on Massachusetts Avenue on Oct. 7.

Two German exchange students at Smith College were hit and one of the two was killed on Sept. 24 while attempting to cross the street at an intersection of Elm Street and Henshaw Street in Northampton. Tina Haufke, 24, died after sustaining head and internal injuries after being hit by an automobile driven by Mary McAleer of Laurel Park. Frauke Johanna Wolter was also injured in the accident.

Write******
*For******
*News**

Pressure builds to open submarines to Naval women

By Paul Richter
Los Angeles Times

NORFOLK, Va. – Inside the attack submarine Oklahoma City, sailors share bathrooms with 32 other men, sleep atop torpedoes and attend Sunday services in a space that also functions as the officers' dining room, reading room and surgical theater.

Spending months at a time inside a 360-foot vessel with 145 men, a nuclear reactor and dozens of torpedoes and cruise missiles is like living inside a Swiss watch, crew members say.

And in the view of some submariners and their superiors, it's no place for a woman.

The elite and insular submarine service is the last all-male bastion of the Navy. But it is under growing pressure to open the hatches of its 76 subs to women, despite warnings that doing so could cause touchy sex-related problems, increase acquisition costs, and diminish the speed and fighting power of these vessels.

Last spring, Navy Secretary Richard Danzig lobbed a rhetorical bomb by warning members of the Naval Submarine League that the service is a narcissistic "white male preserve." If submariners don't become more diverse, he warned, their political support could ebb.

Navy officials say the sea change sought by mixed-gender advocates isn't likely to occur within the next year or two. But the debate will continue, and some believe integration is inevitable.

In one sign of the issue's polarizing effect, Chief of Naval Operations Adm. Jay L. Johnson has declared there will be no change in the status quo during his tenure as the Navy's top officer, which lasts until June.

"This is a very difficult, very political, very emotional issue," said one senior officer who requested anonymity.

The persistence of the idea, which has been rejected several times, reflects the powerful pressure within all branches of the military to open more positions to both sexes. Women hold about 200,000 active-duty jobs. They are eligible to serve in 93 percent of military posts, and 94 percent of those in the Navy. Women are still barred from ground combat roles, but they command destroyers, fly combat aircraft and shoot artillery.

With recruiting problems increasing demand for military personnel across the board, the debate over where women can serve has moved to jobs ever closer to the thick of battle: the Army's Multiple Launch Rocket System, Special Forces' helicopters – and the Navy's 18 nuclear and 58 attack submarines. The sub fleet accounts for approximately 1 in 10 Navy jobs, and submariners receive slightly more pay because of the added risks they face.

Traditionalists in the sub force argue that opening the submarine force to women would be misguided because of the unique circumstances of the "silent service."

For starters, there is scant privacy. The Oklahoma City, for example, is equipped with only 114 permanent bunks for about 145 personnel. Some sailors sleep on removable bunks perched atop torpedo racks. Lower-ranking sailors must alternate with others to catch their allotted six hours of sleep, in bunks that are stacked three high and have only 18 inches of headroom.

Because of operational needs, sailors may be prowling the bunk areas at just about any time of day or night. Only by drawing a curtain across the bunk can a sailor achieve a semblance of privacy.

"A woman would have to be an exhibitionist to want to be here," said Fire Technician 2 Mike Paul.

Outside of the service, some conservatives argue that shipboard pregnancies could create an expensive problem for the Navy. Commanders could be forced to evacuate women midway through a mission, compromising secrecy. Navy officials, however, predict such episodes would be rare.

Long deployments pose other problems. The big strategic subs that carry nuclear missiles are typically deployed for two months, but attack subs like the Oklahoma City are supposed to be at sea for six of every 18 months; often the periods are longer. They can be submerged for 70 days at a stretch.

Some argue that these conditions would compound the tensions that would arise if men and women worked together. A study done for the Navy in 1995 by Science Applications International Corp. predicted that mixed-gender crews would lead to problems involving romantic relationships, sexual harassment and favoritism.

"A mix-gendered crew will complicate submarine life," said the study, and "could increase risk" for the vessel.

To accommodate this group, designers would need to reallocate bunk and bathroom space, and probably increase the overall area devoted to these purposes, say officers. That could necessitate removing other gear – such as weapons.

This page is dedicated to the Flag of the United States of America

Live365.com
This is not your father's radio,
It's Big Brother's!!!!

Wake up, freedom-loving citizens!!!**
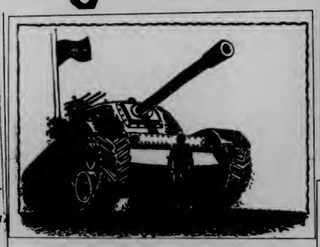
It's a new dawn, the thought police are at the door and all they want you to do is visit a nice little web site called Live365.com. Just type in the URL and what at first seems a pleasant diversion is soon an all-consuming sonic passion. Your night, your day, Your wrong, your right. And before you know it, you're hypnotized in front in your computer speakers for the umpteenth day in a row and little Joey and Jane America are pledging allegiance to the Canadian flag. Resist temptation! Read on!



Darryl Jackson aka DJ Darryl aka THE DOMIN-ATOR aka Rasta D THis unlicensed DJ's (Death Jockey!) reggae show now has 100,000 desperate addicts.How many more must fall under his spell before we awaken from our slumber???

LIVE 365 COM

this "curious" pattern appeared one morning in an Idaho cornfield. The handiwork of an overzealous farmer and his mower? Think again!!!!!!

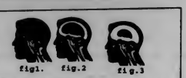


fig.1 fig.2 fig.3

Intelligence sources will "neither confirm nor deny" the so-called incidence insidious Brain-Devolution associated with repeated exposure to said "broadcasting" procedure(Live365.com.)

+Ignore the following at your own peril**:

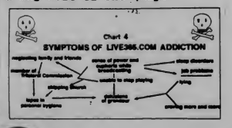
MYTH 1



"All you're gonna feel is good." Sure, the "tunes" seem good, the DJs seem good, it's all good. !!!!At FIRST!!! But then you're hooked and the turntables turn. Just how "good" are you gonna feel when you have to move what's left of your belongings into a box car?!?

MYTH 2

"I can quit listening any time I want."
Nail biting, slouching, "close" dancing--these are things you can quit. Live365.com is not. Pretty soon, you'll be skipping work. Kids will be playing hooky. And who's that sitting in your barca-lounger? Why it's Saddam Russein!

MYTH 3

"Free music on the Internet is good."
That's just what the Trilateral Commission (aka the Illuminati aka the Bilderbergers) wants you to believe. Wake up, Nancy! Free music leads directly to Free Love… and next thing you know you're keeping time to the music with a big dose of the Clap!

LIVE 365 COM
Wrong for America

Paid for by the citizens against live365.com

PAM FITZPATRICK / COLLEGIAN

Plants are people too

Clayton Slominski, a junior environmental science major, removes blotches of fungicide to assist the plant with photosynthesis.

WTO trade summit nervously continues

By Evelyn Iritani and Edwin Chen
Los Angeles Times

SEATTLE – Under the watchful eye of police and National Guard troops, President Clinton and hundreds of trade officials struggled yesterday to salvage a summit meeting of the World Trade Organization whose mission remained under attack in the streets.

Clinton flew the free trade flag at meetings with business leaders and took pains to praise the more than 30,000 people who demonstrated peacefully during Tuesday's massive street demonstrations, but he condemned the minority whose violent rampage cost Seattle retailers an estimated $8 million in property damage and lost sales.

He also urged the besieged WTO trade ministers to listen to the legitimate concerns voiced in the streets, set aside their internal disputes and push hard to reach an agreement to launch a new trade round by the meeting's close on Friday.

To demonstrate his conviction, the president also met privately with representatives of groups that harbor a variety of deeply seated objections to free trade, including leaders of the Sierra Club, the World Wildlife Fund and the AFL-CIO, headed by John Sweeny.

But after dusk, confrontations between police and demonstrators continued and the ongoing succession of mainly peaceful arrests neared the 400 mark.

"I strongly believe that if we want to get everybody together and move forward, we are going to have to listen to people who have legitimate economic concerns, legitimate environmental concerns, legitimate labor concerns," the president said.

Meanwhile, trade negotiators from 135 countries worked feverishly to make up for the time lost during the violent protests that filled Seattle streets with tear gas. Gavel the meeting's scheduled opening and led Seattle Mayor Paul Schell and Washington Gov. Gary Locke to declare a state of emergency and call in the National Guard.

■ katz

continued from page 1

pus, there are also some hopeful things that are with you," Katz said. "There is so much anti-progressive pressure out there to keep you silent, but I hope you do not remain silent. I hope one thing that we all get out of this is a heightened awareness."

He's got that swing

Hampshire student [illegible] laughs as he holds up a bass.

Scientists unlock chromosome genetic code

By Rick Weiss
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Jubilant scientists from three countries yesterday announced they had jointly determined the piece-by-piece order of virtually all the 3.4 million chemical "letters" that spell out the genetic code of an entire human chromosome.

The achievement provides the first complete molecular script for a single human chromosome, 23 pairs of which carry the estimated 80,000 genes that together provide the instructions for constructing a human body.

Researchers around the world cheered the advance as a technical tour de force, a triumph of international scientific collaboration, and evidence that the publicly funded Human Genome Project is on track to sequencing by 2002 all the 3 billion or so units of genetic code that together describe how to make a person.

Scientists hope that by noting "spelling errors" in the chromosomes of people with various diseases, they'll be able to understand the molecular underpinnings of those ailments and develop new therapies. But first they must determine the normal sequences for each chromosome, as they now have for chromosome 22, the second smallest of the human chromosomes.

"For the hundreds of genes that are on this chromosome, we now have their anatomy," said Francis Collins, chief of the National Human Genome Research Institute, which funded most of the U.S. contribution to the project. "And for all the medical conditions [that are related to genes on that chromosome], we'll be that much further along understanding them."

About three dozen diseases are known to be caused by faulty genes on chromosome 22. Most are rare, such as DiGeorge syndrome, which involves abnormal skull development, and there is indirect evidence that a gene on chromosome 22 may contribute to the risk of schizophrenia. But with scientists expecting to find a total of 700 or 800 genes embedded in the little chromosome's cell, scores of other diseases may eventually be shown to have their roots there.

"I can tell you it is no fun chasing down a disease gene when you're in territory no one has ever been in before," Collins said at a Washington news conference yesterday. For scientists hunting for important genes on chromosome 22, he said, having the complete sequence in hand is a dream come true.

A New Film from the Media Education Foundation
Featuring Jackson Katz Directed by Sut Jhally tough guise

Violence, Media & the Crisis In Masculinity

Premiere

7pm
Thursday December 2
Thompson 104

Jackson Katz, Sut Jhally, and producer Susan Ericsson will be present for a Q&A period immediately after the screening.

While the social construction of femininity has been widely examined, the dominant role of masculinity has until recently remained largely invisible. Tough Guise is the first educational video geared toward college and high school students to systematically examine the relationship between images of popular culture and the social construction of masculine identities in the U.S. at the dawn of the 21st century.

In this innovative and wide-ranging analysis, Jackson Katz argues that the widespread violence in American society - including school shootings - needs to be understood as part of an ongoing crisis in masculinity. The nature of this crisis becomes clear when one examines some of the dominant images of masculinity in the media. The problem is not simply violence in the media, sports, or video games - it is the accelerating construction of violent masculinity as a cultural norm. Tough Guise is extensively illustrated with examples from popular culture, ranging from Howard Stern to Stone Cold Steve Austin, from Good Will Hunting to Boyz N the Hood, from Garth Brooks to hip-hop styles.

Jackson Katz is a former all-star high school football player and an alumnus of UMass. He is the founder of MVP Strategies, an organization that offers gender violence prevention training to many groups (colleges, high schools, professional and college sports teams, community groups, corporations and the U.S. military – including the first world-wide program in the history of the Marine Corps). He has lectured at hundreds of schools and colleges across the nation.

Sut Jhally is Professor of Communication at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. He is the founder and executive director of the Media Education Foundation and creator of its first video, Dreamworlds: Desire, Sex, and Power in Music Video, and numerous other videos on media and culture.

"Jackson has a rare gift for applying feminist insights about gender and power to the real life experiences of boys and men. He does this in a way that helps men think critically without becoming defensive, while offering women valuable new perspectives into masculinity."

Susan McGee Bailey
Director, Wellesley Centers for Women

Media Education Foundation

www.mediaed.org
26 Center Street, Northampton MA 01060

The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
PRESENTS MASTER LEE

Comedian "Master Lee"

Comedian "Master Lee" has appeared on Late Night with Conan O'Brien; The Apollo Comedy Hour; MTV; and Caroline's Comedy Hour. Master Lee has toured through four continents over the past 13 years imparting his "Ninja Ways"on audiences young and old.

Bluewall Cafe
Friday Dec.3...8pm

The Film : "The Astronaut's Wife" will follow the show. Also shown on Saturday in the Emerson Classroom (SW) at 7pm, and Sunday in the Campus Center Auditorium at 8pm.

Visit us on the Web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calender.htm

This program is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Services Department and the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Way too scary for me

I hate scary movies. Well, it's more like I'm really afraid of them. I always have been, ever since I was a little kid. I don't know exactly what it is that causes me to lose sleep at night. Well, I know it's not the gory stuff like blood and guts. I have never been one to throw up at the sight of either one. Even I know it is just packets of ketchup with their labels.

I think it is the suspense that gets me every time. You know the killer is lurking in the closet as the woman walks into her apartment. The part in Sleeping With the Enemy when Julia Roberts realizes that her towels and canned goods are lined up in perfection and knows her ex-husband has found out she is still alive always compels me to think twice the next time I walk into my house. It doesn't matter if I know what's going to happen, I still hold my breath and look away at the climactic moment.

Kathleen Ralls

I think the most scary part of any movie is when one character, "Daryl" is snooping through a second character "Joanne's" office or home when he shouldn't be. Daryl hears a shuffle of feet and voices but take that extra second to find what he is looking for. I don't think any of us are fooled when the authorities don't discover Daryl under... no, the desk." When in doubt, head straight for the strong oak that much we've learned from movies. Or the authorities actually get to bust in and find Daryl. I utter was. Joanne is going to notice that her papers concerning who she is going to next are missing or have been tampered with.

Who thinks of a plot in which a child accumulates the voice of Satan and chants "Redrum" repeatedly like in the super thriller, The Shining? Don't tell me, Stephen King. Moreover, what was with those stupid Chucky movies where some ugly doll with bad hair runs around and harasses and murders people? I cannot believe that this amuses people. So amused, I understand, that they go back for the sequel. And another sequel!

Better yet, I would rather not meet their creators; it would probably lead to more nightmares. Do not even ask me what I thought of The Blair Witch Project. I refuse to see a film about kids wandering through woods in search of their inevitable deaths. No, it is not for me. If I even see it in my Christmas stocking, somebody is going to pay.

Another one not on my list of favorites is Bruce Willis' recent blockbuster. 'Tis th Sense. This concerns a young child who can see the spirits of the dead and doesn't know why. I only know that much because I had a friend tell me about it because I would never go to see it on my own.

My first recollection of really being frightened by a film was E.T. The men in white suits and gas masks trying to attach a plastic tunnel to the end of their van freaked me out. The thing that did it for me, however, was the man with the keys attached to his belt. You never saw his face but that coinciding scary symphonic music gave me the shivers.

Yes, friendly, innocent E.T. sent me to sleep with my parents for weeks. Forget that I shared a bedroom with my younger sister. I knew she was not enough protection just lying there in her crib. I would set up camp with my Strawberry Shortcake sleeping bag on my parents' bedroom floor until they sent me back to my room.

It got to the point where my brother and I were convinced that E.T. had landed in the woods behind my house. We used to tell each other how one of us had seen him the night before and fed him Reeses Pieces. Bear with me, we were just four and six years old. My dad finally took us for a walk throughout the woods to prove to us that no outer-spaceship had landed there. I still was not convinced.

After that, I began a career of avoiding scary movies in favor of such hits as Snow White and Bambi. I know about the witch with the poison apple and that Bambi was lost, but animation and dogs just do not have the same effect on me.

As human nature allows, I finally recovered from E.T. and felt I was ready for another scary movie, so I decided to see Gremlins. Not on the big screen, of course, because blocking your vision with your knees and covering your ears only helps so much. What was this about? Was it little furry things that can melt in water and then kill whole towns? That sent me right back into my camping motif.

As it stood, this past Sunday night I was due for another scare. Gathered in my living with friends, I spent the better part of the movie with my face mashed in a pillow while kicking my friend Bryan.

What sent me into such erratic form was Wingdon Rd. Granted it is not filled with blood or blatant acts of murder with knives and guns. It has to do more with conspiracy and the government... and some creepy-looking bald man and his four-eyed friend. These two characters only play minor roles in the movie, but I have not been able get them out of my head since.

First, the bald one pretends to be a telephone repairman when you know he is just tapping the line. Then he is driving the getaway van that contains a bomb and a child for ransom with this eerie smile on his face. How many people can say they have done that much in one day? I hope not too many. His friend makes his pocket change as a Discovers a.k.a. Boy Scouts counselor who lures people into his militia. I don't want to ruin any more of it for you but since it's already out on video, haunting Tim Robbins always seems to pop up from behind in the most crucial moments.

So, if you are thinking about asking me to the movies anytime soon, I don't want to see the 20th anniversary version of Carrie. Think more along the lines of comedy with kind witches and attractive aliens.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

Hey, what's so darned funny?

The Simpsons is good and everything else on television is bad. Okay, that's a generalization, but I believe it, at least as far as comedy goes. The Simpsons is the only program that makes me laugh. Comedy is in trouble. If it descends any further on the evolution chart, it will develop an eyebrow ridge. There is no room in comedy for intelligence. Nobody has the energy to make jokes about anything anymore. Being funny while also addressing an issue of significance is hard work. It's much easier to rely on dependable impotence jokes and "wacky" situations.

Amid this den of stupidity, The Simpsons is a lone example of intelligent satire. There is no better reflection of contemporary America than The Simpsons. The show is both funny and incisive. It cuts right to the heart of modern life, revealing our prejudices, hypocrisies, and absurdities. And the main ingredient to the humor is truth.

Richard Anderson

It holds up the mirror with brutal honesty.

The fictional town of Springfield serves as a microcosm of society. The writers have populated the town with a diverse menagerie of familiar characters. Look at the Simpson family itself. The oafish, stupid, self-absorbed father, the over-worked mother, the talented daughter wallowing in her brother's shadow, the neglected grandfather – recognize anyone? There's a little bit of all of our families in the Simpsons.

The entire population of Springfield represents some regrettable aspect of our society. Ned Flanders, the fundamentalist neighbor, goes to Bible camp to learn to be more judgmental. Principal Skinner makes budget cuts by eliminating science from the curriculum. Beloved children's performer Krusty the Clown is, in reality, a drunken degenerate. Chief Wiggum complains that the citizens expects him to "police" the whole city. One writer has suggested that Springfield is like a town full of Rose Perot voters who enthusiastically support any inane suggestion and always reach the wrong conclusion. If they're not getting monstrously drunk on St. Patrick's Day, they're installing a mass transit system they don't need. When a giant meteor nearly destroys the town, the people decide to "go burn down the observatory so this will never happen again!"

The joy of viewing The Simpsons is to watch as our own worst instincts are revealed in such vivid fashion. That we laugh makes the message all the more poignant. When we laugh we must ask ourselves: what's so funny? Next comes what the founders of the landmark improvisational group Second City called the "shock of recognition," when we realize that we are laughing at some skewed aspect of our own existence.

The Simpsons have provided many shocks of recognition. The brutality and ignorance that sometimes lurks beneath our cherished traditions was critiqued through Whacking Day, the Springfield holiday when citizens coax snakes into town and then joyfully club them to death. The current trend of parents blindly medicating hyperactive children was lambasted in a recent episode in which Bart suffered numerous side effects from a Ritalin prescription. The power of xenophobia was vividly rendered when Mayor Quimby remedied the problem of bears pestering residents' garbage by passing an anti-immigration law. Chief Wiggum instructed his officers to first round up "Your tired, then your weak, and then your huddled masses." The message was clear: people tend blame minorities for their unsolvable problems. Even while laughing, it is impossible to miss the point.

Comedy would be a better place if every aspiring jokester were required to study a year's worth of Simpsons episodes. Today's satirists are mostly clueless smartasses with only as much information as reading the headlines will provide. In seventh grade study hall my buddies and I were funnier than most current comedians – and smarter too.

Just look at Politically Incorrect. Bill Maher's introduction says, "It's all been satirized for your protection" as if he were a maverick challenging the zeitgeist. In fact, the show's supposed humor derives from orchestrating a panel of three liberals who mock a lone conservative while Maher smirks. Ha ha! You believe something different than I do! Maher follows in the tradition of indifferent guys with a smidgen of wit who joke about misery in third world without really giving a damn.

Speaking of which, The Daily Show with John Stewart is another example of programming which purportedly casts a discerning eye on the news while simply exploiting events for maximum humor. The callous promotional ads that superimpose Stewart over archival footage of Viet Cong troops. But that's the insidious message of Stewart, Maher and others. "Hey, terrible things happen all over. Thank God we live comfortably in LA!"

Perhaps the worst abuser is Saturday Night Live. Not only is it dreadfully unfunny; it has lost any pretense of serious satire. Watch Tim Meadows' abominable Lady's Man sketches. He talks to four callers, makes predictable jokes about premature ejaculation, and then stops suddenly. There is no discernable structure or point. Like so many SNL sketches, it builds to nothing. Furthermore, the political satire of SNL goes for obvious laughs. They never mine the deeper significance of events. They could create far richer comedy if they did so. During the Impeachment scandal, rather than skewer the hypocrisy of Congress or the President's confounding lies, SNL recreated the trysts between Clinton and Monica. Is oral sex more significant than the implosion of our government? No, but its easier to joke about.

Perhaps SNL was never profound at all. Legendary comedian Mort Sohl credited SNL with killing political satire, starting with Chevy Chase in the 1970's. Chase chose to ignore President Ford's inane policy decisions and lampoon his clumsiness instead. Any six-year-old can see the humor in that. SNL made a decision to take the low road and they've maintained a steady course for 25 years. Maybe the problem with comedy today is that our comedians grew up watching Adam Sandler mock the mentally handicapped; or Dana Carvey satirize George Bush only for his hand gestures. In any event, SNL has outlived its use. Like in Lenny in Of Mice and Men the show should be put out of its misery with a bullet in the head. The members of Monty Python had a joke – what's the difference between life and a Saturday Night Live sketch? Life doesn't last forever.

It's sad that those who love quality satire must wait for those precious thirty minutes of The Simpsons on Sunday nights. It's also sad that the best comedy on television registers at #50 in the Nielson ratings. But there is hope. If a generation can get stupid from watching bad comedy, maybe a generation can also get clever from watching good comedy. So keep tuning into The Simpsons and rent a movie on Saturday night instead of watching SNL.

Richard Anderson is a Collegian Columnist.

Write for Ed-Op.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian.

Doonesbury By Gary Trudeau

It's the attack of the Cookie Monsters

As most of you may or may not know, last Thursday was Thanksgiving. As a tradition, once everyone in my family is done eating their turkey, stuffing, pork fried rice and won ton soup, we all retire to my grandmother's parlor for our traditional dessert of fortune cookies and milk.

We all take turns eating our cookies and reading our fortunes aloud. Whoever gets the fortune that most closely describes his or her life over the past year receives the grand prize. The grand prize is a large bronze fortune cookie. The winner's name, fortune and the year are all engraved onto the trophy. I have only brought the trophy home once. It was actually rather humiliating. It was when I was eight years old and I had a severe bedwetting problem. My fortune said, "You sleep in vast rivers of knowledge." As family laughed so hard that there wasn't a dry eye in the house. Due to the fact that I was quite embarrassed, my pants were equally as wet.

Anyway that isn't very important to my story. What is important is that one of my uncles, whose name is Douglas, refuses to eat the fortune cookies up until he was eighteen, he ate them because my grandparents forced him to. However, once he became an adult he moved out and refused to eat the fortune cookies that my family loves so much. He even joined an underground movement called the FCCC. This stands for the Fortune Cookie Cutters' Society. The "C" in Society is pronounced like an "s" in order to sound like "society." One time I asked him why they didn't just use an "s." He told me that FCCS just wasn't as catchy. I am personally not a big fan of the letter "c" so I disagreed, but to each his own.

There are two main goals of the FCCC. The first is to build a million tiny chainsaws. With these chainsaws, on one chosen day in the future, a group of members of the secret society, known as the cookie cutters, will break into all the Chinese restaurants around the world and saw the fortune cookies right down the middle. This will leave the cookies unreadable and destroyed. The other goal is to inform citizens of earth of the evil propaganda which the Chinese are spreading through their fortune cookies. The FCCC believes that by using their fortune cookies, the Chinese plan to infiltrate society and take over the world. The number of horrific acts made under the influence of fortune cookie enlightenment has quadrupled over the past five years.

Dan Viens

Most everyone in my family laughs at Douglas. However, with the millennium upon us, I am willing to listen to anyone with an opinion on how the world will end. I asked Douglas to fill me in. He didn't even utter a word. He just gave me a book listing all of the fortunes aimed to do harm and the results of their power over unsuspecting caters here are the ones that I found most atrocious.

The first one happened in Bloomeek, Arkansas. Nathan Potter got a fortune which read, "A three wheeled demon will change your life as you know it." Right away, Nathan got a kind of dazed look in his eye. He immediately went out to his garage and jumped into his monster truck. For three days he drove all around the state. When children would hear the truck, they would go out to the street to see what it was. Any of these children who happened to be on tricycles would get run over and killed by Nathan Potter and his monster truck (from fortune cookie hell. Nate was afraid that any one of these children on tricycles could be the demon that would change his life. It turned out that the way his life would be changed was by dying in the gas chamber because for about a week he was the most notorious serial killer ever.

The next awful fortune cookie incident occurred in Morocco. A man there whose only name was Buka died in a murder/suicide due to fortune cookie ingestion. Once he finished his meal of Lucky Charms with duck sauce he ate his cookie and read his fortune. His fortune said, "You will find secret to life in fortune cookie." He was so excited that he decided to keep eating fortune cookies. He ate over 250 fortune cookies. Each of them said that he would "find secret to life in fortune cookie." He felt that it was a sign that every one of his fortunes was the same, which meant he was getting closer to his actual destiny of finding the secret to life. However, it was no sign he was just eating in a cheap Chinese restaurant that could only afford one type of fortune cookie. He died with only one fortune cookie left in the place. Its fortune read, "He who eats too many fortune cookies will burst stomach and die." I guess this is the secret to life.

The last one that I will write about is the one which the FCCC feels is doing the most damage. This fortune has been seen all over the world. It comes in 80 different languages. It states, "Your neighbor wants to kill and cook you." This fortune has two different effects on people. The first is that it makes people into scared hermits who never leave their house and are no longer productive members of society. The other effect is that the person will begin to see their neighbor as the ultimate feast. This cookie has actually driven people to kill and eat their neighbors. As a result of the vast killings and hermitage, the number of productive citizens in all societies not Chinese has plummeted.

This is no joke! Our society is under a secret pressure that is so great we may collapse. If you know what is good and right for our world, drop your fortune cookies, stomp on them and chant "U.S.A." until you drop.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Mariella Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendes Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Ellien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Ioanic Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Natty Yapudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Kate Beith Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Ben Almend Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967 and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Arts & Living

Thursday, December 2, 1999

Movies of the Decade

MOVIES OF THE DECADE

Arts & Living editor picks his top 10 movies of the decade

By: Adam Martignetti

Our Film Editor limits himself to choosing the top 10 films of 1999

By: David Troupes

Setting the nineties' cinematic standard for the upcoming century

By: Adam Martignetti

After a revolutionary vote, the Daily Collegian staff democratically chose the top ten best movies of the decade

...best of the decade page

...yout and Design By Sage Brousseau & Susan Perreault

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Every Thursday!

By now just about everyone that attends UMass has heard about the area's latest addition to nightlife and to great amazement it is located in the center of campus. The Skybox crew certainly made sure that everyone was aware of the club because if posters placed in every dorm and classroom on campus weren't enough they had to blanket the entire campus with mass email and voicemail. But it's all worth it. You know why? Chubby Club is coming to town tonight.

A veteran hip-hop spinner of every major club in the Northeast, Chubby Club intends to get the Box jumping. Joining him at the tables is resident DJ, "da crowd pleaser" Wal-Gee, who is undoubtedly one of the finest hip-hop DJ's in this part of Massachusetts.

Beforehand, head to the Student Union Ballroom to witness the opening night of the Theater Guild's production of Company. It runs until Saturday. Earlier, the Craft Center's Annual Holiday Craft Fair occurs throughout today and Friday in the Campus Center Concourse. Otherwise, Men's Basketball is home against Boston University.

If your are up for traveling away from campus head down to the Oakdale in Hartford to see Radio 104's Jingle Bell Jam '99 with Tori Amos, Vertical Horizon, Ben Harper, and Marcy Playground. Otherwise the impressive John Sheldon plays at home at the Amherst Brewing Company.

On Friday Amherst College presents Moxy Fruvous. For those of you that are different in the band, you are probably very familiar with their former collaborations the Barenaked Ladies. Touring Canada as a pair in earlier years, the two bands have striking similarities in their on-stage antics and impromptu style. Similar musical influences also present themselves, but while the ladies went more mainstream, Moxy stuck to both their roots and political beliefs, which are widely woven throughout their powerful, but humorous, songs.

Never enough credit is given to Melissa Ferrick. Playing the Iron Horse on Friday night, she has seen her share of ups and downs in the music industry. About ten years ago when she was still in college she toured with Van Morrison and was a regular on amphitheater bills. Void of mainstream success she has emerged more provocative and focused. Ferrick shouldn't be going to wait any longer, and you shouldn't either, watch her arrive.

Former UMass and rising jam band, Percy Hill, is at Pearl Street, while Trans calls to Boston's Paradise.

Naughty By Nature hits Mount Holyoke College on Saturday, while guitarist Brooks Williams is at the Horse in an early show. Look for the high energy of Boston's Belizbeha to capture the night at the Horse.

On Saturday, UMass Football clashes with Georgia Southern in a rematch of last year's championship and Company concludes.

The Richmond, Virginia based Eddie From Ohio is not to be missed especially if you take a liking to Barenaked Ladies. Moxy Fruvous or They Might Be Giants. Splendar is at the Paradise and Men's Basketball is home against Villanova on Monday.

Tom Sadkowski

Thursday, Dec. 2

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
John Sheldon, 10 p.m., 21+

IRON HORSE
Abdul B.K., 8:30 p.m.

OAKDALE THEATER
Jingle Bell Jam '99 with Tori Amos, Vertical Horizon, Ben [illegible]

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
[illegible] p.m.

PEARL STREET
Mad Creek, 8:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

HOT CLUB
[illegible] with DJ Bill Hill, Latin X
Second Thursdays with DJ Chunky Club and DJ Wal-Gee spinning Hip-Hop 'n' Reggae, 18+

MARS NIGHTCLUB
Top 40, Hip-Hop, R&B with DJs Kris and Mel, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts

STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
Comedy, 8 p.m.

TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Sports

BLUE WALL
WAIL Vs Sportsline, 5:30 p.m.

MULLINS CENTER
Men's Basketball vs. Boston University, 7 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events

CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
Annual Holiday Craft Fair, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Friday, Dec. 3

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Mentos & the New Horizon, 10 p.m., 21+

AMHERST COLLEGE FRONTROOM
Moxy Fruvous, 8 p.m.

FLYWHEEL
Nicole, Superagent, Fiesel, plus Goosebone & Antara, 8 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Odetta plus Stelan Smith, 7 p.m.

OAKDALE THEATRE
Jingle Bell Jam '99 with Tori Amos, Vertical Horizon, Ben [illegible], Marcy Playground

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
[illegible] p.m.

PEARL STREET
Peter Hill plus Flood Plain Gang, 8:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

CLUB METRO
House with DJ Ranpage, 9 p.m.-2 a.m.

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Meg Hutchenson, 8 p.m.
Mokijam, 10 p.m.

HOT CLUB
70's and 80's Hits with DJ Dennie

MARS NIGHTCLUB
Disco with DJ Michael Kane, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

PEARL STREET
Chemistry Friday, 10 p.m. -2 a.m.

THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Otis, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Performing Arts

STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
Company, 8 p.m.

Karaoke

WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+

Additional On-Campus Events

BLUE WALL
Something Every Friday with comedian Master Lee. Followed by the film, The Astronauts Wife, 8 p.m.

CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
Annual Holiday Craft Fair, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Saturday, Dec. 4

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Lucky Johnson, 10 p.m., 21+

CHAPIN AUDITORIUM
Naughty by Nature, 8 p.m.

FLYWHEEL
Sun Xing Ensemble, 8 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Brooks Williams, 7 p.m.
Belizbeha, 10 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Jars of Clay, 7 p.m.

PEARL STREET
Stubborn All-Stars, Filibuster, and Slighty All-Stars, 7:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.

HOT CLUB
House, Dance and Top 40 with DJ Andy

MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Dave "The Wave," 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m., 21+

THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+

Comedy & Improv

CAMPUS CENTER
Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.

Performing Arts

STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
Company, 2 & 8 p.m.

Sports

ON RADIO
Football at Georgia Southern in the NCAA I-A Tournament on WMUA 91.1 FM [illegible]

Sunday, Dec. 5

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ron Troshley Quartet, 9 p.m., 21+

IRON HORSE
Eddie From Ohio, 7 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Days of the New plus Bif Naked, 8 p.m.

Dance Clubs

MARS NIGHTCLUB
Upscale Hip-Hop and R&B with DJ Kurupt, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Additional On-Campus Events

CAMPUS CENTER AUDIOTRIUM
Movie The Astronauts Wife, 8 p.m.

Monday, Dec. 6

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Amherst Jazz Orchestra, 8:30 p.m., 21+

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Stage, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Andy Stewart & Gerry O'Beirne, 7 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Splender, 8 p.m.

Sports

MULLINS CENTER
Men's Basketball vs. Villanova, 7 p.m.

Tuesday, Dec. 7

Music

FINE ARTS CENTER
B.B. King

Performing Arts

TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Wednesday, Dec. 8

Music

AVALON
WAAF, Y2-KAOS featuring Slipknot, Biozard, Dope, Eight Stops 7, plus The Daylights, 6:45 p.m.

Dance Clubs

NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing and salsa with DJ Jitterbug, lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.

THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Film

Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8455)
Sleepy Hollow

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9 Hadley (584-9153)
Pokemon: The First Movie, Sleepy Hollow, Toy Story 2, The World Is Not Enough

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-5426)
200 Cigarettes

Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0298)
American Beauty, Anywhere But Here, The Bone Collector, End of Days, Pokemon: The First Movie, Sleepy Hollow, Toy Story 2, The World Is Not Enough

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0935)
American Beauty, Dogma, Stiff Upper Lips, The Lovers on the Bridge

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (733-5131)
The Bachelor, Dogma, Double Jeopardy, End of Days, House on Haunted Hill, The Insider, The Messenger: The Story of Joan of Arc, Pokemon: The First Movie, The Sixth Sense, Sleepy Hollow, Toy Story 2, The World Is Not Enough, The Bone Collector

Tower Theatres
19 College Street, South Hadley (533-3456)
Toy Story 2, The World Is Not Enough

Recreational Activities

UMass Ski 'n' Board Club
434 Student Union (545-3437)
Learn-to Ski/Board (Killington, VT), Dec. 12
Quebec Weekend, Dec. 3-5
Millennium Ski and Party Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Dec. 30 - Jan. 2 or Dec. 29 - Jan. 2
Winter Gateway Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Feb. 18-21
Escape to the Rockies (Location TBA), March 12-17
Mount Tremblant (Montreal, Canada), March 12-15
Jamaica, March 12-17
Day Trips on 2/5, 2/12, 2/26,3/4, 3/25

Outing Club
432C Student Union (545-3131)
Kayak Rolling, Every Friday at Curry Hicks Cage Pool from 7-10 p.m.
Slide Show, Dec 6, Room T.B.A.

Public Skating
Mullins Center Practice Rink (545-3990) Free for UMass students, $2 skate rental
Mon-Fri 12-12:50 p.m.
Wed (adult skate) 10-11:50 a.m.
Fri 9:30-11:20 p.m.
Sat 1-2:50 p.m., 7:30-9:20 p.m.,
9:30-11:20 p.m.
Sun 2-3:50 p.m.

Raquetball
Mullins Center Practice Rink (545-3990) Free for UMass students, courts may be reserved
Mon-Sun 8 a.m. - 10 p.m.

Other Activities

If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disco bowling at Northampton Bowl; biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northaanpton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains; visiting Puffer's Pond; shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall; hayride at the Bison Farm in Hadley; mini-golf on route 9; billiards in the UMass campus center, Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in

Turn to THE SOURCE, page 8

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE

3rd Weeki A Tim Burton Film * JOHNNY DEPP & CHRISTINA RICCI * DAILY 7:00 9:15

HEADS WILL ROLL

Sleepy Hollow

ACADEMY MUSIC Cinefest NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

Hurley

LIVE!

naughty by NaTuRE

WITH SPECIAL GUESTS

CHAPIN AUDITORIUM
Mount Holyoke College
South Hadley, MA
Saturday, Dec. 4, 1999
8 PM

Tickets
In advance
$10 with College I.D
$12 General Public
Also available at the door starting at 7 PM
All tickets are general admission

Tickets available at:
Northampton Box Office
413-586-8686
Tix Unlimited at UMass
413-545-0412
For The Records in Amherst
413-256-6134

Concert presented by The Network at Mount Holyoke College and Mount Holyoke College's Office of Student Activities

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD

starting under $20.00

The Finest

silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324
266 W. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324
www.silverscapedesigns.com • 800-729-8971

EXPANDED HORIZONS Day Spa

Tanning • Hot Tub • Massage

• Simply the Best Tanning Beds in the Area
• High Powered Tanning
• Improved Results in Less Time
• Lowest Prices on Tanning and Products
• Gift Certificates Available

$99 6 month unlimited tanning

$59 10 tanning sessions

20% off Massage *includes 1/2 hr. hot tub
Ask About Our FREE Body Wrap

529-9996 31 Union St. • Easthampton
LOOK & FEEL GREAT!!!

UMass Student Legal Services Office

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!

545-1995
CALL TODAY!

922 CAMPUS CENTER

I Refuse to be a Victim.
You Can, Too.

Women; Develop you own personal safety strategy

You Can Refuse to be a victim. Call now for reservations at a 3 hour course to help develop your own Personal Safety Strategy.

Sunday December 5th 9:00 AM to 12:00 Noon.
At The F.C.I.S.C. Field House located on River Road in East Deerfield, MA.
Fee: $20.00
Sponsored by the women of The Franklin County league of Sportsmen's Clubs Inc.
Reservations are required. Call (413) 665-4362 email lanfarc@shaynet.com for reservations, course details and directions.
Seating is limited. Call for reservations now!

■ Top Ten

continued from page 6

existence: a classic debate between religion and science. No other movie this decade, nor in recent memory, deals with such complex issues in the intelligent, yet subtle, manner that Contact does. And in the end, the movie arrives at a truly insightful conclusion- the pursuit of truth. This, not Forrest Gump, was director Robert Zemeckis' best film of the decade.

5. The Usual Suspects: Kevin Spacey stars in two of the best surprise endings that Hollywood has ever seen, and they both happen to be in the same year. I'm not going to bore you with any pervading themes here; this is simply a great story. It pulls every trick in the book in order to tell it, too. You actually see the ending first. You actually see and, for that matter, know who Keyser Soze is before you hear his name once. The Usual Suspects greatest accomplishment though is in the creating of the five characters. Their personas shine so brightly and cause so many clashes among the group that the events of the plot unfold quite naturally. There is never a sense of any outside force or fabrication. The film lets you see and believe one thing, right before it twists its reality completely into another. And, that's what's so great about it. Without the surprise ending, it's a solid, mystery/suspense film, but with it, it's a great insight into how we construct reality, the power of image, and the power of word.

4. Shakespeare in Love: The lone Best Picture winner on my list, so all you fundamentalists enjoy it, even though you probably think Saving Private Ryan should have won. There's no greater storyteller than Shakespeare, but Marc Norman and Tom Stoppard, take the master playwright's story one step further. What's so remarkable about Shakespeare in Love is that it accomplishes in modern day prose the beauty of Romeo and Juliet's blank verse poetry; it's a grand celebration of language. Starting with this ideal, the movie takes a young Will without words and gives him something to write about, love. In that way, language becomes heartfelt and moving. Shakespeare in Love though is also funny and witty- its introspection on writing and culture nothing short of brilliant. Here, as the two aspects of the movie, joy and suffering, coexist, so do they in love. Thereby, not only does the movie embody love, but love embodies the movie. The parallels to Shakespeare's work are obvious; still, the movie is not given enough credit for the way it plays with gender, seamlessly shifting from private to public life. Director John Madden blends these scenes and their lines together with amazing diligence and style. Joseph Fiennes gives a soul-searching performance as the tortured lover denied by his own status. Gwyneth Paltrow is nothing short of enchanting as both Juliet and Romeo. And the movie meets its self-imposed challenge by showing the decidedly painful true nature of love.

3. Jerry Maguire: For me, Jerry Maguire is modern day epic with Tom Cruise fully embodying the tragic hero. In an instant, a moment of clarity, Jerry realizes his intense dislike for himself as well as his profession. He loses everything for what he believes, thereby starting his journey toward redemption and completion. As a love story, the movie is wonderful- an independent man who fears intimacy comes to realize his true soulmate, but the movie is ultimately Jerry's journey both physically and spiritually. Slowly, he comes to understand true love, but also to realize that it is not the same for everyone. He embodies hope and idealism and fights passionately for his beliefs, even in the face of deceit and cynicism (How brilliant is the setting of the reunion scene?). Most of all, Jerry Maguire is about the potential of the human spirit- sacrificing everything to rebuild yourself into something better and more satisfying. Tom Cruise is stunning; Renee Zellweger is the epitome of sweetness and vulnerability- strong enough to realize love and even stronger to realize a broken relationship. Cameron Crowe directs with purpose and compassion, sympathizing with his flawed hero to the bitter end.

2. Shawshank Redeption: "Hope is a good thing, maybe the best of things." Morgan Freeman's famous line would be stunning in any context, but when reading from Tim Robbins' letter at the end of his journey to freedom, it's arguably the most applicable mandate that any movie this decade has given us. Stephen King's unlikely story introduces us to harsh prison life- it tortures and its discomforts. But, through the character of Red (Freeman), we also understand its simple joys- a few cigarettes or even a movie poster. Thanks partly to director Frank Darabont and partly to the lull of Morgan Freeman's narration, we come to know Shawshank, as if it were our work's office or even our home. Then, we meet Andy Duphrane, an intellectual, an oddball and also an innocent man. Rather than wallow in the depths of his misfortune though, Duphrane sets out to make the best of his stay at Shawshank for others as well as himself. Here, Shawshank Redemption excels as no other movie this decade. Self-defeat is always on the horizon, but the movie and the characters never allow it to come to this. It's great story telling that subtly sets the audience up for the most inspiring film ending of the decade. Tim Robbins is brilliant as the silent recluse with the gleam in his eye, as if he were privy to some foreknowledge. Morgan Freeman (in his second appearance on my list) makes this as much his movie as Robbins with both boyish simplicity and profound maturity. Shawshank Redemption teaches us to reach beyond ourself and to enjoy life's small pleasures- whether they be a pack of cigarettes, a good meal, or a rock hammer.

1. Good Will Hunting: For a decade that has largely been obsessed with the lives of teens, this movie is often ignored for what is really is: a movie about growing up. In fact, it's the definitive movie on personal growth. Will Hunting, on the verge of his 21st birthday, is too smart for his own good. The only time that he sees beyond his small Boston world is to reveal potential disaster in everything else. His NSA monologue is far and away the best soliloquy of the 90s. Every other character also has some element of failure in their life. Robin Williams, (Sean Maguire) has failed career wise while Stellan Skasrgard (Gerald Lambeau) has failed personally. And all must deal with their failure, primarily through each other. Thanks to Matt Damon and Ben Affleck, Good Will Hunting is brilliantly written- a story of friendship, trust, and experience. It's endlessly quotable and thoroughly enjoyable with great scene following great scene. Will's past has damaged him, but he must overcome his fear and learn to experience his world. His newfound girlfriend (Minnie Driver) and his friend/therapist Sean help him, but only he can make that final step. The film is funny without being comical and touching without being melodramatic. Good Will Hunting does not have a single bad scene, as director Gus Van Sant takes the young duo's script and turns it into the most moving movie of the decade. In addition, he also gives us the most disturbing turning point of any film; the "I don't love you" scene is devastating, even upon repeated viewings. Matt Damon takes on the role of the troubled youngster with a charisma, a presence and an adeptness rarely seen from any actor, let alone one so young. Ben Affleck is perfect as the best friend, completely goofy, but utterly earnest. Live your life; this is the movie's simple, yet essential message- one which should be taken to heart by everyone.

Guild tackles Sondheim

Company, a complex season finale

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

Phone rings, door chimes, in comes the Theatre Guild with their last show of the semester, Stephen Sondheim's Company, presented in the Student Union Ballroom this weekend. Company is an impressive endeavor for any group to attempt, containing so many mixed messages about love and the institution of marriage that even the composer has not resolved his opinion on the musical.

The story centers around Bobby, a single man living in New York City with all of his crazy married friends. Surrounded by committed relationships, he's constantly being persuaded to find someone to spend his life with, but the trouble is, Bobby doesn't know what he wants. He's not sure if love is worth it or possible, he's afraid to invest in another person, and does his best to avoid forming any conviction for or against relationships.

In the grand tradition of Sondheim musicals, Company throws a variety of ideas at its audience and never really dedicates itself to one point of view. With a lead character that seems to function more as more of a non-person, everyman figure and a small cast of supporting, caricatured friends, Company lends itself—rather looks—to a specific concept to deliver it. Director Jana Jacobson took on this challenge with an intelligent and auspicious interpretation of the show. "I decided to create the show as if it were all within Bobby's mind. It gives it a surreal feeling, because not only is it haunting in what it says, but also because it's weird and a little off. This is Bobby's world, how he sees things. Things are deliberately exaggerated for that reason." As the show progresses Jacobson tried to illustrate the building pressure Bobby feels to make a decision about relationships. The long-time controversial ending of the show is the obvious result of that pressure.

Production manager, Adam Seigel, says that although he's been working on the show since rehearsals started two months ago, he's still very excited to see the final result of the Guild's combined efforts. "This isn't your typical musical comedy," says Seigel. "It's been a huge undertaking to bring this to the campus. First of all, any Sondheim musical is difficult, it's very hard to learn. And this particular one deals with issues that run much deeper than most shows do. But it's been a wonderful process so far."

For an evening of equally thought and emotion inducing entertainment, be sure to catch Company. The show represents ambitious artistic and technical design and demands that both its performers and audience examine some of the less pleasant truths about love and marriage. Company runs Thursday through Saturday in the S.U.B. Tickets for students are $5, for general admission $8. They are available at the door or by calling 545-2511.

Before he hit it big with The English Patient and Schindler's List, Ralph Fiennes tackled Quiz Show, the eighth best movie of the 90s

December '99

ARTS ONCAMPUS . . .

A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Thursday, December 2
UMASS ARTS COUNCIL MINI GRANT DEADLINE TODAY! For events after Dec 7th. Drop off application by noon at Hasbrouck Lab 101-103. For additional information call 545-0202
CRAFTS: Annual Holiday Craft Fair 9 a.m -4 p.m. Campus Center Concourse. Through Dec. 3. 545-2096.
DANCE: MASS MOVEMENT--University Dancers--In Concert Dance performance choreographed by Jin-Wen Yu & Janis Brenner, Leslie Partridge, Billbob Brown, Ken Lipiaz & Megan Bonneau. 8p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Through Dec. 4. $ 545-2511.
THEATER: "She Stoops to Conquer" one of the most popular comedies of all time 8 p.m. in the Rand Theater. Through Dec 4 $ 545-2511.
THEATER: "Company" 8 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Through Dec 4 2 p.m. matinee on Dec. 4 $ 545-0415.

Friday, December 3
MUSIC: Orchestra & Cello Debut Director Mark Russell Smith with cello player Matt Haimovitz 8 p.m. in Concert Hall $ 545-2511.
THEATER: Casual Sketch Music and comedy sponsored by Student Valley Productions. 8 p.m. in Herter Hall 227. 545-3600

Saturday, December 4
THEATER: MISSION IMPROVable improvisational comedy performance 8 p.m. in Campus Center Room 163. 545-3600

Sunday, December 5
MUSIC: December Songs Director E. Wayne Abercrombie along with the University Chorale 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511.
MUSIC: Schuller Premiere Faculty recital featuring Lynn Klock, saxophone and Nadine Shank, piano. 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511.
MUSIC: Jazz Brunch 11 a.m.-1 p.m. in the Worcester Dining Commons. 545-2804.
THEATER: A Christmas Carol The Nebraska Theater Caravan presents the Classic Dickens tale complete with traditional English carols and a magical set. 3 p.m. in the Concert Hall. $ 545-2511.

Monday, December 6
MUSIC: Student Composers' Concert 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall 545-2511.

Tuesday, December 7
MUSIC: B.B. King in concert 7:30 p.m. in Concert Hall $ 545-2511
MUSIC: Jazz Bands Jazz Lab and Chapel Jazz with David Sporny & Adam Kolker, directors 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511.

Wednesday, December 8
THEATER: Not Ready For Bedtime Players Sexual education but never been the same since this troupe of UMass students took on the subject 8 p.m. in Van Meter Residence Hall 577-5181
MUSIC: Goethe Birthday Celebration. Marjorie Melnick, soper. 8:15 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511.

Thursday, December 9
FILM/MUSIC: Film "In Memory of Brandon" followed by music by "Late Bloomers" guitar duo. 7 p.m. Thompson 104. 545-0154
THEATER: "Equus" An undergraduate production of Peter Shaffer's classic. 8 p.m. at the Curtain Theater Through Dec 11. $ 545-2511.

Friday, December 10
MUSIC: Jazz for the Holidays & Beyond III Director Jeffrey Holmes and the Jazz Ensemble I perform 60's Holiday Music 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511.

Saturday, December 11
MUSIC, DANCE, POETRY: Baker/Chadbourne/Greenough Slam Fest/Jam Fest A music, dance, singing, poetry and band festival to promote World AIDS Day 6 p.m - 1 a.m. in the Greenough Basement $ 546-0778
THEATER: Mission IMPROVable improvisational comedy performance 8 p.m in Campus Center 163. 545-3600

Sunday, December 12
MUSIC: Winter Winds: Youth Wind Ensemble Steven D. Bodner, conductor 2 p.m. in Concert Hall. 545-2511.

Monday, December 13
MUSIC: Jazz Director Debut: Vocal Jazz Ensemble Catherine Jensen-Hole, director 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511

Wednesday, December 15
THEATER: Not Ready For Bedtime Players 8 p.m. German Residence Hall. 577-5181.

Saturday, December 18
THEATER: MISSION IMPROVable improvisational comedy performance 8p.m. in Campus Center Room 163. 545-3600

Plan Your Art Events NOW!

Apply for funding from the UMass Arts Council to support your art programs and events on campus! This year's remaining small grant award deadlines are: February 3, March 2 & 9, April 6. Visit our web site at http://www.umass.edu/fac/artscouncil for more information.

Exhibits

AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY
101 New Africa House • 545-3177
M-TU 1-7 pm; W-F 1-5 pm
Photographs by Teenagers from El Arco Iris in Holyoke
Dec 6-10
Student Show
Dec. 13-17

CHAMPION GALLERY & SCULPTURE GARDEN
Southwest Residential Area • 545-3394
M-TH 12-6; SU 2-5 pm
The Kathmandu Project: The Shakyamuni Buddha Shrine Room
Through Dec. 13

HERTER ART GALLERY
125A Herter Hall 545-0976
M-F 11-4 pm; Sat -Sun. 1-4 pm
Love Letters to My Father
Works by Professor Pat Lasch
Dec. 6-Jan 6
Reception Dec. 6, 4 p.m.
Ostinato: New Work by Sigrid Miller-Pallin
Dec. 6-Jan 6
Reception Dec. 6, 4 p.m.

STUDENT UNION VISUAL & PERFORMING ART SPACE
Student Union Building • 545-0792
M-TH 10-5 pm; F 10-3 pm;SA-SU 1-4 pm
BFA Thesis Exhibition
by UMass Undergraduates
Through Dec. 3; Dec. 6-10; Dec. 13-17
Receptions Monday at 4:30p.m.

UNIVERSITY GALLERY
Fine Arts Center • 545-3670
TU-F 11-4:30 pm; SA-SU 2-5 pm
Artist/Author: Contemporary Artists' Books
Through Dec. 17
Head to Toe: Impressing the Body
Through Dec. 17

WHEELER GALLERY
Central Residential Area • 545-0680
M-TH 12-6 pm; SU 2-5 pm
BFA Thesis Exhibit: Angela Temple
Through Dec. 3
Reception Dec. 2, 4-6 p.m.
Infection/Family:
Installation by James Stanley
Dec. 5-10
Reception Dec. 6, 4-6 p.m.

Active College students are offered a discounted admission at Fine Arts Center events
Sponsored, in part, by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

12/99

UMass Arts Council, 101 Hasbrouck Lab, 545-0202

MARGARET CHO
IN
"I'M THE ONE THAT I WANT"

A ONE WOMAN RIOT!!!
~ ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY

SYMPHONY HALL
Court Street, Springfield
Sat. December 11th 8 pm
$3.50 DISCOUNT W/COLLEGE ID
Tickets on sale at the Box Office and all TicketMaster outlets or charge by phone at (413) 788-7033 or (413) 733-2500.

■ xxx

continued from page xx

Northampton.

Volunteer

Xmas Bell Ringers Needed!
27 Brewster Court, Northampton (585-8729). Join in the spirit of giving by volunteer to be a bell ringer for the Salvation Army's kettle campaign during Nov. and Dec. Flexible hours, outdoor work, sites in Northampton, Amherst, Hadley and Easthampton. Last year the Salvation Army spent $185,926 in Hampshire County alone, helping 4,508 residents with emergency needs. Help raise money for this worthy cause.

Lectures & Discussions
None scheduled at this time.

Book Readings

Lisa Lassell Hallstrom
The Odyssey Bookshop, 9 College Street, South Hadley (534-7507). Will discuss her new biography, Mother of Bliss: Anandamayi Ma. Tuesday, December 7 at 7:30 p.m.

Libraries
Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.

Biological Sciences
214 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011)
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-3 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418)
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Sat-Sun 10 a.m.- midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225)
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.- midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.- midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910)
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Lowrise, 2nd floor. UMass (545-1570)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2519)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2587)
Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts

LUNA
Dec. 9, Pearl Street
INDIGENOUS
Dec. 10, Paradise Rock Club
YES
Dec. 11, Orpheum Theatre
BARENAKED LADIES
Dec. 12, Orpheum Theatre
STEREOLAB
Dec. 12, The Roxy
PHISH
Dec. 12, Hartford Civic Center
SEVENDUST, STATIC X, DOPE, CHEVELLE
Dec. 13, Avalon
PHISH
Dec. 13, Providence Civic Center
AMAZING CROWNS
Dec. 17, Bill's Bar
BARENAKED LADIES
Dec. 29, Worcester Centrum
GODSMACK, REVEILLE
Dec. 31, Bayside Expo Center
BEN HARPER
Feb. 3, John M. Greene Hall

Venues

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY 36 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-4400)
AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-262-2424)
BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8515)
BILL'S BAR 5.5 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9678)
BUTTERFIELD RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610)
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley
CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road, Belchertown (323-4117)
THE ASYLUM 1592 Main Street, Springfield (739-7900)
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (582-9898)
FIRE & WATER CAFE 5 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8356)
FLEETCENTER 1 Fleet Center, Boston (617-624-1000)
HOT CLUB 10-12 Stearns Square, Springfield (781-4509)
HOTEL WARREN 13 Elm Street, Deerfield (665-2301)
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610)
JOHN M. GREENE HALL Smith College, Main Street, Northampton
LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL 239 Westminster Street, Providence (401-272-5876)
MARS NIGHTCLUB 350 Worthington Street, Springfield (746-8282)
MIDDLE EAST 472/480 Mass. Ave., Central Square, Cambridge (617-864-3278)
MULLINS CENTER UMass, Amherst (545-5001)
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS 17 New South Street, Northampton (584-7327)
ORPHEUM THEATRE Hamilton Place, Boston (617-679-0810)
PARADISE ROCK CLUB 967 Commonwealth Ave., Boston (617-562-8804)
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB 10 Pearl Street, Northampton (584-0610)
SOMERVILLE THEATRE 49 Davis Square, Somerville (617-625-4088)
THE GROTTO 25 West Street, Northampton (586-6900)
THE SKYBOX 1109 Campus Center, UMass (545-3216 or www.umass.edu/skybox)
THE SOLUTION 84-90 Worthington Street, Springfield (253-4400)
THE WEBSTER 31 Webster Street, Hartford (860-525-5553)
TSONGAS ARENA 300 Arcand Drive, Lowell (978-848-6900)
TT THE BEARS 10 Brookline Street, Cambridge (617-492-BEAR)
VAN METER RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
WORCESTER PALLADIUM 261 Main Street, Worcester (508-797-9696)
WORCESTER CENTRUM 50 Foster Street, Worcester (508-755-6800)
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN. 50 Conz Street, Northampton (586-3315)

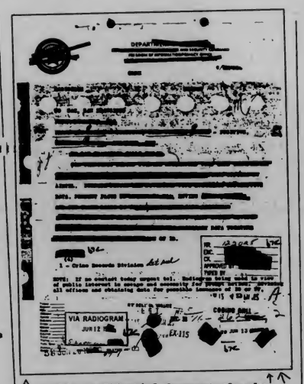
General Information
All events all ages unless otherwise noted. What do you think? Would you like to read one-line event previews, desire a format change, or post an event? Please call (413) 545-1361, fax (413) 545-1592 or email eventcalendar@excite.com

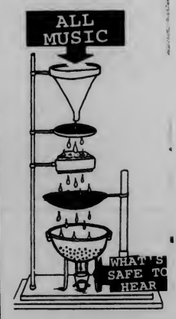
Adam loves his arts... and so should you.

CONSPIRACY BY



Live365.com

Internet Radio's 'Dirty' Little Secret



Unregulated
Unformatted and Downright
UN-AMERICAN

Attention upstanding citizens!!!

Be warned that a new form of radio -- digital crack is more like it -- is about to be unleashed upon an unsuspecting nation. Called Live365.com, it is nothing less than a plot to lure an entire generation of young hearts and minds into an incredibly hypnotic world of sonic addiction.
Once they've got us hooked, the powers-that-be will start pumping the happy juice into the water supply and using our fillings to manipulate our brain waves.

↑As this confidential document clearly shows, Live365.com's Internet radio scheme just may be the brainchild of the Freemasons (the government behind the government).

LIVE365.COM

?????? coincidence???????
Think again, comrades.

Will you sit on the sidelines while the radio revolution rages???**
Stand up for America!!!
Give those  vermin a piece of your mind at www.live365.com!
Be sure to stuff cotton in your ears (And DON'T look directly at the monitor).

FACT 1

Live365.com is many times more powerful than regular radio!!!!!!!!
Regular radio plays the same music over and over and has big blocks of commercials to break everything up. There's no way you can listen to it for any extended period.
Live365.com, on the other hand, has a ungodly amount of stations with something for everyone. Any time, day or night. Plus, they even let you broadcast your own radio. With no license and no rules.
Probability of moral decay??? 100%!!!

FACT 2

Live365.com is FREE to broadcasters and listeners alike. Hmmm, can you think of any other place where everything is free? Say, Russia for example!!!!

FACT 3

Live365.com begins with the word live and live spelled backwards is evil!!!!

LIVE EVIL

That's right, pure evil 365 days a year. And don't even get us started on the "com" part. Can you say Audio Abomination!?!

LIVE365.COM = [tank]

LIVE365.COM™ Wrong for America

Paid for by the citizens against live365.com

Arts takes a look at the best films of 1999

COURTESY MELISSA MOSELEY

John Cusack stars in Being John Malcovich, the bizarre comedy and a popular pick for one of this year's best films.

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff member

1999 was a great year for movies. I'm sure this year will go down in history as one of the most profitable for the film industry, but there was also some welcome creativity to accompany the big numbers. The Matrix gave audiences a look at what is to be expected from special effects in the new millennium, while The Blair Witch Project proved that special effects don't mean anything when you have and fresh and inspired concept on your hands. Unfortunately, many excellent films released in 1999 will be missing from the list. This is due to both the fact that many movies I am sure would be included (Boys Don't Cry, The Limey) are hard to find, and that many movies I am very excited about (Paul Thomas Anderson's Magnolia) won't be released until after this is published. But here are my favorite movies from January 1, 1999 through the end of November.

Being John Malcovich: Easily the most inventive film of the year also happens to be hilarious, well acted, and bitingly satiric. Director Spike Jonze's amazing vision is probably the first story that couldn't and shouldn't be told anywhere else but the screen. A film that reminds you why you love films.

Election: What appeared in the previews to be just another teen film to flood the market turned out to be one of the smartest and funniest films of the year. It's not afraid to tackle hot-button issues like teen lesbianism or teacher-student sex, and it does so with such grace and humor that it becomes depressing that more films aren't this intelligent.

American Beauty: This critical darling deserves all of the praise it is receiving. The cinematography is incredible, the acting is flawless, and comparing suburban families in the films to ones in your life gives the film an eerie resonance.

Go: It's hard to believe director Doug Liman could create a film as enjoyable as his previous effort Swingers, but that's just what he's done. Relentless pacing, outrageous characters, and great storytelling is all accompanied by an unforgettable soundtrack (well, except for the No Doubt song).

South Park: Bigger, Longer, and Uncut: The most vicious movie satire in years from the most unlikely of sources. Much funnier than the Austin Powers sequel, the movie actually tackles some worthy issues to compliment its laugh-a-minute pace.

Toy Story 2: Always more impressive than the mind-blowing computer animation is the amazing creativity Pixar uses it for. The first sequel in a long time that is in every way as good as the original, this is the Disney film to see this year.

Three Kings: While I wouldn't place it above his previous efforts Spanking the Monkey and Flirting With Disaster, director David Russell's latest features wildly inventive camera tricks, issues worth thinking about, and great performances from Ice Cube and man-of-the-year Spike Jonze.

The Thomas Crown Affair: Beautiful, intelligent women, suspense, and scenes that are both wild and understated at the same time. In other words, everything The World Is Not Enough lacked.

Fight Club: Although the plot twists become overwhelming, there is no denying that this is a fun ride. A sensory onslaught brought on by dark gloomy composition mixed with some great high tech effects put to music by the Dust Brothers is the best way to tell this tale that travels from humble beginnings to national terrorism to finally psychological chaos.

Rushmore: Unless you are a movie critic, you probably didn't see this until 1999, so here it is on my list. A complete departure from director Wes Anderson's outstanding debut film Bottle Rocket, this film follows Max Fischer's awkward adolescence in a prep school, but the real heart of the film is the touching friendship he forms with the unforgettable Herman Blume (Bill Murray).

■ Best of '99

continued from page 4

in the heart of the American dream.

3. Rushmore
Don't ask me to explain the appeal of this movie. And don't be turned off when people refer to it as a comedy. Yes, there are jokes, but there are also characters of immense richness and a thoroughly charming tale of three people searching for friendship, self-expression, and a sense of their own childhood in a callous world. The acting is simply brilliant. (The soundtrack's great, too.)

4. Being John Malkovich
It's like one of those ultra-vivid dreams you wake up from and think, what the hell did that mean? The very fact that a movie with such imaginative, offbeat, and decidedly un-Hollywood ideas can get made and attract such a talented cast is enough to restore my faith in the film industry. This is a hilarious and oddly relevant fairy-tale which no one should deprive themselves of.

5. Summer of Sam
This is one of Spike Lee's most energetic, colorful cinematic portraits of inner-city life, and evidence that not every movie that comes out in the summer has to be mindless eye-candy. Lee creates a time capsule of the fear and hysteria surrounding the Son of Sam murders in New York City during the summer of 1977, dragging a fascinating cast of characters through the political and emotional turmoil of the times and giving a voice to portions of our society we rarely witness.

6. The Blair Witch Project
What can I say? This movie scared the living piss out of me. I don't care that the acting was amateurish, or that the camera was shaky, or that you never got to see the witch. For an hour and twenty minutes I was in those woods. I was with those people. I was living their ordeal, and my heart was racing the whole time.

7. Sixth Sense
A twisted ghost tale told to subtle perfection, Bruce Willis surprised a nation by pulling off a non-action role, and the movie's haunting style and borderline world between life and death captivated audiences enough to keep it in the top-ten grossing film for a staggering 15 weeks.

8. The Matrix
Don't talk to me about social commentary or spiritual Zen-like ideas at work in this movie; they're all stolen from other sci-fi sources and dealt with here rather shallowly. Where The Matrix delivers, however, is in the departments of special effects, action sequences, character slickness, and all-around butt kicking. This movie is like a walk-in comic book, a cyberpunk fan's dream come true.

9. Three Kings
No disrespect to the incredible Saving Private Ryan, but this is the first true war movie for the 90's, a movie that captures the lunacy of political conflict when viewed through the eyes of an individual soldier, and of the media-saturated nature of modern warfare. The acting isn't spectacular, but there are some moments of excellent directorial artistry.

10. Eyes Wide Shut
The late Stanley Kubrick leaves us with a movie that was almost a work of pure genius, but for a muddied sense of character motivation and an ending that rings slightly hollow. The surreal, erotically charged atmosphere, wonderfully effective musical score, and masterful cinematography, however, all make this a definite must-see.

Honorable mentions must go to the following three movies: Election, for being both a solid, humorous satire and a compelling character story; Dogma, for demonstrating that Hollywood hasn't completely snuffed out the indie filmmakers; and Notting Hill, for being the best darn romantic comedy we're likely to see in our lifetimes.

Adam Martignetti
Arts & Living editor

If you read my best of the decade article, then you're more than willing to excuse the lack of explanation here. Anyway, here they are, then ten best movies of 1999.

American Beauty	The Blair Witch Project
Fight Club	Notting Hill
Three Kings	The Matrix
The Sixth Sense	The Insider
Eyes Wide Shut	Go

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z A is as important as Z — Buddhist saying
A To Z
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

ATTENTION: COLLEGE STUDENTS
Earn College Credits During Your Winter Break
Wintersession
January 3-14
Day and Evening Classes — One & Two Week Courses
Classes Guaranteed to Run
Art, Biology, Communications, Education, English, History, Management, Movement Science, Music, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Women's Studies, Credit-Free Computer Courses, Debt-free Living Seminar
Call (413) 572-5224 for registration information
Westfield State College
www1.wsc.mass.edu/dgce
DIVISION OF GRADUATE AND CONTINUING EDUCATION
WESTERN AVENUE • WESTFIELD, MASSACHUSETTS

ANTHONY'S
Along with EXOTICA Entertainment
Is Now Recruiting Attractive Entertainers to Join Our Team!!
NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY.
Call Scott Today at
(413) 532-8888
500 new Ludlow Rd., South Hadley, MA
CLUB line (413) 532-3621
HOT line (413) 538-6969
Visit Us At www.anthonys.net

Student Union Craft Center
ANNUAL HOLIDAY CRAFT FAIR
Hand crafted pottery, jewelry, ornaments, clothing, and much more!
Campus Center Concourse
December 1st, 2nd & 3rd
9am - 4pm
Produced by the Student Union Craft Center with support from the Campus Center/Student union Commission, Student Government Association, Graduate Student Senate
The S.U. Craft Center welcomes all UMass students, faculty and staff. Membership is FREE! We are located in the Student Union, across from the Hatch.

Spirit Haus
SPECIALTY BEVERAGE STORE
THIS WEEK'S SPECIALS!
JACK DANIELS 750ml $14.99
CASTILLO RUM 1Lt $6.99
JAGERMEISTER 750ml $15.49
BUTTERSHOTS / HOTDAMN 1Lt $7.29
JACOBS CREEK Merlot, Chard, Shiraz-Cab $6.99
Welcome Grad Students! 10%off regular Fine Wine Prices with I.D.
HAMMER & NAIL 6PK $4.99 +dep
OLD SADDLEBACK 6PK $5.29 +dep
PETE'S SAMPLER 12PK $9.99 +dep
KILLIAN'S RED 12PK $9.49 +dep
MILLER LITE 18PK BTLS $10.49 +dep
COME IN TO SEE MORE!
338 COLLEGE ST, RTE. 9
1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER
OPEN 9AM - 11PM
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER • (413) 253-5384

Sweeps winners & losers

A look at Millionaire, Conan and The Simpsons

Was your favorite show a winner or a loser during the infamous month of November? Well, if you enjoy becoming a millionaire, then your show was a winner. However, if you're more of a family guy, then you were left in the dust. The truth is that over the past few months, television experts all over the country have been having a field day looking at the screen and trying to figure out what was a success and what should go back to the drawing board. In the tradition of TV Guides' "Cheers and Jeers," here are the winners and losers of November sweeps.

Winner: "Who wants to be a Millionaire?" – I'm sick of it, and sick of that cocky IRS guy who won the million dollars. In case you didn't see it, he made it to the million dollar question with all three of his life lines (the life lines are; "ask the audience" "50/50" and "call a friend") left. When the question "Who was the only president to appear on TV's 'Laugh In?'" was presented, the man used his only life line to call his father, and instead of asking for help he said: "Dad, I just wanted to call and tell you that I don't need your help and I'm about to win a million dollars, because my answer is 'Richard Nixon' and that's my final answer!" He was correct, and after taxes, which he can't avoid since he's an IRS agent, his final take home amount was about $400,000.

Loser: Regis Philbin – I just don't like him, thus, he's a loser.

Winner: Pro-Wrestling – After rumors that some people will be retiring, professional wrestling still sours in the ratings, setting new cable records. The popular wrestling show on Monday nights, on the USA network, cultivated with a wedding between WWF owner, Vince McMahon's daughter and some scary looking dude. Wasn't there some Jeff Foxworthy joke about "If you get married in a wrestling ring you might be a redneck? Then again, if you're a hardcore wrestling fan...

Loser: Battle Dome – Despite its desperate attempts to be as popular as pro-wrestling, "Battle Dome" simply can't do it. I can't understand why though, with people like T-Money as the champion, it should be a sure hit. Even though it's time slot at 2:00am is not the best on TV, I still can't believe that there wouldn't be millions of people just dying to watch the former porn queen and "Battle Dome president" punishing the guy with the painted ribs. I think I'm going to write a letter NBC, and demand that they replace "ER" with "Battle Dome." Take that Michael Crichton!

Winner: Late Night with Conan O' Brien – After a very long time on tour with Bruce Springsteen, band leader Max Weinberg finally returned to the best late night show on television. Also, Conan taped a weeks worth of shows from Los Angeles, and got some huge guests on.

Loser: The Late Late Show with Craig Kilborn – Kilborn actually ran a show last Wednesday night with no guests. He explained this by saying that "In the next millennium, there will be no guests on talk shows, so I'm going to get a jump on things early." Oh, so that's why you had no guests on, Craig. It's not because your show sucks, and no one wants to talk to you? It's because you're a trendsetter! I get it now. Hey, Jon Stewart interviewed Mike Myers. His show kicks buttocks, you should call Comedy Central, maybe you could teach Stewart your new trend. Or maybe he needs a sidekick. Or maybe he just needs someone to sweep the floors after every episode is taped.

Winners: Home Alone, Men In Black, Home Alone 2, Forrest Gump & 007 – There were so many movies aired on network TV this past month, that it's a miracle that anyone actually went to the theater. With NBC's new Thanksgiving tradition of showing Home Alone, and then following it up with Men In Black, they were the clear winners in the TV movie category this sweeps period. However, TBS is still running tons of James Bond films for the next few weeks, and that will have fans of the popular super agent more excited than Timothy Dalton when his agent calls and says that she found him a job selling Hemorrhoid cream on commercials. The movies had a big impact on the ratings, and it'll be interesting to see what films show up during Christmas time.

Loser: Y2K: The Movie – Hahahahaha! Thank you NBC! I haven't laughed that hard since Arnold Schwarzneger's performance in Batman & Robin. Which, by the way, was much scarier than Y2K: The Movie.

Winner: The Simpsons – Always a winner, The Simpsons had its best episode of the season. The episode that aired on Sunday November 21st, was about Apu's wife giving birth to octuplets. The fact that the show is still pushing on and putting out great episodes is truly great. Let's hope there's plenty more of The Simpsons in the future.

Loser: Family Guy – Along with the hilarious series, "Action," "Family Guy" has been sent off to that TV wasteland in the sky. FOX pulled the two series due to horrible ratings, and dissention among the cast and crews. The two shows are just another example of how if something is placed in a bad time slot, which in this case is Thursday nights against NBC's powerful line-up, there's no way it can survive, regardless of how great of a show it is. Both of these series were nothing but pure hilarity. It's sad to see them go.

Winner: VH1's Thanksgiving Best Weekend – VH1 spent the entire weekend during Thanksgiving airing their best episodes of shows such as "Rock N' Roll Jeopardy," "The List," and "Behind the Music." They also showed live performances from such bands as the Counting Crows, and Dave Matthews. If you had no life over Thanksgiving, (which was certainly me) then VH1 was your friend.

Loser: MTV's Fashionably Loud Contest – Encouraging sixteen year old girls to pick up eating disorders, and become models is such a responsible thing to do MTV. I was so sick of watching shallow women "strut their stuff" to the tunes of Enriquio Iglesias and Brittney Spears, that I felt the desire to stop wearing clothes all together. I promise I won't do that though, because I wouldn't want you all to have to suffer through the fright that is my nakedness.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist

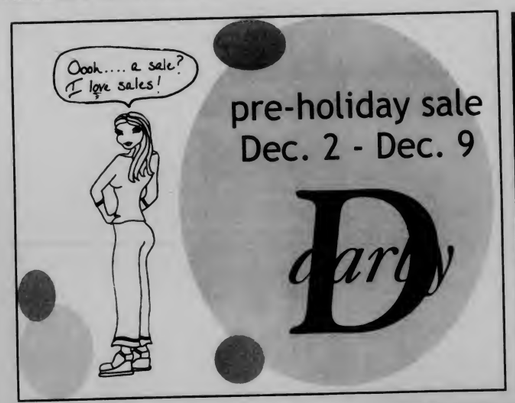
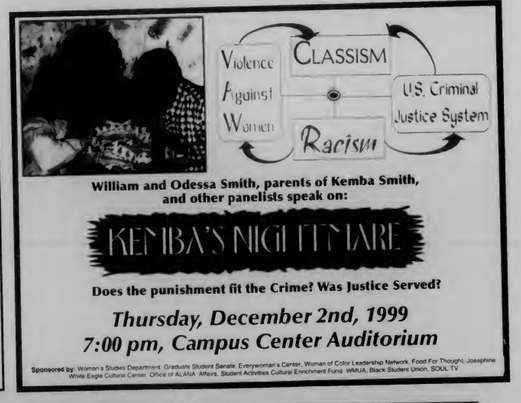
COURTESY NBC

Conan O'Brien took a road trip to L.A. for November sweeps and came out as one of TV's big winners

■ best of the decade



continued from page 5



ern classic. A disturbing suspense drama with a great cat and mouse game, possibly the best World War II picture ever made, also AFI's ninth best movie of the century, and a story about the greatest playwright of modern times.

8. Forrest Gump and Jerry Maguire: I guess we're just suckers for movies with strong central characters. Forrest Gump is Americana revisited- the epitome of how to live the American dream. Jerry Maguire is a great romantic comedy with idealistic tones. Tom Hanks and Tom Cruise- two of this generation's finest actors in two of this decade's best movies.

10. Pretty Woman: Personally, this is the only question mark I have on the list. It seems particularly interesting though since Richard Gere and Julia Roberts recently reunited in Runaway Bride.

Braveheart, L.A. Confidential, and American Beauty among others were all really close.

BUB'S BAR-B-Q
'Pig Out In Style'
VOTED BEST BAR-B-Q AND BEST RIBS 15 CONSECUTIVE YEARS BY THE ADVOCATE
•(413) 548-9630•

Sports Bar and Dance Club
City Cafe
1 Pearl St. Northampton•584-4100
• 3 BARS • 2 Dance Floors • Gameroom • Pool table • 19 Tap Line • Satellite Dish, NFL Ticket • KNDD • U. MASS Alumnae Owned

MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL OF LAW
Although it also produces highly intellectual programs seen on over 500 television stations and a general intellectual magazine that is read across the country, MSL's main focus is on teaching you the practical skills you need for success in law, business and government. We teach you to analyze legal, business and human problems, uncover facts and organize them logically, write well, be persuasive both orally and in writing, negotiate, arbitrate and mediate, try cases, and write specialized legal documents. And at MSL, you will be taught by experts who regularly practice these skills.
The non-specialized skills that we teach you, such as the ability to analyze problems, amass and organize facts, and write and speak persuasively, are needed not only in law, but are greatly desired in business.
MSL teaches you all these crucial skills at a tuition that is by far the lowest of any law school in New England – about half of the median tuition elsewhere in New England. The following chart of full-time tuitions illustrates this:

School 1	$25,550	School 7	$21,750	School 13	$17,075
School 2	$24,448	School 8	$21,200	School 14	$15,950
School 3	$24,090	School 9	$20,200	School 15	$14,850
School 4	$23,520	School 10	$20,150	MSL	$10,800
School 5	$22,708	School 11	$19,084
School 6	$22,054	School 12	$17,986

• LSAT not required • Rolling Admissions
Classes enter in January 2000 and August 2000
500 Federal Street, Andover, MA 01810 • (978) 681-0800
WWW.MSLAW.EDU

COURTESY DIMENSION FILMS

Neve Campbell, stars in Scream the popular teen slasher flick and one of the most important films of the decade

■ picks

continued from page 5

great story telling abilities to one of the darkest moments in human history. It's an emotionally grinding brutal film, but most of all, a necessary film. Spielberg uses his three main characters to show the conflicting attitudes towards Jews during the Holocaust. It's not black and white, even if the film is. Ultimately, Spielberg made the film not only for his family this father in particular), but also for a people.

Pulp Fiction: 1994 came about and we had never anything like this before. Pulp Fiction is a hodgepodge of violence, mayhem and generally deviant behavior- an assault on the senses, not to mention political correctness. The film introduced Quentin Tarantino to our culture, with a reputation a whole new breed Tarantinesque for things outstanding his unique style. Perhaps more significant, it was the beginning of an era dominated by independent [illegible]. We came to know Miramax, the [illegible] produce such hits as [illegible] Good Will Hunting and Shakespeare [illegible]

Saving Private Ryan: Saving Private Ryan War II was a new breed of war film. Ryan was the first movie that didn't idealize D-day despite its overriding sense of duty and American patriotism. In that light, Three Kings is actually a deeper condemnation of war. David O Russell is the first one to take a look at the Gulf War and he doesn't paint a flattering picture. His keen artistic eye and unending sarcastic wit fuel a thought provoking attack on American culture, war duty, government, and media.

The Truman Show: Rarely does Hollywood become critical of itself, but The Truman Show was a rare moment on insight into our culture. It points to the growing media giants that consistently take greater control of our lives (this is taken to an extreme in the movie) and to our general apathy to this. Like the fans of "The Truman" TV show in the movie, we happily consume media, perhaps even passionately, rooting for heroes, but we are blind to the consequences; we simply ask, "what else is on?"

Scream: Look at the recent list on new TV programs- add it to the list of current TV programs, and you can still see the affects of Scream even today. The teen slasher flick appealed to a generation because it considered them intelligent, culturally competent people. That's why the parody worked. It was a brilliant attempt to catch the attention of an "oppressed" group; this was their film and even the film knew that. The movie also [illegible] capitalize [illegible] and the [illegible] return [illegible] with a new image. It was the epitome of big Hollywood big director, big star, and big special effects. This was and still is a cultural phenomenon. It they had just scrapped the inane dialogue and poor plot, then they might have had a good movie.

The Blair Witch Project: Scratch everything I just said. Two guys from Northhampton make a film for a few thousand dollars, which goes on to become a huge summer blockbuster and the year's biggest hit. This was the first sign of emerging Internet distribution that will become standard by the end of next decade.

Jurassic Park: The first hint at the great power that lie in those boxes lying on top our desks- computers. Jurassic Park opened the door for the two films that follow on this list. Computer editing and the digital manipulation of video opens up endless possibilities for the future of film. Dinosaurs wowed big audiences and rocked a generation.

The Matrix: Rejuvenated a dying special-effects genre with some mind-blowing stuff. Basically, the plot and pseudo-intellectual theory was only there to pad the special effects. One visual trick after another, the movie is technologically brilliant and ground breaking.

10 The Phantom Menace. For the [illegible] critics hated this movie, the people went to see it. In droves. Beside the technological wizardry of George Lucas, he has managed to do something that nobody else in cinematic history- create the critic-proof movie. America still loves Star Wars.

Civil War movie creates a stir

By Susan King
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD – Jeffrey Wright credits one of his co-stars in Ang Lee's Civil War epic, Ride With the Devil, with helping him gain insight into his character, Daniel Holt, a freed Southern slave fighting for the Confederacy – and it wasn't Ride's leads, Skeet Ulrich or Tobey Maguire.

Instead, the help came from Bugs, Wright's horse in the film.

"I think Holt related to his horse more deeply than the people around him," suggests Wright in a recent interview in Los Angeles. "There is a kind of silence and a calmness that I derived from the horse and a regality, not only from the horse, but also from the horsemen who taught us to ride.

"They were great horsemen and taught us a lot about an old way of life and real communication with the animal."

Understanding an old and very different way of life was key to the film and to Wright's performance. In Ride, which opened Nov. 24, he portrays a former slave who is genuine friends with the son of the man who used to own him.

Wright, who made his film debut as the lead in 1996's drama about the art world, "Basquiat," says that before making Ride he knew there were Southern slaves and freed blacks who fought for the Confederacy.

"Some of the reasons why blacks went into battle (on the side of the) South was born of ignorance and subservience and filled with real pathos."

Based on Daniel Woodrell's novel Woe to Live On, the film is about the bloody guerrilla warfare between pro-South "Bushwhackers" and pro-North "Jayhawkers" along the Kansas-Missouri border during the Civil War. Joining up with the Bushwhackers are Jake Roedel (Maguire), the son of a German immigrant, and Jake's childhood friend, Jack Bull Chiles (Ulrich), the son of a Missouri plantation owner.

Their unit includes the flamboyant Southern gentleman George Clyde (Simon Baker) and his loyal former slave (Wright).

Wright points out that the relationship of white Southerners to blacks was - and remains - complex. "To kind of demonize the South and kind of lionize the North is simplistic, I think," Wright said. "The history is much more complex than we had been led to believe."

At the outset of Ride, Clyde and Holt are loyal friends. "They grew up together and were friends as kids," Wright explains. "But what Holt grows to realize throughout the course of the movie is that it is still a political relationship of master-slave."

In fact, Holt discovers he has much more in common with Maguire's Jake "because it is a class relationship. At the time, the poor whites and the poor blacks had more in common than they were led to believe."

COURTESY PARAMOUNT

Tom Cruise and Renee Zellweger star in the epic Jerry Maguire, one of the 90s most popular films

ARTS
Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

安城中國餐館
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

SPRING BREAK 2000!
CANCUN* BAHAMAS
JAMAICA FLORIDA
EAT, DRINK & TRAVEL FREE*
CALL FOR DETAILS & A FREE BROCHURE
ONLY USA SPRING BREAK GIVES YOU
• FREE BEACH PARTIES
• EXPRESS BAR ADMISSION
• DISCOUNTS AT RESTAURANTS
• FREE/DISCOUNTED CLUB ENTRY!
1-888-777-4642
www.usaspringbreak.com

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Busch & Busch Light" $11.99 30/PK
Pete's Wicked Ale & Lager $4.99 6/pk all flavors
Sam Adams Lager or "Winter Lager" $8.99 12/PK
MILWAUKEE'S BEST $9.99 30/PK
PETE'S WICKED "SAMPLER" $8.99 12/PK
Vodka 80° EVERYDAY PRICE! $8.99 1.75 lt
Natfield & Summer's Tail $4.99 6/pk all flavors
"Bacardi Limon" $8.99 750ml
Ballatore Spumante $4.99 750 ml
Freixenet Gordon Negra $6.99 750 ml
Korbel Champagne $8.99 750 ml
Martini & Rossi Asti Spumante $8.99 750 ml
Check Out Our Many More Specials
"everyday prices until the year 2000!"
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

Earn 3 credits in two weeks in Mount Wachusett Community College's January Intersession
January 3-7 and 10-14
Two convenient locations - MWCC's Gardner campus and the Leominster Campus & Corporate Training Center.
Day sessions in Gardner and Leominster 9:00 a.m. - 1:30 p.m.
Evening sessions in Leominster 4:30 p.m. - 9:00 p.m.
Courses offered:
Biology of Human Health
Introduction to Computers
Math for Allied Health
Psychology of Self
Human Sexuality
Business Organization
Microcomputer Applications
Film Appreciation
Total Quality Management
Music Appreciation
Litigation
(special scheduling applies to some courses, not all courses offered at both locations)
For more information or to register, call the Admissions Office today (978) 632-6600, ext. 110
Mount Wachusett Community College
e-mail: admissions@mwcc.mass.edu
Visit our Web site: www.mwcc.mass.edu
444 Green Street • Gardner, MA 01440

COME TO LIQUORS 44 AND SAVE A LOT OF "DOUGH! DOUGH! DOUGH!"
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Everyday Pricing
1/2 KEGS
BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, AMBER BOCK, COORS LIGHT, COORS, ROLLING ROCK
$39.99 +DEP.
OPEN SUNDAYS 12-5PM
MILLER HIGH LIFE, GEN. DRAFT, GEN. DRAFT LT 30 PACK CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.49 +DEP.
BUD & BUD LIGHT CASE OF 24 12 OZ. BOTTLES $16.49 +DEP.
OTTER CREEK 12 PK. BOTTLES $9.49 +DEP.
CORONA & CORONA LT. 12 PK. BOTTLES $9.49 +DEP.
MILWAUKEE'S BEST CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $9.49 +DEP.
KILLIAN'S IRISH RED 12 PK. BOTTLES $9.49 +DEP.
WINE OF THE MONTH
ROBERT MONDAVI COASTAL CHARDONNAY MERLOT ZINFANDEL 750 ML. $8.49
CARLO ROSSI ALL FLAVORS 4.0 LT. $6.99
CITRA WINES ALL FLAVORS 1.5 LT. $5.99
SUTTER HOME CHARDONNAY MERLOT CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5 LT. $8.99
BLACKSTONE MERLOT 750 ML. $8.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 750 ML. $3.99
MANISCHEWITZ ALL FLAVORS 750 ML. $2.99
WE HAVE DOM PERIGNON & CRISTAL AVAILABLE
BACARDI LIMON RUM 750 ML. $8.99
POLAND SPRINGS VODKA 1.75L $8.99
INVERHOUSE SCOTCH SALE $12.99 MAIL IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $9.99 1.75L
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED WHISKEY $11.49 1.75L
JACK DANIELS 750 ML. $14.99
CAROLAN'S IRISH CREAM $7.99 750 ML.
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 12/2/99 THRU WEDS. 12/8/99
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

■ Basketball

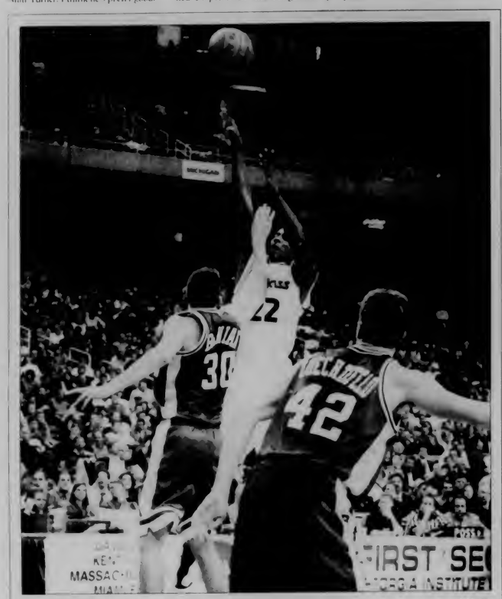
continued from page 16

he just couldn't make any shots," said Flint.



UMass, which has been the victor in the last four meetings, leads the series with a 53-24 record since its start during the 1921-1922 season. The last time the two met was on Jan. 5, 1995 at the Curry Hicks Cage when the Minutemen wrung the Terriers out, 90-42.

"They're a scrappy, young squad," said Flint. "I like their freshman guard, Matt Turner. I think he's pretty good."

Turner led his St. Thomas More School to last year's New England Prep School Championship final, averaging 22 points and five assists per game. The 5-foot-9 guard was also a McDonald's All-American nominee.

The Terriers, who are coached by Dennis Wolff, have been victims of Northern Illinois, Radford, James Madison in overtime and most recently, Providence. Against the Friars, sophomore guard Dereck Franklin tallied 14 points but was out-gunned by P.C.'s Erron Maxwey, who contributed a game-high 19 points in the winning cause. Senior Jean Avebe scored 12 points and tossed in an early-season high nine rebounds.

Franklin finished sixth on the team in scoring last year with 7.5 ppg, and second in assists and steals. The Chantilly, VA native, who proved lethal at the free throw line pushing in .788 of his attempts, earned America East All-Rookie Team honors last year.

Chris Kirkland the Massachusetts men's basketball team will look to even out their record at 2-2 tonight against BU.

FILE PHOTO

A Chalupa-and-Gold-Ring World

What's REALLY wrong with College sports today

By Dave Kindred
The Sporting News

The biggest lie in sports history? Easy. It's not Pete Rose's. It's not Latrell Sprewell's. Bigger by a mile is a lie told for 100 years. It's told by the folks who run college athletics. They say college athletes are amateurs and are treated fairly by the gift of a scholarship. When it comes to lies, that one tops any fable told by William Jefferson Clinton.

It's "amateur athletics"? Come on. The NCAA's professional marketers have sold for $6 billion the rights to televise March Madness basketball games. The average yearly payment to our shameless universities will be more than $545 million.

Of that money produced by extraordinary athletes doing dramatic stuff, the athletes will get the usual cut: a scholarship and a lecture on the evils of taking a nickel in payment for their work. This is fair?

It's an outrage, and only the latest in a century of outrages committed by universities practicing hypocrisy without a blush. So many outrages, so little column space, but let's go first to the University of Minnesota.

There the basketball coach was told to get out of town, and get out now. He was judged to have presided over the sort of big-time-athletics academic corruption often suspected but seldom documented. In most lines of work, the coach's behavior would have been cause for firing. But in the curious world of college athletics, he was allowed to take a contract buyout.

And what a buyout, so sweet as to smack of hush money: a lump-sum payment of $1,500,537, along with pension benefits, moving expenses (whatever happened to being ridden out of town on a rail?) and four season tickets to Minnesota games for the next three years.

Got that? The coach is a bad guy, did bad things, brought scandal down on his university and gets $1.5 million as a going-away present. It's a curious world when an exiled pariah counts his filthy lucre while Austin Peay State University suspends two basketball players for three games, 10 percent of a season, because they used a university long-distance code.

The players shouldn't have made the calls, but it's a penny-ante thing. Unlike the Minnesota coach, they didn't corrupt the academic process. Unlike the coach, they didn't cause the university president to call them a liar. Nor did they demand $1.5 million to shut up. But in their world, they're the exploited class and have no power. A coach gets $1.5 million; players get suspended.

Granted, they had no business using a coach's telephone code. But let's look at another telephone story, this one at the University of Memphis.

For more than a year, the Memphis basketball coach made about 1,100 cell phone/calling-card calls totaling nearly 140 hours of conversation with a female student, with whom he has admitted having an affair. Do you think the couple discussed basketball theory? If they didn't, the calls were a violation of university policy on phone use.

Only the coach's resignation made his phone habit news. A player can get suspended for penny-ante phone calls, but a coach might yak on for a year and – for all we know – be given a discount on cell-phone service because he's such a good customer. Again, there's a difference. As a member of the exploiting class, he has power.

Let's go to the heartland now, to the University of Kansas, where a chalupa-challenged football player was suspended. He'd been arrested at 2 a.m. for getting his hind end stuck in the drive-through window at a Taco Bell. It happened when a minimum-wage graveyard shifter forgot to give him his chalupa. The 270-pound defensive end tried to squeeze through the window only 14 inches wide to get his food.

Now, whether the Kansas football player had spent his last nickel on that lost chalupa, I have no idea. I do know this: He didn't have a nickel officially given him for his work in entertaining thousands of ticket-buying, donation-making football fans every Saturday this fall.

For those innocents who believe that in return for athletic performance, players get a priceless education at no cost, two words: Yeah, right. At Minnesota, a tutor wrote 400 papers for as many as 20 basketball players from 1993 to 1998. Those players are being educated? In what?

Do we imagine that this kind of "education" is limited to one university in one conference in one part of the country? Or do we think it might be going on at other institutions of higher learning that have sold their academic souls to the TV networks for a share of that $6 billion?

Speaking of exploitation, let's visit the University of Connecticut. UConn spent approximately $60,000 on rings and pendants given to 298 people in celebration of its 1999 NCAA men's basketball championship.

Rings went to President Clinton, Connecticut Gov. John G. Rowland and CBS sportscaster Jim Nantz. UConn Coach Jim Calhoun, his assistants, the school's president and its athletic director received gold-and-diamond rings valued at $495.50 each.

As for the UConn athletes who played the games, they also received rings. Their rings were not gold; they were "gold tone." Their "diamonds" were cubic zirconium. Not $495.50 rings, the players' rings came in at $130.

There's a pattern here.

Now, presidents of major American universities are obliged to turn a blind eye to such a pattern. They've created and maintained for a century the entrepreneur's ultimate business plan: They make billions of dollars while paying the production workers not a cent.

But common folks can see what's going on, which is: Big shots get the big bucks and gold jewelry. Players get a chalupa if they can squeeze their hind ends through a window at 2 in the Kansas morning.

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE

NEW YORK STYLE SCENE IN DOWNTOWN AMHERST.
NEW AND EXCITING PLACE TO EAT, OFFERING CAJUN AND MEDITERRANEAN CUISINE, OUTDOOR PATIO AND UPSCALE MICROBREWS.
AFTER 10 IT'S TIME TO DANCE
WEDNESDAY - PROMO NIGHT WITH DJ FOOZ. FREE PRIZES!!
THURSDAY - HOUSE MUSIC WITH DJ FOOZ
FRIDAY - HOUSE, HIP-HOP & TOP 40 WITH DJ FOOZ
SATURDAY - HOUSE, HIP-HOP & TOP 40 WITH DJ CREME
SUNDAY - LATIN NIGHT WITH DJ CREME FEATURING FREE DANCE LESSONS FROM THE THERESA CASTANO CENTER FOR LATIN DANCE
63 N. PLEASANT ST. 259-1600

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS
Springfield: 413-731-6910
Worcester: 508-366-8847
Boston: 617-484-1788
North of Boston: 978-777-2253
South of Boston: 508-821-5391
Plymouth: 508-833-1145
Route 3 South: 781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast: 603-926-9813
Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9
Equal Opportunity Employer

FREE DELIVERY
PIZZA
PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
586-7272
HOURS OF OPERATION:
Mon - Wed 11am - 1am,
Thurs & Sun 11am - 2am
Fri & Sat 11am - 3am
Now Accepting:
1 LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $6.99
1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99
3 LARGE TOPPING $19.99

NFL Week 13	Las Vegas Point Spread Note: Selections for entertainment purposes only	 Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief	 Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor	 Kathleen Ralls Women's Affairs Editor	 Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor	 Adam White Sports Associate
Last Week (Overall)		7-7 (71-84)	7-7 (78-77)	5-9 (67-88)	7-7 (67-88)	8-6 (72-83)
Pittsburgh @ Jacksonville	Jacksonville by 10 1/2	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville
Dallas @ New England	New England by 2 1/2	New England	New England	New England	New England	Dallas
Philadelphia @ Arizona	Arizona by 7	Philadelphia	Philadelphia	Philadelphia	Arizona	Arizona
New Orleans @ Atlanta	Atlanta by 4	Atlanta	Atlanta	Atlanta	Atlanta	New Orleans
San Francisco @ Cincinnati	Cincinnati by 3	Cincinnati	Cincinnati	San Francisco	San Francisco	Cincinnati
Kansas City @ Denver	Denver by 4	Denver	Denver	Denver	Kansas City	Kansas City
Washington @ Detroit	Detroit by 3 1/2	Detroit	Washington	Washington	Washington	Detroit
Green Bay @ Chicago	Green Bay by 3	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay	Green Bay
Indianapolis @ Miami	Miami by 2	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Indianapolis	Miami
N.Y. Jets @ N.Y. Giants	N.Y. Jets by 2 1/2	N.Y. Jets	N.Y. Giants	N.Y. Jets	N.Y. Jets	N.Y. Giants
St. Louis @ Carolina	St. Louis by 7	St. Louis	St. Louis	Carolina	St. Louis	St. Louis
Cleveland @ San Diego	San Diego by 7 1/2	Cleveland	Cleveland	Cleveland	Cleveland	San Diego
Tennessee @ Baltimore	Tennessee by 3 1/2	Tennessee	Tennessee	Tennessee	Tennessee	Tennessee
Minnesota @ Tampa Bay	Minnesota by 2 1/2	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota

UMass vs Boston University
DATE: Friday, Dec. 3rd,1999
TIME: 7:00PM
WHERE: William D. Mullins Center

UMass Hockey

INTERESTED IN A CO-OP OR INTERNSHIP THIS SPRING ?
WELL, ITS NOT TOO LATE!
Check out these HOT opportunities!
Arkwright: 6 Co-op, seeking IE and ME majors
Boston Globe: 6 month co-op, seeking COMM, ENGL, and JOUR majors
Fidelity Investments: 6 month co-op, seeking ACCT, ECON, FIN, and MGMT majors
M. DeMatteo Construction: Sping co-op, seeking CE majors
MTV: Internships, seeking ALL majors
Ocean Spray: Spring co-op, seeking AN SCI, MICRO BIO, CH E and NSM majors
Pratt and Whitney: 6 month co-op, seeking COMP and CSE majors
Washington Center: Internship, seeking ALL majors
There are THREE Welcome Sessions left this semester!
•Friday December 3rd 2 - 3 pm in 114 Stockbridge
• Monday December 6th 3 - 4 pm in 103 Soth College
• Thursay December 9th 3 - 4 pm in 103 South College
MONDAYS (12/3 ONLY) 3 - 4 pm 103 South College
TUESDAYS 12 -1 pm 202 Paige Lab; 3 - 4 pm (12/7 only) 124 Draper Hall; 3 - 4 pm (12/14 only) 127 Mather Builing (Disney only); 4 - 5 13 SOM Building
WEDNESDAYS 2:45 - 3:45 pm (12/8 ONLY); 3:30 - 4:30 pm 304 ELAB
THURSDAYS (12/16 ONLY) 3 - 4 pm 103 South College
FRIDAYS 2 - 3 pm 114 Stockbridge
Contact the Field Experience Coordinator in YOUR college !
College of Food and Natural Resources 109 Stockbridge Hall 577-0421
College of Engineering 126A Marston Hall 577-0419
College of Natural Sciences and Math 209 Mather Building 577-0428
College of Arts and Humanities 264 Bartlett Hall 545-6266
College of Education, Nursing and Public Health 416 Arnold House 577-0427
College of Social and Behavioral Sciences 102A South College 545-6267
Isenberg School Of Management 208C SOM Building 577-0418
Campus Career Network

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Local INDEPENDENT SHORT FILM needs interns for Jan. Recieve a film credit. Many position open: Sound, hair + make-up, art design, gaffer + grip. Contact # 413-286-7886

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Boulders $387 flexible avail. Call Chris 256-1629

Take over my lease! Large 2Bdrm, Cheap! Call 259-9153 on bus route

Beautiful 2-Bdrm in NOHO 2-floors, Jan 1 $775+electric Vicky or Angela 586-3132

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apt. Cliffside, Sunderland. $300/mo. Everything included. Call Ito H: 665-8721 W: 545-2108

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Honda Accord LXi 172k, auto, am/fm cass, needs some work. $1000 or B/O. Call Jessica 549-1024

1989 Honda Civic DX 95k miles $2950 or B/O 545-4878 268-3155

1987 Ford Escort 95,000 miles 4 DR. Auto perfect condition, no rust. $1,700 253-1303

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

PENTIUM III 500 MHZ ABIT BE6 128 MBSRAM ATI3DAGEFURY 24XCD BURNER TOSHIBA6X DVD 17. MAG MONITOR. 56K MODEM NEC LASERPRINTER AND MORE CALL JIMMY $2100 OR BO 253-8074 3 WEEKS OLD

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Movers Part time positions available for winter intersession and spring semester. Starting pay $8.00 per hour. Located close to UMASS. Call 584-4746

Human Services - Residential support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults. Permanent hours (full and part time) and relief. Hours include evenings, weekends, and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for Permanent). Locations in Belchertown and South Hadley. Call (413) 774-2281, ext. 11 (ask for Mary). AA/EOE

EMPLOYMENT

BARTENDERS Make $100-$300 per night no expierence necessary. Call 1-800-981-8168 ext 205

Cool Candy Company on bus route in Amherst seeks outgoing phone sales reps. You can work around your classes with our flexible schedule: choose one of two daily shifts (four hours each), minimum of three shifts per week. Shifts are 10am-2pm or 1pm to 5pm. Earn up to $10 an hour with base salary plus commission. Requires some sales experience, but personality is most important. Don't miss this great opportunity - call Beth right now to set up an interview! 1-888-556-5599

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

EXCELLENT compensation for marketing college products at BEST prices. Go NOW to: http://www.adademos.com/campusrep

FOR RENT

Great Sublet for Dog Lovers 3 Bedroom house near Smith College Jan-May $675. Reduced form $900 in exchange for care of 2 happy dogs 584-1987

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Learn how to really fight! Don't be a victim. Private boxing lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus. In Amherst on bus route 256-0364

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in three bedroom house available in Hobart rent is 275 a month + utilities 548-8068

ROOMMATE WANTED

Mill Valley 3 bedroom 2 bath on bus route. Looking for 2-3 roommates Call 256-1115

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment in S. Amherst on bus route oil/heat $300/month, utilities extra. Avail. next semester. call Jill 256-1742

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 or 2 roommates wanted! Located in South Amherst. On bus route. Heat & hot water included. $270/one person. $190/2 people call 256-3201

Housemate Wanted for one room in a four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons. Cheap rent, utilities inc. Starting January 1st. 253-2229

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom Apt. 2 people to share big room non-smoker. 3/4 miles from campus. Aprox $300 inclusive. Call Joe 253-4275

Female non-smoker to share apt. with 3 nice girls for Spring Semester. $240 + utilities. Call 253-2378

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Very Cheap Rent 2 large bedrooms in Boulders on bus route. Utilities included furnished, new carpet. Available after Dec 15. thru end of Jan. Call 256-1192

Your Ad Could Be Right HERE!!

TRAVEL

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

Browse icpt.com for Springbreak "2000" ALL destinations offered. Trip Participants, Student Orgs & Campus Sales Reps wanted. Fabulous parties, hotels & prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

#1 SPRINGBREAK Operator! Check our website for the best deals! www.vagabondtours.com Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica & Florida Group organizers EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH...Call today! 800-700-0790

Spring Break! Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica, Florida and South Padre. Call USA Spring Break for a free brochure and rates and ask how you can EAT, DRINK, and TRAVEL for FREE! Call 1-888-777-4642 www.springbreak.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Do you need somewhere to live next semester?? Or are you looking for a roommate??

Use The Collegain Classifieds to get what you want!!

The Collegain Classifieds... 545-3500

Brilliant!!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, DEC. 2

Meeting – There will be a reading group/socialist coalition meeting at 7 p.m. in the cape Cod Lounge. Contact Rich at 549-0111 to get the reading or for more details.

Slide Lecture – Artist Georgia Marsh will discuss the process of creating a limited-edition print at 4:15 p.m. in Hilber 117 at Smith College.

Workshop – There will be a print workshop featuring artist Georgia Marsh and master printer Maurice Sanchez from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. in Hillyer Hall 17 at Smith College.

FRIDAY, DEC. 3

Comedy – MISSION IMPROvable, the UMass improvisational troupe, will be performing at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. Everyone is welcome.

Lifeline – There will be an annual holiday floral exhibit of seasonal flower arrangements prepared by students from the Stockbridge School and Plant & Soil Sciences Department on display from 11:30 a.m.-5 p.m. in room 105 of French Hall.

Workshop – There will be a print workshop featuring artist Georgia Marsh and master printer Maurice Sanchez from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. in Hillyer Hall 17 at Smith College.

SATURDAY, DEC. 4

Fair – There will be an annual winter craft fair featuring all handmade crafts, food, music, and children's activities, from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. in the Scott gym at Smith College.

Meeting – There will be an informational meeting about the Smith College School for Social Work from 2-5 p.m. in Seelye 106. Pre-register by calling 585-7960.

NOTICES

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Dayst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. Call for more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Support – ALANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

Training – The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team, based in the legal studies department, is offering a mediation training session for all students from Jan. 3-7. Students will receive mediation certification, and academic credit is possible. Applications are available in room 222 of the Hampshire House, and are due on Dec. 6. Call 545-3882 for more information.

FYI, are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, excluding the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	Hartford	21	Govel to Govel
3	CBS/5	Hartford	23	CNN Headline News
4	ABC/7	Boston	24	CNN
5	PBS/57	Springfield	25	CNN Fn
6	HSCN	Movie Ch.	26	CNN Si
7	UPN/20	Hartford	27	TBS
8	Weather Channel		28	BET
9	NBC/30 New Britain		29	Cable TV Network
10	Fox/61	Hartford	31	Univision
11	PBS/24	Hartford	32	Comedy Central
12	WICH 6 HSCN		33	Cartoon Network
15	International		34	TV Land
16	UMass Academic TV		35	E! Span
17	WB/New Haven		36	ZDTV (Tentative)
18	Sundance		37	Bloomberg Financial Network
19	The Learning Channel		37	History Channel
20	UVC-TV19		38	HSCN Programming
22	ABC/40 Springfield

THURSDAY EVENING C - Campus DECEMBER 2, 1999

		C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Celia Cruz and Friends: A Night of Salsa (In Stereo)				Dave Matthews Band (In Stereo)		This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Year Without a Santa Claus		Sports Illustrated's 20th Century		Sports Awards (In Stereo Live)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Year Without a Santa Claus		Sports Illustrated's 20th Century		Sports Awards (In Stereo Live)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition		"White Christmas" (1954, Musical) Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye				20/20 Downtown		News	Nightline
WLVI	56		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Popular	Wild Wild Mess			Charmed	Morality Bites (R)	News	Nanny
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Jesse			Fresier (R)	Stark Raving	ER "The Storm" (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				News	Real TV (R)	Change-Haart	Caroline
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Friends (R)	Jesse			Frasier (R)	Stark Raving	ER "The Storm" (R)	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Greed: Multi-Million Challenge		Action		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	61	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Jesse			Frasier (R)	Stark Raving	ER "The Storm" (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	5	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Bringing Up Poppy (In Stereo)		Mystery: "Lasher" A Morbid Taste for Bones (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Totally Out of Control		20/20 Downtown		News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	NHL Hockey	Boston Bruins at Washington Capitals (Live)					WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)
WTBS	72		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder		"The Spy Who Loved Me" (1977, Adventure) Roger Moore
A&E	43		Simon & Simon	Row Play	Law & Order "Mushrooms"		Biography: Dudley Moore		Investigative Reports (R)		Inside Story: Dangerous Seas		Law & Order
CNN	45	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	46	38	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"She-Devil" (1989, Comedy) Meryl Streep, Roseanne Barr				Stein's Money	Tom Ben	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery		On the Inside "Real LAPD" (R)		Science Mysteries (R)		Beyond Bizarre (R)		On the Inside	"Real LAPD" (R)
ESPN	41		Sportacenter			NFL 2Night	NFL Football: Pittsburgh Steelers at Jacksonville Jaguars (Live)							Sportacenter
LIFE	49		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope "Liar, Liar"		"Fight for Justice: The Nancy Conn Story" (1995) Marlo Hennen				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53		Fashionably	Tom Green (R)	Beat Suite	TRL Wanna	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Head Trip (R)	Celebrity	Tom Green	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	55		All That	Caldog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Skeeter	Skeeter	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back
SCIFI	59		Herculas: Legendary Jrnys.		"Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home" (1986, Science Fiction) William Shatner				"Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country" (1991)					"Star Trek IV"
TLC	48	28	Home Again	Home Again	Turning Point (R)		Killer Storms	Nature a Exts	Bermuda Triangle		Atlantis: The Lost Continent		Killer Storms	Nature's Exts
TNT	42		Due South "Starman"		ER "It's Not Easy Being Greene		"Grease" (1978, Musical) John Travolta, Olivia Newton-John						"Look Who's Talking Too" (1990, Comedy)
USA	47		Baywatch "Matters of the Heart"		JAG "Nobody's Child"		Figure Skating Improv-Ice (Live)						Walker, Texas Ranger
HBO	44		"Clueless" (1995, Comedy) Alicia Silverstone PG-13				Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		"Kiss the Girls" (1997, Suspense) Morgan Freeman, R				Real Sex 19 (R) (In Stereo)
MAX	60		"Lip Ha Crises" (1964, Comedy) Tim Matheson, R				"Practical Magic" (1998) Sandra Bullock,		Scenes		"Jack Frost" (1997) Christopher Allport, R		"Naked Detect"
SHOW	50		"Hannah and Her Sisters" (1986) Mia Farrow PG-13				"Execution of Justice" (1999, Drama) Tim Daly		Witness		"Kiss of a Stranger" (1997) Mariel Hemingway		Lin's (R)

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Dilbert By Scott Adams

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Propriety is an issue that must be addressed today, but you can still express your individuality in no uncertain terms.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Stress individuality and the willingness to step out in a direction that is all your own at this time. You needn't stick to tradition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – This is a good day for giving greater meaning to routine events and endeavors today. You're on track for completing a major project on schedule.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You can shift your efforts in to high gear today and ensure lasting progress and financial gains. Share your rewards with others.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Clandestine arrangements are not for you today. You'll want to keep everything on the up-and-up. You can reduce personal risk throughout the day. Now go look up the word clandestine.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You know how good you look. Today, others will notice, too; unfortunately, it won't be anyone you really care about. Sorry.

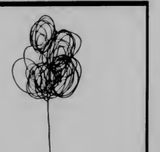
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You may have to bear the burden of a difficult and lasting decision today which will affect many, including friends and family members.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – As long as you do not turn you back on those who are reaching out to you, you'll gain great strength through family ties.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – You've only been scratching the surface lately where your own private issues are concerned. It's time to dig deeper and ever deeper.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Your magnetic appeal will win you a great deal of admiration today, but you may attract more than your share of criticism as well.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Take extra care on stairs today. 'Nuff said.

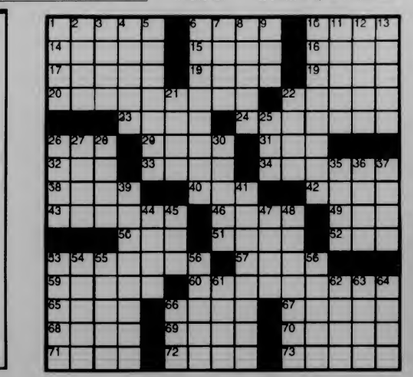


SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – A sure, deliberate, and confident approach is required today. Leave uncertainty and doubt behind at this time because it can only stand in your way.

Quote of the Day

"Tell you I miss you there's no one else I'm dreaming of, and all the lips that've kissed me are no match for your fever touch."

–The Spinanes



Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

Today was one of the best days of my life.

It really started out great.... I woke up once again.... just waking up is a gift.

That first moment when the world and I are unblemished is perfect.

ACROSS
1 Speedy
6 Farm baby
10 Regis Philbin e.g.
14 Type of acid
15 Wind instrument
16 Choir voice
17 Snowbird
18 Inert gas
19 — National Park, Utah
20 Debates
22 Musical show
23 Vex
24 Holes for shoelaces
26 Cowboy Rogers
29 Small notch
31 Actress Jillian
32 Waiter, in Quebec
33 Fence part
34 Knolls
38 Moby Dick's pursuer
40 Pouch
42 Weary
43 Capital of Bavaria
46 Upper parts
48 Ola's opposite
50 Octopus' home
51 Cat
52 Fitting
53 Purplish red
57 Touch
59 Choose a candidate
60 Pet-shop buys
65 Thicken, as blood
66 Texas town
67 Net fabric
68 Secret writing
69 Like — of bricks
70 Rub out
71 Thunderstruck
72 Fender flaw
73 Airplane tracker

DOWN
1 Prince of India
2 China/Russia divider
3 — Pong
4 Bring upon oneself
5 Condemning
6 Joins
7 Aid and —
8 Roomy
9 Bog
10 Filbert
11 Relish-tray item
12 Chubby
13 Hues
21 Director Kazan
22 Gambling city
25 Sweet potato
26 Paper quantity
27 Diamond Head's island
28 Chinese money
30 "Ode on a Grecian Urn" poet
35 1492 ship
36 Let fall
37 Dispatched
39 Divided in two
41 Face
44 Small coin
45 Bonnet, e.g.
47 Dappled
48 Ghost
53 Saudi city
54 Let
55 Hollow rock
56 Slacken off
58 Author Ingalls
61 Computer screen graphic
62 Pleased
63 Actress Lanchester
64 Psychic
66 Compact mass

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

G	A	M	S		C	H	O	S	E		V	O	L	E
A	M	A	H		R	A	C	I	L		R	A	N	A
A	R	I	A		A	N	G	L	E		A	N	G	O
A	F	T	H	O	R		A	D	Y	S	S
			B	A	S	S		M	A	U	R
S	T	R	I	N	G		S	I	N	G	L	E
A	L	A	R	M		R	I	G	H	T		V	E	A
L	I	N	K		P	R	O	B	E		P	L	A	N
O	A	T		P	I	O	N	E	E	R		O	H	O	S
E	D	I	T	I	O	N	S		A	D	M	I	R	E
			A	N	D	Y		P	O	P	E
P	R	O	D	U	C	E		P	A	R	E	N	T	S
E	A	V	E		D	R	A	K	E		I	R	O	N
A	V	E	R	T		E	R	I	E		S	A	M	A
T	E	R	N		S	K	E	W

12-2-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Breakfast

Scrambled Eggs

Blueberry Pancakes

Canadian Bacon

Maypo

Lunch

Sloppy Joe

Inson Stir Fry

Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Vegan Sloppy Joe

Dinner

Chicken with Pecan Dijon Sauce

Beef & Shrimp Lo Mein

Vegetable Lo Mein

Jambalaya (Berk and Wost only)

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam "Alexandria" White
Photo Technition	Pam "Sinai" FitzPatrick
Copy Editor	Sam "Saqqara" Wilkinson
Production Supervisor	Lisa "Faiyum" Metcalf
Production Staff	Brian "Cairo" McDermott Dan "Luxor" McGuinness-Rossi

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

UMass set to slap Mullins muzzle on BU Terriers

Minutemen look to rebound from shaky start with breakout home display

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

A visit from Boston University couldn't have come at a better time for the Massachusetts men's basketball team (1-2). After tripping over Marshall in the home opener Monday night, 65-55, the Minutemen are determined not to let their season fall into a downward spiral like last year. Tip-off is slated for 7 p.m. tonight at the William D. Mullins Center.

Junior guard Jonathan DePina will look to bounce back tonight from a lackluster game against Marshall in which he scored only one point.

The Terriers have yet to nail down a victory in the left column after finishing a dismal 9-18 last year. To make matters worse, B.U. defines the word 'young' with five freshmen and six sophomores incorporated with just two seniors.

"I don't want to see things go down the tube like they did last year at the end of the season," said senior co-captain Mike Babul. "Me and Chris [Kirkland] met with Bruiser the next day and talked about just getting the guys together, go out and turn things around.

"We have three games in five days right now, so I think it's very important to win all three...I think we can win all three, we just have to come ready to play," Babul continued. "Monday night, I think it was just a fluke."

Against the Thundering Herd, senior Monty Mack netted a team-high 22 points to combine with three other players for 50 of the 55 points. Unable to create offensive opportunities off the dribble, the Minutemen were out-shot and out-hustled on the boards, 48-33.

"I didn't see it coming. I didn't think we practiced that bad or anything, it was just that game," said Babul. "Everyone was in slow motion."

In addition to righting themselves back on the fast track, the Minutemen will also have to deal without coach James "Bruiser" Flint. Following the Marshall loss, Flint used an expletive during his post-game radio show and will serve a self-imposed one-game suspension. Assistant coach Geoff Arnold will take over the reins in place of Flint.

"I always tell my players that when they do something wrong, there is a price to pay," Flint said in a press release. "Obviously my language on the radio the other night was inappropriate. I caught it right away and apologized on the air, but after thinking about it and talking it over with (Athletic Director) Bob Marcum, sitting out for a game is the right thing to do."

MEN'S B-BALL

UMASS VS. BU

7 P.M.

91.1 FM-WMUA

REGAN MCKENDRY-PLAY

AARON SAYKIN-COLOR

After the Marshall game, Flint felt the seniors need to set a better precedent in preparing for games.

"I just had a talk with the seniors, you know, there's pressure on them to be ready, if I have to get those guys ready, then, what I am doing with the freshmen?" said Flint.

Senior co-captain Chris Kirkland put up 10 points against the Thundering Herd, but much more is expected from the athletic forward.

"I told him I just didn't think he was being aggressive," said Flint. "He's been shooting like seven, eight times a game... he needs to be shooting like, 10 to 15 times a game.

"He was a better offensive rebounder last year," Flint continued. "That's what I told him, 'you have to be more aggressive, you're going to go get baskets, you have to post up strong and want the ball.'"

In an effort to shake things up, Mack will step into the starting lineup, joining former So. Boston High teammate Jonathan DePina after coming off the bench as the sixth man. Sophomore Shannon Crooks will sit out his first start of the season.

"He keeps getting better, he played better the last night (against Marshall),

Turn to basketball, page 12

UMass guard Shannon Crooks will be one of the key outside threats for the Minutemen tonight against BU.

Minutewomen migrating to Lone Star State

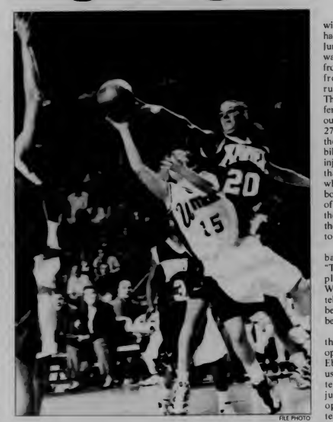
By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Take a look around the University of Massachusetts campus.

You'll see students so bundled up that they can hardly waddle to class. You'll see once-thriving social scenes like the Student Union steps reduced to barren slabs of frozen concrete. You'll see shivering pedestrians skirting the library area altogether, so as to avoid being sucked into the arctic wind tunnel that swirls around the mammoth, lonely structure.

In short, it's time to fly south for the winter.

The UMass women's basketball team will do just that today, as it hops a jet for the sunny climes of Texas to attend this year's Gene Hackerman Invitational Tournament. Rice University will host the four-team melee, which includes not only the Lady Owls and the Minutewomen but also Michigan and New Mexico.



UMass (0-5) heads into the Houston tourney on somewhat of a mission, still searching for its elusive first win. Injuries and inexperience have taken their toll on Coach Ionie O'Brien's troops, which dropped a 60-58 heartbreaker in overtime to the Wildcats of New Hampshire Tuesday night at the William D. Mullins Center.

"Obviously, we're struggling a little bit," O'Brien said. "I think a lot has to do with experience, just knowing what they're doing. Sometimes, I go out there and expect kids to do things but then I realize that they're only freshmen and sophomores. The only thing they've set their minds to is continuing to work hard."

The Hackerman Invitational will be a true test of the Minutewomen's mettle, as the three other squads involved have a combined record of 10-2. UMass has the misfortune of playing host Rice in the first round, as the Lady Owls (3-2) are undefeated within the confines of Autry Court this season. Sixth-year coach Cristy McKinney has molded a tenacious group that relies heavily on guard play to wear down the opposition, and also has a propensity for firing away from international waters: the Lady Owls have attempted a staggering 59 three-pointers in their five games thus far in '99.

But as heavily as Rice leans on its backcourt, it is from the forward position that the Lady Owls get their single biggest producer: senior Kirra Jordan. The 6-foot-1 Lone Star State original has put the "ow" in Owls as far as opposing teams are concerned, pacing the team with 13.6 points and 7.2 rebounds per game. Stopping Jordan and the rest of the Rice front line is a top priority for O'Brien's ensemble, which equates success with keeping the Lady Owls out of the paint entirely.

"Heading down there, we've got to approach each game one at a time," O'Brien said. "Rice is a very athletic team, that loves to penetrate. We'll have to go a lot more with our zone, and try to make them play from the perimeter. If we keep them outside and they end up beating us by knocking down some shots, we'll deal with that."

FILE PHOTO

Junior tri-captain Kathy Coyner will lead the Massachusetts women's basketball team into the Gene Hackerman Invitational this weekend in Houston, TX.

The single biggest stumbling block with which the Maroon and White has had to contend is personnel problems. Junior guard Kelly Van Huisen, who was on the cusp of a second comeback from knee surgery, has been dismissed from the squad for violating team rules. Key offensive cogs Tonia Thomas and Nekole Smith both suffered from flu-like symptoms that seriously limited their action on November 27 against Boston College, after which the two were involved in an automobile accident. Smith sustained a head injury in the wreck that left her at less than 100-percent for the UNH duel, while Thomas aggravated an already bothersome back which kept her out of that game entirely. O'Brien views the return of Texas native Thomas to the lineup as a potentially huge boost to her team's prospects.

"Hopefully, we'll get Tonia Thomas back this weekend," O'Brien said. "This is her chance to go home and play in front of her home people. Whether she's healthy or not, she'll tell me she's ready to go. I think it'll be good for her, but it will definitely be a challenge."

But if there exists a silver lining in the misfortune of Thomas, it is the opportunity it has afforded freshman Ebony Pegues. The 5-foot-6 guard has used her increased floor time to shatter the coaching staff's expectations just as easily as she breaks down opposing defenders: Pegues led the team with seven first-half points and hit a humongous trey in the loss to UNH.

"Anybody who saw the [UNH] game saw Ebony Pegues, and what she's capable of," O'Brien said. "The kid can shoot the ball better than we ever anticipated, so now we've got to find some shots for her."

Pegues isn't the only first year phenom torching the twine for the Maroon and White. Brooklyn product Jennifer Butler has been, quite literally, one of the team's biggest surprises over the first five games: the 6-foot-3 forward / center has averaged 6.8 points and 8.8 boards per contest while leading the team in field goal percentage (.466). Her worth has also become apparent on defense, where she has often drawn the opposing team's most imposing inside threat as her assignment.

"Jennifer Butler is going to be a special player," O'Brien said. "She's five games into her freshman season, and I'm already expecting her to step up and make big play after big play. That's a lot to ask a young kid to do, but I think she's ready for it."

The question remains: will the Maroon and White be ready for the challenges of the Hackerman Invitational? After grappling with Rice on Friday, O'Brien's group will have to contend with either Michigan (5-0) or New Mexico (2-0) in Saturday's tourney closing action. For a team in search of its first win, triumphing in Texas seems like somewhat of a tall order.

"All we can do is continue to work," O'Brien said. "If we can make teams play from the perimeter, and not bang us around inside, I think that will mean success for us. We will end up, at some point, being a good team.

Giants experiencing woes heading into game with Jets

By Neil Best
Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. – Jim Fassel was due back at work Wednesday morning after burying his mother in California yesterday. Should be an interesting day at the office.

Let's see ... His Giants have lost three games in a row to all but fall out of playoff contention. His new quarterback has one touchdown pass and six interceptions. His job security is a matter of public debate. His fullback is out for the season, the latest in a catastrophic series of injuries.

His two best players have taken turns complaining about the offense; one also accused Fassel of stifling the leadership voice of the other.

Oh, almost forgot: It's Jets Week.

Welcome home, coach.

Can Fassel survive this? He often says that his first message to the team in 1997 was about adversity, and that handling it is the test of character. He and his players showed character in 1997 and '98 with big finishes after poor starts. If he wriggles out of this mess and makes the playoffs, he should not seek a mere contract extension, he should ask for a lifetime deal.

We'll have a better idea whether he can pull it off by 4 p.m. Sunday. The loser of the Jets-Giants game easily could lose its last four. In the Giants' case, that would mean an eight-game losing streak to end the season.

If that happens, it might cost Fassel his job. But if he shows any glimmer down the stretch, say two wins for a 7-9 finish, it is likely he will be back for 2000. One presumed alternative, Michigan State's Nick Saban, took the LSU job Tuesday. Another, Marty Schottenheimer, is a retread who will require significant draft-pick compensation to the Kansas City Chiefs because he is still under contract.

More to the point, there is almost no one in the front office or locker room in the mood for starting from scratch with a fourth coaching change in nine years.

That includes defensive end Michael Strahan, whose comments Monday set off the team's latest brushfire and whose relationship with Fassel has been testy at times. Strahan criticized Fassel for asking linebacker Jessie Armstead to watch what he says, but he also said Fassel ought to be given more talent to work with and should be given another season to prove himself.

If you think he needs more tools to get the job done, get him the tools; if he fails with those tools, then he did not get the job done," Strahan said. "I think we all believe in his coaching ability."

Dan Reeves said his four-year stay with the Giants was like a bad marriage between good people. Fassel and the Giants are more like a couple that enjoyed a great first date, but two years later is unsure whether to tie the knot. The relationship is promising enough to merit more time and effort, but eventually there must be a commitment or a breakup.

That time is not here yet. Fassel is 23-19-1, joining Bill Parcells as the two Giants coaches among the last eight with a winning record.

Barring a freefall, Fassel figures to get a short-term extension of a deal that runs through 2000; the organization does not want a lame-duck coach. But if he doesn't make the playoffs next season, it's probably over.

The first step is Sunday, against the coach Fassel has been compared to since he was hired. Parcells gave him his first NFL job in 1991, then left the Giants before that season, so they never worked together and aren't close. A win over Parcells would be a massive boost to Fassel's status and the team's spirit.

So, how should Fassel handle Strahan Wednesday? Ideally, Strahan should clear the air by initiating a conversation and promise to end the vicious circle of rhetoric and play ball. Even if he doesn't, Fassel ought to avoid escalating the situation and simply deliver this message to the team:

There already has been far too much talking around here. It helps no one other than writers and radio hosts. Enough is enough. Shut up and play better.

Armstead was more upset about media criticism of him last week than about what Fassel said, so the only aspect of his game that figures to suffer down the stretch is his quotability.

Even Strahan, who compared Fassel's talk with Armstead to asking a lion to stop roaring, acknowledged nothing will affect Armstead on the field. He had 15 tackles Sunday and figures to be his usual manic self against the Jets.

Armstead could not be reached to discuss Strahan's comments, but Monday he said, "Right now is an easy time for anybody to quit. I think the true side of every individual will be shown in the next few weeks."

Fullback Charles Way will undergo season-ending surgery to repair what the team called an arthritic condition in his right knee. It is potentially career-threatening.

The decline of Way, 26, one of the most respected players in the locker room, has been painful to watch. In 1997, he had 698 rushing yards and 304 receiving. In 1998, he fell to 432 and 131. This season, it was 141 and 59.

Through it all, Way refused to acknowledge his knee was hampering him.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 59 Friday, December 3, 1999

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

'Tis the season for giving.

The Fill-A-Bus campaign is running strong on campus this week. The goal is to engorge this bus with food, toys, and clothes for needy children.

Forum looks at security concerns

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

During an open forum meeting last night, students gathered in the Hasbrouck building to bring to the University of Massachusetts attention that the faculty and staff have failed to address the more universal problems of rape. They said the increased security solutions they have imposed are only short-term solutions to a much bigger problem.

"We called this meeting because there have been a lot of unanswered questions," Student Trustee Seth Avakian said. "We've been trying to make the university more aware of the universal problem of rape."

Student Government Association (SGA) President Jeff Howe agreed that there has been increased security around the campus pond, but he said that there are still other problems that exist, like lack of student security in residence halls.

"The fact is most of the assaults that are happening are done by people who are known by the victim," Howe said. "We need to ensure that every building on this campus is supervised each night."

UMass Police Chief John Luippold agreed security hasn't been constant around residence halls, but they were addressing the concern.

"In terms of student security, we've had problems of no shows, and we've been having conversations with Resident Assistants (RA's) as to whether they'd be willing to fill in for no shows," Luippold said.

In the meantime, Luippold said he's satisfied that students are taking action into their own hands by having an increased awareness.

"It's clear in terms of individuals mobility in terms of reports of suspicious activity has more than doubled, and it reflects the fact that people are calling us more," Luippold said.

The UMPD has reacted by increasing Escort Service vehicles and has begun cutting back further shrubbery and installing lighting and call boxes by the campus pond. In addition, Luippold said Pioneer Valley Transit Association (PVTA) has agreed to assist with the late night calls requesting a "pick up" escort.

In addition to the decrease in residence hall security, Chancellor David K. Scott said students are most concerned because doors are being propped open and strangers are gaining access to buildings they don't live in.

Scott said his solution would be to install video cameras at the entrances of the residence halls. In addition to monitoring who gets into the building, Scott said the cameras would also prevail in monitoring the amount and presence of alcohol that's brought into the residence halls.

"We know that most of the rapes that occur, do so inside the residence halls and in rooms," Scott said. "It is rapes that occur as a result of the use of alcohol and I feel that given what's happening with doors being propped open, this would monitor what's being brought into the residence hall."

According to Scott, ninety percent of violence in residence halls occur because of alcohol. While it may mean a sacrifice of privacy, Scott said it would monitor what and who goes into these residence halls and at this expense, it may be the better choice.

Students like Zatcha Fuentes,

Turn to FORUM page 3

UM student's funeral services set for today

A funeral service for Andrew Brown, a 19-year-old sophomore majoring in engineering who died early Wednesday morning, will be held on Sat. Dec. 4 at 10 a.m. at St. Mary's Church in Jefferson.

No foul play is suspected in the death that has been ruled by the state medical examiner to be caused by asphyxiation. He was found late Tuesday evening in his room in Cashin Residence Hall and was pronounced dead early on Wednesday morning.

Calling hours will be today from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Miles Funeral Home, 1158 Main Street in Holden.

-Sam Wilkinson

Bad driver cited

Angel Santana Sr., a 55-year-old resident of Puffton Village, has been cited as the driver of an automobile that struck two female students Monday night on University Ave.

Santana's car struck Lisa Abrams, a 19-year-old sophomore and Courtnes Spivack, an 18-year-old sophomore on Monday night near the Southwest Horseshoe at 5:40 p.m. After the accident that left the women's belongings strewn across the street, Abrams and Spivack, who live in Coolidge Residence Hall, spent the night in Cooley Dickinson Hospital before being released Tuesday morning.

The University of Massachusetts Police Department, working with the state police accident reconstruction team, cited Santana for negligent operation of a motor vehicle, failure to stop for a pedestrian in a crosswalk, and impeded operation of a motor vehicle.

-Sam Wilkinson

Artisans come together for annual Craft Fair

By Erica Mattison
Collegian Staff

This week the Campus Center concourse is more full than usual as the Craft Center gives professional and student artisans the chance to sell their wares during the 27th annual Holidays Craft Fair.

Beginning Wednesday and running through today at 4 p.m. artisans have been displaying their work on the concourse. The fair provides students some affordable gift options, as well as serving as a fundraiser for the Craft Center.

"It's our one fundraiser for the Student Union Craft Center budget, which includes materials for students, paying the workers and running programs," said Marah MacRost, project coordinator for the fair.

The Craft Center staff consists of 12 undergraduate workers, one graduate assistant and one professional, Paula Hodecker, the center's director of three years.

Artisans who are just starting out, as well as people who have been developing their skills for over a decade, participate in the annual Craft Fair. The artisans represent a span of ages, experience and interests.

One artist, freshman engineering major Nina Brandin, said, "I've been making beaded necklaces since forever." Brandin said she also enjoys doing silver work. Only recently has she started making wire and chain necklaces. She said people are surprised when they see her jewelry. "All my friends say, 'Wow, you made this?'"

Some artisans have to do more

Turn to CRAFT FAIR page 2

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Students anxiously browse the wares ath the annual Craft Fair on the Campus Center Concourse

Budget allocations to affect UMass policies

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

State Senator Stanley Rosenburg and State Representative Ellen Story spoke at yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting about the issue of the state budget.

The budget, which was four months overdue, was finally established earlier this week. According to Rosenburg, one of the major reasons for the delay was the consistent deliberation over funding. Overall the budget saw a 28 million dollar increase, with an 11 million dollar increase added by the House after the original budget.

The University of Massachusetts saw approximately 16.5 million dollars of the increase with about 3 million dollars in an increase to the library funding. "That represents about 4.5% increase," Rosenburg said.

Although funding has already been established for this year, there are potential problems that can already be seen in the planning of the next budget. According to Story, a proposed budget cut for next year for a total of 1.4 billion dollars could affect the allocation of funding for the upcoming budget. Funds that were previously distributed to schools and to special programs could be lost. "The state absolutely cannot afford to lose this revenue," Story said.

She went on to explain that this tax cut would be detrimental to area communities and especially to this area which she said, was, "one of the most dependent districts on revenue from the state."

Chancellor David K. Scott explained that the distribution of the new funds from the budget included three million dollars to the LRM library budget, and six million dollars for salary increases and collective bargaining increases. "We are very fortunate that the increase includes collective bargaining increases," Scott said.

Although the budget has increased this year, Scott explained that funding would still remain tight this year due to other monetary commitments-Areas such as funding for merit scholarships and for financial aid would still require a portion of the current budget. Because not all of the money is secure Scott explained, "We have to be a little bit cautious about making too many commitments."

He explained that the administration plans upon managing the current money within the budget by trying not to extend monetary resources too far and not making any commitments into the next year. "Monies will be allocated on a non-reoccurring basis." Scott said.

In addition to the issue of budget, the Faculty Senate also discussed the establishment of an Intercampus Graduate School of Marine Sciences and Technology. The senate voted down this school, which was originally proposed on Sept. 29.

After much research about the issue by sub-committee of the Faculty Senate, it was deduced that proposal was not cost excessive, had an adverse impact upon existing programs, and inappropriate provisions to ensure a sound academic program. The senate recommended that the marine school be recast in a lead campus such as the UMass Boston or Dartmouth where resources can still be available to all University students.

Katz adresses male violence through our cultural context

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

The statistics behind the body of a Barbie doll are well-known. Many feminists have touted the fact that if Barbie were enlarged to the size of a real woman, her waist would be so small that it would be physically impossible to contain all of a woman's organs. Yet few people have paid any attention to the changing shape of GI Joe dolls. In Tough Guise: Violence, Media and the Crisis of Masculinity, a film shown last night in Thompson Hall, UMass alum Jackson Katz explained that, over the past 30 years, the biceps of a GI Joe doll have doubled. A human GI Joe would have biceps over 28" in diameter – a full 8" larger than home-run record-breaker Mark McGwire's.

Tough Guise, narrated by Katz and produced by University of Massachusetts Communications Professor Sut Jhally, explores the tough, violent, larger-than-life image that men are expected to live up to. The media's constant representation of this image, Katz explained, is partially responsible for the inordinate amount of violence perpetrated by men.

"85 percent of murderers are male," Katz states in the film. "Men are responsible for 90 percent of violent assaults. 95 percent of violent household assaults are perpetrated by men. 95 percent of dating violence is perpetrated by men. Men commit 85 to 95 percent of child sexual abuse. Calling attention to the way masculinity is connected to violence is not anti-male – it's just reality.

"Bringing attention to this," he continued, "will help men as well as women. Men have a stake in dealing with these problems, because they are victims as well as perpetrators."

Katz stated that he had worked with thousands of men in places like military barracks and juvenile detention centers, and saw that men used "violent masculinity" as a defense mechanism. "This comes with a cost - major damage to the human psyche. It's time to pull back the curtain on tough-guy posing."

"Pull back the curtain" was a reference to the Wizard of Oz – an ordinary man who used machines to create a frightening, overpowering appearance, but was eventually stripped of his guise when the curtain hiding him was opened. Katz compared this curtain to the violent persona men use to assert themselves.

"Early on in life, you learn you have to take on a tough guise," he said. "From watching television and movies, you see that violence isn't a deviation as much as an accepted part of masculinity."

He linked these images – such as the afore-mentioned hulking GI Joe doll – to such acts of violence as the recent rash of school shootings.

"It's tempting to look at Columbine, and see the killers as just sick individuals," he said. "But they were hullied by the jock culture that celebrates masculinity. And guns were the great equalizer. People have blamed the violence on video games, movies, and even Marilyn Manson, but [the real reason] lies in the cultural message that manhood is constructed through violence."

In the film, Katz linked cultural messages to violence against women, using examples like slasher films.

"In slasher films, violence is not just violence, it's sexy violence," he said. Scenes were shown from films like Scream, where nubile young women flee in terror from killers in a state of undress.

At the end of the film, Katz left a message of hope, praising movies like The Full Monty and Good Will Hunting, where positive male characters were allowed to show their emotions.

Trade debate has changed

By Steven Pearlstein
The Washington Post

SEATTLE – If there is any clear message coming through the clouds of tear gas and the broken glass in Seattle this week, it is that the terms of debate about free trade have changed in the United States.

No longer, in fact, is it a debate about trade at all but rather about globalization, a process that many now understand affects not only traditional economic factors such as jobs and incomes, but also has an impact on the food we eat, the air we breath, the quality of medical care and the social and cultural milieu in which we live.

The trade debate, once the province of a tight group of technocrats, business leaders, trade lawyers and academics, has now spilled out onto the streets and into the living rooms of America. It takes in farmers and feminists, defenders of butterflies and Tibetan monks, right-wing nationalists and left-wing anarchists

It also became conceivable that the world's political architecture – up to now built around the sovereignty of the nation state – may have to be reworked to provide for a more global economic governance system that is open and democratic enough to gain legitimacy in the eyes of voters around the world.

In many ways, those were the subtexts in President Clinton's remarks here Wednesday afternoon to trade ministers from around the world. The ministers and their minions came to begin a complex process of horse-trading over tariffs and trade barriers, subsidies and anti-dumping laws – things corporations worry about. But the President, no doubt mindful both of the protests in the streets and the votes in next year's elections, rattled their water glasses by telling them their deliberations

Turn to TRADE page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 31	HIGH: 52 LOW: 35	HIGH: 53 LOW: 33

SOURCE: WMUA-FM

Quintessentially Queer

The Quintessentially Queer Cafe was a huge success, boasting performers in areas like music, acting, and even slam poetry. Read about it on the GLBT Issues page.

PAGE 2

Dave Matthews gets richer

The latest five DMB album hits stores, along with the Fiona Apple's new offering and a collection of rarities from Life of Agony. Arts: Because no one should be alone on a Friday night.

PAGE 6

Win one for the Bruiser

UMass men's basketball pulled up for a convincing 70-51 win over B.U. last night. Check out page 10 for details.

PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
GLBT Issues 5
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Andrea M. Peers • Photos by Pam Fitzpatrick

What do you think about student government disposing of appointed seats in the SGA?

"I'm just kind of indifferent to it all. I don't really see it being an issue. I don't know that much about it."

Dave Finger
Sophomore
Political Science

"I'm not really sure. I'm new to the school. I think that's fine I guess. I mean, I think that's what most universities do anyway."

Vonny Darsono
Junior
Undeclared

"I think that's good. The student body should decide who is representing us."

Adam Benditsky
Junior
Social Law/Political Economy

"I don't know. It probably wouldn't be good. They would probably elect their friends."

Christina Ciampolillo
Sophomore
English

"I think that it's fair. Everyone gets a shot at the position, and it would really allow people to see who could do a better job."

Aisha Khapoya
Junior
Economics

"To be honest, I don't even really know what the student government does to be honest. They don't really affect my life anyway."

Damon Maulucci
Senior
Bachelor Degree in Individual Concentration craft fair

continued from page 1

than cross the bridge from Northampton to come to the fair at UMass. Laurie Bolotin comes all the way from Rockingham, Vt., to sell her pressed and dried flower arrangements in the Campus Center.

"I've come to this craft fair for every year I've been doing this. I like to support the Craft Center," she said.

For 15 years, she and her husband have been maintaining flower gardens and cutting and drying the flowers to make wreaths, as well as what Bolotin really "window gardens." These glass shapes contain dried flowers and "just rainbows in the room like crystals," said Bolotin.

Some artisans use the Craft Fair to promote causes. UMass astronomy professor Judy Young combines her art with her love for astronomy to raise money for the Sunwheel. Started in 1992 her project involves placing large stones in a circle to mark the direction of the rising and setting sun on the solstices and equinoxes, she said.

The project requires the purchase and installation of stones onto an area of land south of Alumni Stadium. The proceeds from Young's handmade jewelry, tote bags, tee shirts, sweatshirts and nature photographs will go toward the Sunwheel. Expected to be completed in August 2000, the site is already being used by college students and elementary schools, said Young.

The Craft Fair is a good chance for those interested in business to get some experience. Business major Carly Smith, who has only been crocheting for four months, decided to capitalize on the bitter New England winter by making ear warmers.

"I knew that people's ears would be cold in the winter," she said. "I've been excited [about the fair] since I heard about it." Smith is saving her earnings so that she can put them toward the cafe/thrift store that she plans on opening one day.

Many at the fair are inspired by the work of other artists. One Craft Center staff member, sophomore Leith MacDonald, said, "I'm definitely going to make stuff next year."

Customers enjoy the wide array of items that are available to them, including clothing, stained glass, jewelry, pottery and incense. Like many others, sophomore English and Women's Studies major, Aura Spivak, visited the fair for the first time this year. "I bought some really beautiful stained glass work and some unique pieces of pottery." As someone who has "worked with both glass and clay," she can tell quality artwork when she sees it.

This is the first year that the Craft Center has had to pay for using the Campus Center space during the fair. Due to the Student Government Association's reduction in funds allocated to the Student Union Campus Center Commission, the Commission can no longer allow organizations to set up tables for free; consequently, the Craft Center was forced to raise the fee artisans pay for tables, according to MacRost. This increase accounts for the small number of participating artisans. There are only 15 artisans this year, a decrease from past years, said MacRost. The Craft Center will be looking for cheaper locations for future fairs.

Craft Center staff encourages everyone to visit the center. "It's a free membership so people should come check it out," said Marleen Kilcoyne, who started working at the Craft Center this fall.

trade

continued from page 1

were too secretive and too narrow.

For years, Clinton and other advocates of free trade have figured they could win the debate simply by pressing over and over again the economist's mantra that increased trade results in better jobs for workers and more choice for consumers. End of story. But it is not the end.

For it turns out people also care about the loss of the corner bookstore and the wholesomeness of their food and that the soccer ball that seems so cheap at the Sports Authority may have been made by a 10-year-old halfway around the world. Nor, as a matter of principle, do many take kindly to the notion that a global trade authority they never heard of apparently has the power to penalize them for a gasoline emission standard passed by their elected legislators.

With so many earnest young protesters clashing with riot police over these issues, some commentatorss were quick to draw parallel to the anti-war demonstrations at the 1968 Democratic National Convention. But Tom Hayden, one of the student leaders from '68, was quick to make a distinction. "What we had was maybe one or two issues we were dealing with," Hayden told 5,000 protestors at a People's Gala Munday night. "You here, you're dealing with everything. That's how big this globalization thing is."

And even business leaders, emerging from their daily strategy session at the Washington Athletic Club, were quick to acknowledge that the events in Seattle had crystallized a growing sense of unease among Americans about globalization.

ALISSA TRIES TO READ THE COLLEGIAN FOR FUN. KNOW WHY? SHE'S 21!!!

The University of Massachusetts'

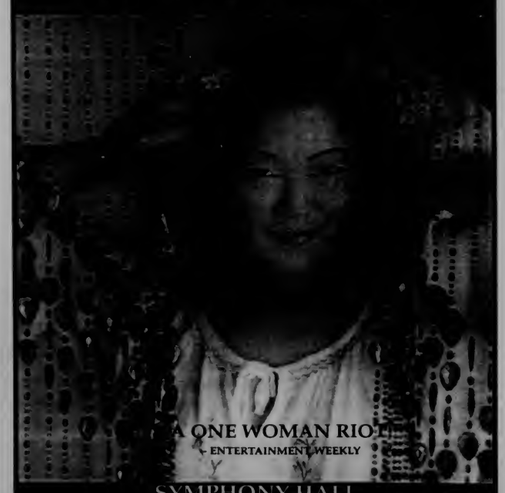
Something Every Friday

PRESENTS

MASTER LEE

Comedian "Master Lee"

Comedian "Master Lee" has appeared on Late Night with Conan O'Brien; The Apollo Comedy Hour; MTV; and Caroline's Comedy Hour. Master Lee has toured through four continents over the past 13 years imparting his "Ninja Ways"on audiences young and old.



Bluewall Cafe
Friday Dec.3...8pm

The Film : "The Astronaut's Wife" will follow the show. Also shown on Saturday in the Emerson Classroom (SW) at 7pm, and Sunday in the Campus Center Auditorium at 8pm.

Visit us on the Web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm

This [illegible] made possible by a grant from the Activity Service Fee Board allocated through the Undergraduate Student Affairs

MARGARET CHO
IN
"I'M THE ONE THAT I WANT"

A ONE WOMAN RIOT
ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY

SYMPHONY HALL
Court Street Springfield
Sat. December 11th 8 pm
$5.00 DISCOUNT W COLLEGE ID
Tickets on sale at the Box Office and all TicketMaster outlets or charge by phone at (413) 788-7055 or (413) 733-2500.

BECKY REDDICK/ COLLEGIAN

Boston, watch out.

After facing off against our Minutemen-on-Ice, Boston University hockey players will have to come home and face these guys.

Educational Goals Unmet a Decade Later

By Kenneth J. Cooper
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The nation has not met any of the eight educational goals for the year 2000 set a decade ago by President Bush and the governors of all 50 states, although measurable progress has been made toward the goals pertaining to preschoolers and student achievement in math and reading, a national panel announced yesterday.

The National Education Goals Panel's final report before the 2000 deadline showed more children were "ready to learn" – healthier and better prepared through preschool or parental reading – when they entered kindergarten. Students also demonstrated higher math proficiency, particularly in elementary and middle school, and a slight improvement in reading proficiency in middle school.

In the case of two goals, teacher quality and school safety, the panel reported the nation has actually gone backwards. The percentage of teachers holding a college degree in the main subject they teach dropped from 66 percent to 63 percent, and there was a significant increase in student use of illicit drugs, from 24 percent to 37 percent in the 10th grade.

Considerable political fanfare accompanied the setting of the education goals a decade ago. Growing out of a 1989 education summit at the University of Virginia, the six original goals were formally announced by Bush in his 1990 State of the Union address and ratified by the National Governors' Association a month later.

Yesterday's press conference announcing the disappointing results of the ten-year effort was more subdued. Overall, the nation showed improvements on 12 of 27 statistical indicators that the panel has tracked and declines on 5 others, though in many cases the information used in yesterday's report was several years old. There was insufficient information to tell how the nation fared on the other measures at all, reflecting shortcomings in data gathering that panel members urged be addressed.

In addition to grading the entire nation, the report assessed how well the states have done in striving to reach the goals. A dozen states were recognized for making the most progress, including five – Colorado, Connecticut, Kentucky, North Carolina and South Carolina – that did better on nearly half the 27 indicators. Maryland was cited for having 95 percent of its students finish high school, the highest percentage in the country and up from 87 percent when the decade began.

Surprisingly, nearly a third of the states came close to reaching part of what has been considered the toughest goal, making the nation's students "first in the world" in math and science. Eighth graders in 15 states scored better in science than their peers from every other nation tested except the city-state of Singapore.

The overall failure of the national effort to achieve the education goals came as no surprise, partly because they were widely regarded as overly ambitious in the first place.

A new deadline for meeting the goals has not been set although Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson (R) – the only sitting governor who was involved in setting the original goals – suggested yesterday that every school district should attain them by 2010.

Under attack, Buddhism is weakening

By Dele Olojede
Newsday

LHASA, Tibet – In the shadow of the Potala Palace, about 40 youngsters are crammed into math class at Lhasa Middle School, learning logarithms by rote. The students are Tibetan, the teacher Chinese, and so, by choice, is the language of instruction.

While the territory is officially bilingual, most Tibetans know that fluency in Chinese is a requirement for progress in their once-isolated mountain kingdom, whose spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama, has been in exile for 40 years.

The rise of the Chinese language in Tibet is merely one of many indications of how Tibetans and their distinct culture are being slowly digested by China. And contrary to most depictions of a peaceable people still crushed under the jackboots of the People's Liberation Army, nowadays the Chinese rely far less on repression than on the successful lure of cold cash.

Through mass education, burgeoning commerce, a growing Chinese migration into the Tibetan plateau, the concerted undermining of the religious foundation of traditional Tibet, and large infusions of money, China is permanently altering the region. For the Dalai Lama and his exile government, Tibet may already be lost.

Mao Tse-tung's peasant army marched on Lhasa in 1950, quickly effecting the "peaceful liberation" of Tibet from Tibetans, but promising broad autonomy and preservation of the country's culture and political system. But by 1959, Tibetans, chafing under Chinese occupation, had mounted a rebellion that was quickly crushed.

The Dalai Lama, Tibet's god-king, has spent the past four decades nominally based in northern India, a kindly but rootless figure who roams the world, separated from his people and the institutions on which his whole being depends.

Convinced that time is on their side, the Chinese appear altogether disinclined to negotiate with the 67-year-old Dalai Lama, despite a public pledge by President Jiang Zemin last year during President Clinton's state visit to China. On the contrary, Chinese officials have lately reverted to adding to their preconditions whenever the Dalai Lama demonstrates readiness to accept previous ones. Officials now insist, for instance, that not only must the Dalai Lama recognize Chinese sovereignty over Tibet, he must recognize it over Taiwan as well."

BECKY REDDICK/ COLLEGIAN

Faster than the speed of light.

Bailey puts on the speed impressing all who observed yesterday at the Sawmill Equestrian Center.

forum

continued from page 1

advocate of Student Center for Education and Resource and Advocacy, said she isn't in favor of video surveillance and that it would mean a violation of her privacy.

"There's no reason why the residents should allow cameras to take pictures of our private moments," Kromer said. "My concern is what else are they going to use this for besides security."

Scott said these options are still being discussed, and in the meantime students should continue to display energy and involvement.

"What happened last night [Jackson Katz] through the efforts of SGA, has brought the momentum of the campus together in a way that is unprecedented," Scott said. "We need to keep up this energy and tell faculty and students what we value and I believe there is an opportunity here to do something wonderful."

Read Collegian News because we won't riot over some WTO meeting

JAMAICA Spring Break

From $419

As seen on MTV

ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY.
It's that time of year when thousands of students come to Jamaica and feel all right—for an unbelievable price.

YOUR SPRING BREAK PACKAGE INCLUDES

- Round-trip airfare
- 7 nights hotel accommodations
- Round-trip airport & hotel transfers
- Free welcome beach & evening parties
- Free admission to night clubs
- Discounts on restaurants, water sports & side excursions
- Packages available to Negril and Montego Bay
- Professional on-site tour reps
- Complete weekly activities program offering optional sunset cruise, booze cruise, toga party & more
- Free bonus party pack

Sun Splash Tours 1•800•426•7710 Student Travel Services 1•800•648•4849

Price is per person based on quad occupancy, from select departure cities. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $65) and $12 handling charge additional. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/99. Peak week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week

Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends

RGIS Inventory Specialists

Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS

Springfield:	413-731-6910
Worcester:	508-366-8847
Boston:	617-484-1788
North of Boston:	978-777-2253
South of Boston:	508-821-5591
Plymouth:	508-833-1145
Route 3 South:	781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast:	603-926-9813

Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9

Equal Opportunity Employer

FREE DELIVERY!

PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S

331 Russell Street, Hadley

HOURS OF OPERATION:
Mon - Wed 11am - 1am,
Thurs & Sun 11am - 2am,
Fri & Sat 11am - 3am

586-7272

Now Accepting:

OCMP The Off Campus Meal Plan

MasterCard VISA

3 LARGE 1 TOPPING $19.99

1 LARGE CHEESE PIZZA $6.99
1 LARGE 1 TOPPING $7.99
2 LARGE 1 TOPPING $13.99

The Asian American Students association at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst presents...

Cultural Fair:
A Journey Through Asia

Friday December 3, 1999
Campus Center Auditorium UMass

1:00 - 3:30 pm Exhibits
4:00 - 6:00* Guest Speakers featuring Sucheta Mazumdar and Gary Okihiro
6:30 - 8:30 Exhibits Re-open
9:30 - 1am Party

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Bashful boy goes to Hooters

"Ryan Benharris, you're such a nice boy." Ugh, the words that were spewed from a co-worker's mouth during my sophomore year in high school ring in my ear the same way the visual picture of my last toilet flushing good-bye to the goldfish I had when I was five just lingers around. You see, I'm stricken with a horrible disease: I'm a nice guy. I can't be mean to anyone or anything. Oh sure, you read my columns and see me being cynical towards Pokemon and Britney Spears. However, the truth is that I don't have a mean bone in my body, and I suffer for it. Nice guys out there, give me an Amen on this one.

You'd think that being a nice guy would be an extremely positive attribute; however, through my twenty-year-long life of sucking up and trying to please everyone, there's something that I've noticed. Women hate nice guys. You'd think the exact opposite would be true. You'd think that the nicer the guy, the better their shot with the women. Guess what, my loyal readers (I like to call you my "posse" because that's what I.L. Cool J would do). You thought wrong! Being a nice guy is a curse. The physical and psychological inability to say "no" to anything and anyone has had me doing ridiculous things that include late nights at work, and especially in high school, long drives out of my way. I try to convince myself that I really don't want to say no to people, and that I'm not letting anyone take advantage of me. The truth is that I try not to allow anyone to take advantage of my niceness, and I know where to draw the line between who's a friend and who was just looking for a free bag of popcorn when I worked at the movie theater.

Now, where am I going with all this whining about niceness? I have a story to tell you. (Yeah, I know... what else is new?) One thing that goes along with my nice-guy presentation is my absolute inability to have a conversation about any "adult" topics. You'd know what I mean, if you could just see how red I turn. My friend Becky has a new game she likes to play, where she says a word that could make any junior high class giggle, and watch how red I turn. It's very sad and I think I need help.

Ryan Benharris

My brother on the other hand, has been created exactly opposite from me. He couldn't care less what the conversation is about, and I think he actually won some sort of contest where you listen to people say the most embarrassing things ever, and if you don't turn red, you're the man! I, being the idiot that I am, figured that the funniest gift ever for my brother would be a gift certificate to his favorite restaurant, Hooters.

Living a sad and sheltered life, I've never been to Hooters or a strip club, a porn shack or anything of the sort. I'm pretty sure that I would feel guilty in a place like that, starring at women that I don't know, and making them feel like they're nothing but a pair of breasts. I'm just completely against that, because I don't want to make anyone else feel uncomfortable. However, I thought, "Hey, I'm a big boy, I know what goes on at Hooters. I'll just get the gift certificates and get out of there before I have a chance to embarrass myself." Again, I thought wrong.

Upon arriving at the "family restaurant," I was greeted by a guy in a football jersey who asked if he could help me. I told him I need gift certificates, so he took my money, and walked in the back to get them for me. A minute after he left, this gorgeous blonde girl named Alisha, walked up to me. I thought that she'd just ask me if I needed help, so I'd tell her I was all set, and that'd be the end. Wrong again, posse!

The first thing she does, is ask if I'm all set, and I tell her that some guy was already getting me gift certificates. Figuring she'd just say OK and walk away, I was completely thrown off by what she said next. "It's cold outside huh?" I responded with, "Uh, actually it's not that bad." Alisha then makes a body movement that simply cannot be mimicked in print and says, "Well, it is when you're wearing this." If you're like me, and have never been to Hooters, I'll just explain that the women wear shorts that don't make it to their thighs, and shirts that just cover up the necessary equipment to legally make the place a restaurant, and not a nudie bar. Completely flabbergasted (and at this time, I think I was so red that I was waiting for her to ask how I managed to get sun burned in November) I realize that she could tell how uncomfortable I was.

I had immediately assumed I would look like a pervert if I went to Hooters alone anyway, but I figured it wouldn't be that bad, if I was only buying gift certificates. However, when she had lost me completely and began to utter something about the significance of a Christmas tree, I could only sputter sentence fragments, and wonder if the woman was actually hitting on me or just doing her job. Finally, the guy with the football jersey returned, and took me out of my world of embarrassment by pronouncing, "Hey boss, I got ya' gift certificates." What I said to Alisha when I was leaving was the icing on the cake.

Still muttering fragments and red enough to be the poster child for Cravola, and with no idea what to say, I walked out the door, and I said "thank you" to her, I got in the car, and much like Chris Farley in Black Sheep, I screamed, "What the hell was that all about! Thank you? What did I thank her for?" I'm such a complete idiot!

I think the moral of the story is, don't go where you're not used to being. To Alisha, the hooters girl: I think I know what to thank you for. Thank you for showing me where my limit as a nice guy ends, and my ability to turn red as a beet begins. Along with not going where you're not used to being, is the whole "judging my life as a nice guy" thing. Even though being nice has tons of benefits, it has its doubts as well. Although, for my posse, you don't know that I'm a nice guy. All you have to judge me is by this picture. "For all you know, I could be killing baby sheep in my room."

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

Glamour girls on TV are out of my reach

Being the product of a divorced marriage, I have the privilege, or misfortune, of having two Thanksgivings. I have the usually quiet, yet relaxing meal with the small family on my mother's side, and then I get the dessert and the mayhem that is my father's family (which currently includes 87 percent of Boston's Italian population and more little kids that I can name). No matter which side of the family I'm with, I always get the barrage of usual questions from the aunts, uncles and cousins that enjoy nothing more than to hear my unusual college gossip (or lack thereof).

Dana Oppedisano

Every year, the conversation always turns to the same topic: "Dana, tell us about your girlfriend." Normally this line of questioning wouldn't bother me at all, except for the small detail that I don't have a girlfriend. "What? A good looking guy like you?" and "How can that be? What's wrong with the girls out in Amherst?" are the typical responses, and the truth is, maybe I would be flattered by all this if it wasn't coming from 40 year-old-women who couldn't legally be attracted to me. The bottom line is that I always end up home on Thanksgiving night asking myself some of the same questions, and for every year that I can't sound off about how I've finally found the great love of my life, it hurts that much more.

This year, following the annual "Search for Dana's lovelife," I decided to wallow in the previous night's episodes of "Dawson's Creek" and "Roswell," which I was forced to binge due to a slight case of being drunk. I got about fifteen minutes into my videotape when I had a sort of revelation, a discovery that had previously escaped me altogether. Shows like "Dawson's Creek," or any other program that airs on the WB or Fox, and is aimed toward teenagers and college students like myself, is completely alienating the way that I look at women. Every week I am forced to watch these seemingly "perfect" female characters, presented in such a manner that some of these characters have actually become my vision of the ideal woman. You see, what makes these shows so successful is the fact that although fictitious, they are somewhat reality-based. "90210" and "Dawson" get high ratings because the viewers they are aimed at have at one time, or are currently experiencing, a lot of what these characters are experiencing.

Here I am, this poor single guy, looking at these perfect girls on these shows, hoping that maybe I can actually meet someone like this in real life. It's crazy, because while some of you out there might actually be a lot like some of these characters, my chances of finding you are about the same as my chances of waking up completely fluent in Spanish tomorrow. Nevertheless, "I'm not interested in her" or "she's nothing special" is my casual way of telling myself that the search for the girl on my TV set continues...

Let me give you an example, and I'll use "Dawson's Creek" because it seems to have surpassed my old favorites like "90210" and the now (thank the Lord!) ended "Melrose Place" as my premier nighttime soap. Take Katie Holmes' character, Joey Potter, who for the most part, is my ideal girl. Joey, a junior in high school, is unlike any girl that I have ever met during my short lifetime. Incredibly intelligent, she won the only scholarship in her school for scoring high on the PSATs (while at the same time turning down a chance to see a copy of the test beforehand) and she studies constantly. Not that my perfect girl is a brain or anything, but it's a hell of a lot better than being a mindless airhead who only follows the crowd and has to ask her friends' permission for every little thing. She is motivated, to the point that she doesn't have much time for anything between school and work (which she is forced to do constantly to help support her sister and newborn niece), and she is so loyal to this geek Dawson that it sickens me. She is head-over-heels in love with this guy who is so caught up in his little director dream that, although every episode has to contain a yawn-inducing scene where the two discuss their feelings for each other but resolve nothing, he never acts on this endless love.

She's funny, witty and the girl is gorgeous, but not in the "turn every head in the room" kind of way. She's hot in the "girl next door" sense, where you really have to look at her, into her eyes, to appreciate her beauty.

Shut up, I know it's corny, but there's more. In recent episodes of "Dawson," we have seen New York turbo slut Jenn propose to Pacey a strictly sexual relationship. Mind you, as the guy who seduced his incredibly hot teacher from the first season (Has anyone ever had a teacher like that?) and being the only male character on the show who is not scared to death of sex, he is intrigued by this idea. So I ask, does anyone know a girl like that? Even if you do have a seemingly only physical relationship with someone, how long does that last before the "why don't you call me?" or "let's go see a movie" talk starts up? Jenn, mind you, wants none of that, and she only wants sex. Pretty realistic, huh? Hot, sexy, head cheerleaders always pick the class failure who requests weekend shifts at the video store to be their sex slave. If that were the case, I'd be scanning new releases at Blockbuster for the rest of the semester.

Or let's not forget about Eve, the incredibly hot orphan on the run who happened upon our little Spielberg on a bus trip and basically stalked him for the next few episodes. This girl is the total package, from head to toe, and our Romeo over there wants to know what's in her soul, while she only wants to bracer yourself... sex! Oh yeah, last time I hopped off the Greyhound at South Station, I had the same problem with some psycho beast from out west somewhere. I don't remember where, I was too busy trying all casts to avoid her sexual advances toward me. By the way, if and when Dawson ever gets laid, it has to be in the series finale, due to the fact that the United States will undergo a record of 50 million simultaneous heart attacks as a result of sudden shock.

Over on "90210", the guys take turns falling in love with every female member of the cast and Alyssa Milano has to cast spells to make guys fall in love with her on "Charmed." The fact is that none of these girls or situations actually exists, and for me to hang on to my false hope of ever finding someone like them is pointless. In my high school, if you told a girl that you wanted to ask her friend out, there would be fliers hanging around the school advertising it by lunch period. However, at Roswell High, the incredibly cute girl who knows that you're an alien will take that little secret to the grave. I just can't figure it out. Maybe I'm tuning in every week because these shows depict a life that I could only dream of living. Lord knows if I lived in Capeside with resident tools Dawson and Pacey, I'd be the biggest pimp in town. So what can I possibly do?

I could just stop watching television at night, but what else could occupy my free time? Homework? I can always hope that the old lady who lives next door has a granddaughter who was forced to move to Boston for being a nympho and an underage porn star. Or maybe that long-time best friend who I have been platonically sleeping in the same bed with since I was five will suddenly turn frisky. Oh yeah, I forgot, this isn't a television show, and very rarely do I get a happy ending. So, I'll just keep tuning in, and I'll start being more open-minded with the girls that I meet. There is no real-life Joey just waiting out there for me, so I've got to lower my standards and be more realistic... there's got to be a Donna from "90210" on this campus somewhere.

Dana Oppedisano is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

World AIDS Day, nothing to celebrate

To the editor:

On my way to lunch the other day, I read something in the Collegian that stated, "Celebrate World AIDS Day." Celebrate?! I was immediately incensed at the lack of sensitivity and comprehension of what AIDS awareness is. Actually, I was unable to believe that as supposedly conscientious journalists, you could even make such an inappropriate choice of words. Should we also celebrate our current state of Rape Awareness?

As a gay man, having lived through what is now historically referred to by the current generation as "the Epidemic," it is unconscionable for me to celebrate AIDS. I am aware of it every day of my life; during the 1980s I lost almost half of the people I had known to the terrible disease. It left every few of us in my age bracket untouched. We lived day to day, watching and waiting; it was like living on the edge of a precipice, with the edge slowly crumbling away. For those of us with any sense of Gay History, it reminds us that Stonewall didn't keep Ronald Reagan from refusing to fund AIDS research and that the mantra of the times was the "Gay Cancer" was what they deserved.

On this day, there is much cause for introspection, hope and compassion and we remember those we have lost. We support those currently suffering, their families and friends, and dry to enlighten those that don't understand. I would suggest that if you were really serious about journalism, you'd choose your words more carefully.

David Fortuna
Theatre Department

Come on down to the Collegian before it's too late! Write for Ed/Op!

I'm goin' home again

One of the best ways to get someone to read a column is to make it timely. Therefore, since we just came back from Thanksgiving break, I believe it is the appropriate time to discuss one of the strangest phenomenon of college life: going home.

First semester freshman year, going home was very exciting. We still had a little touch of homesickness and enjoyed going home to our own beds, showers without sandals and most of all, our friends. It was interesting to see how everyone else was doing at their respective colleges, which girls had gained the "freshman fifteen" and whether any of their high school were still dating.

Our parents missed us still. Mom would make us our favorite meals when we came home and our grandparents and relatives all wanted to hear how college was. We were like war heroes returning from battle.

Freshmen... be forewarned. It all changes. Going home will never be the same. Your parents miss you, but not nearly as much. They have gotten used to you not being home, so your bedroom is now either closed up and dusty or used as a place to do the ironing. Your relatives ask how school is, but not with nearly as much interest. Everyone is settled into their own lives at their colleges, so seeing your friends is not nearly as exciting.

Laura Siciliano

The most interesting part of going home, however, is seeing everyone from high school. I have come to the conclusion that there are specific rules governing seeing people you went to high school with when you go home.

Rule #1: Hug everyone. Does anyone else notice that? People you never talked to in high school are suddenly running up, saying, "Oh my god! How have you been?!" I call it prom syndrome. Remember your senior prom? At the prom, all of the girls hugged each other and complimented their dresses - even dresses that were ugly on girls they didn't like. Seeing each other when you go home for the weekend or for break is like the prom in that sense. It is a whole bunch of people gathered together acting excessively fake.

Rule #2: Look good. I admit it. I hemmed and hawed over my outfit until the last minute before I went out to see my friends. The guys all stand up as tall as possible. Girls try for the perfect outfit, hair and makeup. The goal is to look as sophisticated as possible, as if going away to college changes us from wearing jeans and shopping at Old Navy to having a taste for Donna Karan and Bebe.

Rule #3: Brag, brag, brag. This is the subtlest plot of all. It is the one that we might not even know we are using. For instance, when one of our friends says that they are planning on going abroad next year, you quickly respond that you also are planning on seeing each continent. If they say their classes are hard, you say yours are killing you. The competition to be the most popular person in high school has become the competition to be the person who has the best college experience.

Rule #4: Change. I am not quite sure if this is something that we are exactly aware of, except when we see it in others. The most studious, conservative student sometimes becomes the campus drunk. That guy who was always 5'5" is suddenly over 6' tall. Most noticeably, the world we knew and the friendships we had just a few years before are acutely different. The high school that we were kings of is now ruled by a totally new different group of kids: kids who are looking decidedly younger than we did when we were in high school.

Going home is like entering an alternate universe. You feel as if you are trapped between two worlds. You are with your old friends, but your new friends, the people who know you and what you did last weekend are not around. Your room at home is still yours, but your clothing is in a bag and the shelves look kind of empty. Symbolism is eerily present – your home is still your home, but you have clearly moved on and away. That part of going home does not change over the years, and in fact, I predict will become greater and more apparent as time passes.

Laura Siciliano is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor · Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor · Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager · Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor · Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor · Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor · Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor · Elana Premack News Editor · Marc Metnechel Finance Manager · Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor · Kara Stokes Photography Editor · Ion Randall Distribution Manager · Alan Fortenese Graphics/Business Advisor
Jake Lillien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor · Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor · Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager · Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor · Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor · Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor · Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Five college students perform in quintessentially queer café

By David Lambert
Collegian Staff

"Those who didn't come from the rest of the campus missed out," said one satisfied audience member. I'd go so far as to modify that to "Those who didn't come should kick themselves, swiftly, in the rear end, because the Quintessentially Queer Café was, if not the single best, then the liveliest and most diverse coffeehouse I've attended this year."

With the opening performance of local slam poet and UMass alum Danielle Carriveau (the evening's Mistress of Ceremonies), I was ready to march straight home and type my review. I at first felt it did the café an injustice to open with her because nothing later in the show could possibly compare. There was in her performance all the abrupt joy and slight disappointment of a premature ejaculation. It was all to my surprise when the show, however, kept up the momentum and this performance was only one of many climactic moments to come. Carriveau's poetry was first rate sensual slam; one of my favorite pieces was an exploration of the religious dimensions of sexuality, a poem that contrasted the images of grade school cafeterium performances of gospel and the dirty dancing of a blues bar.

The musical offerings of the evening in every way met the expectations and talent-level set by the café's first act. Rhianna broke out in a bluesy, "Bjork"-y croon accompanied by frantic, madwoman acoustic guitar. Her spastic style illuminated her cover of Tori Amos' "Caught a Lite Sneeze" in a rendition that seared with emotion beyond what was offered by the too delicately crafted original. On some numbers, Rhianna was joined by a woman named Chipmunk, whose talents were showcased on another Tori song, the haunting piano ballad, "Here In My Head." This cover stuck more closely to the original; among comments overheard were, "She sounds more like Tori than Tori ever sounds." The performance left us to meditate upon that bit of Zen, a befitting critique of a song whose own lyrics contain enigmatic treasures like "so maybe Thomas Jefferson wasn't born/in your backyard like you've said." The converging talents of Chipmunk and Rhianna lead to another apex of the evening, the original song "Say My Name."

The amateur performers also lent a good deal of talent to the show. Todd's poetry was ripe with erotic, violent imagery that reflected on the coming-of-age "attempt at sanity, attempt at purity," recalling a less-drugged-up Jim Carroll. Meg's approach was less heavy, more metaphorical, especially "Architect's Remorse." Her best was the self-affirming "Heart Smile," which was one of the few overtly optimistic moments in the whole show. Heidi's guitar playing rippled between chords like stones across a pond; I would have liked to see her do another couple of songs. Despite Selena's professions of shyness, she dared to ask a brave question "Why all the categories? Where's imagination?" before declaring herself "Freedom Chick."

The longest set of the evening belonged to Scotland, a local musician and Hampshire College student. Scotland's music defies labels; at it's base I guess you'd call it acoustic guitar hip-hop, but with liberal borrowings from other genres and influences ranging from Easy E to Joni Mitchell. His main source of inspiration seems to be pop culture, with a threat to "make you feel bluer than Grover," (the hairy blue monster of Sesame Street's pre-Elmo days) and references to action movies, musicians and american politics. He decries the "poets talkin' loud but they ain't sayin' nothing," yet his songs are not morality tales so much as a glimpse into his wacky world with songs about friends at Hampshire and, ahem, experiences with marijuana. My pick for his best song for the evening: "I Need a Miracle." The flow was tight, the lyrics whacked, it was, in short, good clean fun.

The café was wrapped up with a piece by a UMass performance artist, Aaron. The monologue involved a man who visits the grave of his partner, Danny, and recalls his AIDS-related death. The vivid reality of AIDS is presented here in horrific detail in the story of how Danny completely loses function of his body and becomes dependent on the narrator. The narrator's loss of his partner was also dealt with in a serious, realistic manner. Aarun supplemented his monologue with movements: the plucking of petals from a rose, the pose of an invocation to the stars, the position of crucifixion, to convey the mental state of the character and elaborate upon the vocal expression.

In summation, it was a hell of an evening, one in which all the performers should feel a sense of pride and of a job well done. The Stonewall Center, and especially Aaron Hans, also deserves recognition for organizing and sponsoring the event.

South African gays show pride despite much protest

By Tina Susman
Associated Press

The disco beat of "I Will Survive" pounded through the auditorium as a line of perfectly coiffed beauty contestants strutted on stage in clinging gowns, high heels and plasticized smiles. They posed in swimwear, gave well-rehearsed answers to judges' questions, and the crowd roared in approval when the winner, a statuesque brunette in a gold satin ball gown, was crowned three hours later.

As beauty pageants go, the one held Nov. 20 in this conservative backwater on the banks of the Crocodile River was like many others. To the contestants, though – five whites and two blacks, all in drag – and to gay men and lesbians across South Africa, it was a resounding victory in their fight to gain acceptance in a nation long known for intolerance.

There were no protests by townspeople; the City Council gave its blessing to the event, and judges ranged from a local newspaper editor to Princess Daisy, South Africa's most famous drag queen.

"Ten years ago if we had considered doing a pageant like this, even in a gay nightclub, it would have been hell," said one of the organizers, Markus Buitendach, who opened the pageant by lip-synching Queen's "We Are the Champions" while clad in high-heeled black boots, a micro miniskirt and a black curly wig that tumbled across his broad shoulders.

For all the lightheartedness of the event, though, this year's Miss Gay South Africa Pageant had serious undertones, coming at a time when gay rights are under fire across southern Africa. Two weeks before the pageant, Presidents Yoweri Museveni of Uganda and Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe – infamous antigay campaigners – made well-publicized gay-bashing comments at the annual summit of Commonwealth leaders being held in Durban, South Africa.

In October, the chairman of the Gays and Lesbians of Zimbabwe organization, Phangi Nyathi, committed suicide, an act gay activists blamed in part on the country's intolerance toward homosexuality.

Society shuns us and equates us with gangsters and perverts, and our relationships are criminalized. We get no rest from harassment, and we see no chances for alleviation or escape," said a spokesman for the organization, Keith Goddard.

Homosexuality is indeed illegal in Zambia and in Kenya, whose leaders – like Mugabe and Museveni – deride it as an abnormal practice imported from the West and intended to corrupt traditional African values that encourage big families and, in many cases, multiple wives for men. Mugabe has called gays "lower than pigs and dogs," and at the Commonwealth summit he dismissed Britain – where gay activists have condemned his policies – as a nation run by "gay gangsters." Later, Museveni, hailed by the West as one of Africa's most democratic leaders, warned gays against coming out of the closet in Uganda, where homosexuality is punishable by sentences as harsh as life in prison.

Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi has denounced the "gay scourge" that was afflicting Africa, and the leaders of Namibia and Zambia have similarly condemned homosexuality.

South Africa's gays, meanwhile, have become the first in the world to have their rights enshrined in their nation's constitution, which was rewritten in 1994 after the end of apartheid and prohibits discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation as well as race, sex and religion.

"It's like the prison door opened," said Storm Carrington, who represented the Wild Coast region of South Africa in the beauty pageant. "It's like suddenly being allowed to go shopping with your lover, to go on holiday together, to go to a restaurant together, to do all the things straight people can do without being persecuted for it."

AIDS tests for teens

By Sally Squires
Los Angeles Times

Public health officials, concerned about the growing number of young people exposed to the virus that causes AIDS, are stepping up efforts to screen adolescents and young adults for the disease in six high-risk urban areas nationwide.

Some 100,000 people 21 years old and younger are believed to be infected with the human immunodeficiency virus, according to Project Access, a testing and counseling program that is sponsored by the federal Health Resources and Services Administration and the National Institutes of Health.

Of the 40,000 new cases of HIV diagnosed annually in the United States, "about 50 percent occur in people less than 25 years of age, and about 25 percent are in people 21 and younger," said Helene Gayle, director of the National Center for HIV, Sexually Transmitted Diseases and Tuberculosis Prevention. Two young Americans are infected with HIV every hour, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Because symptoms of AIDS take about 10 years to develop, estimates are that a third to a half of HIV-infected people don't know that they have the virus. "Among teens, it is more likely to be half who don't know it," Gayle said. "They're still healthy and asymptomatic and so would not be seeking testing."

Adolescents are among the least likely of all age groups to have regular contact with the medical profession. Without getting tested to detect the virus, many infected teens go undiagnosed.

That means no access to life-prolonging medical treatment that can help delay the symptoms of full-blown AIDS. It also means that those infected can't take steps to help protect their sexual partners.

"Health providers that do come into contact with teens are not fully aware of this HIV epidemic in teen-agers and don't routinely offer testing," said Donna Futterman, chair of Project Access and director of adolescent medicine at Montefiore Medical Center in New York, where Project Access began. Besides New York, it also operates in Miami, Philadelphia and Los Angeles, Washington and Baltimore.

University holds remembrance of rape, murder victim Teena

By Saul Accetta
Collegian Staff

Remember the last time you asked where the bathroom was? It's a common enough question: you're in an unfamiliar place, you have to go [and badly], you ask for directions. Why else would you ask?

To know which bathroom to use.

It seems obvious to most of us, but to people who present in a gender ambiguous manner, it can be a real dilemma. It can also be a serious matter of safety. Being caught in the "wrong" bathroom, or what people believe is the wrong bathroom for you, can lead to embarrassment at best, harassment and violence at worst.

The lives of gender ambiguous people are full of seemingly simple acts that become major headaches. On Thursday December 9 th at 7pm, you can learn more about some of the problems transgressively gendered people face at "In Memory of Brandon" in Thompson 104.

During this program, the audience will view The Brandon Teena Story, a documentary that was made in the aftermath of the slaying of a 21 year-old female- bodied person who lived as a man. Brandon, whose birth name was Teena Brandon, was murdered [along with friends Lisa Lambert and Philip DeVine] on December 31, 1993 by John Lotter and Marvin Nissen. The event occurred two weeks after Brandon's legal name and gender were released to local papers by the police following his arrest on a misdemeanor check forgery charge and one week after he was beaten and raped by Nissen and Lotter. When Brandon tried to press rape charges against Lotter and Nissen, the local sheriff ridiculed and taunted him to such an extent that he offended his deputy, who was sitting in on the interview.

This story, while always shocking, is not surprising to people who live their lives in a way that differs from the gender they were assigned at birth.

The movie will be introduced by Grace Sterling Stowell, the director of the Boston Alliance of Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, and Transgender Youth, and by Alejandro Davilo Marcel, director of the Transgender Education Network. The evening will be closed by the amazing music of acoustic guitar duo Late Bloomers.

This program is sponsored by the Pride Alliance with the support of the Student Affairs Cultural Programming Fund, UMass Arts Council, Western Massachusetts Prevention Center Stonewall Center, Student Government Association, Health Education, and Pervasmun's Center. A $2-4 donation is requested but not required.

The Stonewall Center is offering the "Queer Leadership Practicum," a new 3-credit course for the spring semester for five-college students. The class will allow students to explore identity, diversity, oppression, and strategy. It will teach students skills in facilitation, conflict resolution, decision-making, event-planning, fundraising, and public relations. The practicum will include a weekend retreat, workshops, weekly team meetings with a project group. All who are interested in signing up for the class must fill out an application before December 17. The applications are available in the Stonewall Center. Other five-college courses with GLBT content are listed at http://www.umass.edu/stonewall/5_college_guide.htm.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS

December 6
Christine LeClair will lead a session of "Yoga for Fun" at 7 p.m. Call 545-4824 for more information and to pre-register.

December 7
The Pride Alliance is meeting at 7 p.m. Call 545-4824 for location information.

December 8
UMass Ph.D. student Chaya Heller will be doing a reading entitled "Ecology of Everyday Life: Rethinking the Desire for Nature." It will examine the ideas of "desire for nature" and the ecological impulse. The reading will take place at 6:30 p.m. at Food for Thought bookstore.

December 9
Grace Sterling Stowell, M.A., will present a talk entitled "What's the T After GLB?: A Lecture on Transgender Issues and Experiences" at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center Room 804-08. Stowell is a well-known speaker on transgender issues and has been the Executive Director of BAGLY (the Boston Alliance of Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, and Transgender Youth) for the past 20 years. This lecture is presented by the Stonewall Center as part of its LGBT Lecture Series.

"In Memory of Brandon," a program to learn about Brandon Teena, a transgendered person who was murdered in 1993, will take place at 7 p.m. in Thompson 104. The documentary, The Brandon Teena Story, will be shown. The program will also feature two speakers, Grace Sterling Stowell, the Executive Director of BAGLY, and Alejandro Davilo Marcel, the statewide director of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health's Transgender Education Network (TEN). A guitar duo from Boston, The Late Bloomers, will play their acoustic music after the two speakers.

Author discusses sex

By Meg Hebert
Collegian Correspondent

On November 18th, Edward Stein gave a presentation on his new book, The Mismeasure of Desire: The Science, Theory, and Ethics of Sexual Orientation in the Campus Center. Stein explained that the main theme is a discussion of what accounts for sexual orientation and how this affects gay rights.

Why is a biological theory of sexual orientation good for gay rights? Stein suggests several reasons. It is less popular to punish people for something that they did not choose; people are more likely to be supportive if they think homosexuality is natural, and they may stop trying to "cure" homosexuality. Also, heterosexuals tend to be friendlier toward homosexuals if they think sexual orientation has biological roots.

Stein also states reasons why we should be interested in a biological theory of sexual orientation. First, the biological sciences have succesfully explained features of human nature in the past. Second, sexual orientation is part of what makes us human.

Stein noted that since our brain is involved in our taste in music and food, our biological makeup is involved. What role does biology play in sexual orientation? Is there a direct link as with eye color that comes from genes? In Stein's direct model, genes, hormones, and other biological factors directly influence brain structures that pertain to sexual orientation. In the indirect model, genes (and or other biological factors) code for personality factors which shape how a person interacts with one's environment. In the pervasive model, our biology provides a substratum, and our environment shapes us.

There are three approaches to developing a biological theory of sexual orientation that Stein noted. In the past, people have looked at the external features of gay and lesbian people. Are there certain features that all gays have in common? Do all lesbians have a particular inner ear shape? Are the hormones of gays and lesbians different than that of heterosexual men and women? These studies did not come to any significant conclusions.

People have also looked at family trees for patterns of inheritance. Do gays and lesbians have gay uncles, aunts, cousins, or siblings? Studies have observed twins to see if genetic make up and sexual orientation are correlated. These studies of course have limitations, especially since many people do not disclose their true sexual orientation. The third approach is to look directly at the genes.

Stein also noted some reasons why a biological theory of sexual orientation is not good for gay rights. It is risky to tie something as important as rights to scientific studies that are liable to be disproved. If a biological explanation of sexual orientation is found, people may claim that homosexuality is a defect. It may lead to attempt to choose the sexual orientation of children.

In the active question and answer section of the presentation, Stein mentioned that we have no good account of how heterosexuality develops. He asked, "Do you think other aspects of sexual desire (such as being attracted to people of a certain height) are genetic?" Why does homosexuality standout as something to be figured out?"

Edward Stein holds a Ph.D. in philosophy from M.I.T. and has taught at Yale University, New York University, and Mount Holyoke College. This lecture was cosponsored by The Stonewall Center, GLBT Graduate Student Organization, Women's Studies, and the Chancellor's Task Force on GLBT Matters.

The Reality Behind Hoover

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

To the generation of our grandparents, J. Edgar Hoover was a true American hero – a master detective who was responsible for skillfully apprehending the nation's most ruthless criminals. Our generation remembers Hoover only as a flamboyant cross-dresser, one who was less concerned with catching gangsters as he was with getting the wrinkles out of his chiffon sweater.

The reality of Hoover is far more complex than either of the broad stereotypes. There is no concrete evidence to prove that Hoover dressed in women's clothing (though there is much anecdotal evidence to support it). Likewise, it is also impossible to prove that Hoover was a homosexual, despite the massive evidence to suggest it. But for those like Denison University Communications Professor Charles Morris, who gave a lecture yesterday titled, "Red Herring and Rhetorical Imprimis: J. Edgar Hoover's Sex Panics", his true sexual orientation is of little importance.

"Regardless of whether or not Hoover was in fact gay, there is no question that he spent much of his life avidly working to dispel rumors that he might be," said Denison, speaking in the Campus Center as part of the University of Massachusetts Stonewall Center's LGBT lecture series.

Denison's speech centered on the way that Hoover, who served as head of the FBI from the 1920s to the 1940s, attempted to destroy the possibility of being "outed" through his public policy.

"Hoover and Cylde Tolson [Hoover's alleged lover] were unrecognized as gays in the 1920 because of the common stereotype of the gay 'pansy'," Morris said. "During the Prohibition era, the pansy was an openly, flamboyantly gay figure, and people by flamboyantly gay figure and people by assumed that all gays fit the pansy image. Hoover and Tolson's statues as un-married male friends would not have signaled homosexuality."

Morris explained, however, that as authorities began to crack down on what they saw as "deviance," people began to realize that the pansy stereotype was not true of all gay men. A "homosexual panic" ensued, in which virtually anyone was subject to accusations and blackmail regarding their sexuality.

"Without the pansy, everyone was suspect," Morris said. "The passing homosexual was no longer able to pass as straight. A reporter accused Hoover of walking with a 'mincing step.' Hoover was then forced to detract suspicion away from himself, and did so very shly.

"His strategy was to announce that 'sexual deviants' were the greatest threat to the nation's children," said Morris. His stories of the sex offender crisis caused mass hysteria. Hoover targeted homosexuals as menaces, and the image he painted was so beastly that it could not possibly resemble Hoover himself. By placing himself in the limelight, he could deflect the suspicious eye away from him."

While Hoover was successful in dispelling gays rumors, his numerous enemies ensured that the nature of his relationship would finally be revealed. Morris recounted seeing a magnet that stated, "Hoover always gets his man," placed above a photo of Hoover and Tolson wearing the same suit.

Student-written drag queen play opening this weekend

By Nate Benyon
Collegian Correspondent

Deep within the bowels of the Campus Center basement, Don't Tell Mama, a little one-man show about five drag queens and their mothers, will have an humble debut.

Recently, I had a chance to talk with the writer and star of the show, Nate Benyon, between classes.

"I'm very excited," he told me. "I feel just like Dorothy must have when she saw the first glowing green spires of the Emerald city."

The title of the show comes from the song from the Broadway musical Cabaret. Nate told me that it was when he was listening to the song, "Don't Tell Mama" that the first inkling of inspiration came upon him.

"I kept thinking about the lyrics," he said, "and I kept thinking that they could very well have been uttered by a drag queen. You know, 'Hush love/Don't tell Mama . . . Don't Tell Mama, whatever you do!'..."

"And I thought to myself, what if the mother of a drag queen saw her boy on stage for the first time, and didn't like it at all? What would happen?"

Nate played with the idea for a bit, developed a few characters, went through four re-writes, and ended up with what will be unveiled for public exhibition on Friday night.

And what exactly will be unveiled Friday night?

"I guess the end result is a group of five portraits, with a dab of comedy here, and a dab of tears here. It really has a wide range. At one point, Norman is talking about how his mother sends him care packages overflowing with condoms and lube, at another point Charles is telling us why he felt he had to run away."

The theme men tell the audience about drag, mothers, each mother, and manage to slip a little philosophy in here and there. Nate told me he's tried to give the piece a universal message.

"Right there in the first speech one of the five of them tells the audiences that everyone has their own kind of drag," he said.

When I asked the actor/writer what he meant by that, he just grinned and said, "I guess you'll just have to come to the show and find out for yourself then, now won't you?"

Don't Tell Mama is a free show sponsored by the Pride Alliance. It will be held in Campus Center Room 101 on Friday, December 3 and Saturday, December 4 at 8 p.m.

Write for the Gay/Lesbian/Bisexual/Transsexual Issues

Dave Matthews Band releases third live album, a real treat

Dave Matthews Band
Listener Supported
RCA

Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

Perhaps the best live band of the decade is back with their third live album in three years. Listener Supported is the newest double disc, live CD for the Dave Matthews Band.

Dave Matthews Band, which has many different members playing a variety of instruments, but consists primarily of drummer Carter Beauford, violinist/vocalist Boyd Tinsley, and of course front man Dave Matthews.

The band has gained quite an extensive amount of following over the past few years, which has been highlighted by two years of selling out shows at such venues as Foxboro and Giants stadiums. The huge following and sellout crowds have established the band as one of, if not the most popular rock act in the US and Canada.

Listener Supported seems to be the epitome of what the members of the Dave Matthews Band have stood for, and strived to achieve in their short careers. The music supercedes the hype and when a group of people show up to hear Dave and the boys play, they're going to get one heck of a concert. The double CD was taken directly from a special that was recorded for PBS earlier this year. Although there is a lot of representation from the bands latest studio release, Before These Crowded Streets, DMB did a very good job at coming up with a set list that is highly diverse. The concert begins with "Pantala Naga Pampa," which any DMB fan knows is clearly nothing more than a 40 second long introduction to "Rapunzel" from Before These Crowded Streets. "Rapunzel" is seemingly the perfect opener for a band that strives on the crowd's energy to keep moving, since it is fast paced, but sweet enough to invoke the feeling that almost all of the DMB's love songs have.

Right after "Rapunzel," the CD kicks into high gear with its first song off of DMB's studio release, Under the Table and Dreaming. "Rhyme and Reason" gets a huge screaming response from the fans who were eagerly awaiting DMB to play something from their best studio album. Unfortunately, Under the Table and Dreaming is highly under represented. Only two other songs besides "Rhyme and Reason" are on the disc, which are "Warehouse," and what I think is the band's absolute best song, "Jimi Thing." Notably missing is the band's most popular song, "Ants Marching," and after about six years of constant airplay on the radio, it was nice to see the band put the song on the shelf for a little bit.

From the band's grammy award winning CD, Crash, are a few songs such as "Too Much" and "Two Step." and "Crash Into Me." If anyone ever tries to question the loyalty of the fans of DMB, simply listen to the fan response of the first five chords of "Crash Into Me." The screaming is so heavy that you could place it in a bottle and sell it. Along with songs from the major album releases, there are a few songs from the band's first independent release, Remember Two Things, and also a bunch of numbered songs such as "#41" and "#36."

There is only one bit of strong criticism that can be made of Listener Supported. DMB's egotism has clearly hit an ultimate high. Before "Pantala Naga Pampa," is a seven minute intro! I love DMB, but listening to the intro is seven minutes that I'll never get back. The message the that band is sending out is: you're going to wait to hear our music. You're going to wait, and suffer through our long, drawn out, synthesized importance of setting up, and preparing to grace you with our presence. Something like that is very unnecessary. However, if that seems unnecessary, there's also an intro to the last song, which is the band's tremendous cover of Hendrix's "All Along the Watchtower." Do the fans really need an introduction to the last song on the disc? Of course they don't.

Listener Supported is an excellent live CD, but it's not the band's best. If you do not have Dave Matthews Band: Live at Red Rocks, I would strongly recommend purchasing that instead. However, if you're a really big DMB fan, (which I know that there are tons of you on this campus) then this album is definitely worth a listen. B

COURTESY UMASS DEPT. OF MUSIC AND DANCE

Swell people, swell music
Lynn Klock, saxophone, and Nadine Shank, piano, will perform in Bezanson Recital Hall on Sunday, December 5, 1999 at 8 P.M.

COURTESY SAM ERICKSON

Dave Matthews Band prepares to milk their fans of even more money with the release of their third live 2-disc album.

New Life of Agony CD
Excellent mix of b-sides, demos

LIFE OF AGONY
1989-1999
Roadrunner

Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

I was never lucky enough to see a Life of Agony concert with lead singer Keith Caputo. After Caputo's departure from the band following their third studio release Soul Searching Sun, the band continued touring with ex-Ugly Kid Joe vocalist Whitfield Crane. I caught that show three times, twice at Ozzfest '98, and while it was fun to hear the LOA songs that I loved performed with at least two original members, one couldn't help but feel that something was missing. Bassist Alan Roberts' amazing lyrics, guitarist Joey Z's unmistakable melodies, and Caputo's deep, emotive voice will always be the essential components to LOA, and they're talents are well-represented on the career retrospective 1989-1999. Since LOA finally threw in the towel earlier this year with Crane's departure and the remaining members moving on to uncertain futures, a look back on this great band's life and times was certainly needed. This collection of B-sides and rarities fits the bill nicely, and is much preferred over a lame greatest hits collection or an uninspired live compilation.

Roberts, Caputo, and Joey Z formed LOA in Brooklyn, New York back in 1989, and have played with a wide variety of drummers over the years, as is evidenced by the five different drummers listed in the liner notes as having contributed to the various tracks. The band's only three releases were the aforementioned Sun, as well as 1995's Ugly and 1993's River Runs Red, which I list as one of the finest albums of the decade. RRR's journey into the very heart of teenage angst and depression is both beautiful and terrifying, all set to the alternating sounds of aggressive guitar riffs and dense, brooding arrangements that highlight Caputo's stellar vocals. The short skits that appear throughout the album, which chronicle a teenager's mounting depression that eventually leads to suicide are among the most disturbing sounds ever recorded. Both of the band's follow-up efforts take a much different approach, featuring a much more alternative sound. Throughout Ugly the new sound works very well, but after four or five tracks into Sun you just want the old LOA back.

One could always detect influences from other New York bands like Biohazard and Type O Negative in LOA's sound, and it's even more evident in some of the tracks taken from the band's demos from the early '90s. The morbid lyrics and bellowing chorus of "Depression" sounds like it could be straight from the mind of Peter Steele's, and the anti-racism message of "Colorblind" would do Evan Seinfeld proud. The tracks are very strong for the most part, and all of them are of course essential for the LOA fan. The sad, paranoid "Drowning" lets Joey Z. shine with a pair of excellent guitar solos, and the inspiring "Coffee Break" is one of those B-sides that makes you wonder how on earth it was cut from the album. Minor criticism is reserved for the uneventful "5 Companions" and the drawn-out conclusions of both "Step Aside" and "Colorblind."

As if the demos weren't enough, also included are some great cover songs. I'm not much of a S.O.D. fan, but Joey Z. puts one hundred percent into his rendition of "March of the S.O.D./Sgt. "D" and the S.O.D.," and Bob Marley's beautiful "Redemption Song" feels like a perfect fit with LOA. And finally, to rub in the fact that I never got the chance to see them live with Keith, are awesome live versions of "Lost At 22" and "I Regret." Life of Agony had a memorable ten years together, and this collection is a perfect final chapter in the times of this outstanding band. A-

Bauhaus: german school of thought on desing.
arts

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
Live Music
McMurphy's Welcomes
Steve Asadorian
Sunday Night
37 North Pleasant St.

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
3rd Week!
A Tim Burton Film
JOHNNY DEPP & CHRISTINA RICCI
DAILY 7:00 9:15
HEADS WILL ROLL
Sleepy Hollow
ACADEMY MUSIC NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

I Refuse to be a Victim.
You Can, Too.
Women; Develop you own personal safety strategy
You Can Refuse to be a victim. Call now for reservations at a 3 hour course to help develop your own Personal Safety Strategy.
Sunday December 5th 9:00 AM to 12:00 Noon.
At The F.C.L.S.C. Field House located on River Road in East Deerfield, MA.
Fee: $20.00
Sponsored by the women of The Franklin County league of Sportsmen's Clubs Inc.
Reservations are required. Call (413) 665-4362 email lanfarc@shaysnet.com for reservations, course details and directions.
Seating is limited. Call for reservations now!

OR

BOOTS $150.
ELECTRIC GUITAR BY KRAMER $69.
MUSICYO.COM
Yo LOW PRICES Every Freakin Day!
BRAND NAME GUITARS, BASSES & DRUMS

ATTENTION: COLLEGE STUDENTS
Earn College Credits During Your Winter Break
Wintersession
January 3-14
Day and Evening Classes One & Two Week Courses
Classes Guaranteed to Run
Art, Biology, Communications, Education, English, History, Management, Movement Science
Music, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, Women's Studies, Credit-Free Computer Courses, Debt-free Living Seminar
Call (413) 572-5224 for registration information
Westfield State College
www.fwsc.mass.edu/dgce

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
Saturday - Sunday
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 253-3799

WITH SPECIAL GUESTS
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM
Mount Holyoke College
South Hadley, MA
Saturday, Dec. 4, 1999
8 PM
Tickets
In advance
$16 with College ID
$12 General Public
Also, available at the door starting at 7 PM
All tickets are general admission
Tickets available at:
Northampton Box Office
413-586-8686
Tix Unlimited at UMass
413-545-0412
For The Record in Amherst
413-256-6134
Concert presented by The Network at Mount Holyoke College and Mount Holyoke College's Office of Student Activities

Apple basks in her own glory

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

FIONA APPLE
When the Pawn Hits the Conflicts He Thinks Like a King
What He Knows Throws the Blows When He Goes to the Fight
And He'll Win the Whole Thing 'Fore He Enters the Ring
There's No Body to Batter When You're Mind Is Your Might
So When You Go Solo, Hold Your Own Hand
And Remember That Depth Is the Greatest of Heights
And If You Know Where to Stand, Then You Know Where to Land
And If You Fall It Won't Matter, Cuz You'll Know That You're Right
Clean Slate/Epic

Damn, this chick is pretentious! The long-winded title of Fiona Apple's follow up to her extremely successful debut, Tidal, reads something like Lewis Carroll undergoing a 12-step program. It almost makes me ashamed to admit how much I like the album.

With Tidal, Apple has proven herself quite the songwriter, and there is not one song on this album that is not every bit as good, if not better, than its predecessor. Her bluesy melodies and soulful voice are a welcome change of pace from all of the female vocalists that try to sound like they're about five years old.

For our purposes we'll put aside Apple's hypocritical and self-righteous award acceptance speeches for a moment and take her music on its own merit. Her second album (as it will be referred to by most from here on in...) is a solid collection of songs. Comparisons to that other piano girl are inevitable, so I'd like to put a stop to that right now. Tori Amos and Fiona Apple have little in common musically other than their instrument of choice. Where Amos is clearly a classically trained pianist, Apple's penchant for pressing the keys is deeply rooted in jazz/blues.

So gives us what we hear on When the Pawn... Despite the fact that these songs aren't filled with earth-shattering grooves, or profound and grandiose lyrics, they do carry with them the weight of a finely crafted tune. Apple gets a bit narcissistic (there's not one song on the album that's not about her), but if you were the one she is singing these songs to it would strike like a hard blow to the chest (most likely an ex-lover) — especially on tracks such as, "Limp" and "Get Gone." At least she brings us to the source of her emotions.

This album is quite an achievement for Apple — proving that the success of her debut was not just a fluke. Good... because I had my doubts. A-

COURTESY SONY

Fiona Apple polishes up the pipes for her newest album.

INTERESTED IN A CO-OP OR INTERNSHIP THIS SPRING ?
WELL, ITS NOT TOO LATE!
Check out these HOT opportunities!
Arkwright: 6 Co-op, seeking IE and ME majors
Boston Globe: 6 month co-op, seeking COMM, ENGL, and JOUR majors
Fidelity Investments: 6 month co-op, seeking ACCT, ECON, FIN, and MGMT majors
M. DeMatteo Construction: Spring co-op, seeking CE majors
MTV: Internships, seeking ALL majors
Ocean Spray: Spring co-op, seeking AN SCI, MICRO BIO, CHEM and NSM majors
Pratt and Whitney: 6 month co-op, seeking COMP and CSE majors
Washington Center: Internship, seeking ALL majors
There are THREE Welcome Sessions left this semester!
• Friday December 3rd 2 - 3 pm in 114 Stockbridge
• Monday December 6th 3 - 4 pm in 103 South College
• Thursday December 9th 3 - 4 pm in 103 South College
Already have Field Experience lined up for Spring?
Make sure you attend a Strategies for Success Workshop!
December 6th through the 17th
MONDAYS (12/3 ONLY) 3 - 4 pm 103 South College
WEDNESDAYS 2:45 - 3:45 pm (12/8 ONLY) 13 SOM; 3:30 - 4:30 pm 304 ELAB
TUESDAYS 12 -1 pm 202 Paige Lab; 3 - 4 pm (12/7 only) 124 Draper Hall; 3 - 4 pm (12/14 only) 127 Mather
THURSDAYS (12/16 ONLY) 3 - 4 pm 103 South College
FRIDAYS 2 - 3 pm 114 Stockbridge
4 - 5 Building (Disney only) 13 SOM Building
Contact the Field Experience Coordinator in YOUR college !
College of Food and Natural Resources, 109 Stockbridge Hall, 577-0421
College of Engineering, 126A Marston Hall, 577-0419
College of Natural Sciences and Math, 209 Mather Building, 577-0428
College of Arts and Humanities, 264 Bartlett Hall, 545-6266
College of Education, Nursing and Public Health, 416 Arnold House, 577-0427
College of Social and Behavioral Sciences, 102A South College, 545-6267
Isenberg School Of Management, 208C SOM Building, 577-0418
Campus Career Network

MASS-SKATE 'kick A++ skate park'
Route 202 • Westfield (413) 534-1000
Monday & Sat-
• BMX Sessions
Friday-
• Live Punk Shows
COMPLETE SKATEBOARD, SNOWBOARD, & BMX SHOP.
ELEMENT • SPITFIRE • INDY • SANT CRUZ • THRASHER • FOUR SQUARE • DC • OURS • EMERICA • BLACK LABEL • ZERO • 151 • ANTI HERO • VOLCOM • SPLIT • PRIMO • FBM • LOOSE • GLOBE • S-1-M • GIRL •
WEEKDAYS $5 OFF with COLLEGE ID
LARGEST INDOOR PARK IN MASS. OPEN 7 DAYS • NOON-NINE

amc There is a Difference!
Silence in Seizles
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM.
Mt. Farms 4 • Mt. Farms Mall 584-9153
THE WORLD IS NOT ENOUGH: PG13
Today at (5:00 @ $3.50) 7:40 10:30
Sat 1:00 (5:00@ $3.50) 7:40 10:30
Sun at 1:00 (5:10 @ $3.50) 7:50
Mon - Thur at (5:20 @ $3.50) 8:10
TOY STORY 2: G
Today at (4:40 @ $3.50) 6:50 9:20
Saturday at 12:00 2:20 (4:40 @ $3.50) 6:50 9:20
Sunday at 12:00 2:20 (4:40 @ $3.50) 7:00
Mon - Thur at (5:30 @ $3.50) 8:00
SLEEPY HOLLOW: R
Today at 4:50 (7:40@ $3.50) 10:20
Sat at 1:30 (4:50@ $3.50) 7:40 10:20
Sun at 1:30 (4:50 @ $3.50) 7:50
Mon - Thur (5:20@3.50) 8:00
POKEMON: G
Today at5:10 (7:00@ $3.50) 9:00
Sat at 1:00 3:00 (5:00@ $3.50) 7:00 9:00
Sun at 1:00 3:00 (5:00 @ $3.50) 7:00
Mon - Thur (5:30@ $3.50) 7:30
THE BONE COLLECTOR: R
Today at5:10 (7:50@ $3.50) 10:30
Sat at 1:40 (5:10@ 3:50) 7:50 10:30
Sun at 1:40 (5:10 @ $3.50) 7:50
Mon - Thur at (5:30 @ $3.50) 8:10
$3.50 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
* Special Engagement No Passes or Coupons

Student Union Craft Center
ANNUAL HOLIDAY CRAFT FAIR
Hand crafted pottery, jewelry, ornaments, clothing, and much more!
Campus Center Concourse
December 1st, 2nd & 3rd
9am - 4pm
Produced by the Student Union Craft Center with support from the Campus Center/Student union Commission, Student Government Association, Graduate Student Senate
The S.U. Craft Center welcomes all UMass students, faculty and staff. Membership is FREE! We are located in the Student Union, across from the Hatch.

UMass Hockey vs. Boston University
Win Wings from The Hangar Pub and Grill
and
Pizza for a Semester from Papa John's
Friday, December 3 @ 7:00pm Mullins Center
The first 1000 people in the door receive "buy one get one free" coupons from Papa John's.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is playing archrival UMass-Lowell Saturday at 1pm at the Mullins Ice Rink. Free admission Womens Ice Hockey is fun to watch!!

Local INDEPENDENT SHORT FILM needs interns for Jan. Recieve a film credit. Many position open: Sound, hair + make-up, art design, gaffer + grip. Contact # 413-286-7886

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Boulders $387 flexible avail. Call Chris 256-1629

Take over my lease! Large 2Bdrm, Cheap! Call 259-9183 on bus route

Beautiful 2-Bdrm in NOHO 2-floors, Jan 1 $775+electric Vicky or Angela 586-3132

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apt. Cliffside, Sunderland. $300/mo. Everything included. Call Ito H: 665-8721 W: 545-2108

AUTO FOR SALE

1986 Honda Accord LXi 172k, auto, am/fm cass, needs some work. $1000 or B/O. Call Jessica 549-1024

1989 Honda Civic DX 95k miles $2950 or B/O 545-4878 268-3155

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 Ford Escort 95,000 miles 4 DR. Auto perfect condition, no rust. $1,700 253-1303

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

PENTIUM III 500MHZ ABIT BE6 128 MBSRAM ATI3DAGEFURY 24XCD BURNER TOSHIBA6X DVD 17. MAG MONITOR. 56K MODEM NEC LASERPRINTER AND MORE CALL JIMMY $2100 OR BO 253-8074 3 WEEKS OLD

Computer Problems? We've got solutions. New systems to technical service. Call 413-584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

BARTENDERS Make $100-$300 per night no expierence necessary. Call 1-800-981-8168 ext 205

EMPLOYMENT

Movers Part time positions available for winter intersession and spring semester. Starting pay $8.00 per hour. Located close to UMASS. Call 584-4746

EXCELLENT compensation for marketing college products at BEST prices. Go NOW to: http://www.adademos.com/campusrep

Cool Candy Company on bus route in Amherst seeks outgoing phone sales reps. You can work around your classes with our flexible schedule: choose one of two daily shifts (four hours each), minimum of three shifts per week. Shifts are 10am-2pm or 1pm to 5pm. Earn up to $10 an hour with base salary plus commission. Requires some sales experience, but personality is most important. Don't miss this great opportunity - call Beth right now to set up an interview! 1-888-556-5599

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Learn how to really fight! Don't be a victim. Private boxing lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus. In Amherst on bus route 256-0364

ROOM FOR RENT

January-August lease in Leverett. $325/mo. utilities, washer and dryer included. Call Cemil 549-1643

1 bedroom in three bedroom house available in Hobart rent is 275 a month + utilities 548-8068

Female roommate wanted ASAP. In 3 bedroom Townhouse $330 a month 549-2066

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted in 2bedroom Brandywine Apt. utilities included $215/month on bus route call Eric, Greg 549-1029

Mill Valley 3 bedroom 2 bath on bus route. Looking for 2-3 roommates Call 256-1115

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment in S. Amherst on bus route oil/heat $300/month, utilities extra. Avail. next semester. call Jill 256-1742

1 or 2 roommates wanted! Located in South Amherst. On bus route. Heat & hot water included. $270/one person. $190/2 people call 256-3201

ROOMMATE WANTED

Housemate Wanted for one room in a four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons. Cheap rent, utilities inc. Starting January 1st. 253-2229

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom Apt. 2 people to share big room non-smoker. 3/4 miles from campus. Aprox $300 inclusive. Call Joe 253-4275

SERVICES

Personal Holiday Candygrams only $7.00! Delivery anywhere at UMass. Personal greeting with candy 253-6722

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Professional Male Alumni from South Shore (Boston) seeks sublet for winter session. Single or shared apartment on bus/near town. Leave message. Eddie (781) 837-2244

TRAVEL

Browse icpt.com for Springbreak "2000" ALL destinations offered. Trip Participants, Student Orgs & Campus Sales Reps wanted. Fabulous parties, hotels & prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica,Bahamas, &Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Are you sick of the dorms??

Get OUT!!

Check out The Collegian Classifieds and find the perfect solution!!

Want to place your OWN AD? Call 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, DEC. 3

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable the UMass improvisational troupe, will be performing at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center. Everyone is welcome.

Exhibit — There will be an annual holiday floral exhibit of seasonal flower arrangements prepared by students from the Stockbridge School and Plant & Soil Sciences Department on display from 11:30 a.m.-5 p.m. in room 105 of French Hall.

Service — There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. A free Shabbat dinner will follow. All are welcome.

Workshop — There will be a print workshop featuring artist Georgia Marsh and master printer Maurice Sanchez from 10 a.m. 4 p.m. in Hillyer Hall 17 at Smith College.

SATURDAY, DEC. 4

Fair — There will be an annual winter craft fair featuring all handmade crafts, food, music, and children's activities, from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. in the Scott gym at Smith College.

Meeting — There will be an informational meeting about the Smith College School for Social Work from 2-5 p.m. in Seelye 106. Pre-register by calling 585-7960.

Service — There will be a morning Shabbat service at 10:30 a.m. at the Hillel House. A kiddush and lunch will follow.

SUNDAY, DEC. 5

Lecture — There will be a lecture by Robert Thurman, followed by an informal book signing and reception, at 4 p.m. in the Wright Hall common room at Smith College. The lecture is sponsored by Amnesty International.

Party — There will be a Hanukah party at 8 p.m. at the Hillel House. Latkes, dreidles, and candle lighting will be part of the festivities. The event is sponsored by the JSL.

Vespers — The annual Christmas Vespers with scripture readings and music will be presented by Smith College students, faculty, and staff at 4 and 7:30 p.m. in John M. Greene Hall at Smith College. Special music will be provided by the Smith College Orchestra, Chorale, Handbell Choir, Chamber Singers, Glee Club, Smith College Choir and the Worcester Polytechnic Institute Men's Glee Club.

MONDAY, DEC. 6

Community — Applications for the Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team training sessions should be dropped off in room 222 of the Hampshire House by the end of the day.

Meeting — There will be a LVC-TV 19 station meeting at 7 p.m. Everyone who attends is eligible to win a free t-shirt. The station is located behind the Hatch in the Student Union.

Art — An exhibit by artist D. Demenge-Akpem entitled "Duyst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the UMass-Amherst experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

NOTICES

Crafts — The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Information — The last information sessions this semester for the domestic exchange program will be held Tuesdays and Wednesdays until Dec. 15 and by appointment. They will be in 614 Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Call 545-5351 for more information. The priority deadline for applications is Dec. 13, and the final deadline is March 1.

Support — AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person, to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

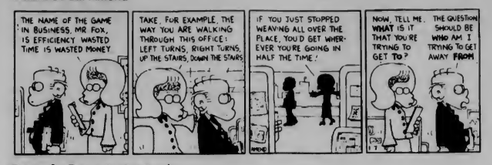
BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs



HSCN Streaming Services Cable Network

1	HSCN Bulletin Board
2	CBS/3	Hartford
3	CBS/4	Boston
4	ABC/5	Boston
5	PBS/57	Springfield
6	HSCN	Movie Ch.
7	UPN/20	Hartford
8	Weather Channel
9	NBC/30 New Britain
10	Fox/61	Hartford
11	PBS/24	Hartford
12	WOCH & HSCN
13	International
14	UMass Academic TV
15	WB/New Haven
16	Sundance
17	The Learning Channel
18	LVC-TV19
19	ABC/40 Springfield
20	Govt to Govt
21	NBC/22 Springfield
22	CNN Headline News
23	CNN
24	CNN Fn
25	CNN SI
26	TBS
27	BET
28	College TV Network
29	Univision
30	Comedy Central
31	Cartoon Network
32	TV Land
33	C-Span
34	ZDTV (Tentative)
35	Bloomberg Financial Network
36	History Channel
37	HSCN Programming

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 3, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Doo Wop 50 (R) (In Stereo) (R)						Wash. Week	Wall St. Week
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Charlie Brown	Snowden's	Nuttiest Nutcracker (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (R) (In Stereo) (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Charlie Brown	Snowden's	Nuttiest Nutcracker (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (R) (In Stereo) (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Boy-World	Odd Man Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys (R)	20/20 (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (R)	Nanny (R)	Jamie Foxx (R)	Jamie Foxx (R)	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News (R)		Friends (R)	Nanny (R)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Providence "The Third Thing"		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Gunshow" (R) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV (R)	"Primal Force" (1999, Science Fiction) Ron Perlman. (In Stereo) (R)				News	Real TV (R)	Change-Heart	Caroline
WVIT	40	News	NBC News	Extra (R)	Ent. Tonight	Providence "The Third Thing"		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Gunshow" (R) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons (R)	Frasier (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Friends (R)	★★ "Cliffhanger" (1993, Adventure) Sylvester Stallone. (R)				News		Friends (R)	Frasier (R)
WWLP	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Providence "The Third Thing"		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Gunshow" (R) (R)		News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Doo Wop 50 (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB	40	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Boy-World	Odd Man Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys (R)	20/20 (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	"Primal Force" (1999, Science Fiction) Ron Perlman. (In Stereo) (R)				Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake (R)
WTBS	72	Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Dr. No" (1962, Adventure) Sean Connery, Ursula Andress.				★★★ "Thunderball" (1965) Sean Connery.
A&E	33	Simon & Simon	"I'm Air"	Law & Order "Misconception"		Biography: Julia Child		Investigative Reports (R) (R)		Poirot (R)		Law & Order "Guardian" (R)
CNN	20	Worldview (R)	Moneyline Newshour (R)		Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	30	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Love Potion No. 9" (1992, Comedy) Tate Donovan.				Saturday Night Live (R)		Saturday Night Live (R)
DISC	21		Your New House (R)	Extreme Homes	Babies (R)	On the Inside: Submarine		News	Discover Mag.	Storm Warning! "Storm Cycles"		On the Inside: Submarine
ESPN	31	Sportscenter			50 Greatest	50 Greatest	NASCAR Winston Cup Awards					Sportscenter (R)
LIFE	32	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope	Higher Power	Figure Skating Nations' Cup.				Once and Again (In Stereo) (R)
MTV	53	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Real Suite	News	Fashionably Loud (In Stereo)		Dalila (R)	Daria (R)	Daria (R)	Fanatic (R)	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	52	All That	Catdog	Thornberrys	Catdog (R)		Doug (R)	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back	Welcome Back
SCIFI	35	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Brimstone "Pilot" (In Stereo) (R)		Brimstone "Encore" (In Stereo)		Brimstone "Prism" (In Stereo)		Brimstone "Heat" (In Stereo) (R)		Brimstone "Pilot" (In Stereo) (R)
TLC	24	Home Again	Home Again	Turning Point (R)		Crime Fighting Gadgets		Speed" Crash! Rescue! (R)		Speedway Survival (R)		Crime Fighting Gadgets
TNT	54	Due South "Some Like It Red"		ER "The Right Thing" (In Stereo)		NBA Basketball: Indiana Pacers at Utah Jazz (In Stereo Live) (R)				Inside NBA		"The Secret of My Success"
USA	47	Baywatch "Rendezvous" (R)		JAG "Shakedown" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★ "Speedy" (1994, Comedy) Michael J. Fox. (In Stereo) (R)				★★★ "A Bronx Tale" (1993) (R)
HBO	43	(5:15) "Cockeaters" (1997)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo) (R)		★?! "A Low Down Dirty Shame" (1994) (R) (R)		"Three Wishful Disorder" (1998, Suspense) Rutger Hauer. "NR" (R)				Chris Rock (R)
MAX	45	(5:45) ★★★ "Dead Poets Society" (1989) Robin Williams. "PG" (R)				★★?! "Vampires" (1998 Horror) James Woods. (In Stereo) "R" (R)		"Stinking Poses" (1999) Shannen Doherty. "R"				"Pleasurecraft"
SHOW	46	"The First to Go" (1997, Comedy) Mark Harmon. (In Stereo) "NR"				★★ "The Rugrats Movie" (1998, Adventure) "G" (R)		Witness		Stargate SG-1	Outer Limits	"The Shroud" (R)	Total Recall

Foxtrot Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – By day's end, you can surely know yourself better than you did before, provided you trust others to show you the truth about yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Personal relationships may take on an unusual flavor today in part because you are currently unwilling to hold yourself fully accountable.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – This is a good time to focus on love and all its aspects, though you may not be in the mood to take any unnecessary risks with your own heart.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may prove the subject of greater critical attention than expected today, but your supporters are likely to be out in force as well.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You'll enjoy a renewed interest in a certain endeavor today, and you will be able to proceed post-haste toward a newly defined personal goal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You'll find yourself on a journey of discovery today. Fortunately, you're properly equipped to learn all you can at this time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Do not underestimate the power of your own imagination today. You can indeed reverse your own fortunes simply through brain-power.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Everyday concerns will increase today, and you may find yourself immersed in a sort of mystery which revolves around certain key facts.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – It is important that you strive for a greater understanding, and a more thorough knowledge, of your major competitors today.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – That sense of doubt or foreboding is likely to vanish today as developments favor your own personal plans and projects.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – What appears to be a golden opportunity may be somewhat deceiving at this time. Take a closer look before putting all your eggs in one basket.

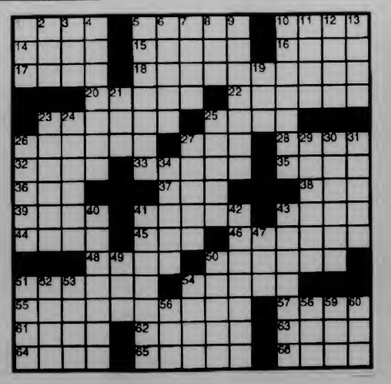
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You may be called upon to address a widespread problem head-on today. Feel free to serve judgment when you are given permission to do so.

Quote of the Day

"I was recently on a tour of Latin America, and the only regret I have was that I didn't study Latin harder in school so I could converse with those people."

–former U.S. Vice President Dan Quayle

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997



My mother says when a woman gives birth part of her mind comes out with the baby and that part is lost forever.

The hospital didn't warn her about this.

She found out later when I turned 15.

She said according to Federal regulations, she thinks when I move out of the house she can return to the hospital and get it put back in her head.

ACROSS
1 Lively dances
5 Brown pigment
10 Dull
14 Arm bone
15 Not a soul
16 Volcanic flow
17 Down in the dumps
18 Unenthusiastic reaction
20 Pure air
22 Spring
23 Pack rats
25 Dasencumbers
26 Dwindled
27 Peach center
28 Sea eagle
32 Salon concern
33 Say "Cheese"
35 Caribou or elk
36 Psyche parts
37 Fiesta shout
38 Volvo, e.g.
39 Great Barrier — Australia
41 Channel markers
43 Engage
44 Novelist Ferber
45 Toronto's prov.
46 Cried
48 Voucher
50 Occupied oneself
51 Beset
54 Assumed name
55 Fortune hunter
57 Caffeine drink
61 "Garfield" pooch
62 Hospital worker
63 Governess Jane
64 Wanders about
65 Tiny bugs
66 Quick and skillful

DOWN
1 Ewe's lick
2 Sick
3 Widebeest
4 Russian teapot
5 Opens champagne
6 Jupiter's satellites
7 Tree trunk
8 Goal
9 Lull
10 Hung loosely and fully
11 Suburbanite's pride
12 "Wink" in Paris
13 Rabbit's cousin
19 Coal scuttle
21 Kind of meditation
23 Out of the sun
24 Originated
25 Life of — easy street
26 English county
27 Amoco employee
29 Enumerate
30 Got closer
31 Miscalculated
34 — Pleasant, Mich.
40 Fronts
41 Simmering
42 Escorts
43 Lifted up
47 "Newspaper" — Today
49 Concealed
50 Revered
51 Eager
52 Soft drink
53 Coasted
54 Taj Mahal site
56 Six-shooter
58 Harm on
59 Sandy's comment
60 Up till now

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

© 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Breakfast

Whole Wheat Cereal
Fried Eggs
French Toast
Lyonnaise Potatoes

Lunch

Meatball Grinder
Ravioli Alfredo
Southern 6 Bean Stew

Dinner

Mandarin Chicken
Manicotti
Mandarin Tofu

Night Editor: Adam "frosty"Martignetti
Photo Technician: Becky "I wanna pony" Reddick
Copy Editor: Kevin "The Grinch" Monahan
Production Supervisor: Katie's dreaming of a white X-mas
Production Staff: Jim-gerbreadman, Roberto's Caribbean X-mas

UM men's hoop rally past Terriers and controversy

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

Ignoring the controversy surrounding their coach, the Massachusetts men's basketball team soundly spanked Boston University last night at the William D. Mullins Center, 70-51. The victory carries the Minutemen back up to .500 at 2-2 as they prepare for the annual Commonwealth Classic tomorrow against Boston College at 1 p.m. in the Silvio O. Conte Forum.

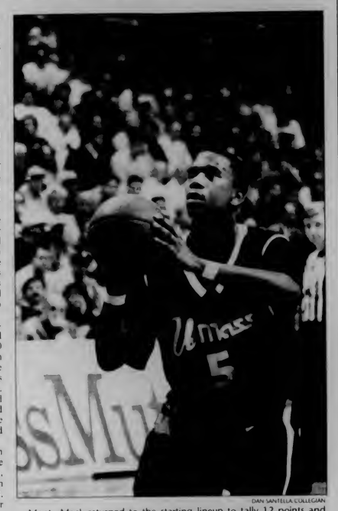
Co-captain Chris Kirkland was the slashing forward of old as the senior netted a season-high 23 points on a career-high 10 field goals in 35 minutes. Shannon Crooks came off the bench with a solid 10 points, including his first career three-pointer in the first half.

Monty Mack made his first start of the season after breaking a 62-game streak of games, during which the senior started. The off-guard tallied 12 points while lifting four steals off the Terriers.

Also making his first start off the bench was assistant coach Geoff Arnold. Arnold, who had once before beamed up to the head coaching position following a coach's ejection at St. Joseph's, replaced UMass' top coach James "Bruiser" Flint after he swore on Monday night's radio talk-show.

Immediately after the incident, Flint apologized on the air, but felt that his actions needed to be redeemed. The fourth-year head coach self-imposed a one game suspension in which he sat up in the upper suites of the Mullins Center.

"People are saying, you know, 'I can't believe you did that,'" said Flint, who admits to making a conscious effort to curb his foul language. "It scares me that people praise you like that, just because they think you did something right. It means that they think a lot of people in this business are doing a lot of wrong, and I don't think that's right at all."



The news of the suspension has made national headlines including spotlights on ESPN's SportsCenter, a talk with a crew with Peter Jennings, ABC news and an interview this morning on the Today Show.

"This thing is taking on a life of its own and I didn't want it to be that way," said Flint. "I did it because I thought it was the right thing to do."

For the first fifteen minutes, the two squads matched each other shot for shot. Senior Mike Babul drilled his first trey of the season at the 15-minute mark to bring the lead up to five at 12-7. Getting his own defensively seven minutes later, Mack stole the Terrier ball and converted for the lay-up to extend the lead to 23-16.

In the second half, Kirkland displayed his range when he knocked down an eight-foot floater at 13:50 for a 48-29 advantage. Freshman Micah Brand's confidence strengthened in the second half, as he nailed a pair of outside jumpers. Within 23 seconds, Crooks fleeced B.U. backcourt Paul Seymour and Mike Costello for two consecutive breakaway layups for a 55-34 lead with 12:16 to go.

The Minutemen, who have been championing the notion of a more cohesive unit this season, played like one last night with seven players scoring. At 6:59, Mack intercepted a wild Terrier pass and kicked it outside to Kirkland who transited a dish to Babul for the driving lay-up.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Monty Mack returned to the starting lineup to tally 12 points and four steals as the Minutemen sailed past Boston University, 70-51 last night.

UM set for rematch with Georgia Southern

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

As the Georgia Southern football team was completing a 72-29 slaughter of Northern Arizona in the opening round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs last week, the Statesboro, Ga., crowd erupted.

It wasn't because their quarterback, Greg Hill, had run for his fourth touchdown of the day, or because the elusive signal caller had thrown his second. It had nothing to do with running back Adrian Peterson, who took 17 carries a total of 134 yards on the afternoon, or the tough Eagle defense, which was responsible for three interceptions against the Lumberjacks.

It was because of the Massachusetts Minutemen that the Georgia Southern fans cheered. The 30-23 UMass overtime victory over Furman was announced – a victory that set up a rematch of the 1998 National Championship Game in round two of this year's tournament.

Tomorrow, the Maroon and White will do battle with the Navy Blue on Georgia Southern turf, with more than advancement on the line.

The Eagles left last season's title game loss humbled after a 14-0 record leading in, and the squad looks to avenge the 55-43 beating they took at the hands of the eleventh-ranked Minutemen

UMass will be fighting to prove that their championship run was not a fluke, as much of the Georgia media suggested that it was the Eagles who dropped the proverbial ball in last year's game, instead of Massachusetts actually out-playing the No. 1 Georgia Southern squad.

"We're really excited about the game, and quite frankly they've got a great football team – the best team we've played all year," UMass coach Mark Whipple said. "They're better than they were last year, but I think we are, too. We saw the brackets, and as coaches, we had hoped we would be in the opposite bracket, but as I looked at it, it's a great opportunity for us. Our kids have given us a lot of confidence... our guys have no fear, they're really looking forward to this game."

GSU will show up to the game with the same two major weapons that the Minutemen saw last season in Chattanooga when the teams were playing for all the marbles. Hill will line up under center and Peterson will be in the backfield, forming arguably the most lethal option offense in the country.

Each player ran for 20 or more touchdowns during the season, and both will enter Saturday's contest with over 1,200 yards rushing, with Peterson topping the team with 1,847.

Like last year, though, the Eagles have clipped wings when it comes to an air attack. Hill threw the ball only six times in the victory over Northern Arizona, and totaled a mere 112 attempts over the course of the entire season.

The UMass defense is in a very good position to shut down what little passing Southern might try. The Maroon defensive backfield finished the regular season second in the nation in interceptions. If GSU wasn't planning on leaving the ball on the ground for the game already, that fact might cause them to.

"Jeremy Robinson was selected first team All-Atlantic 10 at free safety, All-New England," Whipple said. "If Jerard White wasn't cornerback, he'd probably receive some All-America recognition. He's had a great year – he's been healthy all year, and I think last week he had 13 tackles and caused a fumble. So, we're going to have to have him play super this weekend against Georgia Southern."

Massachusetts, on the other hand, will take to the skies quite often. Behind a solid offensive line, Minuteman quarterback Todd Bankhead has elevated to the top slot in nearly every career and season school passing category. Bankhead has recorded 2,779 yards and 16 scores this year.

"The last eight games, we've been averaging almost 500 yards a game," Whipple said. "We've been consistent. Last week we threw the ball 48 times and there were no sacks, the week before we threw 28 times against Connecticut and didn't have any sacks. The second game of the year against Villanova, we had seven sacks, so those guys have really come together."

The All-Atlantic 10 field general will have three other conference all-stars in offensive skill positions to help him out. Adrian Zullo has hauled in 71 passes for 1,092 yards and nine touchdowns from his wide receiver position, while tight end Sean Higgins has 48 receptions for 559 yards and two scores.

Perhaps the most influential one, however, is tailback Marcel Shipp, the Walter Payton Award candidate. Shipp is on track to possibly reach first place for career rushing in the history of Division I-AA football when he graduates in May of 2001. This year, No. 5 has a single-season record with 22 touchdowns, complimenting his 1,746 yards. He also has 51 catches and a receiving score.

Trying to stop UMass will be a strong GSU defense that is led by free safety Ryan Hadden, who came up big with two picks against Northern Arizona a week ago.

"Georgia Southern is 21-0 at home in the playoffs," Whipple said. "They've never lost. I said to the team, 'Is there any greater motivation than that?' Last year we were the first team ever in the history of New England to win a championship, now you can be the first team ever that's ever won a playoff game at Georgia Southern."

"We'll be healthier this week than we were last week," Whipple said. "We didn't get anybody hurt last week and Corey will be back, which gives us a little more depth."

UMass facing home-and-home pair with BU

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Now that the 79-year jinx is over, the Massachusetts hockey team wants to make it two straight wins against Boston University this weekend. However, with the fact that the two teams are slated to play a home-and-home series over the next two nights, the Minutemen are eying a three-game win streak against their Bay State rival.

But that may be easier said than done against the nationally ranked No. 10 Terriers. BU is unbeaten in its last nine games (7-0-2), including wins over fellow top 10 schools Colorado College and Harvard. Overall, the Beantown school brings a mark of 9-3-2 into the weekend.

"So far we've got five losses. Three have been by a goal, three have been to top 10 teams," UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "On Friday we're going to play BU, and they just moved up to No. 10 in the country. This will be the fourth and fifth game out of the first 12 that has been against a top 10 team. That's the type of schedule that we play."

That's not to say that the Minutemen have been chopped liver lately. UMass (3-5-2, 0-4-1 in Hockey East) is riding a three-game unbeaten streak, with wins over Connecticut and Union, and a tie against Vermont. The Maroon and White will look to even out their mark this weekend with a pair of wins.

"We're undefeated in our last three games, and that's a big statement for our program," Mallen said. "We're outshooting teams by a drastic margin, and we're also the least penalized team in Hockey East. We're playing a very disciplined style of hockey right now, so it all depends on how well we can score."

After scoring only 11 goals in its first seven games of the season, UMass has responded with 15 goals in its last three outings. During that span, the Minutemen have been receiving contributions from not only leading scorers Jeff Blanchard (5-9-14) and Jeff Turner (5-7-12), but from every player in the lineup.

"Scoring seven goals against UConn, three against Vermont and five at Union has really gotten our guys going in the right direction," Mallen said. "We had a lot of guys early in the season who were struggling to score, and I think that now they're starting to get a little bit of confidence."

The efforts by Blanchard and Turner have both of them ranked in the top seven in Hockey East in scoring. Sophomore winger Martin Miljko is tied with the aforementioned duo for the club lead in goals with five, while junior Kris Wallis and sophomore Jedd Crumb are also among the team's top scorers.

In the net, the strong play of sophomore Mike Johnson (0-1-1, 2.08 goals against average) has presented Mallen with an interesting dilemma heading into the weekend. Although junior Markus Helanen (3-4, 2.82 GAA) remains the club's No. 1 goalie, the Minutemen may employ a platoon system this weekend.

"Markus gave us a lot of A-plus games last year, and now he's giving us a lot of A-minus games. He's played well, but some pucks have kind of broken in off his glove and equipment, and those are the types of goals that you want to avoid," Mallen said. "Mike is a real good goalie and we want to give him a chance in some tough arenas, but it has also put Markus back on his toes."

"He [Helanen] played real well against Union, and we may split this weekend. I still haven't made a final decision, but it helps the team overall when you can come in with a fresh goalie, especially against the same opponent on the second night," added Mallen.

BU is led by forwards Dan Cavanaugh [4-14-18] and Chris Heron [5-11-16], both of whom place second and third in the conference in points, respectively. Other top threats offensively include Tommi Degerman, Carl Corazzini, Chris Dyment, Brian Collins and Nick Gillis, all of whom are in double digits in scoring on the season.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jeff Turner and the Massachusetts hockey team will look to continue their strong play in a pair of Hockey East games with the Terriers of Boston University.

U-M gym season begins LaVallee goes for A-A

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

After three tough months of training, the University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team is ready to get back into action. Tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage, the Minutemen will be holding the annual UMass Open, and they seek to defend their championship title.

"I'm really looking forward to this weekend," said head coach Roy Johnson. "We've got 300 kids from the East Coast coming in addition to the other college teams. It should be a really great meet."

Being more than just an everyday college meet, many younger upper-level gymnasts compete during the afternoon session of the UMass Open. But the main event occurs at night as the Minutemen take on Temple, Army, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Springfield College, the University of Vermont, Southern Connecticut University and UMass' archrival, Temple University.

"Temple has a couple of great freshmen this year," Johnson said, "so they're going to be our toughest competition. We're not quite at our [performance] peak yet, so anything can happen."

Although Temple's new Owls pose a threat to UMass, the biggest problem for the maroon and white is senior Mike Moran. Temple's shining star, UMass senior co-captain Jeff LaVallee knows Moran all too well, as the two have gone head-to-head several times for both all-around titles as well as for spots on the U.S. National Team. "Both Moran and LaVallee could make it to the Olympic trials," Johnson said. "It will be interesting to see who walks away with the all-around title."

But LaVallee is not the only weapon on the UMass team. Junior co-captain J.J. Hershey and many others could bring in some big scores if they step up. "I think we have one of the strongest teams around on pommel horse," Johnson said. "J.J. has really improved and is competing all-around. [Sophomore] John Szymczyk has greatly improved and could compete all-around as well. [Junior] Clayton Kent could easily win on floor exercise, and I can't say enough and [Junior] Mike Alexander – he's going to be great this year."

But let's not forget about the freshmen. "They're great on pommel horse and vault. It's early in the season, but we definitely need them to step up on rings and parallel bars," Johnson said.

This meet could be a great opener for UMass if the cards fall into place, and hopefully the Minutemen will walk away once again as UMass Open champions.

Men's track begins to rebuild at BU

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

The word "rebuild" is an integral part of any collegiate coach's vocabulary. It is the nature of collegiate sports. The best players graduate and the inexperienced ones are left to fill the void.

The Massachusetts men's indoor track coach Ken O'Brien understands this very well. After losing several key players to graduation, O'Brien finds himself at the cusp of what will prove to be a rebuilding season.

It will be difficult to match last season's strong winter campaign, which resulted in a solid 12-2 record. However, O'Brien is confident that the young-blood can step up and meet high expectations — as soon as they gain a little collegiate-level competitive experience, that is.

The rebuilding process will begin Saturday at Boston University. There, the Minutemen will face competitors from Yale, Maine, New Hampshire, and BU. While the Maroon and White finished at the head of the pack in last year's meet, O'Brien expects a more challenging competition this year.

"I anticipate that this meet should be a little bit closer. We were a very seasoned team last year, and they had a lot of experience under their belts," O'Brien reasoned. "But this year's group is a little younger. We don't have some of the upfront performers we've had in the past."

Regardless, the coaching staff is still able to welcome back a small core of experienced players. Senior Vic Morency, an All-American in javelin this past spring, will join sophomores Jeff Tully and Steve Anderson in the throwing events.

Top sprinters include senior Pat Beith and junior Mike Harris. In hurdles, senior Vinnie Pullia should prove to be a consistent performer.

Notable distance runners include senior Sean Murphy and sophomore Sal Nastasi, who both run the mile, and sophomores Kevin Curtin and Ryan Corbett, who run the 3000-meter.

Mid-distance runners include junior Marc Sylvander and sophomore Mike Howell, who return for the 400-meter. Junior Andy Nowicki is the Minutemen's best bet for the 800-meter.

Perhaps jumping will prove to be the squad's 'Achilles' heel. Junior Dave Greco and sophomore Alex Maraveo-Picolo are experienced in long jump, but the pole vault, triple jump, and high jump results will depend on respectable rookie performances.

"They're untested at the college level," O'Brien said of the newcomers. "We know they have good potential, but we really don't have high expectations for them this weekend."

While he may be uncertain about his crop of young talent, O'Brien is eager to see his squad in action.

"It's been a long fall's worth of practice and we're ready to get going," he commented. "We're going to need a little time to grow, and we're not going to start out as fast as we did last year, but we should be well above 500. It just might be more of an uneven road to get there."

Such are the utterances of an experienced coach — one that recognizes the necessity of patience in what can often be a tiresome and tedious rebuilding cycle.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 60 — Monday, December 6,1999

Ex-chancellor creates fund for minorities

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Former University of Massachusetts-Amherst chancellor, Randolph Bromery, and his wife have recently established a fund aimed at supporting minorities in geosciences. The R.W. Fund has been created for use in the department of geosciences and will give support to minority students, in particular African Americans. In addition, the fund will bring minority guest lecturers to campus and support fieldwork by undergraduates in the department.

The endowment was created with an initial contribution of $50,000, funded through the NYNEX Corporation Directors' Charitable Award Program, and was matched by $25,000 from the University. The award will be distributed at the discretion of Bromery. In addition, Bromery, who was not only a faculty member in geosciences, but served as chair of the department, plans to contribute a total of $250,000 over the next five years.

Speaking both historically and from his personal experiences, Bromery said in a statement, "A black person could not count on being hired as a professional by a corporation or an institution, because of segregation and discrimination."

Though Bromery's service with the Tuskegee Airmen during World War II was renowned, the group had originally been established to demonstrate how African Americans were not capable of becoming pilots. It was experiences such as that one which made Bromery more aware of the struggles minorities were forced to encounter. The fund is meant to aid their success.

"The fund represents a larger philosophy of increasing the numbers of African Americans in the scientific professions across the board," Bromery said in a statement.

Bromery has continually excelled in his field, as he was elected, and served, as the first African American president of the Geological Society of America, a national organization. He recently received the Society's Distinguished Service Award, and as one of the founders of the National Association of Black Geologists and Geophysicists said, "It is very gratifying to be able to see this change in my lifetime, and to know that I played a role in bringing that change about."

During his time at the University, which began in 1967, Bromery has dedicated much time to supporting African Americans and other minorities on campus. He, along with six other black colleagues, founded the Committee for the Collegiate Education of Black and Minority Students, a program focused on recruitment and other support. In addition, before serving as chancellor, Bromery was the first vice chancellor for student affairs.

Although Bromery left the University in 1979, faculty say they are

Turn to FUND, page 3

BARBARA BRADBURY/COLLEGIAN

Zachary Trubuff lights the Menorah candles during the Hillel House celebration of Hanukkah.

Jewish students celebrate the holiday of Hanukkah on campus

By Natty Yagudin
Collegian Staff

While most of the student body is just beginning to get ready for the last holiday season of the millennium, Jewish students around campus are already celebrating.

The Jewish holiday of Hanukkah, which falls on the first week of December, celebrates the miracle of lighting the menorah for eight straight days during the fight of the Jews with the Greeks many years ago.

For Yael Torbin, a junior at UMass, Hanukkah means "to celebrate being with friends and family."

This year, the Jewish Student Union's (JSU) Hanukkah party boasted decorations, games, and a raffle. "We wanted to have more of a festive atmosphere," said Torbin, who is also the JSU's current Vice President of Membership.

"Hanukkah provides a great opportunity for Jews of all backgrounds to come together and share in good food," said Paul Entis, the interim director of the Hillel House.

Matt Abrams, a sophomore at UMass, came to get a taste of the holiday while he is still at school. "I'm not home to be with family, so I figured I'd come celebrate it," said Abrams.

At least eight different Hanukkah events have been planned around campus this year, to give students like Abrams various opportunities to celebrate the holiday. The events include parties in the different residence areas, as well as events for graduate students and members of the Greek system. There is also a menorah lighting every night in front of the Hillel House, and different student groups participate in lighting and blessing over the menorah.

Some students feel that because Hanukkah falls close to Christmas, fewer people pay attention to it.

"I don't feel it's as recognized as the holiday of Christmas," said David Mintz, a senior at UMass. "It falls on a different time every year, so a lot of people don't associate it with a [certain] day."

"It's good that it's early [this year], because it doesn't feel like it's the Christmas counterpart," added Entis.

While Mintz's mother is Christian, his father is Jewish. "Sometimes it's funny that Hanukkah falls on Christmas," said Mintz. "We sit by the tree and then light the menorah by night."

But still, Mintz believes that celebrating both holidays may be a positive experience.

"If anything, I think it brought my family closer together," said Mintz. "It has made me more of a well-rounded person."

Gore attacks Bradley plan

By Dan Balz and Ceci Connolly
Washington Post

BEDFORD, N.H. – Vice President Al Gore, opening a new front in his challenge to Bill Bradley, asserted that his Democratic rival would have to raise taxes and therefore put the nation's vibrant economy at risk to pay for a "deeply flawed" health care plan.

In an interview, Gore accused Bradley of concocting a health proposal for purely political reasons to appeal to the liberal wing of the Democratic Party. But Gore said Bradley's advisers "couldn't figure out" how to craft a plan to meet his early goal of near universal health care, adding soonfully, "It isn't universal health insurance, it's not even close."

The Saturday night interview in Portsmouth came at the end of a campaign day in which the vice president collected the long-awaited endorsement of New Hampshire Gov. Jeanne Shaheen, and expressed growing confidence about his prospects for winning the nomination.

Gore was both energetic and caustic throughout the 30-minute session, at one point drawing his hand across his throat in a slashing motion to illustrate his claim that Bradley would abolish national nursing home standards.

His latest attack on Bradley closed a week of escalating engagement between the two men, a development Gore said he relished as the rival campaigns prepare for the Jan. 24 Iowa caucuses and the Feb. 1 primary in

Turn to GORE, page 3

UM panelists discuss WTO-Seattle events

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Today in Room 101 of the Campus Center from 4 to 6 p.m., undergraduate and graduate students, along with University of Massachusetts faculty members, will discuss their role in last week's protests against the World Trade Organization in Seattle.

The WTO's meeting, which garnered world-wide attention after the opening day of the trade summit, was marred by protests in which nearly 600 people were arrested, police fired tear gas and rubber bullets at protestors, and Seattle imposed its first curfew in more than 50 years. The National Guard was also called in to help quell the protests that spread into residential areas.

Frank Borgers, an assistant professor from the Labor Center Faculty, said that he was on the front line of Tuesday's protests.

"We were up there when the battles broke out," Borgers said. He was joined at the protests by at least two graduate students from the Labor Center, Doug Kandt and Pilar Schiavo. Both are working towards their master's degrees in Labor Studies.

"We had the idea when we got back Wednesday that we should have this sort of get-together," Borgers said.

Borgers said that he plans to talk about his experiences and impressions of what it was like to protest in Seattle. But he also said that he wants to talk about what the protests were really about, and he would also like to connect the "struggles in Seattle to struggles that we might be having here at UMass."

The discussion will relate the protests to recent on-campus issues including privatization and environmental degradation.

The two-hour discussion will be in panel format.

"We want to engage the people that are there, let the audience in on the discussions that we are having," Borgers said. He added that he hopes there are a lot of questions and answers.

Meanwhile, after the "Battle in Seattle," the Seattle city council is calling for an investigation into the protests while residents of the northwestern city are still smarting from the use of tear gas and rubber bullets by officers. There were also charges of police racism during the assaults, as one African-American city council member said that Seattle police detained him after he was seen driving down the street.

Some residents aimed their frustrations at protestors who refused to obey police officers' orders, and incited the officers to respond with the crackdown.

Lounge dedicated to alum

George Burke speaks at ceremony

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Following a mass yesterday at the Newman Center, attending parishioners dedicated a lounge to University of Massachusetts alumnus George "Trigger" Burke.

The lounge was dedicated to Burke following his contribution to its restoration. It was entirely renovated to include new couches and chairs and will also contain three new computers for student use.

Burke explained that the lounge would now be a place where students could relax and study.

During the ceremony, Burke spoke at length about the education and guidance that he received by attending UMass. "This University is truly the heart and soul of this state," he said.

In addition, he explained that the education at UMass was of great value for the students. "The greatest bargain that I have ever received was an education at UMass," he said.

He went on to say that it was important to live life in a positive way and to help others. He stressed that being a good role model for young children and treating others with respect are necessities.

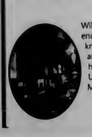
"We are the sole deciders of how we live our lives," Burke said.

He explained that giving back to the community was vital, and that the center as a whole was a significant place on campus. "The work done at the Newman Center is tremendously important," he said.

The commitment that Burke has to education is evident in many facets of his life. In addition to donating money to the Newman Center, he also provides scholarships each year for six students in his hometown who cannot afford to pay for secondary school.

Burke attended the University in the 1950s, and played basketball with the Minutemen. He also attended Boston College Law School, and served as District Attorney and as a member of the legislature during his career.

BARBARA BRADBURY/COLLEGIAN



Ichabod
At the Atkins Farm orchards, rock star Matthew Leonard chills amidst the bare branches.

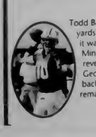
EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 54 LOW: 46	HIGH: 45 LOW: 38	HIGH: 50 LOW: 28

SOURCE: WEATHER.COM

Why Y2K?

Will Jan.1, 2000 bring an end to our world as we know it? Read the first article in a series about how Y2K may affect the University of Massachusetts.



Two's Company Three's a Crowd

Read about the Theater Guild's latest production of Company as well as Toy Story 2's follow-up box office performance, all in today's Arts section.

ARTS PAGE 6

The Golden Arm

Todd Bankhead threw for 316 yards and a touchdown, but it was not enough for the Minutemen against the revenge-minded Eagles of Georgia Southern. See the back page for more on the rematch.

SPORTS PAGE 10

Arts & Living 5
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Shadow and Light
The December sunlight casts shadows across this Buddhist statue at the Leverett Peace Pagoda on Cave Hill Road.

UM and the year 2000
Students avoid Y2K worries

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

This article is the first in a series.

Imagine that it's 12:05 a.m. on Jan. 1, 2000, and you're in Boston ringing in the New Year. You decide to call your friend in Los Angeles where it's still Dec. 31. Imagine your surprise when your phone company charges you for a call that lasted from the year 1900 to 1998, over $5 million in costs.

Because most phone companies use computer programs that were designed 35 years ago, they do not take into account the turn of the century. As a result, when the clock strikes midnight on Jan. 1, most computers will register the "00" as 1900, instead of 2000.

According to computer experts, 90 percent of all accounting systems will fail come the year 2000.

University of Massachusetts students interviewed yesterday said there is no big concern over the Y2K bug. While some Americans are fearing the worst, UMass students said there is nothing to fear at all.

Junior Cara Gruhert, a hotel, restaurant, and travel administration (HRTA) major, said she expects small glitches, but not anything that would affect the entire country.

"I don't think there's going to be anything like a mass blackout or giant power failures," Grubert said. "I don't think it'll be a national crisis."

Troy LoRusso, a freshman undeclared major, said he believes the only problems that might occur are computer crashes.

"The problems it'll cause are mostly annoyances where your computer might crash," LoRusso said. "The banks might have a problem for a day, but nothing major is going to happen."

Junior education and psychology double major Pam Gorczynski disagrees with LoRusso. She said there has been too much hype surrounding Y2K.

"I don't think anything is going to happen with the technology," Gorczynski said. "I think it's ridiculous because everything is Y2K compliant, and I think everyone's making a big deal out of it."

"I'm not really scared about it," freshman management major Frank Huisking said. "I think a lot of companies have prepared themselves enough."

Kevin Volk, a junior management major, said there is still some concern. He said some computers may crash or memory might be erased if computers are not Y2K compliant.

"I think the only things you have to worry about are the banks because of the very way they calculate interest [with computers]," Volk said.

Junior psychology major Josh Smith agrees with Volk. He said computers would crash if they didn't read the Y2K bug, but he said there is no longer concern because most computers can become Y2K compliant.

"Computers aren't going to fail because anybody can download a Y2K component," Smith said. "I'm not worried that anyone's hairdryers are going to freak out and kill people just because of the millennium."

According to experts online, there's a simple test to determine whether a computer is Y2K compliant. First, set the computer clock to 11:59 p.m. and the date to Dec. 31. Second, turn off the computer and wait five minutes. Finally, turn the computer back on and check the date. According to authorities, if the date reads incorrectly, then the computer software is not Y2K-compliant.

To correct the problem, a flash BIOS upgrade may be installed. There is also a Terminate and Stay Resident program that's available online at www.rightime.com.

Still, students like sophomore English major Heather Shannon said despite these small problems, there has been a lot of panic and anxiety.

"I think it's been completely over-hyped and I'm not really worried at all," Shannon said. "It's just another year."

U.S. not fighting violence, study says

By Eric Lichtblau
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – Three decades after a landmark study found crime and poverty tearing away at the nation's fabric, a sobering update released yesterday concludes that the United States has moved backward in fighting these ills and remains "a society in deep trouble" because of misguided policies.

The widely publicized decline in crime rates during the 1990s has stemmed primarily from unusually high levels of prosperity, the report said, and masks what it called society's failure to come to grips with underlying causes of violence and illegal activity.

In particular, the report – issued by the Milton S. Eisenhower Foundation, a nonprofit research group that grew out of a well-known commission created by President Johnson in 1968 – said violence is much more prevalent today than 30 years ago and the odds of dying in a violent crime remain much higher in the United States than in almost any other industrialized nation.

In part, the report suggested, this is because the number of firearms has doubled to nearly 200 million – many of them high-powered, easily concealed models "with no other logical function than to kill humans."

Worse yet, crime has been exacerbated by a "vast and shameful inequality in income, wealth and opportunity," the report said, noting that more than one quarter of U.S. children live in poverty.

Several Clinton administration officials and law-enforcement experts questioned key findings in the report, saying it underestimates the importance of gains in recent years.

The Eisenhower Foundation's contention that the drug war has not worked, for instance, flies in the face of data showing a recent decline in consumption among young people and other users, said Bob Weiner, spokesman for the White House Office of National Drug Control Policy.

"This is a widely respected group, and I hope they've done their homework... But they obviously haven't looked at our strategy," Weiner said. "There is a reality to the fact that America is safer. It's not a myth when people in New York, in California, in Illinois, all feel safer."

Read the Collegian

Religious leaders against death penalty

By Hanna Rosin
Washington Post

Catholic and Jewish leaders will jointly launch today a national campaign to abolish the death penalty, in an effort to reignite what they see as a largely forgotten but urgent crusade.

By uniting their efforts, the nation's Catholic bishops, and reform and conservative rabbis hope to turn a sectarian concern of limited public interest into the next abortion cause, as they vow together to lobby statehouses, activate local and national protest groups, and teach what they consider irrefutable biblical truth in churches and schools.

At a time in which consistently 70 to 80 percent of Americans say they support capital punishment – viewing it as just, fair, and a deterrent to crime – the new campaign by the National Jewish/Catholic Consultation is meant to remind Americans and their political leaders who support capital punishment of the moral dimension of taking a human life.

"It sends a powerful message," said Mark Pelavin, who represented reform Judaism on the Consultation – which includes the National Conference of Catholic Bishops and the National Council of Synagogues.

"Too much discussion of the death penalty is allowed to be about case law and numbers and statistics. As religious communities, we want to remind policy-makers that the taking of a human life is a moral issue," Pelavin said.

Jewish and Catholic leaders have opposed the death penalty at least since the 1960s. But the renewed urgency was inspired by Pope John Paul II. During his January visit to St. Louis, the pontiff chastised Americans for selectively ignoring the sanctity of human life, in a moving and memorable speech quoted in Monday's statement.

"The dignity of human life must never be taken away even in the case of someone who has done great evil," the pope said during a Mass attended by more than 100,000 people. "I renew the appeal for a consensus to end the death penalty, which is both cruel and unnecessary."

Greenfield Community College - January Classes

Take a course during January Intersession!

Title	Credits	Days	Times	Course Dates
Introduction to Dance	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
English Composition I	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
English Composition II	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
Intermediate Grammer Review	2	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
French Skills Practice I	2	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 10-21, 2000
History of the American People to 1865	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
Spanish Skills Practice I	2	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 10-21, 2000
Spanish Skills Practice II	2	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 10-21, 2000
Oral Communication: Public Speaking	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 8-30, 2000

You can earn one, two, or three transferable credits during January.

Register through Monday, December 27, 1999.
Financial Aid can apply to January courses!

Classes begin Monday, January 3, 2000 and run through Friday, January 21, 2000: unless otherwise noted.
(No class on Monday, January 17, Martin Luther King Day)

Spring Semester begins Monday, January 25, 1999

Greenfeild Community College
Higher Education at an affortable price.

Call 775-1803 for more information.

BRUISED BODY?

Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.

DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

YOUR SPRING BREAK PACKAGE INCLUDES
- Round-trip airfare
- 7 nights hotel accommodations
- Round-trip airport & hotel transfers
- Free welcome, beach & evening parties
- Free admission to night clubs
- Discounts on restaurants, water sports & side excursions
- Packages available to Negril and Montego Bay
- Professional on-site tour reps
- Complete weekly activities program offering optional sunset cruise, booze cruise, togo party & more
- Free bonus party pack

Sun Splash Tours 1•800•426•7710 Student Travel Services 1•800•648•4849

Price is per person based on quad occupancy, from select departure cities. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $65) and $12 handing charge additional. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/99. Peak-week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

At the Lilly
Sarah Rakitin, a student of leaves and clockwork, researches her next project at the Lilly Library in Florence, MA.

■ gore

continued from page 1

New Hampshire, where the two men are running virtually even.

"I think it's time to drop the hockey puck," he said. "This is a real face-off here, and it's very close, and it's a hard-fought contest."

Bradley spokesman Eric Hauser on Sunday dismissed Gore's charges as "scare tactics" and a "distortion of reality." He said politics was not the driving force behind Bradley's health care plan. He said Bradley was motivated only by his desire to "cover as many Americans as possible." And he noted that the plan has drawn favorable comment from centrist Democrats, not just liberals.

Gore has become increasingly aggressive in taking the fight to Bradley, although he defended himself in the interview by saying "campaigns ought to be about issues." Sensitive to the possibility of a backlash, a senior Gore adviser said the campaign is "very closely" monitoring voter sentiment to detect whether the debate is viewed as too negative.

Gore acknowledged the "stiffness of the challenge" from Bradley "played a significant role" in forcing drastic changes in his own approach to the 2000 election. He said the campaign now has "intention and focus" that it lacked earlier in the year.

That sense of focus was evident in the Gore campaign's effort, led by the candidate, to attack Bradley's health care plan, the centerpiece of the former New Jersey senator's candidacy.

■ fund

continued from page 1

pleased that he has chosen to aid the University again.

"I am very pleased that former Chancellor Bromery has decided to support his 'home department' at UMass," Linda Slakey, Dean of the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics said in a statement. "I especially appreciate his interweaving scientific and societal goals in a way that will have a broad impact for generations to come."

Jewish West Bank settlements up under Barak

By Lee Hockstader
Washington Post

JERUSALEM – The government of Prime Minister Ehud Barak, in office just five months, has sharply accelerated expansion plans for Jewish settlements in the West Bank on the eve of critical negotiations for a comprehensive Middle East peace deal, an Israeli peace group said yesterday.

Since taking office in July, Barak's government, a coalition that relies on a settlers' party for support, has approved construction of 3,196 housing units in the Israeli-occupied West Bank. That exceeds the 3,000 or so that Barak's right-wing predecessor, Benjamin Netanyahu, approved in an average year, according to the Israeli group Peace Now, which opposes the settlements.

The Israeli construction program in the contested West Bank has been intensified despite bitter protests by Palestinians, who say it undermines trust and poisons the atmosphere for forthcoming talks meant to end a century of conflict between Arabs and Jews in the Holy Land.

"This is the largest settlement expansion since 1967," Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat told Journalists. "It will lead to the collapse of the peace process...It is completely unacceptable for this government to continue these measures and at the same time expect business as usual."

The two sides are trying to reach the broad outlines of a durable peace settlement by mid-February.

The flare-up over the settlements coincides with a planned visit to Israel and the West Bank this week by Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright. The Clinton administration regards the expansion of Jewish settlements as "unhelpful," but has been powerless to stop it.

Most of the settlements earmarked for major expansion are close to the Green Line demarcating Israel's international border, and most are likely to remain under Israeli sovereignty under Barak's vision of a final peace deal, Peace Now acknowledged.

But the pace of the expansion, and its timing as peace talks are coming down to the wire, have infuriated the Palestinians, who regard all settlements as illegal.

Barak has pledged that no matter what the outcome of peace talks, Israel will retain control of a majority of the 144 Jewish settlements in the West Bank, where 170,000 Israelis live. Although he has not said so explicitly, the implication is that some of the more remote settlements will be abandoned.

Shortage of transplant organs prompts drive

By Marlene Cimons
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – The shortage of organs for transplant in the United States has never been so severe. Every day, 12 patients die waiting for hearts, livers, or other organs. In the last ten years, organ transplants have doubled – but the waiting list has tripled.

In desperation, surgeons have used partial livers or organs from less desirable donors like animals, the elderly, and even the diseased. Local organ procurement centers, working with hospitals, are trying to shore up their donor programs, aware that only about one-third of the 15,000 potential donors who die each year are actually used for transplants.

The public health community has launched new public service initiatives to encourage more people not only to earmark their organs for donation but to be sure to tell their loved ones of their intentions.

And the federal government has imposed new rules requiring hospitals, as a condition of receiving Medicare payments, to report every death to local organ procurement organizations so that the centers themselves can identify medically suitable donors and approach potential donors' families.

But experts warn that even if more organs become available, the shortage is only expected to get worse.

While a national debate continues over who gets priority for scarce organs, the great irony is that transplantation has become a victim of its own success. The better doctors get at doing transplants, the greater the shortage will become.

Three decades ago, no one survived a heart transplant for more than a few months. Today, the procedure is routine. Medical advances – in tissue typing, immunosuppressant drugs, surgical techniques and better methods of organ preservation – have resulted in larger numbers of transplants and longer survival time for patients.

Because of new techniques and advances, more patients are being referred for transplants, including many who probably would not have been placed on such a list ten or 20 years ago when the field was much less successful.

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Rails to Trails
Residents of the Valley enjoy the unusually warm December days by walking and riding the Rails to Trails Bridge in Northampton, MA.

Steve ....
Will you marry me, Pooky?
I love you!
------- Jess

Is there an academic advisor who's been important to you?

We want to know!
Nominations are sought for UMass/ Amherst
Outstanding Academic Advisor Awards

Faculty and staff who advise undergraduates can be nominated for this award. Send written nominations to:

Outstanding Academic Advisor Award Committe
Office of the Provost
362 Whitmore Building

For further information, call Kyle Hoffman in the Provost's Office, at 545-2554

GIFTS!

The Jewish Student Union's 1999
MINI MALL
A Holiday Shopping Extravaganza
DECEMBER 7 & 8
10:00am - 5:00pm
Student Union Ballroom

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week

Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends

RGIS Inventory Specialists

Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS

Visit us on the concourse
November 29 & 30 and
December 8 & 9

Equal Opportunity Employer

Y U
WHY NOT!

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Concourse for credits

Eugenie Harvey

The food in the Campus Center isn't exactly bad, but we all seem to share the sentiment that it could be better (and with every recent improvement it has gotten worse!). My gut level reaction to this is that we have an opportunity for learning and growth. We should not, as educated and free-thinking people at a public institution of higher learning, hand over the business problems of our campus to national profit-making concerns – no matter how "predictable" the fare.

My main concern about privatization is that it is a conservative movement whose interests are business interests; that's for-profit. (Does anyone on the UMass Board of Trustees earn his or her salary from a non-profit agency?) The interests and powers of large, for-profit corporations are so widespread that it is impossible for the extremely well-paid executives in one place to understand or care about the needs of individual workers in other far away places. While it is the job of corporate executives to make a profit (and their good fortune to earn a humongous salary), it is the job of public universities to remain public.

We ought not trick ourselves into believing "Mickey D's," Pizza Hut, Taco Bell, and Barnes and Noble are going to care about our community just because they're here. We're going to get deep dish Pizza Hut pizza, and pseudo-American-Mexican taco fare (which I happen to like), and the only good thing that could come of privatization on this campus, at best, is that, because corporations would be here on campus, workers would have a better chance at unionizing than they might otherwise. We would also have a first-hand lesson on the disparity between the rich and poor class (e.g., a $2 million executive salary versus minimum wage for most workers). I know from our own history here at UMass that its students would fight for justice on behalf of these kinds of low-wage, non-benefited workers. But I think privatizing is the wrong way to go, and I have more reasons.

In the history of our nation, the seeds of change, of political unrest, of left wing ideas are seen as the seeds of justice in retrospect; the liberal, independent, and often radical movements of the entire world so often begin on the campuses of universities. Indeed, the better part of our heritage lies with the courageous movements of students, which include fighting in wars and movements to not have to fight in wars.

'America may be subverted by the corporate agenda (and its flashy logos), but UMass should not thoughtlessly hand over its heritage of political independence and foment!'

The history of campus centers, as well as campuses, is that they are run by students for students. In short they are student-based, and they are a place where students can convene as a diverse yet united body. We must not let our Campus Center be subdivided literally and figuratively! In my mind the Campus Center is the metaphor for the campus. America may be subverted by the corporate agenda (and its flashy logos), but UMass should not thoughtlessly hand over its heritage of political independence and foment! Further, we are not a market, but an educational institution whose very mission is to serve and educate all people.

How can we learn from these issues of service and profit here at home? I think the answer is so close to us we could nearly miss it. We must put the issue back into the hands of the students – and they will earn credits for it. If this sounds radical, then perhaps we who are not students need to look more closely at our own biases. This campus is run by students, for students, and without students there is nothing here. If we're truly about learning, why not start teaching and learning about the issues in our midst? Our problems are opportunities, and if we don't see them as such, I really do not believe we are doing our jobs (educating) properly. Perhaps we can combine the wisdom and history of our older employees and students, with the brilliance and creativity of our younger students and employees (and a mix somewhere there in-between). Among all of us we can truly represent UMass as an institution of higher learning and a model for institutions everywhere else.

We need to start from scratch. Any surveys previously done were, in my opinion, ineffective and bordering on sham. A curriculum for revamping food services in the campus center might look something like this:

1) Creation and implementation of short student surveys (3 credits).

2) Development of a reorganization plan, including creation of a short survey and the setting up of a project timetable (3 credits or 3-12 credits, depending on duration and involvement).

3) Implementation of this plan (3-9 credits).

4) An evaluation and follow-up (3-6 credits).

5) A video of the entire process (3-9 credits).

6) Creation and implementation of an ongoing survey (3 credits).

Students from the hotel, restaurant, and travel administration major, the School of Management, the social thought and political economy major, the fine arts major, and any student who cares to be involved should be encouraged to participate in the transformation of on-campus business, which will make a profit as it happens. (The student businesses right now are breaking even.) The books to all said businesses should be made public and handed over to the student classes and groups involved in the transformation project.

One three-credit class should be held, and called, "Understanding and Overcoming Bureaucracy." This three-credit course would involve requesting the balance sheets for any one of the campus businesses being looked at for privatization. If we genuinely want our students to have a learning experience, what better place to begin? The responses to requests for bottom line figures from on-campus businesses have been dishonest, and I am sorry that I absolutely cannot be less blunt. (If you question me, ask for this public information yourself!) Let's have our students learn how to deal with this kind of behavior first-hand. People like me would be mere assistants to their managerial machinations! Radical or sensible? In my mind, my proposal is a far more sensible, practical choice than a move to commercialized decision-making.

Finally, if a UMass spokesperson says my idea isn't a good one, ask yourself, is he or she making six figures, and if so – why?

Eugenie Harvey is a UMass graduate student.

The Millenium is coming

Y2K predictions? Yeah, I've got a few.

Yes, all the airplanes will malfunction and fall from the sky. Ironically enough, the computers on the trains will also malfunction, causing them to fly, such as in the climactic finale of Back to the Future III.

The "talking" World Championship Wrestling action figures (read: toys) will cease saying things such as "Who's next!?" and "Graaaahhh!" and become self-aware, holding long conversations with each other about the meaning of life and the finer points of existence. Eventually they will decide that wrestling is a boorish pastime, and that one's days would be better spent in quiet contemplation. They will then be torn apart in a painful, splintering death by sentient homicidal Furbys, gone criminally insane with the realization of just how ridiculous they are. The Furbys will then march on the United Nations.

Rob Schulze

To the horror of politicians everywhere, government computers will go completely haywire. By three minutes past twelve on New Year's morning, the computers will have instituted a program of national health care, a new and enhanced welfare system, and other such progressive reforms. Rich white people and Republicans everywhere will shed tears, but nobody will really seem to care.

The death toll from exploding headphone shrapnel will continue to rise.

Each and every call box on the campus of the University of Massachusetts will simultaneously and repeatedly dial 1-900-BIG-BOOB, running up charges like you wouldn't believe.

As televisions across the country continue to either a) explode, b) give off invisible rays which cause painful swelling and discoloration in the genitals, or c) show only reruns of Martin, people around the country will be suddenly drawn to books for their entertainment, and the literary classic will be rediscovered. Of course, the books also contain microchips, so all the works of Shakespeare will have morphed into Bunnicula (a harrowing tale about a vampire bunny), and everything else will have become Blink 182 lyrics, and the intelligence of the human race will go down even further because of this newfound love of reading.

'The UMass add/drop registration system will not be affected. Unfortunately.'

All cars but the Yugo and the Gremlin will cease to function. Owners of these cars will now be the baddest, studliest pimps on the face of the planet, even if they do still live with their moms.

It will not be discovered until June of 2000 that the beer-making plants of the world have also malfunctioned, altering the process of producing the beverage in a powerful but almost indiscernible way. The effects of this change in the beer will make it so that the people who drink the most gain super-human intelligence and comic book-style super powers. University of Massachusetts students will form a new ruling class over the entire earth.

In a remarkable turn of events, a glitch in the AT&T mainframe will cause them to stop using their exclusive position to cheat already poor college students.

The UMass add/drop registration system will not be affected. Unfortunately.

Squirrels, which we all knew weren't authentic organic beings to begin with, will, due to an alteration in their wiring, cease running up trees and being hit by cars in order to engage in a brutal battle royal for control of their own, cybernetic kind. Except for the black one (who is the 2000 model squirrel, and thus Y2K compliant), they will then all explode.

Satan will come to Earth to reap his squalid souls and begin the reign of the Antichrist, as it was foretold so many centuries ago. However, the instant he sets foot upon this mortal plane, he will be attacked by Furbys, jagged flying squirrel parts, and the elite super-force of UMass beer drinkers. The unLord will then decide that Hell is just a much safer place to be, and he will postpone the Apocalypse for another couple of millennia or so. Rich white people and Republicans everywhere will shed tears, but nobody will really seem to care.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

Frickin' is not a swear

Jason Czernich

I've addressed many issues in my columns over the past semester, but the issue I chose to send off about today may be the most important: the persecution of the word "frickin'."

"What is the meaning of the word frickin'?" you may ask. Frickin' is a substitute for the infamous four letter f word. Frickin' is usually used by people who just can't bring themselves to swear, and by mad doctors who want to hold the world for ransom. When I first heard somebody say frickin' it was so goofy that I burst into laughter.

It was my sophomore year of high school and my U.S. History teacher had us watch the film Dances With Wolves. A Kevin Costner film, I could barely keep awake; however, I do remember seeing slaughtered buffalo at one point when I was conscious. During the discussion that followed the film, my teacher expressed feelings of great anger over the buffalo massacre. My teacher was a kind, passive person, who honestly wanted her pupils to learn, and have good, clean fun while doing it. Keeping this in mind, it was a very humorous surprise to hear this woman exclaim her anger over the mistreatment of the American buffalo. "It just makes me so frickin' angry!" My classmates and I roared with laughter in response to the word frickin'. It was just so funny to see a person who never became angry in front of us become angry. It sounded so goofy. It was the corny equivalent of saying "It just makes me so gee golly darn angry!" Wholesome people like Jimmy Stewart or Ned Flanders express their feelings like that.

Today if I am joking around like a certain lazy-eyed Mike Myers character and I say frickin', some people say, "Watch your mouth!" Excuse me?! Since when has frickin' been a swear? Did some modern day big-wig hate the sound of the word and decide out of spite that it's a swear? Did I miss The 1999 List of Words to Blacklist? Guess what people? Frickin' is not a swear! It's a word people use in place of a swear. If people want to swear, they just swear, and if they want to maintain a degree of politeness they say frickin'.

Not only are people looking at other people, and me, sideways for using the work frickin' but parents are now yelling at their children for it. People try to tell me that it's the meaning and how it's said that counts. Don't these people realize that frickin' is a sign of control? If a person holds back from saying a swear by using the word frickin', be thankful they didn't go for a genuine swear. Usage of the word frickin' may show that to some degree, they do care about what they are saying to you.

I've also heard that it's quite a different thing for a kid to say frickin' rather than an adult. Would you rather they tell you to "kiss off" or "shut up?" I'd much rather have frickin' directed toward me than one of those alternatives. Can't adults see that kids can say much worse than frickin'? I think that the people who get offended by open use of the word frickin' are usually the type to get a buzz from one sip of root beer. They think that Hammer is still hip and that Michael Jackson is actually "really bitchin'" music. Reality also frightens them way too easily, and that's what they really need to tune into: reality. If they did that then they might realize that not too many people are offended by the word frickin'? They need to purchase new lives because they're getting seriously ripped off by the ones they have now.

Maybe we should give the word frickin' multiple meanings. That way it can overcome its current hardship and be well on its way to becoming a household world. For example, what if frickin' meant good?

Michael: "So, Mr. Dover, what did you think of that movie?"

Ben: "It was very frickin'. Mr. Motorcycle."

Michael: "Well that's frickin', I'm glad you liked it."

Or what if frickin' was another name for an article of clothing?

Val: "Whoa, Chris are those new frickin's?

Chris: "Yep, I got them at Frick Locker."

Val: "They look very frickin' on you."

Frickin' is, for once and for all, not an obscenity. It is instead a healthy alternative. It's a goofy word. The word frickin' can even be our friend. For all those people who still think frickin' is a swear, I'd just like to say, with a warm smile, "Snap out of it and have a frickin' day!"

Jason Czernich is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Remembering The real Drew

To the editor:

Due to the article run in the Collegian on Dec. 2, 1999, about the passing of Drew Brown, we, his closest friends, feel obligated to tell this university that our friend was much more than six emotionless paragraphs on the front page. As Drew was so fond of saying, "This is a moral imperative."

Many people knew him as a great host, bartender, and drinking buddy; to them he was the life of the party. He was acknowledged as an incredible alcohol connoisseur, with a liver of steel and a super-human tolerance. Unfortunately, most people were never around long enough after the party to see the most endearing qualities that Drew possessed.

Drew loved to hike. He made it his business to see the sunrise and would always be smoking his Camel Lights (he called them his "after dinner mints") on the steps of Leach Residence Hall. Always going out of his way to help someone, Drew did his best to make our lives easier. He always had a "butt" for anyone who needed one; he carried our laundry and our lounge furniture up four flights of stairs; he brought us biscotti and coffee at three in the morning and made us dinner if we did not have time. Drew always was ready to accompany us to the dining hall; and he always drank black coffee because it "made the food taste better." He was humble and always the first to laugh at himself. We always knew when he was in the hallway because his laugh could be heard from room to room. Drew sang at the drop of a hat, always off key, and always with a smile.

Drew lived life by his rules. Throughout his life, he did whatever he wanted, whenever he wanted, all with baffling enthusiasm and passion. He was loyal, ingenious, eccentric, and above all, there was nothing he would not do for his friends.

These are just a few examples of what we experienced living with Drew everyday as part of the family we became. Drew will always be remembered through happy memories and as a celebrator of life. We love you Drew, and we miss you.

Lian Brennan, Jacqi Kotran, Joshua Lizotte, Rachel Mandell, and Adam Stern Northeast

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Manelly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Punhkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ruffs Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Black Affairs

Kwanzaa is not a holiday!

By Victoria Salesman
Collegian Staff

Who said that Kwanzaa was not a holiday? The answer is Maulana Karenga. Maulana Karenga is the founder of Kwanzaa, an African-American celebration to reunite the ties between Africa and African-Americans. Karenga founded Kwanzaa over thirty years ago to establish traditions to strengthen the ties between Africa and African-Americans.

Karenga and the organization called US, meaning Black people as opposed to "our oppressors," began observing the celebration in Southern California during the mid-1960s. They introduced Kwanzaa as a celebration, not as a holiday, to promote values, customs, and traditions of Africa. Kwanzaa is a Swahili word meaning first fruit. It is spelled Kwanza in the Swahili language, but because seven children wanted to celebrate it, they added an extra "a" to the word.

Kwanzaa is celebrated from December 26th through January 1st. There are seven basic principles of Kwanzaa: Umoja (unity), Kujihagulia (self determination), Ujima (collective work and responsibility), Ujamaa (cooperative economics), Nia (purpose), Kuumba (creativity), and Imani (faith).

The recipe for a traditional Kwanzaa celebration includes a straw mat to place the other items upon. There is a kinara, a candleholder, in which seven candles are lit each night to represent our ancestors. There are three red candles, three green candles, and one black candle. The red, green, and black colors are used in inspiration from Marcus Garvey, a major black national leader in the early part of the century. Red stands for the struggle, green stands for the future, and black stands for black people. There are a variety of things that are in the recipe for Kwanzaa. They consist of ears of corn for the children in the house and unity, a unity cup filled with libation for each member of the family to drink from, as well as culturally-based gifts. January 1st is spent reflecting upon human life and our purpose (as black people).

While Kwanzaa is being embraced more and more each year, there are still many people who fail to see its importance to the black community. Many believe that Kwanzaa's principles are so basic they are already being practiced. George C. Wolfe, one of the creators and director of Bring in 'Da Noise, Bring in 'Da Funk, said "Kwanzaa seems like a response to assimilation. We're scared of losing something, so we invent something with all these components attached that remind us of where we came from."

Kwanzaa is not the "Black Christmas" many people seem to believe that it is. It was never meant to replace Christmas for Kwanzaa represents no denomination nor faith. It is a celebration open to all faiths, creeds, and races. Anyone and everyone can celebrate Kwanzaa. Karenga maintains that "people find common ground because it's authentic." Karenga says however, "It's an African [celebration] created for African people. It speaks to me in a way it can't speak to people outside our culture. We honor and reaffirm our family, community, and culture. But other people can and do celebrate it. Just like other people celebrate Cinco de Mayo besides Mexicans, Chinese New Year besides Chinese and pow wows besides Native Americans." To prove that Kwanzaa is now being recognized, the U.S. Postal Service recently issued a Kwanzaa stamp.

In honor of Kwanzaa, Campus Activities and the Malcolm X Cultural Center will be holding a Kwanzaa celebration on December 12, 1999 at the Student Union Ballroom at 5 p.m. The English Speaking Caribbean Association dancers will be performing, along with various other talents. There will be food, refreshments, and an opportunity for a unique cultural experience.

UMass Fashion Show; Sex, lights & glamour

By Victoria Salesman
Collegian Staff

Four years ago, Jenn Corbet headed a small group of UMass students to found an organization that is known as Soul Television. Soul TV was originally founded to complement the Black Mass Communications Project. BMCP runs "black" radio at UMass. Soul TV's aims were to produce black television programs. What it has metamorphised into is much more.

In the last few years, the organization has held many events. These invents include Player Ball, which was dedicated to helping the fight for HIV/AIDS, and the female football game at Soul Vibes A barbeque. Last semester, Soul TV held the First Annual West Indian Bash. The West Indian Bash allowed students from the West Indies to represent their countries through food, cultural dances, and in a mini-carnival.

More importantly, Soul TV broadcasts student talent on Channel 19 every Tuesday and Thursday. Its main purpose is to showcase the talent of the UMass community. This year its theme is helping people experience extreme culture. The organization broadcasts such events as the ESCA talent showcase, and the party with DJ Funk Master Flex.

This semester, Soul TV is sponsoring the UMass Fashion Show. The theme of the show is Sex Appeal for the Millennium. The Fashion Show will showcase up-and-coming designers and talents, and host an after party. Nick Clement, Soul TV's present president maintains, "I hope that this UMass Fashion Show becomes a main highlight for UMass. I want alumni to be able to return to UMass to attend this event. I hope that this event will help attract other student to the campus."

On Saturday, Dec. 11, 1999, the UMass Fashion Show will be held in the Student Union Ballroom. The show will feature designs from Andrea Alexander, Uche, LAMOUR Fashions, Thurobred Entertainment, and UMass' own Nick Clement, Soul TV president. The show will include various sections. These sections include, but are not limited to, a hair show and body art. Also being featured at the Fashion Show will be Boundaries, Nastalgia, Transforme.

The Cutting Edge

By Tony Ortega
Collegian Correspondent

Where do you go to get a haircut on campus these days? Well, the options are limited. Nicholas Clement, junior apparel marketing major, said, "I have to go Springfield to get my hair cut because there really aren't many people that understand the complexity of a black man's hair." Alcides Santiago, a first year student, realized that necessity. He realized that there are many people who felt the way that Clement did, so he decided to create a local and economic barbershop.

When asked why he enjoys cutting hair, Santiago replied, "It is a hobby creating style. I enjoy art, and cutting hair is a form of it."

Santiago started cutting hair about five years ago in Springfield, Massachusetts. He attended Putnam High School, where he was captain of the volleyball team. While growing up, his mother was a hair stylist and he watched her perform on numerous occasions, as he accompanied her to the barbershop.

Santiago first specialized mainly on customer engraving. He later included more elaborate designs into his work. He took up studies on commercial arts and graphic design, which Santiago said, "Helps to show the professionalism of my work." He now offers haircuts of almost every style, fades, tapers, custom engraving, elaborate designs, and line-ups, all at affordable and reasonable prices. In fact thes are the most affordable prices on campus and in the surrounding area. As an added bonus, sideburns and mustaches are included with every cut, an option not available with most barbershops.

When interviewing previous clients on Santiago's work, the results were obvious. "He's great," said William Mendez, a freshman and a graduate of Amherst High School, commented on Santiago's performance. "It was a haircut that was not only affordable but worth showing off. I have no qualms about his performance. Some barber shops, you spend all your money and they don't take the time to make sure your hair is the way you want it but not Alcides." He went on to say, "He actually makes you feel like cutting your hair is his main priority."

In a later interview with Dwan Northe, a junior sociology major, results of Santiago's work remained the same. "I appreciated the time he took to cater to my hair's needs. These days it is hard to find a good barbershop that specializes in different styles of haircuts, such as fades to elaborate designs. Besides the quality of the work, the price is extremely low." He added that he had to "pay up to ten dollars for a haircut at a lower quality at other barbershops in Amherst, Springfield, and even in New York."

Santiago's hours of work are mainly on the weekends. He usually works ends, mainly Friday afternoon and Saturdays, to dedicate himself to his craft. During the other days of the week, Santiago said that he uses his time for his studies, "but will make exceptions for appointments." Santiago is a dedicated student, who wants to help his fellow peers by providing an affordable way for their hair to remain looking great. The Cutting Edge is the name of his business. When asked why he chose that name he said, "I am always at the cutting edge of my trade and it shows in every client that leaves my chair."

If you are interested in writing, drawing, or taking photos for Black Affairs, please contact Hugh at 545-1762.

Event Calendar

12/6-12/10
El Arco Iris Youth & Community Art Center
Mixed Media Exhibit
NAH, Augusta Savage Gallery, Admission: Free

12/9
University of Massachusetts Press presents
Steven C. Tracey, Associate Professor of Afro-American Studies
Book Signing
Atticus Albion Bookstore

12/11
Soul TV
UMass Fashion Show
Sex Appeal for the Millennium
SUB, 7 p.m., Admission: $8 students, $10 public

12/12
Campus Activities and The Malcolm X Cultural Center
A Kwanzaa Celebration
SUB, 5 p.m., Admission: Free

2/5
National Pan-Hellenic Council and Multicultural Greek Council
1st Annual UMass Greek Stroll Competition and after Party
SUB, 7 p.m.,
Admission: $5
General Audience

2/25
Soul TV and English-Speaking Caribbean Association, ESCA
West Indian Bash 2000

This week in Black History

December 6
Theodore Lawless, medicine pioneer, born, 1892
500 store owners in Tucson, Arizona sign pledges of nondiscrimination, 1960

8
Henry Hugh Proctor, writer, born, 1868
Sammy Davis Jr., entertainer, born, 1925
Kurt Schmoke becomes the first Black mayor of Baltimore, MD, 1987

9
PBS Pinchback serves as governor of Louisiana, becoming the first Black state governor, 1872
Roy deCarava, first Black American photographer to be awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship, born, 1919
Red Foxx, entertainer, born, 1925

10
Ralph J Bunche becomes the first Black person awarded a Nobel Peace Prize, 1950

11
Willie Mae "Big Mama" Thornton, blues singer, born, 1926

12
George F. Grant, dentist, receives a patent for the wooden golf tee, 1899
James Weldon Johnson and James Rosamond Johnson compose "Lift Every Voice and Sing," 1900
Willie Brown becomes the first Black mayor of San Francisco, CA, 1995

13
First Black women complete officer training for the WAVEs, 1944.

Complex Shades of Blackness: By the United States Government

"They say that in the Army"

An old and favorite Cadence .

They say that in the Army, the chicken's mighty fine
One jumped off the table and started marking time
Refrain

Refrain:
Oh, Lord I wanna go
But they won't let me go
HOOOMMME

They say that in the Army, the pay is mighty fine
They give you a hundred dollars and take back ninety-nine
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the coffee's mighty fine
It looks like muddy water, and tastes like turpentine.
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the biscuits are mighty fine
One rolled off the table and killed a friend of mine.
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the meat is mighty fine
Last night we had ten puppies, this morning only nine
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the shoes are mighty fine
You ask for size eleven, they give you size nine.
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the pancakes are mighty fine
You can try to chew them, but you're only wasting time.
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the bed's are mighty fine
But how the hell would I know, I've never slept in mine
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the mail is so great
Today I got a letter dated 1948.
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the hours are just right
Start early in the morning and work on through the night
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the buses are mighty fine
One went round the corner, and left three wheels behind.
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the coffee's mighty fine
It's good for cuts and bruises and tastes like iodine.
Refrain

They say that in the Army, the chicken's mighty fine
One jumped off the table and killed a friend of mine.
Refrain

They say that in the army, the toilets are mighty fine
You flush them up at seven they come back up at nine.
Refrain

They say that in the army, the tents are waterproof
You wake up in the morning and you're floating on the roof.

Company proves a mixed delight

Guild gives unique stylized performance

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

Stephen Sondheim, the foremost contributor to American musical theatre, is infamous for pairing his impossibly complex scores and equally intricate lyrics. Many groups avoid his work because of the challenge it presents to both performers and theatre-goers alike. Audiences are reluctant to respond well to a Sondheim show because the biting realism it portrays is quite a venture from the type of entertainment expected from a musical. But none of these things prevented the UMass Theatre Guild from bringing one of Sondheim's best known pieces to campus this weekend, as they bravely produced Company in the Student Union Ballroom.

Meet Bobby, played endearingly by Jason Moldoff. He's young, charming, attractive, popular with the ladies, and ready to settle down. But he doesn't want to. He can only observe the lesser side of commitment, despite the constant pressure and persuasion from all of his married friends. Throughout the course of the show, his fears and his friends' disputes to them chase him into a resolution that finally reveals all that he stands to gain from a relationship, even if he doesn't find one.

Almost every scene in Company is a manifestation of a two-sided argument for and against marriage. The musical does a fine job of presenting a variety of conflicting ideas, therefore, the message audiences take from it is often based on their own beliefs — because there isn't one winning point of view conveyed. Director Jana Jacobson clearly identified this problem, and with a particularly intelligent interpretation aimed to conceptualize the show, so that all sides of the debate were given equal stage time and nicely illustrated that this was Bobby's story.

The most noticeable and unfortunate failure of the production was the general lack of confidence, which seems to be more at the fault of the artistic and technical designing teams than the actors. Much of the excellent direction and choreography was lost in a set that was, though very ambitious, ultimately restrictive. If more attention was paid to painting clearer, more appropriate stage pictures instead of an excessively detailed set (i.e. every couple having their own apartment) the end result might have been more secure. For example, a fantastic scene, performed by Matthew Speredelozzi and Amy Wilkinson, was all but hidden due to the unflattering placement of their apartment on the stage.

An orchestra for any Sondheim show is given possibly the most difficult aspect of the production. His music is extraordinarily fast, rich, and full of unexpected key changes and tempo turns. One wishes the musicians for Company had more practice, as the actors were too hesitant or mislead by a pianist doing his best to keep up and the remainder of the orchestra participating intermittently to the songs.

On an even more specific note, the costume and hair/make-up designers might have been more careful to alter the appearance of the cast so they did not so closely resemble college students. Although they all looked wonderful under the stage lights, it is unlikely that a father of two would have spiked hair and an exceptional sense of style. Aging make-up and more practical clothing and hair would have better suited the themes of Company.

But the Guild's production was certainly not without redeeming qualities. The entire female cast sang beautifully, a feature that was consummated in "Poor Baby" and "You Could Drive a Person Crazy," as they harmonized perfectly. Denise Brown, Amy Wilkinson, Beth Carey, and Matt Speredelozzi were all appropriately charming in their roles. Nick Adams and Jason Muldoff maintained a level of impressive energy. And Jo Ann Valle powerfully delivered all of her work. The cast as a whole seemed most comfortable in the upbeat, high activity numbers, as seen in the opening of both acts, proving that despite the inescapable technical shortcomings, they were a tight ensemble. I trust that with a more unified design of the show, their collective talent would have been better highlighted and the Guild would have produced something as solid as previous attempts, such as Little Shop of Horrors, have been.

However, their attempt to do a musical like Company at all is commendable. It isn't every day that college students are exposed to anti-idealistic notions about love and life. The Guild took on a significant task with Company, and in light of the sum of the parts, the mistakes of the production become excusable and what remains is a praiseworthy effort.

KARA STOKES/COLLEGIAN

Stephen Sondheim's musical Company, produced by the UMass Theatre Guild, presents scenarios debating the pros and cons of marriage.

Post-holiday weekend sees box office plummet

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

The Hollywood execs should call this weekend, the weekend following Thanksgiving, "Black Death" because that is essentially what it is for box office intakes. Coming off Thanksgiving weekend, this is traditionally one of the worst weekends in terms of box office for the entire year. It is completely normal for total box office to tumble by 50 percent or more. For instance, last weekend the top ten films grossed $142.8 million combined. This weekend, they managed only $69.2 million, a drop off of 52 percent; that's only $11.8 million more than Toy Story 2 made by itself last weekend. It's also probably the reason that the weekend saw not one new opener, and, in fact, the return of an old friend. So, sit back, relax, and watch how even the rich tumble.

COURTESY PHOTO

Woody and his friend Wheezy managed to top a sluggish box office weekend for the second time.

Overall, the positions from last week hold true with only two flip-flops in the top ten. Toy Story 2 once again maintained the top spot at the box office – a surprise to absolutely no one. The film actually surpassed the $100 million dollar mark on Saturday (ten days after its release), and managed $28.5 million for the weekend. Despite the 51 percent drop, Pixar has another $150 million plus film on its hands as TS2 has grossed $117 million to date.

The World is Not Enough is also quickly approaching the $100 million plateau. A 55 percent week-to-week tumble didn't prevent Bond from claiming second place and a $10.6 million weekend. That's $90.4 million to date and a likely US gross of $125 million, or thereabouts; these have become so predictable that it's almost sickening.

End of Days, Arnold's latest, did $8.7 million over the weekend frame. That was good enough for a 55 percent drop from its opening weekend. Watch this get buried next week by the barrage of adult competition.

The final movie in this weekend's "top tier" was Sleepy Hollow. Tim Burton's adaptation continues to have mixed word of mouth, and followed suit with a 51 percent week-to-week drop. With $72.3 million thus far, it will be interesting to see this and Bond's multiplier next week.

The Bone Collector leap-frogged one spot to move up to fifth for the weekend. Its 44 percent drop was the best for any movie in the top ten. A $3.1 million weekend brought its total to $58.1 million overall.

Next came Pokemon (no doubt reeling from Toy Story 2's introduction into the market), limping to the conclusion of its month long box office stint. For some reason, this is still on 3000+ screens, despite its pathetic $2.2 million weekend. No one would have predicted that this would end up at only $80.6 million after opening at $31 million ($53 million over five days), only three weeks ago. That's a 2.59 multiplier. Not the worst ever, but pretty bad.

Kevin Smith's Dogma also finished its first month at the box office. Lions Gate's potential Oscar gem managed $2.15 million in its fourth weekend for a $24.5 million total. Still, the movie performed about as average as possible; look at the 2.81 multiplier.

Following Dogma were two other Oscar hopefuls: The Insider and Being John Malkovich. The former grossed $1.4 million, which was good enough for eighth place. With a $23.9 million cumulative gross, Michael Mann's film probably needs to hang on a little longer for any Oscar nods. Being finds itself in a similar situation. Its $1.39 million weekend brought its total to $13.9 million, but USA films is not making any effort to expand screens: 624 usually doesn't get it done.

Anywhere but Here rounds out this week's top ten and its first box office month. It tumbled 54 percent to a meager $1.3 million and $16.4 million to date. It opened at $5.6 million which means a slightly better than average 2.93 multiplier.

Perhaps the biggest surprise though, was Star Wars: The Phantom Menace's appearance at number eleven. After failing to place in the top 94 last week, the film reappeared on 832 screens making $1.2 million over the weekend. Unless George Lucas built some theaters and then bought a lot of tickets himself, I just can't figure this out. Still, a re-entry into the top ten after 29 weeks of release would have been miraculous.

ABC sweeps Nov. sweeps due to Millionaire

By Brian Lowry
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD – "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire" brought about a reversal of fortune in November, stemming the flow of TV viewers from the major networks while providing the lifeline that hoisted ABC to a sweeps victory – and left NBC in third place – for the first time in five years.

The quiz show phenomenon, which will return as a regular series in January, aired 18 out of 28 days during the ratings survey that ended Wednesday. November is one of three months stations use to negotiate advertising rates, prompting networks to roll out the big programming guns hoping to boost their performance.

Yet "Millionaire" so tipped the balance of power – lifting ABC from third to first place – some executives are questioning whether those results will truly be reflective of future viewing patterns, a complaint registered in relation to past sweeps affected by extraordinary events such as the Winter Olympics.

Peter Chrisanthopoulos, president for broadcast and programming at ad agency Ogilvy & Mather in New York, suggested "Millionaire's" influence would cause media buyers to approach last month's data skeptically.

"On a local basis things need to be discounted because it's atypical for one program to run 18 times in a month," he said, referring to the ABC quiz show. "The bread and butter of each network's schedule is the regular programming, because that's what's going to be there next month and the month after."

David Poltrack, CBS' executive vice president in charge of research, was more pointed, calling ABC's inflated numbers "useless to ad agencies and advertisers."

That said, even rival networks welcomed some of the viewing trends. Overall tune-in to the four major networks actually rose slightly compared to November 1998 – a rare achievement for broadcasters who have experienced a steady loss of audience to cable and other alternatives.

One of the newer broadcast networks, UPN, also enjoyed a ratings surge versus a year ago, thanks primarily to "WWF Smackdown!" – a two-hour wrestling show that accounts for a fifth of UPN's prime-time output.

ABC's audience soared nearly 20 percent over the corresponding frame last year, to an average 15.2 million viewers, largely because "Millionaire" exceeded ratings for the programs it replaced by more than 150 percent.

The Disney-owned network even surpassed NBC among adults age 18 to 49, the demographic segment most sought by media buyers, which usually best translates into sales revenue. ABC's principal competitors nevertheless took heart from how well they weathered the storm. With holiday perennial "Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer" leading the way Wednesday, CBS edged NBC for the full survey, averaging 13.6 million viewers to the Peacock network's 13.5 million. Despite Millionaire's" success, each declined by less than one percent from the previous year.

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00

Earrings by Ed Levin
The Finest
Earrings by Ed Levin
Earrings by Ed Levin
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324
204 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3924
www.silverscapedesigns.com • 800-729-8971

DO YOU NEED YOUR WISDOM TEETH REMOVED?
If so, patients are being enrolled for a wisdom teeth research study. Your wisdom teeth can be extracted by a Board Certified Oral Surgeon. Financial compensation will be provided for your opinion on a research pain medication.
For more information call:
SCIREX Corporation at (860) 285-0569
Outside Windsor call toll free 1-800-285-0569
SCIREX

Do you have a legal problem?
We specialize in civil and criminal litigation, including university disciplinary actions.
FIERST & PUCCI LLP
64 Gothic Street
Northampton, MA 01060
cjk@ent-atty.com
413-584-8067

■ football

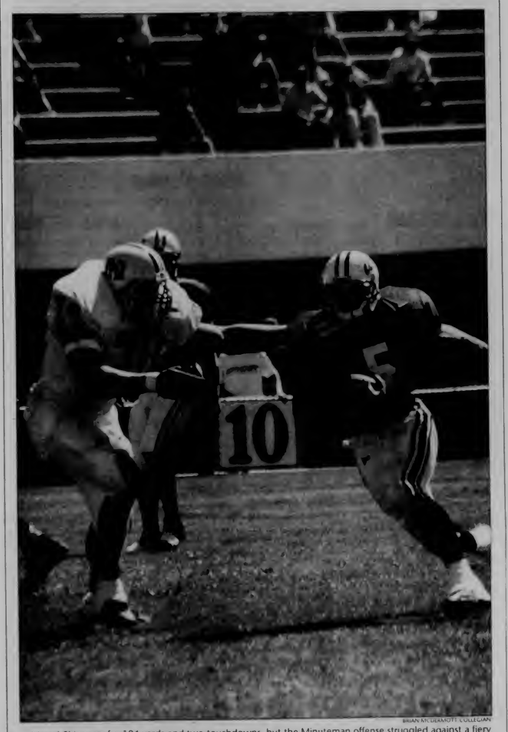
continued from page 10

big play guy."

After a seven-turnover disaster last season, the Eagles were more sure-handed in round two, fumbling the ball away just once. That fumble, though, came at the UMass ten-yard line as Edmund Coley mishandled the pitch on the option, allowing Dan Healey to fall on the ball at the 11. With the opportunity to retake the lead, the offense stormed downfield, first on a 26-yard completion to Adrian Zullo, and then a four-yard run up the middle by Marcel Shipp. On 1st-and-10 at its own 41-yard line, UMass saw the opening close quickly, when Bankhead found tight end Sean Higgins over the middle, and Higgins, after gaining 25 yards to the GSU 34, coughed up the ball. It was UMass' only turnover on the afternoon.



With Georgia Southern's offense coming in averaging 51 points per game, the Minutemen had hoped to gain an early lead to force a run-oriented offense to air it out. In the first quarter, the opportunities were there, as GSU stumbled out of the gates. However, the Minutemen could not get its foot in the door.

"We were really out of synch and you got to credit Georgia Southern," Whipple said. "We just made a bunch of bad calls early."

Much of the hype about the two high-powered offenses was lowered to a simmer early on, as the first score would come from the Eagles' defense at the 4:40 mark of the first quarter. Punter Scott Shelton pinned the Minutemen at their own ten after the Georgia Southern offense stalled. After a pair of penalties, Bankhead tripped after receiving the snap and fell backward into the end zone for a safety.

The Minutemen found the end zone first when Shipp scored from two yards out with 13:24 remaining in the first half, later adding another two-yarder in the opening stages of the second half to give the Minutemen a 14-10 lead.

In the grand finale of his career, Bankhead, who holds virtually all of school records for passing, finished with 316 yards and a touchdown.

BRIAN MCGRATH/COLLEGIAN

Marcel Shipp ran for 104 yards and two touchdowns, but the Minuteman offense struggled against a fiery Georgia Southern front seven.

■ EAGLES

continued from page 10

Peterson away," Whipple said. "We kept hitting him. Coley is a great player, and that's why they're so dangerous and so talented on offense. They've got a lot of guys... He broke tackles, he was the player of the game."

The second half was all Peterson, as the sophomore glided through the Maroon and White to finish the day with an amazing total of 333 yards and five touchdowns. "Really, there are no words to describe Adrian Peterson," GSU coach Paul Johnson said. "I told him in the second half that if we score, we will win this ball game. I guess I'm just smart enough to hand the ball to him."

Making things even more difficult for the Minutemen effort were the losses of two All Atlantic 10 defenders in linebacker Kole Avi and cornerback Jerard White, as both left the game with injuries as the defense continued to run out of breath.

"I was hoping Paul would be kind when he saw Avi off, or that Peterson would get tired or something, but he just kept going up and down (the field)," Whipple said. "I thought Hill was the best player in the country coming in, but if I had a vote, I'd go the other way today. See, they've got two great players, and that's why they've got a great football team."

"He's a great back, and he just kept on running," UMass linebacker Matt Dawson said. "He's real strong and he broke a couple tackles and he's a great back. We didn't really notice this head cold, he just ran all over us."

■ basketball

continued from page 10

for that," Flint continued. "To be honest with you, I expect these games out of Monty, he's a quasi-senior so you expect him to step up when he's your best player."

Bell, a finalist for the 1998-1999 Mr. Basketball award in Minnesota, did show his youth, however, committing ten turnovers in 36 minutes.

"It was turnovers that led to a lot of scores, and that was a big difference," said B.C. coach and UMass alumnus Al Skinner. "As he gets more respect in this league, he'll gain a better understanding and earn respect so some of those turnovers will become fouls."

UM co-captain Chris Kirkland slid more comfortably into the offensive fold as he netted 16 points with three steals.

"I think Chris just has to be aggressive, he just has to get a little selfish, you can't score if you only take one or two shots in the half," said Flint. "(In the second half) because he was aggressive, he shot nine foul shots... all he did differently was instead of getting the ball and pump-faking then passing it, he caught the ball and tried to take it to the basket."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Monty Mack

His frontcourt mate, freshman Micah Brand, saw ample time off the bench to chip in nine points on a 4-for-6 outing. Point guard Shannon Crooks contributed nine points to go with three steals. Winston Smith also earned himself 26 minutes at the swing forward position by doing a lot of the undercover work.

"I thought there were two people who really stepped up today and that was Winston and Micah Brand," said Flint. "Micah Brand made some plays for us after Kiwana Rhymer fouled out. For Winston, it's not going to show up on the score sheet, but I thought he brought a lot of energy."

The Minutemen were on the defensive for most of the first half. Down 14-9 at 9:56, Bell stole the ball and relayed a baseball pass up to Jonathan Beerbohm for a dunk and a seven-point lead. Following a timeout, UMass answered back as Jonathan DePina fed Mike Babul an alley-oop pass to shake up the Eagles' momentum.

Four minutes later, Crooks struggled to gain control of the ball as Kenny Walls stripped him and sailed in for another dunk and a 10-point lead. The Minutemen, who scored 30 points off of turnovers, compared to 15 points by Boston College, utilized their defensive strengths to tame the Eagles. With 1:39 left, Mack collected a steal off Osei Miller and drove in for the layup, but was intentionally fouled by Walls. Mack, a consistent free throw shooter, drained the two to narrow the lead down to three at 32-29.

After another Mack try with 34 seconds left, Rhymer put UMass in the lead for the first time since 17-58 with a layup with two seconds left.

Following a temporary comeback by the Eagles, Brand, who scored seven of his nine points in the second half, nailed a hook shot in traffic to bring the Minutemen within one at 39-38 in the second half.

Kirkland, showing the aggressiveness and versatility he exploded with last season, scored on a 16-footer at 10:29 to take back the lead, 51-49. He would follow his routine with an emore dunk after Crooks and DePina teamed up for a steal.

The next time down the court, B.C. failed to get off a shot and was called for a 30-second violation. Although momentum was picking up for UMass with more players attacking the basket, Bell and Boston College were not done yet.

Senior Michael Cotton went 2-for-2 at the candy stripe and then stripped Kirkland on a layup at 6:01. Bell refused to be silenced as he jammed a monster dunk at the five-minute mark to keep the Eagles within striking distance at 59-57.

From there on out, however, it would be UMass pulling together as a team to seek out the victory. Mack served up another trey to bring the lead back up to five with 4:21 left. On the next possession, Mack pulled down an offensive rebound and sent an outlet pass to Kirkland who set Mack up for a lay-up at 3:55.

The Minutemen have little time to rest as they host Malik Allen and the Villanova Wildcats (2-0) tonight at the William D. Mullins Center at 7 p.m. Allen leads all Wildcat scorers with 16.5 points per game as his squad smoked past Fairleigh Dickinson 62-52 at home last Monday. UMass fell to Villanova 66-55 at The Pavilion last year. The game will be televised on ESPN2.

■ BU

continued from page 10

streak (9-0-2).

"It was almost a replay of last night in that we got a couple of seeing eye goals to win games. The puck went through their guys stick and onto Degerman's," BU hockey coach Jack Parker said. "They [UMass] played well enough to get all four points this weekend. They are a good hockey team. It was a battle tonight."

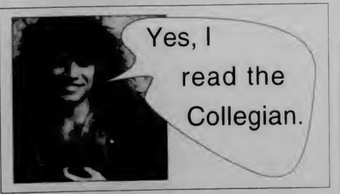
UMass tallied the first goal of the game on a power play late in the first period. Sophomore defenseman Toni Soderholm let a shot go from the left point that found its way through a maze of players and past Tapp for a 1-0 lead. Jeff Blanchard and Darcy King assisted on the Finn's first goal of the year.

"I think that our guys thought it was going to be an easy game in our rink tonight, but they [UMass] really took it to us in the first period," Parker said. "I made sure to let them know about that in the first intermission."

The Terriers stormed out of the locker room with three goals in the first 12:40 of the middle frame. Brian Collins netted the equalizer 1:56 into the second to tie the game at 1-1 before Carl Corazzini put the hometown team ahead at the 9:54 mark. Mike Pandolfo would then add one more goal on for good measure just under three minutes later to pad the BU lead to 3-1.

"You have to give credit to BU. Their first line did us in on both nights," Mallen said.

Of the six Hockey East games that the Minutemen have lost, four have been by one goal. If UMass had gotten a break here or there, it could be sitting in the middle of the pack in the league. However, that hasn't been the case, and the Maroon and White will now have about a month to assess its situation before jumping back into Hockey East play in early January.



For now, UMass will look ahead towards a big weekend in South Bend, Indiana. The Minutemen will take on Notre Dame for a pair in the first ever meeting between the two schools on the ice.

"We're going to have to go back to work on Monday. It may not be showing up in the Hockey East win column, but we're playing tremendous hockey right now," Mallen said.

DAN YAN/COLLEGIAN

The Minutemen next take the ice this weekend when they travel to South Bend for a two-game set against the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame.

COLLEGIAN SPORTS!

Ultimate Experience $299
SUN SNOW FUN
www.skitravel.com 1-800-999-SKI

安城中国饭店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst
VISA

IN SHAPE NUTRITION
Nutrition Supplement Discounter
Great Products, Great Prices, Great Service!
END OF THE MILLENNIUM BLOWOUT SALE!
November 29th-December 31st
65 University Drive, Amherst 549-7434
Get coupons online @ www.inshapeonline.com

DUBLIN, IRELAND
Irish Theatre and Culture
Study the work of four major Irish dramatists: Synge, O'Casey, Beckett, and Friel and immerse yourself in lectures at Ireland's premier drama school, the Gaiety School of Acting. Class also includes theatre visits and excursions.
SUMMER 2000
BOSTON UNIVERSITY
232 Bay State Rd., 5th Floor
Boston, MA 02215
617/353-9888
abroad@bu.edu
www.bu.edu/abroad
An equal opportunity, affirmative action institution

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is playing archrival UMass-Lowell Saturday at 1pm at the Mullins Ice Rink. Free admission Womens Ice Hockey is fun to watch!!

Local INDEPENDENT SHORT FILM needs interns for Jan. Recieve a film credit. Many position open: Sound, hair + make-up, art design, gaffer + grip. Contact # 413-286-7886

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom luxury apartment available January 1, 2000. Please call 413-253-7377 for more information.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Boulders $387 flexible avail. Call Chris 256-1629

Take over my lease! Large 2Bdrm, Cheap! Call 259-9183 on bus route

Beautiful 2-Bdrm in NOHO 2-floors, Jan 1 $775+electric Vicky or Angela 586-3132

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apt. Cliffside, Sunderland. $300/mo. Everything included. Call Ito H: 665-8721 W: 545-2108

AUTO FOR SALE

92 VW Golf 50k auto/air $5900/bo 256-4177

AUTO FOR SALE

1989 Honda Civic DX 95k miles $2950 or B/O 545-4878 268-3155

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Dell Pentium2 Laptop 233mHz 64MBRAM 3.2 Hard Mod CD/Floppy 56k Modem + more $1500 negotiable call will 253-8074

Do you know Autocad and Microstation? If you do call Scott Yarosh at (413) 546-4895 Will pay up to $3000 per job that has to be done.

EMPLOYMENT

Fraternities * Sororities * Clubs * Student Groups Student organizations earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 797-5743, x. 301, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

Holiday Jobs For The Environment! $300-400/week work with the Sierra Club over the winter break and beyond! Call Jesse 256-6434

EMPLOYMENT

Are you a sport or fitness enthusiast? Earn two academic credits for teaching in the GPE program. For more information call the GPE Office at 545-2338

allstudents.com

Work for a College Internet Company

While Still in School!

Leverage your Campus Knowledge to get paid well as a Campus Marketing Manager

Skills needed
- Outgoing & Motivated
- Leadership
- Organized & Resourceful
- Project management skills
- Familiarity with campus

Experience
- Sophomore or higher
- Live on or near campus
- Campus Involvement
- Active on Internet

Responsibilities
- Help Develop Marketing Plan
- Interview & Hire Support Staff
- Facilitate Campus Relations
- Local Account Management
- Manage Marketing Budget
- Execute Local Campaigns
- Help Conduct Campus Research

Open Interviews will be held on or near your campus the week of Dec. 6th. Go to allstudents.com for exact time, date, & location info.

E-mail resume to jobs@allstudents.com for more information 1-888-640-8810 ext.212

BARTENDERS Make $100-$300 per night no experience necessary. Call 1-800-981-8168 ext 205

EMPLOYMENT

Summer business internship available not limited to business majors earn up to $15,000 this summer call 1-800-390-4848 ext 100 ASAP or visit www.univ-paint.com

Wanted Dec 21 - Jan 25, Longer optional. Student handyperson, also housecleaner car essential. 413-549-1578

Movers Part time positions available for winter intersession and spring semester. Starting pay $8.00 per hour. Located close to UMASS. Call 584-4746

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

FOR RENT

Great Sublet for Dog Lovers 3 Bedroom house near Smith College Jan-May $675. Reduced form $900 in exchange for care of 2 happy dogs 584-1987

FOR SALE

SNOWBOARD 97 M*I*A 153 Good condition Capped Edges, Dr Pro Model $300

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

GREEK AFFAIRS

Congrats to the new sisters of Sigma Kappa Lisa St. Don, Kristin Courtenay, Samantha Sherwin, Alison Buraczenski, Deirdra Dostou, Melissa Cleary, Kristin Rock in Sigma Love, The Sisters of Sigma Kappa

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday, Matt! Love your house and mine!

INSTRUCTION

Learn how to really fight! Don't be a victim. Private boxing lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus. In Amherst on bus route 256-0364

ROOM FOR RENT

3 Rooms for rent, next to SW dorm, Call 253-3670

January-August lease in Leverett. $325/mo. utilities, washer and dryer included. Call Cemil 549-1643

1 bedroom in three bedroom house available in Hobart rent is 275 a month + utilities 548-8068

Female roommate wanted ASAP. In 3 bedroom Townhouse $330 a month 549-2066

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Roommate Wanted 1 minute to bus busses every 5min CHEAP rent 549-9254

Share Huge Room. Jan-Aug awesome house + roommates. $250 month cheap utilities on bus route 586-9552 Julia, Pam, Nate

Roommate Wanted in 2bedroom Brandywine Apt. utilities included $215/month on bus route call Eric, Greg 549-1029

Mill Valley 3 bedroom 2 bath on bus route. Looking for 2-3 roommates Call 256-1115

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment in S. Amherst on bus route oil/heat $300/month, utilities extra. Avail. next semester. call Jill 256-1742

1 or 2 roommates wanted! Located in South Amherst. On bus route. Heat & hot water included. $270/one person. $190/2 people call 256-3201

Housemate Wanted for one room in a four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons. Cheap rent, utilities inc. Starting January 1st. 253-2229

1 Bdrm in 2 Bdrm Apt. 2 people to share big room non-smoker. 3/4 miles from campus. Aprox $300 inclusive. Call Joe 253-4275

SERVICES

Personal Holiday Candygrams only $7.00! Delivery anywhere at UMass. Personal greeting with candy 253-6722

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Professional Male Alumni from South Shore (Boston) seeks sublet for winter session. Single or shared apartment on bus/near town. Leave message. Eddie (781) 837-2244

TRAVEL

Spring Break 2000 Free Trips, Free Meals & Drinks Jamaica, Cancun, Fla, Barbados, Bahamas, Padre Book now for FREE Meals & 2 Free Trips Book Before DEC. 17 FOR LOWER PRICES!! 1-800-426-7710 / www.sunsplashtours.com

Browse icpt.com for Springbreak "2000" ALL destinations offered. Trip Participants, Student Orgs & Campus Sales Reps wanted. Fabulous parties, hotels & prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

TARVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

WANTED

Be an internet star! Seeking off-campus students to host 24/7 live web cam in your home. Interested? Chect out www.masslive.com/offcampuscam or call 584-2777 for more information

Seeking aspiring local bands to be featured in student film. Please send demo tape to UVC-TV19 216 Student Union c/o noise ASAP for more information call 545-1336

To be a part of this Just Call 545-3500 The Collegian Classifieds!!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, DEC. 6

Community – Applications for the Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team training sessions should be dropped off in room 222 of the Hampshire House by the end of the day.

Meeting – There will be a UVC-TV 19 station meeting at 7 p.m. Everyone who attends is eligible to win a free t-shirt. The station is located behind the Hatch in the Student Union.

TUESDAY, DEC. 7

Meeting – The Pride Alliance will hold its final meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in room 904-906 of the Campus Center. After the meeting there will be a trip to the Black Sheep in Amherst. Call 545-0154 for more information.

Mini Mall – There will be a mini mall in the Student Union Ballroom showcasing a variety of vendors from 10 a.m.-5 p.m.

NOTICES

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Deneege Akpem entitled "Dayst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Community – The library hours for Dec. 6 through Dec. 19 will be from 7 a.m.-2 a.m. Study space is available, but there will be no staffed services from 7-8 a.m. and midnight-2 a.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Information – The last information sessions this semester for the domestic exchange program will be held Tuesdays and Wednesdays until Dec. 15 or by appointment. They will be in 614 Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Call 545-5351 for more information. The priority deadline for applications is Dec. 13, and the final deadline is March 1.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

Training – The Campus Mediation and Negotiation Team, based in the legal studies department, is offering a mediation training session for all students from Jan. 3-7. Students will receive mediation certification, and academic credit is possible. Applications are available in room 222 of the Hampshire House, and are due on Dec. 6. Call 545-5882 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 Hampshire Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board
3	CBS/3 Hartford
4	CBS/4 Boston
5	ABC/5 Boston
6	PBS/57 Boston
7	HSCN Music TV
8	UPN/20 Boston
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30 New Britain
11	Fox/61 Hartford
12	PBS/24 Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN Springfield
14	International
15	UMass Aadamic TV
16	WB/ New Haven
17	Sunshine
18	The Learning Channel
19	UVC-TV19
20	ABC/ 40 Springfield

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 6, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Our Contributions: The Italians in America (In Stereo)						Yogi Berra-Doja Yu
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker (R)	And So This Is Christmas		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker (R)	And So This Is Christmas		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		NFL Football: Minnesota Vikings at Tampa Bay Buccaneers (In Stereo Live)
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven (R) (In Stereo)		7th Heaven (R) (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Moesha	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Real TV (R)	Change-Heart	Caroline
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Cinderelmo (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal (R) (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	8	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Taste of Chanukah (In Stereo)		Return of Sarah's Daughters				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	20/20		NFL Football: Minnesota Vikings at Tampa Bay Buccaneers (In Stereo Live)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Nicki Lake
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Movie: "Licence to Kill" (1989) Action		Timothy Dalton, Carey Lowell.				"For Your Eyes Only" (1981)
A&E	51	Simon & Simon		Law & Order		Biography: Vanna		Investigative Reports (R)		Poirot "Double Sin"		Law & Order "Silence"
CNN	29	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	35	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Movie: "3 Heads in a Duffel Bag" (1997, Comedy) Joe Pesci.				Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	53	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery	Wild Asia	On the Inside: Hostage		If We Had No Moon		Savage Sun		On the Inside: Hostage
ESPN	21	S.45 Sportscenter		Monday Night Countdown				Figure Skating: Trophee Lalique.					ESPNews
LIFE	69	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Ally Sheedy"		Beyond Chance		"If You Believe" (1999, Drama) Ally Walker. Premiere.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	33	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	TRL Wanna	100 Greatest Videos		Biorhythm (R)	Need Trip (R)	Road Rules	Road Rules	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	68	Ali That	Cardog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Eddie	Rocket Power	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy
SCIFI	61	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Storm of the Century (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 3)				Storm of the Century (R)
TLC	26	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Trauma" (R)		Paramedics		Hollywood Cops		Hollywood Cops "Street Life"		Paramedics (R)
TNT	62	Due South (In Stereo)		ER "Baby Shower" (In Stereo)		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)						"Rocky IV" (1985)
USA	27	Baywatch "Trial by Fire"		JAG "The Adversaries"		Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw		WWF War Zone		Walker, Texas Ranger
HBO	24	(5:30) "Mission: Impossible 2" (2000, Action) PG		Goodnight Mn		"Earthly Possessions" (1999, Comedy) R		Anna and King	Taxicab Confessions Six			"Lethal Weapon 4" (1998)
MAX	40	"Big Business" (1988, Comedy) Bette Midler. PG				"Anzio" (1968) Voices of Woody Allen. PG		"Strategic Command" (1996, Suspense)				"Return of the Living Dead"
SHOW	36	"Mrs. Dalloway" (1997, Drama) Vanessa Redgrave. PG-13						Tired Retirement (R)	Robert Klein			Hoop Life

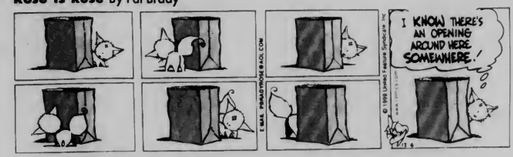
Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Focus on your own potential at this time. Do not make the mistake of thinking that you've already done enough. There's a lot on the line.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – This is a good day for fine-tuning your own plans, and preparing for even the most unlikely surprises. Leave no stone unturned today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Whereas you may have depended on one other individual in the past, you may have need of an entire team of support for a short while today.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You have much to share with those around you today, but more important than what you have to offer is what you have to learn if you let yourself.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – Your flexibility and willingness to take advice and criticism make you an excellent candidate for lasting benefits today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Even the slightest alteration in your plans today is a good day to sit back, relax, and get your wits about you once again. You'll enjoy a much-needed emotional second-wind.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – It's time to put aside your fears and insecurities today and forge ahead with a new project that has the potential for great success.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Prospects are bright today, and you have every reason to expect positive developments, even when faced with a sudden slow-down or complication.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – This may yield remarkable and favorable results. Be willing to experiment.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – What appears to be one thing is likely to turn out to be something else again entirely today – especially where your emotions are concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You can make a major contribution to the well-being of those around you today, and it needn't involve a personal sacrifice of any kind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Your social calendar is likely to fill quickly today, as a result of a sudden increase in popularity. You have much to offer today.

Quote of the Day

"I love you, Rain Check!"

–Kid in the Toys R Us Commercial

Close to Home By John McPherson

Having encouraged homeowners to leave a copy of "Chicken Soup for the Burglar's Soul" on their coffee tables, police are able to nail yet another loafing thief.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Soup Du Jour (The soup of the day)
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
DINNER
Roast Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Meat Lasagna
La Commensal

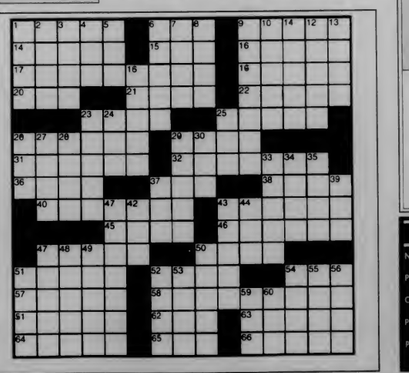
Worcester
LUNCH
Soup Du Jour (The soup of the day)
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
DINNER
Roast Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Meat Lasagna

Hampshire
LUNCH
Soup Du Jour (The soup of the day)
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
DINNER
Roast Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Meat Lasagna
La Commensal

Berkshire
LUNCH
Soup Du Jour (The soup of the day)
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
DINNER
Roast Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Meat Lasagna
La Commensal

Collegian Staff

Night Editor: Vanessa Walker
Photo Technitian: Barbara Bradbury
Copy Editor: Samantha Poulten
Production Supervisor: John Burt
Production Staff: Alan Basque, Tereza Rodrigues



ACROSS
1 1998 Winter Olympics site
6 Matterhorn, e.g.
9 Copy a drawing
14 Disconcert
15 Water, in Montreal
16 "Take it easy!"
17 Prepares to drive
19 Be a ham
20 Sault — Marie
21 "Return of the Jedi" character
22 Queues
23 Lose one's balance
25 Change
26 Sword or rifle
29 Skirt length
31 Preparing for battle
32 Subterfuge
36 Tree part
37 And
38 Bullfight cheers
40 Doubter
43 "Gulliver's Travels," e.g.
45 Hindu princess
46 Heather's role on "Melrose Place"
47 Private teacher
50 Sticks out
51 Pierre's hat
52 Nosy
54 Rower's need
57 Seaweeds
58 Deserving praise
61 Consecrate
62 Bite
63 Pop up
64 Valuable thing
65 Door opener
66 Mexican coins

DOWN
1 Quick blows
2 Neighbor on TV
3 Rate of speed
4 Inquire
5 Philadelphia Flyers org.
6 Fable writer
7 Extol
8 Butterfly stage
9 Latticework support
10 Send in payment
11 Unescorted
12 Supply food for the party
13 Former spouses
18 Viewing
23 Malice
24 Chaney of film
25 Oklahoma town
26 "— and Peace"
27 Child of Aphrodite
28 Run — go wild
29 "Thank you, Henri"
30 Climbing plant
33 Tiny amounts
34 Lena of film
35 Social misfit
37 Commotion
39 Sargasso, for one
41 Object to
42 Paving stuff
43 Riyadh resident
44 Qty.
47 Informs
48 Persuades
49 Make fun of
50 Skittish
51 Ali —
52 Limp, as hair
53 "Garfield" pooch
54 Kimono sashes
55 Pius
56 Female sandpipers
59 Knock
60 "You — the Sunshine of My Life"

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

GAP LILAC PAL
LIMO ARENA OLIN
ABEL CATER ROVE
BENEFIT WEATHER
GREES BERLAND
UNFAIR HENNA
ROUTE RARE YVES
GEE DOODADS ARC
ELLA ADOS LUNGO
SHAEW FINEST
RASCAL YARNS
OCTAGON HOGTIED
ATOP COPES AGAR
MOVIE KARATI NOSY
RED SHEDS TRY

12-6-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Monday, December 6, 1999

UMass season comes to abrupt end

Peterson gains 333 yards en route to win

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

STATESBORO, Ga. – Defensive coordinator Don Brown and the Massachusetts football team knew what was coming. They'd talked about it all week.

The option.

Knowing is one thing, but stopping it is another.

Furman was somewhat of a preview, handling it well, but on Saturday, Georgia Southern overpowered the UMass defense, running straight through the Minutemen on its way to a 38-21 victory in the quarterfinal round of the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs. It was the 22nd consecutive victory at Paulson Stadium for Georgia Southern, who has never been beaten at home in the playoffs.

The Eagles will host sixth-seeded Illinois-State, who was a 37-20 winner over No. 3 Hofstra in Hempstead.

A year after a quiet performance for his standards, Adrian Peterson single-handedly picked apart the Minuteman defense. Peterson rumbled for a school-record 333 yards on 32 carries, scoring five times to provide the knockout punch which the Eagles were searching for since last year's Maroon and White triumph in the championship game.

Four of Peterson's touchdowns came in the second half, coming when the Minutemen had crept within striking distance. The sophomore had three scoring runs of 25 yards and another from nine yards out, plowing through the Minuteman front seven for 60 full minutes.

"He just kept going up and down," head coach Mark Whipple said. "I thought [GSU quarterback Greg] Hill was the best player in the country coming in, but if I had a vote, I'd go the other way today."

The Minutemen closed within 24-21 when Todd Bankhead hit Pete Cariello over the middle for a nine-yard scoring pass. After forcing the Eagles to punt, UMass took over on offense with a chance to take its first lead since 14-10. Georgia Southern, however, answered the call, sending Bankhead to the sidelines after just three plays.

Peterson scored three plays later from 25 yards out, increasing the Eagles lead to 31-21 with 6:52 left to play.

"We had a good plan, we had a solid plan on both sides of the ball," Whipple said. "There's no excuses. They were just better than us."

Still just two possessions from taking the lead, the offense returned to the field, but soon departed when, after three Bankhead incompletions, the defense got to the senior quarterback for the fifth time on the afternoon, this time on fourth down to all but close the book on the UMass season.

To make matters worse, Peterson wasn't done. On the very next play, Peterson ran into a sea of linemen and, after breaking numerous tackles, came out the other end scot-free, prancing the final 20 yards untouched into the end zone for the fifth time.

"He's a great back and he just kept on running. He's real strong and he broke a couple tackles," senior linebacker Matt Dawson said. "We didn't really notice [the head cold], he pretty much ran all over us."

Peterson's eyes lit up when the injury bug bit the central part of the Minuteman defense. Linebacker Kole Ayi, who led the team with 147 tackles this season, was helped off the field with a high ankle sprain after Peterson went in with his third touchdown run.

"They were going up and down the field in the second half a little bit more than they were in the first half," Whipple said. "A lot of it came up the middle, and Compton [Webster] played well, but we missed [Ayi], our

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Senior co-captains Todd Bankhead and Matt Dawson walked off the field, bearing the Maroon and White for the final time in their careers.

Eagles loaded backfield arsenal overwhelms UM

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

STATESBORO, GA – For the first time in two years, the triple option outlasted the Massachusetts football team.

In Saturday's second round matchup in the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs, Georgia Southern stuck to their guns and wore the Minuteman defense down to exhaustion in their 38-21 victory.

With only two pass completions for a total of 30 yards, the Eagles continued to pound away at the Maroon and White on the ground, and, unlike past option teams, came away with the win.

Against Furman, another team that bases their offense around the triple option, in the opening round of the tournament, UMass succeeded in overtime, 30-23. Past dealings with such a style of attack have yielded victories as well, as the Minutemen downed Richmond during the latter portion of the season, 53-6, and stymied these same GSU players in a 55-43 win in the National Championship game of a year ago.

This time, Massachusetts couldn't keep up.

UMass' coach Mark Whipple and his defensive coaching staff, led by Don Brown, came into the game knowing what to expect, and saw their squad slowly dismantled by the persistent Eagles.

The Minutemen controlled the option in the first quarter, but by the fourth, it was moving at will.

Georgia Southern was unable to reach the end zone in a frustrating first quarter. The Navy Blue was forced to punt in each of their opening period possessions, reaching a fifth play only once as they tried to get on track. On their first drive, elusive quarterback Greg Hill was sacked twice, and Eagle running back Adrian Peterson, who entered the game with nearly 1,900 just a few sporadic escapes.

COURTESY GEORGIA SOUTHERN MEDIA RELATIONS

Adrian Peterson

yards, was allowed

By the second quarter, GSU began to pick up steam, its game plan resembling more of starting train than a darting sports car. Peterson, with an alleged head cold, broke tackles with more and more frequency as the game went on.

When the ailing Eagle needed a breather, he was spelled very adequately by Edmund Coley and Cherard Freeman, the former posting an impressive 75 yards on eight carries in relief.

"We didn't take Adrian

Turn to EAGLES, page 7

UM downs Eagles, readies for 'Cat fight

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

CHESTNUT HILL – They compete in recruiting and conferences, and even in gaining the attention of the state. All that was aired out at the Silvio O. Conte Arena on Saturday, as the Massachusetts men's basketball team struck back with a 74-67 win over Boston College.

With the victory, the Minutemen (3-2 overall) remain undefeated in the Commonwealth Classic with a 4-0 advantage over the Eagles (3-2). The meeting last year turned out to be UMass' biggest margin of victory, dealing a 75-45 thrashing to the Eagles.

"I hate to have my guys come back and play in their hometown, they're [stuff- awful," said UM coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "B.C. is a thousand percent better ...but the thing about Today is] that we made plays to win and hopefully we can build something off of that."

In what evolved into a backcourt battle, Minutemen senior guard Monty Mack buried 26 points including six 3-pointers to tie his season-high. B.C. freshman Troy Bell answered with 12-for-14 from the line en route to a 29-point effort. In the most obvious instance of rivalry, with just 1:59 left Mack and Bell exchanged back-to-back treys in a battle of the bomb. Mack then raced down the other end and let go of another three, but it bounced off the back rim.

"He had just made a big shot the time before," said Flint. "When he was running down the court...and I think they threw it away, he just sort of looked at me, like tpointing to his head), because that's what I give him sometimes.

"But he made shots when we needed them so I guess I can forgive him

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 7

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Chris Kirkland scored 16 points against Boston College, helping the Minutemen complete their clean sweep of Massachusetts rivals.

Naughty or nice, BU takes home two

Late overtime goal ends heartbreaking weekend for UM

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

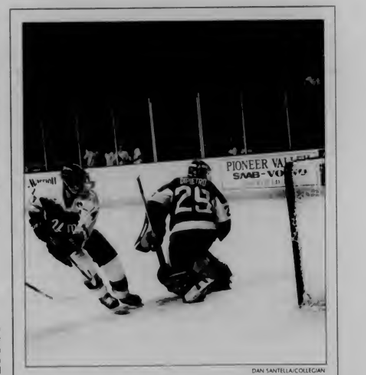
BOSTON – Christmas arrived three weeks early for the Boston University hockey team this year.

On Saturday night at Walter Brown Arena in Boston, the Terriers got an overtime gift from their counterparts from UMass. After an intended dump-in hopped over the stick of freshman defenseman Samuli Jalkanen, senior captain Tommi Degerman pounced on the loose puck and beat Minuteman goaltender Mike Johnson with 17 seconds left in overtime to give the Red and White a 4-3 win over UMass.

It was the second straight night that BU defeated UMass by a goal, with both losses coming in heartbreaking fashion for the Minutemen. UMass could have easily walked away with a pair of wins this weekend, but instead, ended up on the wrong end of both decisions.

"I don't think that we can play any better than that. We did everything but get the last goal," UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "It would have been nice to walk away with at least one point from BU. I have to give our guys credit though. We were short three forwards, but Mike Johnson and the rest of the guys did a great job."

Trailing 3-1 late in the second period, it seemed like the Terriers [11-3-2, 6-0-2 in Hockey East] were just about set to put the nail in UMass' coffin. Winger Jay Shaw was whistled for a tripping penalty, and the momentum was clearly on the side of the home team.



However, UMass [3-7-2, 0-6-1 in Hockey East] turned the tides of the game midway through the BU power play. Junior alternate captain Jeff Turner started an odd-man rush with classmate R.J. Gates in the offensive end. Although Jason Tapp stopped the original shot by Turner, he couldn't prevent Gates from tucking home the rebound to close the gap to 3-2.

The Minutemen then completed their comeback effort early in the third period. Sophomore Jedd Crumb worked his way out of the left-wing corner and into the slot before backhanding a bid that Tapp kicked out. Crumb remained persistent on the play, sticking with the rebound and flipping it past a fallen Tapp to knot the game at 3-3.

"I'm proud of the way that we came back in the third period. We've just got to find a way to get one more goal than the other guys," Mallen said.

In the end, though, all Crumb's goal did was set the stage for a marginal goal by Degerman. UMass had chances in the third period, but the Terriers caught a lucky break en route to the victory. With the win, BU is now on an 11 game unbeaten

Turn to BU, page 7

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

The hockey team kept it close, but Boston University came, saw, and conquered the Minutemen in two one-goal victories.

UM hockey falls victim to BU in game one

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

Sometimes you get the breaks you need and sometimes you don't. The Massachusetts hockey team got a much-needed break in the first period, but fell victim to Boston University by allowing two third period goals at the Mullins Center on Friday night.

"We hit the pipe or the post twice in the game, and we had a three-on-one late in the game. We had some great, quality chances and I thought we played our game well," coach Joe Mallen said.

The break for the Maroon and White came on a shorthanded goal by Jeff Turner at 15:24 of the first period. UMass' leading goal scorer made a great individual effort streaking past three BU defenders to break in alone on Terrier netminder Rick DiPietro. Turner then proceeded to slip a shot through the five-hole for a 1-0 Minuteman advantage.

"They were on the power play, and the puck just turned over in the neutral zone and I saw that the D-man was debating if he should come at me or let me come, and he got stuck in the middle. I knew I had a step on him and I beat him. The goalie tried to poke-check me and I slipped it through his five-hole," Turner said. "It was a huge goal. We've been trying to get an early lead all year, and lately it seems that we've been doing that."

This was a huge break for UMass as they were outshot and outplayed by the Terriers for the entire period. BU fired 14 shots in the period, all of which were turned aside by Markus Helanen.

Helanen made the lead stand throughout the second period, despite dominance by the Terrier offense. BU again put 14 shots on net and the junior goalie stopped all of them. The Maroon and White had numerous chances to take a two-goal lead, but the breaks didn't go their way.

Darcy King and Martin Miljko both were stoned by DiPietro at the five-minute mark and Jay Shaw broke in alone less than two minutes later but hit the post. These were shots that were finding the back of the net in the previous three games for the Minutemen where they totaled 15 goals, but that was not the case on this night.

The best chance for the Maroon and White came midway through the period when Tim Turner found himself with the puck on his stick in front of the net. Turner put a shot past DiPietro, but the goal was disallowed because there was a UMass player in the crease.

The Minutemen had a couple more chances to take a two-goal advantage in the third period, but Turner could not convert on a three-on-one and Kris Wallis was stoned by DiPietro to keep the Maroon and White lead at 1-0. The missed opportunities proved costly as Helanen was beaten twice in the period and the Minutemen went home with the loss.

Keith Emery found the net on a great shot to tie the game at one, but the Terriers had one more bite left.

With under two minutes remaining, it looked as if the game would go into overtime, but how quickly things change. A shot from the point by Chris Dyment trickled past Helanen and BU skated away with the victory.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 61 — Tuesday, December 7, 1999

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Rainy Day

Goodell reflects nicely in this puddle outside the library as pedestrians pass by.

Science award given to UMass professor

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts professor emeritus Richard Stein received the prestigious Von Hippel Award was presented to him on Dec. 1.

The award was given by the Materials Research Society to recognize Stein for his outstanding research in the field of polymer science. The ceremony, held in Boston, marked the first time that a polymer scientist or UMass faculty member has ever received the award.

The Von Hippel Award is the highest award presented by the society, and according to the society, recognizes "brilliance and originality of intellect, combined with vision extending beyond the boundaries of conventional scientific disciplines."

The award consists of $10,000 in cash and a ruby laser crystal given to the recipient. The crystal is given to symbolize the many facets of both science and of materials research.

According to a statement made by the society, the award cites Stein's "pioneering role in the development of graduate education in polymers," and his "profound contributions."

Previous recipients of the award have been from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, the University of California at Berkeley, Stanford University, Harvard University, Carnegie Mellon University, Cornell University and Lucent Technologies.

The Stein's award-winning research that was conducted focused primarily upon the mechanical and optical properties of the long chains of polymers. He used various forms of light, such as x-rays and infrared light, to measure both the size and shape of the molecules. His research methods are now used in industrial and academic laboratories around the country.

He first joined the staff at UMass University in the 1950's as an assistant professor. Currently he serves as an Emeritus Goodyear Professor of Chemistry.

One of his notable contributions, while working at the University, was helping to launch the polymer program, which branched off and is now the current polymer science and engineering department.

Stein pursued his undergraduate education at Brooklyn Polytechnic University, and during the duration of his studies there conducted some of the first studies in the dimensions of polymer molecules in solution.

He also attended and earned his doctorate at Princeton University.

In addition, Stein is also a member of the National Academy of Sciences, the National Academy of Engineering and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

UM and the year 2000

SGA considers effects of Y2K

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

This article is the second in a series.

It's Jan. 26, 2000, and as you battle with the administration in an attempt to confirm that you are actually a University of Massachusetts-Amherst student, the realization that the millennium bug has arrived hits you.

There are no records that show the work you have done for the past several semesters, there is no information on the financial aid on which you are dependent, and your situation is purely due to the fact that the Y2K bug has hit home at the University.

Some representatives from the Student Government Association said they have some concerns with how the administration will handle any possible problems.

"Although I am confident they [the administration] are already working to prevent any problems," Mikale Billard, speaker of the Senate said, "I'm hoping they will take all steps possible in response if something were to happen with Y2K."

He went on to say that if the Y2K bug hits, there could potentially be many problems within the University, ranging from lost transcripts and financial records to the possibility of students have trouble confirming classes they will be taking for the semester.

Beyond these initial thoughts, Billard also said, "I don't think there will be a drastic problem."

Jennifer Teixeira, associate speaker of the Senate, said she believed that any problems that may arise due to the Y2K bug should be fixed before students arrive back on campus and therefore hasn't thought about the issue. "I think they have a lot of time to fix the problems in January before the students get back," Teixeira said. "I don't think there will be an effect."

Michael Whitehouse, an at-large senator for Orchard Hill also expressed that he felt in general the problems would be minimal. "My estimate, in terms of financial stuff, is that the stock market will dip and recover. There will be some isolated blackouts (maybe some ATMs will go down for a day or two, inconveniences for a week. Store shelves might be empty for a while," Whitehouse said. "Not the end of the world."

Other senators felt similarly that there should not be any major problems because of the Y2K. "I think some systems on a small scale may be affected," Ken Campbell, senator and chair of the Safety Committee said. "But for the most part I think systems are being changed to help combat any problems."

"I really can't see anything big happening; call boxes and phones will still work. Even the e-mail system should run without too many problems," Campbell said. "Although it might be an improvement if Herter or some other building falls over."

The SGA does not foresee having any problems as an organization due to the Y2K. "All of their computers are fairly new and therefore are capable of handling the millennium. "Before the end of the semester, we will probably put everything on disk just in case, but our computers are Y2K complaint," Billard said.

Community mourns loss of firefighters

By Elizabeth Mehren
Los Angeles Times

WORCESTER, Mass. – Tim Jewell – a tough guy in a tough and battered city who does not make a habit of displaying his emotions. On Sunday morning, in tears, Jewell told his wife, Kathy, they should return all the Christmas presents they'd bought each other and give the money instead to the families of the six firefighters who died here Friday in a terrible warehouse blaze.

"I'll be here next year," Jewell told his wife. "They won't."

Carrying sacred carnations, Kathy Jewell was among a steady stream of mourners who gathered outside the windowless five-story brick building that continued to smolder well into Sunday. A vast black haze hung over a city that is itself a relic of an industrial era when fire prevention was on no one's mind. Smoke and silence and sadness filled the air as firefighters searched the rubble for the comrades they lost.

Laying a bouquet on Engine No. 7, the red firetruck that brought the dead firefighters to work Friday and now was a flower-bedecked shrine, Judy Fuller, a Worcester city employee, said in a hoarse voice, "There's 15 fatherless kids in this city today."

The firefighters' fire that claimed the lives of Lt. Thomas L. Spencer, 42, along with firefighters Timothy P. Jackson, 31; James L. Evans, 34; Joseph T. McGrath, 38; Paul A. Brotherton, 41; and Jeremiah M. Lucey, 38, ranked as one of the worst line-of-duty death scenes for firefighters in recent memory, said John Brown, a historian for the Professional Fire Fighters of Massachusetts, union of 12,000 firefighters.

"It's our job to save lives," said Brown, who had been on the scene since late Friday night. "Sometimes we get into trouble doing it."

Several dozen firefighters, all members of Rescue Unit One, entered the burning building in search of two homeless men believed to be living inside the Worcester Cold Storage and Warehouse Co. District Chief Michael McNamee said conditions were so bad that "in two to three seconds, you couldn't see six inches

Turn to SMOKE, page 2

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Lights at the End of the Tunnel

Pedestrians are forced to walk signle file between these turn buildings in Amherst Center

Swiss accounts linked to Nazi victims

By William Drozdiak
Washington Post

ZURICH, Switzerland – An independent panel investigating whether Swiss banks hoarded the wealth of Holocaust victims announced Monday that it had discovered nearly 54,000 accounts linked to people persecuted by the Nazis, a number far greater than the banks ever acknowledged.

In an exhaustive report released after three years of research, the committee, headed by former Federal Reserve Board chairman Paul Volcker, said it could find no clear evidence that Swiss banks conspired to steal money deposited by Jews who may have perished in the Holocaust or engaged in the "systematic destruction of records" to hide their assets.

But the report criticized some banks for "questionable and deceitful actions" through callous treatment of victims and their heirs and "a general lack of diligence" in tracing the origins of dormant accounts. It concluded the banks were "grossly insensitive to the special conditions of the Holocaust" in ways that were "misleading in intent and unfair in result."

The Volcker commission, which included representatives from Swiss banks and Jewish groups, was set up in 1996 to find the truth about assets deposited by Holocaust victims. The controversy prompted a wrenching reassessment of Switzerland's wartime role that uncovered broad financial collaboration with the Nazi regime.

As recently as 1995, Swiss banks insisted that a review of their records found only 775 dormant accounts worth about $31 million. That claim provoked outrage among Jewish groups, notably the World Jewish Congress, which said that the banks were hoarding assets from Holocaust victims worth as much as $7 billion.

Facing the threat of crippling commercial boycotts, the Swiss banks agreed to set up and fund an impartial commission headed by Volcker in an effort to clear their name. While the long-awaited report exonerates the banks of any criminal conspiracy to steal the assets, it emphasizes their tendency to hide behind the nation's secrecy laws to avoid answering questions about who owned the hidden assets.

"They were lackadaisical, to say the least," Volcker said in an interview. "The banks had no incentive to find out the truth about the assets because they felt they should protect the honor of Switzerland. They could have solved this problem a long time ago if they really wanted to."

Volcker said the committee was able to trace about 60 percent of the accounts that were in Swiss banks when the war ended in 1945. They created a dual database that matched names on 4.1 million

Turn to SWISS, page 2

NATO unable to stop violence

By Paul Watson
Los Angeles Times

SARAJEVO, BOSNIA-HERZEGOVINA – NATO's intervention to end the brutal repression of ethnic Albanians in Kosovo has failed to stop a vicious cycle of violence in which even children are taken as human rights investigators reported Monday in the most detailed look yet at Kosovo's war.

Ethnic Albanian children as young as 10 are being used by adults to carry out attacks on Serbs and other minorities, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe said in two lengthy reports.

The OSCE also found evidence that fighters of the disbanded Kosovo Liberation Army, or KLA, which led the struggle for independence from Yugoslavia, are responsible for murders, kidnappings and other crimes against Serbs and other minorities.

But Bernard Kouchner, the U.N. administrator of Kosovo, has never wholeheartedly made the international ethnic cleansing in the province to end of oppression by the Serbs.

"Some people, Serbs, say majority of Kosovo Albanians. What's the point of humanitarian law, but there is nothing close to genocide in what Yugoslav and Serbian armed forces and security services carried out against Albanians. Kouchner wrote in a letter to some of the reporters. "Executions, arbitrary arrests, rape, and other forms of violence and forced expulsion characterized the Yugoslav and Serb forces campaign to expel Kosovo Albanians to other states."

Kosovo is a southern province of Serbia and, while it formally remains part of Yugoslavia, the majority of ethnic Albanians want independence.

The reports by OSCE, an organization that includes the United States

Turn to BOSNIA, page 7

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 29	HIGH: 47 LOW: 27	HIGH: 48 LOW: 28

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Hannukah Happenings

How much do you know about the meaning of Hannukah? Read about a University of Massachusetts student's spiritual feelings about Hannukah on today's Jewish Affairs page.

DIVERSIONS PAGE 5

Disney Defines Culture

After buying the hugely successful Japanese film, Princess Mononoke, Disney takes pains to beat out its cultural roots to adapt it for American audiences. Read up in Arts today.

ARTS PAGE 6

The shot heard round the world

Shannon Crooks 3-pointer with 8.1 seconds left sent the Minutemen home with a thrilling 52-51 victory over the Villanova Wildcats last night.

SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Center Prespective
The Campus Center is illuminated nicely by overhead lighting

■ smoke

continued from page 1

in front of your face."

McNamee heard a radioed plea from two firefighters: "Mayday! Mayday! We're running out of air!"

The four additional rescue-unit members who were lost in the cavernous, abandoned building are believed to have become disoriented. Their radios conveyed desperation: "Don't leave me! Don't leave me!" one firefighter radioed before his voice faded out.

No cause for the fire in central Worcester has been established, but arson is suspected. Supervisors at the city's homeless shelters said Sunday their residents were accounted for, and that the warehouse was probably unoccupied.

The severity of the tragedy – the worst U.S. loss of life involving firefighters since 14 died in a Colorado forest fire in 1994 – prompted President Clinton to praise the "courageous service" and "tremendous commitment and sacrifice" made daily by American firefighters.

■ swiss

continued from page 1

accounts with a list of 5.5 million Holocaust victims compiled with help from the Yad Vashem museum in Israel and the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington.

After combing through the records of the 254 Swiss banks operating at the time of the war, the committee came up with a list of 55,886 accounts with "possible or probable relationships" to Holocaust victims. A footnote in the report says the value of the accounts could be as high as $1.3 billion, but Volcker said records were too sketchy to make a precise estimate.

He said the committee recommended publishing the names of 25,000 account holders who were most likely Holocaust victims so their heirs can recover the assets. Any funds found will be compounded 10 times to compensate for interest. Many of the accounts are believed to be minuscule in value, partly because the funds have been eaten away by bank charges over the years.

Women's rights come to Kuwait

By Howard Schneider
Washington Post

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia – Kuwait likes to present itself as the most democratic of the Arab oil monarchies. So it was assumed that once its emir ruled last spring that women should have full political rights, parliament would accept the decision as a logical step along the path of openness and participation.

Even emirs, it seems, can miscalculate.

In a rebuff to the country's monarch and a reminder of how sensitive the issue of women's rights remains on the Arabian Peninsula, the Kuwaiti National Assembly last week narrowly rejected legislation that would have allowed women to vote and run for office.

The emir, Sheik Jabir Ahmed Sabah, and others feel the current political status of women violates Kuwait's constitution. The change was also supported by the United States, which has pushed for more democracy since the country's liberation from Iraq during the Persian Gulf War.

But the opposition from religious conservatives – those loyal to the country's tribal mores, and some who viewed women's suffrage as a Western idea being foisted on Kuwait – proved more influential, a sign that some commentators say reveals liberalism's limits in the Gulf.

"The Kuwaitis boast that their democracy is the oldest in the Gulf region, but their satisfaction is misplaced," the Arabic daily al-Qudsal-Arabi editorialized. "Being the oldest does not necessarily mean being good, because Kuwaiti democracy has stood still and failed to evolve."

Kuwait's political system is a monarchy in many respects, but with a decades-old constitution and a parliament that can overrule the emir and pass laws. Only males over 21 with proven Kuwaiti lineage are eligible to vote, however. Along with women, active members of the military and police are also excluded. During the most recent parliamentary elections, in July, only 113,000 of Kuwait's 745,000 citizens could vote. The overall figure excludes 1.2 million foreign guest workers for whom citizenship, and therefore political rights, are virtually impossible to obtain.

The status of women across the Middle East is governed by a patchwork of conflicting religious and social interpretations, in which Islam is used to justify some rights for women in one country and restrict them in another.

Some of the Gulf's smaller countries are proving the most nimble at political change. Qatar recently allowed women to vote and run for a new municipal council, considered a forerunner to the development of a national parliament. Oman has appointed women to its consultative council and named its first woman ambassador.

Saudi Arabia and Iran, the two countries that purport to apply Islamic law most rigorously, have wildly varying attitudes about women's role in society. Both require women to cover their heads and wear a loose-fitting cloak or coat in public. But Iran's political system and professional ranks are largely open to women, while in Saudi Arabia – considered a bedrock of U.S. interests in the region – women are restricted from many jobs in which they would interact with men, and are prohibited from holding their own identity cards, traveling without a husband's permission or driving.

Collegian Candidates' Night

Thurs. @ 7 p.m. in Room 174 Campus Center.

This is a MANDATORY meeting for all staff members.

At these prices, it's too bad we don't sell cars.

Maybe one day we will sell cars, food and everything else you need. But right now, it's great deals on textbooks every day. You can save up to 40%, and you'll get your books in 1 to 3 days. Not that you would, but don't sweat using a credit card. VarsityBooks.com is 100% guaranteed secure. Try saying that about a new SUV.

SAVE UP TO 40% ON TEXTBOOKS.

VarsityBooks

Police Log

Arrests
Dec. 5
Robert Carbone, 20, of Middleton, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and malicious destruction of property valued at more than $250.

Jason Sanavage, 19, of Shrewsbury, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct, malicious destruction of property valued at more than $250 and possession of a class D drug.

Sean Pelrine, 19, of Middleton, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and malicious destruction of property valued at more than $250.
Dec. 4

Steven Johnson, 20, of Wilmington, was arrested and charged with underage possession of alcohol and possession or use of a false or stolen registered motor vehicle document.

Assault and Battery
Dec. 5
Individuals reported being assaulted in Lot 32 E. The report is under investigation.
Dec. 3

An individual reported being assaulted by another individual in Cashin Residence Hall. The report is under investigation.

Domestic Disturbance
Dec. 5
Two individuals confronted one another in Mackimmie Residence Hall. The incident was referred to staff.
Dec. 4
There was a domestic disturbance at the Mullins Center. A judge issued an emergency restraining order.

Vandalism
Dec. 5
A vehicle was reportedly damaged in Lot 34 W on Massachusetts Avenue.
A vehicle was reportedly damaged in Lot 32 W on Massachusetts Avenue.
A vehicle was reportedly damaged in Lot 32 W on Massachusetts Avenue.
Burn marks were reportedly found on a door in Baker Residence Hall.
A resident's dorm was kicked in Mackimmie Residence Hall.

Coming and Going
Backlighting turns these students into silhouettes yesterdayat the Campus Center.

■ bosnia

continued from page 1

are based on investigations by 78 human rights workers who interviewed more than 3,000 refugees and eye-witnesses. They offer the most extensive look to date at the complexities of the war over Kosovo.

Investigators found "case after case of young people, some only 10 or 12 years old, harassing, beating and threatening people, especially defenseless elderly victims, solely because of their ethnicity," Kouchner wrote.

In many cases, the human rights investigators found evidence that ethnic Albanians and Serbs committing violence after the NATO-led force arrived belonged to armed groups that "seem to operate in an organized fashion and have some form of hierarchy, command and control."

While detailing many violations of the laws of war down to the killing of farm animals, the reports also describe an ongoing civil war escalated by NATO's air campaign, and suggest a brutal military logic was behind the Serb onslaught.

An offensive aimed at quickly crushing the KLA "meant the forced displacement of Kosovo Albanians in known KLA areas, and the pursuit of [refugees] in the hills, particularly the targeting of men of fighting age," the report said.

While providing extensive evidence of a systematic campaign by Serbian police, soldiers and paramilitaries to kill, loot and rape while expelling more than 800,000 ethnic Albanians, the human rights investigators also found several startling examples of Serb civilians and Yugoslav soldiers who risked their lives to save ethnic Albanians.

But the OSCE reports also confirm that volunteer units, which were supposed to be part of the regular chain of command, at times broke ranks and committed crimes.

Israeli-Palestinian negotiations falter

By Lee Hockstader
Washington Post

JERUSALEM – With Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright en route yesterday to her latest peacemaking mission in the Middle East, peacemaking between Israelis and Palestinians appeared to crumble.

The chief Palestinian negotiator, angry about accelerated construction plans at Jewish settlements in the disputed West Bank, said he would no longer discuss anything with Israel except the settlements, which the Palestinians and much of the international community consider illegal. His comments came just two months before a mid-February deadline set by the two sides to reach the outlines of a broad settlement to end a century of conflict.

The breakdown in negotiations came hours before Albright landed in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, on the first leg of a four-day visit to the region. En route to the Saudi capital last night State Department spokesman James P. Rubin said Albright was "troubled by the current climate" and called on both parties to avoid unilateral actions that could worsen the atmosphere.

"We're not moving ahead at the pace that one would expect if we're going to get everything done," Rubin said. "Obviously there's an enormous amount of work to do in order to get a framework agreement achieved in roughly 2 1/2 months."

"We were not able to hold a meeting today to discuss the agreed agenda because of the issue of the settlements," Palestinian negotiator Yasser Abed Rabbo told reporters after meeting his Israeli counterpart, Oded Eran. "We are serious and we want the process to continue, but it simply cannot continue with settlements."

Rubin reiterated the long-held U.S. view that Israeli settlement building is a "complicating factor" because "it prejudges the outcome of those negotiations."

On the other hand, he added, "We do not think the Palestinian side should impose preconditions on specific issues that would make it not possible to go forward with the permanent-status talks."

Earlier in the day, U.S. Middle East envoy Dennis Ross, who spent 24 hours in Israel ahead of Albright's scheduled arrival, failed to break an impasse between the two sides over a long-delayed Israeli handover of another 5 percent of the West Bank.

U.S. negotiators were disappointed but not entirely surprised by the latest turn of events. It is hardly uncommon, on the eve of a visit by a U.S. secretary of state, for one side or another to seek tactical advantage by manufacturing a crisis. State Department officials said privately that they expect the Palestinians to do everything they can to draw the United States more deeply into the negotiations as a way to compensate for their weak negotiating position relative to Israel.

Albright also faces deepening pessimism in the region about the chances of reviving Israeli-Syrian negotiations in the short term, raising the possibility that her swing through the Middle East this week could produce no tangible progress.

According to new figures released this week by the Israeli anti-settlement group Peace Now, the government of Prime Minister Ehud Barak has approved more new building in the settlements since it took power in July – about 3,200 units – than the previous, right-wing administration of Benjamin Netanyahu allowed in an average year.

Israel captured the West Bank in 1967.

Aides to Barak said the government's hands are tied by previous governments' decisions and insisted that a way would be found to move forward in talks with the Palestinians.

"We will find a way to ensure that the issue of settlements will not be a barrier to the continuation of negotiations," Danny Yatom, a senior advisor to Barak, told Israel Radio.

Albright has tried to dampen expectations that her brief trip will lead to a breakthrough in negotiations. Nonetheless, it seems her visit will coincide with a particularly sour moment in peacemaking between the two sides.

The Americans "are to be held responsible for the stalemate in these negotiations since they are the sponsor of the peace process," Tayeb Abdul Rahim, a senior aide to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, said in a speech in the West Bank.

He said it's pointless to conduct peace talks with Israel while settlement building intensifies and interim deals between the two sides remain unfulfilled, and warned that Albright would get an earful when she arrived.

Albright left today for Damascus, where she is to meet with Syrian President Hafez Assad.

On Wednesday, Albright is to have breakfast with Barak and lunch with Israeli President Ezer Weizman. She will then meet with Arafat in the West Bank city of Ramallah late in the day, and possibly again with Barak that evening.

Political independents up in NH

By David S. Broder
Washington Post

CONCORD, NH – When Monica Cornelia moved from New York City a few years ago and registered to vote for the first time in the New Hampshire coastal community of North Hampton, she declined to identify herself as a Republican or Democrat. "I had had enough of party politics," she said the other day. "I wanted to focus on the individual."

In the state whose motto is "Live Free or Die," Cornelia was hardly unusual in declaring her independence of any party label. Secretary of State William Gardner says eight out of 10 new registrants in recent years have chosen to be "undeclared" in their political preference.

As a result, Gardner announced this month that for the first time in history, there are now more "undeclareds" or independents than Republicans in this state. The trend has been dramatic. Since 1990, the number of registered Democrats has grown by only 5,000 to 197,816. Republican ranks have increased by 12,000 to 265,679. But the independents have grown by 62,000 to 274,927.

Because New Hamp-shire allows independents to decide on primary day to ask for either a GOP or a Democratic ballot, the swollen ranks of "undeclareds" could be – at least in theory – a huge wild card in the first presidential primary of 2000.

Whether it actually will be a decisive factor in the Feb. 1 voting is a much more dubious proposition, however. Survey research on the independents backs the judgment of most of the presidential campaigns here that their influence may be exaggerated. In particular, there is skepticism about the media supposition that Democrat Bill Bradley and Republican John McCain are vying with each other in a tug-of-war for independents that could decide the outcome of the two party primaries.

Official figures show that 64,171 independents voted in the 1996 presidential primary – about one out of three of those then registered. This time, Gardner predicts, with the pool of independents substantially larger and hot contests in both parties, the total may reach 100,000.

CLASS TRAVEL INTL, INC presents
SPRING BREAK
For those who Know
CANCUN JAMAICA
Discounted Fall Semester Prices!
Free Nightclub Admissions!
Free Parties, Beverages, Prizes!*
Register NOW!
Special Good Through 12/20/99 >>Limited Space Remaining<<
800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

INFORMATION SESSION
Wednesday, December 8, 4:30-5:30 p.m.
Campus Center 904-908
UMASS OXFORD SUMMER SEMINAR
July 6-August 17, 2000
Trinity College, University of Oxford
Located at one of Oxford's attractive colleges, the Seminar offers over 15 tutorial-based courses in literature, history, law and politics. Small classes are taught by British university faculty, and both graduate and undergraduate credits may be earned. The Seminar stipend includes room, board, tuition and field trips to Royal Shakespeare Company productions
For additional information, contact any of the following:
Internet: www.umass.edu/oxford
Telephone: 545-1914
E-mail: oxford@english.umass.edu
Office: 378 Bartlett Hall

1/2 PRICE Appetizers
• Buffalo Chicken Wings
• Mozzarella Sticks
• Chicken or Beef Nachos
Sunday - Thursday
9 p.m. - Midnight
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 253-5799

puttin' on the glitz.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

EXPANDED HORIZONS Day Spa
Tanning • Hot Tub • Massage
• Simply the Best Tanning Beds in the Area
• High Powered Tanning
• Improved Results in Less Time
• Lowest Prices on Tanning and Products
• Gift Certificates Available
$99.00 6 mo. unlimited tanning
$59.00 3 mo. unlimited tanning
20% off Massage *Includes 1/2 hr. hot tub
Ask About Our FREE Body Wrap
529-9996 31 Union St. • Easthampton
LOOK & FEEL GREAT!!!

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday, December 7, 1999

Tough to swallow

The idea was simple enough. All of you on-campus readers had a shot at getting in this column. Unfortunately I discovered a good lot of you didn't want any part of it. Innocently, I decided that I was going to poll a random group of people about what D.C. food they hated the most. This turned out to be a more monumental task than even I could have ever imagined.

I decided to reach out and touch whoever would pick up their phone. I dialed random numbers and discovered just how good my luck really was. The first four weren't even real phone numbers! I got that weirdo bleeping noise when I dialed them and that noise wouldn't answer a question. Next, I found, to my surprise, a number of people that answered the phone in a language other than English. My limited knowledge of foreign tongues (barely any French) put me at a big disadvantage in this situation, so... I hung up (so sue me).

Brian Lohnes

Then we come to the group of people who decided to swear at me when I asked them about food. I have strong feelings about a lot of things and I do enjoy a good meal, but you people need to get out more. "I don't have time for this F*ng St!" Hey buddy, all you had to say was Southern Fried steak and I would have been a memory, but no, you had to yell at me. Next was the guy who said, "Oh fk You." and to my delight, set the phone down gently. At least he had some sympathy for my eardrum.

Finally, we come to the small but happy-go-lucky members of the campus population that decided to humor a weirdo on the phone. To you I say thanks because frankly I can't come up with an original idea on my own (you really saved my ass). That being said, bring on the food.

Goat Cheese and Olive Stuffed Chicken – That should read, "Chicken that looks as though it is stuffed with vomit". Against my better judgement I tried this one night and no, I hadn't been drinking. After a quick bout with the fits I decided to never ever eat anything containing goat products ever again. Strangely, after I ate this, I sprouted a goatee and began munching on tin cans... strange indeed.

Mixed Bean Creole - I don't know too much, but I do know that beans are a vegetable and Creole is a language. I don't ever remember hearing of "Mixed Bean Yittish" or "Mixed Bean Islandic". I have never personally tasted this bean mix, but I do know one thing, beans make people break wind. I do not know if there is a link between Creole and breaking wind, but there is one with beans. After all, the product is called bean-o, not Creole-o.

Southern Fried Steak – Before you jump to conclusions that I will insult the intelligence of Southern people, consider this: you have a steak, and you have a deep frying machine or a grill. Which one should the damn steak land on? This must have been one of those accidents, like when some cave man discovered fire. Maybe like when cave men discovered that when they hit themselves on the head it hurt. That's not steak under that crunchy coating, it's some kind of quasi-meat. It's the meat that didn't get picked at gym class and ended up as "Fried Steak". It's a travesty!

Chick Pea Balls – a.k.a. "Crap balls". You know what these are? Little round brown balls that are made of CHICK PEAS! Has anyone ever seen a chick pea? I can't even describe in words what they look like. This must have been some sick joke when they decided to make these. "Hey we have about two tons of chick peas left over... all the kids must hate them." "Yeah they do." "Oh ok, let's smash the hell out of them and form them into balls and then serve them as a entree to all the kids." Sounds like a logical enough thing to do.

Philly Cheese Steaks – If I was from the greater Philadelphia area I would sue dining services for defamation of character. So help me God, I think it's cat meat. Either that or it's made of ground up shoe leather. Then there is the creamy glowing orange cheese (read: Agent Orange) that's not cheese... I don't know what the hell it is, but it isn't cheese. My favorite part of that one is that they don't even put it in the roll for you to at least cover it up. No, screw you. You get to deal with it at your seat.

Fish Munchies – Fish... ain't supposed to be munchy. These pieces of fish come in neat little triangle pieces. Every fish I have ever caught and some that I have eaten have in no way resembled a triangle or a square for that matter. (You know I'm talking to you Captain's Catch!). What kind of fish resides in this munchy package you ask? I've see all those little suckers in the campus pond? Sure no one will admit to it, but we all know what they are doing.

Hopefully you agree with my selections in this food Hall of Shame. If not, I can refer you to a number of people who will be willing to talk to you and take your questions. Now where's that number?

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

Saving face

Considering the four assaults on campus, it isn't surprising that the Chancellor of the University of Massachusetts would be angry. He's angry enough to complain. He's angry enough to criticize. He's angry enough to point fingers.

It is his right, as a chancellor, as a mam, as a human, to be angry. It is his right to complain and criticize. It is his right to point fingers.

Sam Wilkinson

But David K. Scott has been leveling some of his pointed fingers, some of his complaint, and some of his criticism in the wrong direction: us. We, as a newspaper, keep hearing about how, at speak-ins and rallies and open forums, Scott mentions the Daily Collegian in a negative sort of way.

He insinuates that our coverage isn't acceptable.

That we haven't done enough.

That we aren't keeping students informed.

If the situation existed that Mr. David K. Scott described, we would accept that criticism willingly. Had we not covered the issue of the assaults at all, we deserve to be criticized. Had we refused to acknowledge that horrible things were going on here on campus, we deserved to be criticized.

That isn't what we did though. We, as a newspaper, contrary to the opinion of David K. Scott, covered the issues as much as the issue could be covered. So maybe Scott needs to be more specific about exactly what was wrong with our coverage.

In fact, let's suppose Scott started with the first piece of information that we published about the assault, on Nov. 4, 1999.

Maybe it was Gary Mendese and Alexis Pushkar, our editorial/opinion editors, who screwed up the coverage. Maybe the fact that they ran at least 17 different editorial pieces means that our coverage was insufficient. Maybe we, as a newspaper, should have published 18. Or 19. Maybe there is a magical number of editorials and letters and columns that a newspaper is supposed to print before our coverage is sufficient.

But maybe Scott didn't take umbrage to the editorial section. Maybe it was the news department, who didn't cover the assaults in the "right" ways.

For example, Jake Lilien only wrote one story about the assaults, an article about the Jackson Katz lecture. Then again, he isn't a regular reporter for the news department.

So maybe it was our News Editor, Elana Premack, who only wrote two stories about the assaults while she was trying to keep her writers in order and on the same page during a month of assaults.

Or perhaps it was we, the news staff, who didn't do our jobs in Mr. David K. Scott's eyes.

It could have been Andrea Peers, a News Associate, who wrote only three stories about the assaults, even though her job description has her covering the town of Amherst.

Or perhaps it was Melissa Hammel, who wrote only four stories about the assaults, including one letting students know that academic clemency had been passed by the faculty senate.

What about Mary Grein, who lastly wrote only eight stories about the assaults, informing readers about the hard work of the Student Government Association that went unnoticed otherwise, while simultaneously providing excellent coverage of the student rallies.

Was it Jason Trenkle, who wrote 11 stories about the assaults, doing the dirty work while the rest of the newsroom worked on their beat-specific stories? His coverage of the rallies that the rest of us couldn't get to was an immense help and meant that other students could still write articles about events that might have slipped through the cracks in the shadow of the assaults.

If it was my reporting, I take that on my shoulders. If the seven stories that I wrote about the crimes themselves were in some way unacceptable, I take responsibility for that.

In the 20 papers from November 4 the first day that we published about the first rape, to last Friday, the Daily Collegian printed at least 52 articles, columns, editorials, briefs, and letters about the assaults. More than two and a half stories per day, on average, isn't enough to placate the journalistic demands of Mr. David K. Scott, who still makes it his business to criticize the hard work done by a dedicated newspaper staff.

Speaking of journalistic demands, other forms of media seemed to think that we were doing an alright job. Mary Grein was interviewed on the radio in Springfield about the assaults, and I was interviewed for each a Boston radio and television show. As a newspaper, we helped out a reporter from USA Today with some information that he needed. But still, while we were respected by outside sources, we can't get our own chancellor's approval.

The fact is that we don't need his approval.

We don't need the approval of a man that would have the audacity to insult the work done by his students. We don't need the approval of a man so desperate to cover up his own shortcomings that he would point fingers at us in an attempt to keep the focus off of him. We don't need the approval of a man who is more concerned with saving his own face than dealing with problems on campus.

As the Chancellor, Mr. David K. Scott can be angry, he can complain, and he can point fingers, but what he had better do is aim that anger in the right direction, because aiming any at us doesn't address the problem, it just creates problems. And we have enough of those right now.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

Dangerous ground in South Africa

AIDS and rape are no doubt very scary issues, and in Johannesburg, South Africa, these two go hand-in-hand. Johannesburg (Jo'burg, or eGoli – the city of Gold – to most people living in South Africa) is the number one city in the world in terms of violence and rapes. Soweto (a black township near Johannesburg) is one of the most densely populated places in the world and AIDS is thriving there; some statistics say one in three is infected there. Most women who are pregnant pass HIV along to their children.

Certain drugs like AZT, that can control but not stop HIV, are restricted from public hospitals and are only available privately. Johannesburg is a huge city and is probably one of the hotbeds for the spread of AIDS in sub-Saharan Africa.

Jo'berg lies at the center of an enormous conurbation; it is rapidly developing into a megalopolis. In a few years it could be like a New York or Los Angeles. For poor people, this city is of irresistible lure, and for the affluent, it is a living nightmare. When I visited the place not too long ago, I was amazed at the length some people will go to live safely. I saw houses that were gated in, fenced in, barb-wired in, and also guarded by a security system. This was all protecting one house. I have heard stories of people taking a gun to the bathroom in the middle of the night because the violence is so bad.

You can count the number of nice bars/pubs/places to hang out on one hand. Visit South Africa and you must travel to Jo'berg. Most tourist- rarely have a kind word to say about the place. At some restaurants there are places for people to keep their guns (almost everyone, black and white, packs heat in this city). There is a huge, monumental, gap between the rich and the poor. When you walk around, do so during the day because you are fresh meat at night; anything goes at night in this wild place. Don't dress like a tourist because stuff will get stolen from you. When I was there I didn't even take my camera out for fear of someone noticing that I was foreign.

Wes Wrighston

Someone told me a story about a guy who stole a woman's purse in an average department store, ran out the door, and thought he was going to make a clean getaway. The store's security person ran out after the vagrant, pulled his sawed-off shotgun out and blew the perp's head clean off of his shoulders. This was all in broad daylight, and the weird thing is it wasn't even in the paper the next day; it wasn't quite shocking enough. Hmm, if I saw that happen, I would have been scarred for life... forget about it.

There are so many horror stories about South Africa, that the good is always overlooked. I'm sure that most people in Jo'berg (black and white) are genuinely warm-hearted, but since paranoia about the city has been instilled in anyone ever traveling to South Africa, we think that those being nice to us are really trying to swindle us in some odd way.

The so-called black townships ring the city and are a grotesque contrast to the white suburbs in and around Jo'berg. It is not uncommon to see BMW's, Porsches, or Mercedes Benzes all around, drivers sakin' away on their cell phones (dude, everyone that can afford one has one in South Africa), and then see poor, starving children on every corner either begging for money or (in some cases) huffing glue (I've seen little kids, no older than, say, 10-years-old doing this – it's appalling).

The South African government just released figures stating that crime is on the rise, rape incidents are increasing and even murder is on the upswing. That's great, huh? The police in places like Jo'berg or even Cape Town don't carry as much weight as the cops here in the states... it's actually weird to hear of cops that aren't on the take in South Africa.

About a year ago I was watching one of those hokey TV shows on FOX ("The World's Most Violent Places", was the name of the show, I think) and they did a feature on carjacking in Jo'berg. The one solution engineers had was to install pipes that would emit flames when an intruder was trying to enter the car. You see, the pipes are installed on either side of the car so the intruder would have a really bad day if he were to be engulfed in flames. One has to wonder about some of the safety precautions most people (and all white people that live in Jo'berg) take when they live in a place like Johannesburg. Is it worthwhile to go to all these pains just to live in a city that is bustling? Why would you want to come home form a hard day at work, punch in the security clearance code at you first security step, the gate. Come to your house (which is gated in, fenced in and probably having some spike-like things on top of the gate), punch in the security clearance code at your door, unlock all the locks and then enter your domain? The average white family living in Jo'berg probably has an attack dog, and almost all women carry mace or pepper spray as well. This is all in addition to the personal gun collection stored away in the house.

I would never want to live in a place where I would have to be concerned about my personal safety 24 hours a day, seven days a week. I don't get it. Anyway, it's some food for thought...

Wes Wrighston is a UMass student.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

Joslyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joslyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broad-sheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Jewish Affairs

Tuesday, December 7, 1999

Hannuka Reflections: Finding our inner flame

This week, until sundown on Saturday, is the holiday of Hannuka. During the holiday, we celebrate the Maccabean triumph over the Syrian Greeks who sought to erase Jewish culture and religion.

We also celebrate the miracle of light, in which a single flask of acceptable oil was found in the holy temple in Jerusalem, enough only to burn in the menorah for one day. However, it lasted for eight days, enough time to refine new oil.

Most of us know that we commemorate these events by lighting a menorah in our homes and saying the appropriate blessings. This menorah can be made even of eight beer bottles lined up with water inside them up until the middle of their necks, with oil filling the rest, using Q-tip cottons as wicks.

It is very easy to do and you don't need anything fancy to perform this wonderful mitzvah. In any case, the following article discusses one deeper facet of Hannukka that I heard from my holy friend Yehoshua F., expounding on a teaching of the "Sefat Emet" (language of truth). May we all benefit.

We can only imagine the sight Maccabean fighters saw as they entered the Temple; it had been turned into an idolatrous shrine, the very antithesis of Judaism. Also, everything used in the Jewish temple service had been defiled by the Syrian Greeks, rendering the temple forbidden for use until it could be repurified.

This temple, which served as the focal point of the nation, was the place from which prophecy was generated and G-d could be perceived more clearly there than in any other place. Thus, its defilement was a terrible tragedy.

The Maccabees began cleansing it and preparing it for use. Upon completion, they found that only one flask of oil was left untouched by the Greeks and that the holy Menorah, a key feature of the temple and an eternal light, could be lit for only one day. Yet tradition tells us that it in fact lasted for eight days, until the temple could be rededicated.

The temple is compared to the structure of the human body and soul. This is how we connect ourselves to it. Most of us are not perfect. There is so much negativity that we carry around with us, and we don't see things clearly.

Truth is often an abstraction. Our proverbial "temples" have been defiled with the weight of the world and our own mistakes. Yet, we know that amidst the worst idolatrous impurity within our holy temple in Jerusalem, there was a single flask of pure oil which was so potent, it burned in the menorah eight times its normal capacity.

So too, there is a place inside all of us that nothing can touch. It is so holy that no matter how deep the drags of the world have caught us, it can never be tainted. Impurity simply does not apply to it.

The key is in understanding how to ignite this inner "pure flask of oil" so that it can shine through our entire being and light up the world.

A dispute is recorded in the Talmud regarding how to light the menorah. The academy of Rabbi Shammai claimed that all eight candles should be lit on the first day and diminished by one each day. The academy of Rabbi Hillel countered that a single candle should be lit on the first day and increased by one each day.

We follow the latter and know from tradition that in addition to candle lighting itself, the rabbis were in fact discussing how to grow spiritually, and help others to grow.

Shammai believed that anything less than everything was not enough, and that the proper way to begin on a spiritual path is to immediately hit oneself or one's fellow with every detail of the universe: every good, every fault, or in short, everything.

The strategy was to basically shock someone out of stagnancy, and then slowly taper off and assume that all is well, like bringing a knife to red heat in order to burn out all residue on it.

Hillel held like Rabbi Akiva who said "a little light dispels a lot of darkness." The entire universe is too much to absorb at once, and the truth is that even the smallest flame does fill a whole room with light.

When we start small, we are able to truly grasp and benefit constructively from the light we reveal. An immense flash of light blinds us and we don't know where to go. A small flicker shows us what is in front of us, so we can take a step forward, our eyes acclimate and we can light another small light and see the next step.

It is essential to understand that on the first night of Hannuka we start with one candle, not zero. Just like the blinding flash of light that Shaminai prescribes renders us unable to move forward, so too does darkness hide the next step. Understanding that we don't go from zero to sixty in thirty seconds in our spiritual development does not justify never even turning on our engines.

I therefore pray that we are all able to light one candle, and in balance take the step that lies before us and steadily build ourselves up to eight candles and beyond.

If anyone wants to light their menorahs, tonight will be the fifth night, so six candles [or beer bottles] are lit, five for the mitzvah and one as a service candle to light the other five.

Hayyim Ruthman is a Collegian Columnist.

TOM PANELLI/Collegian

Students lighting the menorah last night in front of the Hillel House.

The Colors of Judaism

As a child I never understood how different I was being perceived, until I went away to college. In fact, I never even realized my father was a "white man" until I went to a "black" college, when a friend of mine glanced at my father's picture and turned to me with a look of utter confusion.

"Your dad's white" I must have given her that ame confused look back and answered with a hesitant "Uh...yeah."

But entire yea I struggled desperately, trying to make everyone understand that a part of me was being ignored.

I was now very aware of a side of me that I had never bothered to really acknowledge. When I arrived here at UMass, the exact opposite happened. It was this university that broke me, this town to a whole new level of awareness.

I am now being constantly reminded that my father is Jewish and my mother is a Black woman. Everywhere I go, I am faced with this reality.

The Black students on campus grab and take hold of me with a ferocity, which is understandable considering the sad lack of "diversity".

The white students take what is comfortable for them to accept, and I know that being "half" of something makes a lot of people more comfortable. It is a reality I have since learned to live with.

I am starting to realize, however, that being part Jewish and part Black is more than just two halves. It means being a part of a rich history. It means belonging to two beautiful legacies.

It also means that I am not two separate entities. I am a whole person with two cultures. Why is this so hard for everyone to understand? To me it is simple, but I guess in this world of "wholes" it is a difficult idea to grasp.

Kassia Ringell is a UMass Student

"I am now being constantly reminded that my father is Jewish and my mother is a Black woman. Everywhere I go, I am faced with this reality."

Kassia Ringell

JSU votes in new leaders

By Natty Yagudin
Collegian Staff

Last week's Jewish Student Union (JSU) elections marked a change in JSU's leadership, as voters elected five new students to the JSU board, voting out incumbents. New students have been elected to the position of Vice President of Religious Affairs, Vice President of Membership, Vice President of Administration, Vice President of Social Justice, and Treasurer.

The only two former board members that have been reelected are Hanna Braune, the new Jewish Student Union president, and Allison Rozen, who is continuing as secretary.

Braune is not worried about the influx of new students to the board. "We have a lot of people who haven't been on the board before, but have taken leadership roles within the Jewish community," said Braune.

"We're going to be very united within ourselves," Braune said. "Other boards haven't always been supportive of one another."

Braune is hoping to promote more programming with other student groups and Jewish organizations on campus. "I feel a lot of Jewish students on campus don't know that JSU exists," said Braune.

Braune also wants to finish the JSU's constitution. "I think JSU has to reevaluate its goals," said Braune. A motion to install a new board position, an Israel Vice-President, was turned down by the voters. "I think it would split the communities unnecessarily," said Braune of the suggested motion. Braune also added that Israel advocacy groups, such as "Hamagshimim" and American-Israel Public Relations Committee's local chapter, are already active on campus.

Defending Zionism

If ever there was a moment when I was ready to spontaneously combust out of anger, this was it. In front of me, in the campus center, was a pile of papers labeling the idea that has driven my peoples' hopes for 200 generations as "racism".

With this piece, I hope to disprove the man who handed me the papers titled "Zionism is racism" with the words "take these if you want to know the real truth".

To counter this man's argument, I must first define the term that is contested here. The word "Zionism", as the leaflet stated quite correctly, refers to the international movement originated for the establishment of a Jewish national or religious community in Palestine. In other words, it is the movement to establish a Jewish homeland in biblical Israel.

The argument that the papers before me presented was that the Jews that heeded the Zionist call after World War II constituted a foreign invasion force that subdued the native Palestinians, and uprooted them from their land.

Let me deconstruct this argument step-by-step. First, to equate the Jews in Israel to a foreign occupation force is to ignore our 3,000 year history. Ever since Israel was first conquered and taken from us, Jews from a hundred exile nations have repeated, century after century, millennium after millennium, the words "to forget you Jerusalem, would be as to forget my right arm."

The Jewish people have never –not for a single year in the 2,000 years since our land was taken by the Romans – forgotten where they belong and where they will ultimately return to. Jews have also been continuously living in Israel during the diaspora, so in a sense, we never left.

The historical fact stands that wherever the Jews went, they were persecuted. Even if it was in the fancy of a country's standing government to be kind to the Jews – which was a rare occurrence – the Jews' safety was only guaranteed until the next government changed its mind. Zionism is our only absolute guarantee of safety – under our own rule in our own land.

A question here is the right of a people to self-determination. The fact truth of the matter is that you cannot deny the Jews the right to their land, just as you can't deny the right of the Americans to America, or of France to the French, or of Egypt to the Egyptians.

Zionism is to the Jews as the Solidarity movement was to the Poles, or as the American movement to secede from England was to the Americans. It is a movement to realize a dream for a homeland by freeing a people from centuries old oppression.

Israelis realize that like themselves, the Palestinian people, too, have a right to self determination. The Palestinians have also suffered at the hands of other people, including other Arabs. This is the reason that Israel has and is handing over land for Palestinian self-control.

What Israel does not and cannot forgo is the right of Palestinians to the entirety of Israel. The equivalent of this idea would be to hand over civilian and military control over the United States as a whole to the Native Americans. It clearly cannot be done.

If Israel was founded on "racist" principles, then we would not be having peace talks today. The reality of Israel is one of a democratic society, in which Israeli Arabs serve in the army, police force, and public office. The Israeli Knesset (parliament) even includes Arab nationalist parties whose interests often run contradictory to that of Israel's Jewish majority. Freedom of religion, the press, and speech are fundamental concepts in Israeli's governmental system. Jerusalem, one of the holiest cities in the world, is open for worship by all religions.

In addition to the "Zionism = racism" leaflets, the stand also boasted quotes by racist Israelis to back the racism argument. The fact stands that over 80 percent of the Israeli public supports the peace process, and it has been showing its willingness to continue with the peace talks while paying the terrible price of lives that terrorists continue to claim. It is a misfortune that one Israeli carrying a sign saying "death to the Arabs" would probably make more impact in one's mind than 20 carrying signs saying "peace with the Arabs."

Zionism is far from a "racist ideology" that brings about oppression and misery. It has brought forth a nation, the realization of a dream, and a people whose state is the only democracy in the Middle East.

When I think of my country I don't think of a few, but rather the few, the Christian and the Muslim living in peace, justice, and equality. I would be ill I said that my vision, the Zionist vision, is yet fully realized. But we're working on it and some day it will be a reality.

Dan Yagudin is a UMass student

HAVE A GREAT WINTER BREAK!

PAM FITZPATRICK/Collegian

Feeding Frenzy

Students flock to the Kosher dining commons for its many diverse offerings.

UMass Professor recounts Nuremberg Holocaust Trials

By Natty Yagudin
Collegian Staff

Professor Henry Lea, a professor in the German department, recounted his memories of the holocaust as he spoke about his experience as a translator in the Nuremberg trials last Thursday.

The Nuremberg trials took place in Nuremberg, Germany during the late 1940's, and were "the most comprehensive effort to deal with [Nazi] was crimes," according to Lea.

The defendants were charged against the following crimes: Crimes against peace and humanity, War crimes, and conspiracy.

"Each defendant had the right to a fair trial," said Lea. The trials were conducted in four languages.

Nuremberg, the very town where the trials took place, provided a case of "poetic justice," according to Lea, since Nuremberg was a city located in Bavaria, "where Hitler's movement first took place."

Lea was assigned to a trial that dealt with the former operations of "einzatsgobas", or special death squads that destroyed Russian villages. The group was instructed to eliminate Jews, communists, gypsies, and the mentally ill.

Lea commented that many of the soldiers in the death squads were government officials, doctors and educated professionals, including one protestant minister and an opera singer.

"A total of one million people may have been killed by [these death squads]," said Lea. "All of the defendants pleaded not guilty. They denied having committed a crime."

According to testimonies that Lea had heard, "several of the men shot at the same time to avoid personal responsibility."

"The enormity of the operation makes the case extraordinary," said Lea. "It was an extreme racial madness. At no time did any defendant expressed any remorse for the killings."

Of the 14 defendants that were sentenced to death in the trial that Lea translated, four were carried out. The rest were commuted.

"Simultaneous interpretation forces the interpreter to concentrate on the individual words to such a degree, that it doesn't register," said Lea.

Only eight years later, he realized the full effect of what he had heard at Nuremberg. "Today, this case looms ever larger for me."

Hillel House Calendar of Events

Tuesday Dec 7th
Mini Mall
10am-5pm in the Student Union Ballroom

Wed Dec 8th
Mini Mall
10am-5pm in the Student Union Ballroom

Greek Hannuka Party
8pm, Location TBA

Thursday Dec 9th
The Winter ISU/Hillel Semi Formal has been postponed for next semester

Friday Dec 10th
Shabbat Service (Last Service of the Semester)
6pm Hillel House

Dinner
7:15pm

Wed Dec 15th
Hillel House Study Palace
10pm-2am, Hillel House

Thurs Dec 16th
Hillel House Study Palace
10pm-2am, Hillel House

During the week of Hannuka, there will be menorah lighting each day at the Hillel House at 5:30pm.

Insights for On-Line Shopping

The holiday season is fast approaching and if you're anything like me, then you still have a lot of shopping to do. You're poor and just trying to scrape together enough cash to please the people on your list. Well, look no further, because the Internet has everything you need. It's fast, there are no lines, and if you hunt around, there are some great deals to be had. I'll point you to these great deals and maybe even throw in some free money along the way. Besides, I figure I owe something to the people who have read this column.

First, the definitive Internet site to start your holiday shopping in not Amazon.com as many people surmise, just because they have great brand recognition doesn't mean that they have the best prices. Try http://flamingoworld.com/coupon.htm for some amazing deals. In addition to categorizing every major shopping point on the Net, they've got coupons for everything from America's Baby right through the kids store, ZainyBrainy.com. Speaking of Zainy, the code: HOCATZB2 will get you $5 off a $25 purchase. Want more? ZBFRIEND will get you ten bucks off anything. And, Life901, ZRSHOPPER, SOLZB, and HOCATZB will all get you 20 percent off any purchase!

Let's move on to Reel.com, which offers DVDs, videos, and some CDs. The Internet site is offering free shipping, which is already a great discount. Enter the code, FREEDVD though and you will get $1 off your current purchase. This isn't that special, but then one week later, Reel will mail you a code worth $20 toward any purchase, hence the implication- a free DVD. Also, try SCXMAS for $10 off a $25 purchase.

You want CDs though right? Well, CD NOW is also offering free shipping when you purchase 3 or more items. Try some of the following URLs (I apologize for the length and obscurity, but saving money sometime takes patience). http://www.cdnow.com/cgi-bin/mserver/redirect/leaf=gap_10of{/from=mex:3:csa:gap:offer/from=cr-4288590 (Good for a $10 Gap gift certificate with any $40 purchase) http://www.cdnow.com/cgi-bin/mserver/redirect/leaf=from=red:x:cda:sask1213/from=cr-4288590 (Good for $10 off any purchase of $14.99 or more) http://www.cdnow.com/cgi-bin/mserver/redirect/leaf=from=bbi:hqdz:hogs/leaf=from=sr-3818057 (Ho Hum 10-percent off…everything! Run, don't walk!)

Adam Martingnetti

Maybe books are more your speed. http://go.borders.com/promo/freeg/x1.acv will get you $5 off your favorite best seller at Border's Book's website, while http://go.borders.com/peanuc/free.gc/x.acv is good for $10.

With a purchase of $15 or more http://www.1booksstreet.com will give you free shipping with any purchase and a free book to boot!

CZPGAPA and CZTLBRM are good for free shipping at Barnes and Noble.com. COMEBUY, COSHARE, CMASTER, CASH-NOW (I'm not making these up), CBN222 are all worth $10 off various order amounts here also.

Perhaps you're shopping for your younger brother, sister, niece or nephew. I could give you this code, G19c0e17f worth 10 percent off any order at Kbkids.com, but that would be silly when G236FED351 is worth 15 percent…no minimum!

TT109495, US109901, and BF109910 are good for $10 off a $30, a $20, and a $30 dollar purchase respectively at Toysmart.com. For a limited time, they're also offering $10 off any purchase and free shipping.

Buy.com has more coupons than I care to list, but check out 89420005, 89420007, 83157689, 83314591, and a host of others for $10 off a $10 purchase. Yes, that means it's free.

Maybe you're looking for a new computer gadget. Check out Fatbrain.com where FATBRAIN-PROMO and holidaypromo will get you $10 off a $25 purchase.

Eshopper, matchlogic, coupon10, and american airlines are all good for $10 off at electronic retailer, beyond.com. uswest is good for $15.

Dvdexpress if offering $10 off any order and an additional $10 for referring a customer.

Pubch, save10, and mysoftware are all worth $10 at Bigstar.com (a great DVD site).

Finally, if you insist on using the Big A, Amazon.com, then at least save yourself some money. AMZN-PRESENT2, FIRSTGIFT, PRESENTS-4-ALL, and GREAT-PRESENT are all worth $10 off a $25 purchase.

So, remember, shop wisely, compare prices, and always use a coupon, because on the Internet there is no such thing as full price.

Adam Martingnetti is a Collegian columnist.

Disney Makes Japan American

By J.D. Considine
The Baltimore Sun

When Disney acquired the American distribution rights to Hayao Miyazaki's animated film, Princess Mononoke, it seemed the studio had a guaranteed hit on its hands. An epic adventure set in feudal Japan, Mononoke (pronounced moh-noh-noh-keh) was a huge hit in its home market.

Viewers would line up around the block to see the film and then get back in line to see it again. "Princess Mononoke" spent eight months in Japanese theaters, earning more than $150 million at the box office – an astonishing feat for a country with half the population of America and only one-tenth the movie screens.

Princess Mononoke was the most successful Japanese film ever made, and, until the release of Titanic, the overall box office champ in Japan. Even better, it had been written and directed by Japan's most gifted animator, a visionary whose work had become familiar to Americans in the 1980s through the heartwarming and breathtakingly beautiful children's films My Neighbor Totoro and Kiki's Delivery Service.

Trouble was, translating Princess Mononoke into an American success story wouldn't prove as easy as it first seemed. Set in the Muromachi era (1336-1573), the film depicts a Japan on the verge of modernity, whose people are just beginning to realize that they may exert their will on the world around them. The action starts when Ashitaka, the prince of a remote eastern village, incurs a curse while protecting his village from a rampaging boar god.

Hoping to learn what caused the boar to go mad, he heads west, where he stumbles into a war between Lady Eboshi, leader of the Tatara "Iron Town" and its metal works, and the gods of the forest. In particular, Eboshi is bedeviled by the wolf-god Moro and her human "daughter," San. San is a fearsome warrior for the wolf gods, and the people of Iron Town, believing her possessed, dub her "Princess Mononoke." (In Japanese, "mononoke" means "an evil spirit.")

Ashitaka, seeking answers, befriends Eboshi and the people of Iron Town and falls in love with San. He seeks both peace with the forest gods and happiness for the people of Iron Town. But the forest gods want to stop Eboshi's townsfolk from mining iron ore for their foundry, while a neighboring lord named Asano wants to steal Eboshi's ironworks for himself. Worst of all, the Emperor of Japan has commanded Eboshi to hunt down the great deer god of the forest, whose head is reputed to grant immortality to its owner.

Disney's Beauty and the Beast this isn't. Complex and convoluted, Princess Mononoke offers no easy answers for Ashitaka, San or Eboshi.

COURTESY OF THE INTERNET

Disney redefines Eastern culture with their release of the Japanese film Princess Mononoke.

Moreover, much of the film's emotional power derives from the way it shifts the audience's sympathies from one character to another without telling the audience which one has the "right" world view.

But the biggest stumbling block to bringing Princess Mononoke to America is that the film is so utterly Japanese. From the intricacies of samurai-era politics to the mythology underlying the film's animal gods, Princess Mononoke is built on cultural references that may make immediate sense to Japanese viewers but are completely foreign to Americans.

The challenge for the team that translated Princess Mononoke was to retain the character and feel of the original while making the story and situations accessible to Americans. It was hard work, make no mistake. But as Neil Gaiman, who wrote the English adaptation of the script, points out, there was also a time when nobody thought Americans would like sushi, either.

Dubbing animation into English involves more than merely finding equivalents for foreign words. In order to be convincing, the dialogue must match the opening and shutting of the characters' mouths – a factor animators call the "flap count."

"It really is a problem," says Gaiman. "In that, I was enormously aided by the brilliant efforts of Mr. Jack Fletcher, who was the voice director.

"I gave Jack a script, but Jack got the flaps to fit. Jack would take a line, work it over in the studio, and all of a sudden, my line, on which the flaps would almost have fit, had now become a line on which the flaps fit exactly."

For Gaiman, the film's two songs were particularly difficult. "I've said, and not entirely in jest, that I probably spent as much time translating the two songs in 'Mononoke' as I did on the entire third draft of the script," says Gaiman. "You're translating them with a set of problems that you really don't have in the script."

Specifically, Gaiman was forbidden to alter or add to the words Miyazaki had written. But because of syllabic differences between the two languages, there was no way a literal translation of the lyrics would fit the music.

Gaiman cites "The Tatara Women's Song" as an example. This is a work song, sung by the women who pump the bellows in Iron Town. In Japanese, its eight-note opening goes, "Hitotsu futatsu-u wa" – a lyric that, in English, translates simply as "One, two."

"Unfortunately, if you try and translate that literally, you have an awful lot of syllables left over," says Gaiman. "So to get the same effect and to communicate the sense of the thing, the translation I came up with was, 'One step and two-oo steps and push.' It gets across the idea that, yes, they're working the bellows."

Getting to that version of the lyric involved negotiation between Gaiman and the representatives of Miyazaki's Studio Ghibli. "There was a point where it got down to, 'OK, if I lose this word that you really hate, can I have this word that you didn't like very much?'" recalls Gaiman, laughing.

Ultimately, Gaiman was able to convince Studio Ghibli that some changes in the dialogue would make the film more understandable for American audiences.

At other points, Gaiman slipped additional information into the dialogue so English-speaking viewers would have a better understanding of the film's action and characters. One example comes with the deer god shishikami, who in the dubbed version is called the Spirit of the Forest.

To a Japanese, raised on folk tales of spirits who take on human form, the notion that shishikami would have a humanlike face seems fairly unremarkable. But in America, where the whole notion of animal gods takes some effort to accept, the first appearance of the Spirit of the Forest evoked rather a different reaction.

"What we were finding was that when people would finally see this great spirit, they'd laugh," says Gaiman. "We'd get a very inappropriate laugh, because of the face.

"I did two things on that. The first thing was to change the name from 'deer god' to 'spirit of the forest.' Because if you expect a deer god, you expect this giant deer, and what you see is not a deer. And the second thing I did was sneak one piece of information in early on, when (one character) says, 'They say there's this thing, and he has a human face.'

"At that point, when you actually get to see him, you see this weird, flat, beautiful face, and you know what Miyazaki was doing. And it doesn't get the laugh."

Perhaps the most telling difference between Miyazaki's story-telling and that of other animators has to do with the way nature is depicted.

Miyazaki's verdant landscapes are in many ways the axis on which the film turns. There's a lush, untamed beauty to the forest sequences that makes it easy to sympathize with San and the animal spirits, and there's an ugliness to the deforested land around Iron Town that leaves the viewer wondering if Eboshi's way really is the right path for mankind.

Miyazaki devotes far more of "Princess Mononoke" to landscapes than one would expect from an animated film. This focus almost makes the natural world as much a character in the film as the gods and people.

SPRING BREAK

CANCUN•ACAPULCO•NASSAU•PARADISE ISLAND•MONTEGO BAY•NEGRIL•ARUBA•SOUTH FLORIDA•JAMAICA•MAZATLAN•KEY WEST•SOUTH PADRE ISLAND•BAHAMAS•CABO SAN LUCAS• AND MORE!

ALL OF YOUR FAVORITE TOUR PROVIDERS AT ONE EASY WEBSITE:

TripHub.com
Your Student Travel Source

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
THE Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt.9
2 Miles East of Town Center
256-6446

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS

Springfield:	413-731-6910
Worcester:	508-366-8847
Boston:	617-484-1788
North of Boston:	978-777-2253
South of Boston:	508-821-5591
Plymouth:	508-833-1145
Route 3 South:	781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast:	603-926-9813

Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9

Equal Opportunity Employer

GIFTS!

The Jewish Student Union's 1999
MINI MALL
A Holiday Shopping Extravaganza
DECEMBER 7 & 8
10:00am - 5:00pm
Student Union Ballroom

Fun-loving Snots still playing

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

My Snot T-shirt is not really a big deal at UMass. In my hometown of Plymouth, a walk into any establishment wearing a T-shirt with the word snot on it is good for a few rolled eyes, some shaken heads in disgust, and an old lady squinting to make out the word only then to stare at me as if I were a serial killer. But at UMass, it's good for a laugh or just a look of confusion. I cannot imagine being offended by the word snot, and I would assume that is how the band would have wanted their moniker to be taken; lighthearted'ly. That was basically the philosophy of the Santa Barbara-based five piece, to have a good time with some kick-ass music.

Unfortunately, the automobile accident death of lead singer Lynn Strait and Dobbs the dog, the band's mascot that graced the cover of their release, on December 11, 1998 was the true end for a band that had already lost some original members. Strait's death was a shock to many and an untimely end for a band that was most definitely on the rise. Having just completed their slot on the second stage of Ozzfest '98, the band was on the road with Soulfly, on one of the best concert bills in recent memory. The group was wowing people with their live show and making headlines for a main stage Ozzfest stunt. During both Massachusetts Ozzfest dates, Limp Bizkit frontman Fred Durst could be seen hanging out on the side of the stage during Snot's set. It was here that supposedly Durst dared Strait to appear on the main stage during their performance of "Stuck," completely nude save a Snot sticker, emerging from Bizkit's huge toilet prop. Strait took Durst up on the dare, in every respect, which led to him being chased by police in the backstage area, and into Ozzy's dressing room, where he was apprehended and later charged with indecent exposure. Strait's sense of humor was not diminished by the incident however, as the name he gave to police was that of Megadeth's frontman Dave Mustaine.

This incident was Snot's only brush with mainstream news headlines, but they already had a devoted following in the metal scene. This can be attributed to not only their talent, but also their ability to stay close to the fans. I was able to meet Lynn on his 30th birthday at one of their Soulfly tour dates just hanging out at the Fashion Outlet Mall in Worcester. He seemed genuinely interested in talking to my friends and me about the band and the concert, and came off as an extremely friendly person. They played an amazing set that night, which concluded with Lynn being covered in silly string by Soulfly and Snot band members as he sang the final verse of the now-classic "My Bulls."

There were many ways in which Snot stood out from the rest of the California metal scene, and the entire metal scene in general. Most noticeable was their sense of humor. Many bands at the time were mostly about dark themes and gloomy music, while Snot took a much more light-hearted approach, following up some of the heaviest songs on their debut album Get Some with elevator music or mellow jazz. And unlike too many metal bands, they actually dealt with some real issues, such as maintaining artistic freedom under a big record label ("Unplugged"), and standing up for your rights ("Snooze Button"), without shoving their causes down your throat like some other bands.

This tradition of dealing with issues in music continues in Amen, a group that recently put out its self-titled debut and contains former Snot guitarist Sonny Mayo and bassist John Fahenstock. And former Snot guitarist Mikey Doling is now the permanent replacement for departed Soulfly guitarist Logan Mader, and having seen Soulfly perform with Doling, it looks like they have great chemistry and the new album should be outstanding. Plans are also being made for a live Snot album as well as a tribute album that would feature different vocalists tackling Snot material written before Strait's death and slated for their second album. It's good to see that a year after his death, Strait is still being honored in various magazines and album sleeves. Snot was truly one of a kind, and if you have any interest, I highly recommend getting some as soon as possible.

COURTESY MICHAEL WILSON

The King of Blues

Don't ask how it happened, but B.B. King is playing the FAC Concert Hall tonight. At 74 he is still recording and touring and will be performing material from his latest release, Let the Good Times Roll.

COURTESY JOE KUSMICK

In a sentimental mood... but beautiful

Professor David Sporny directs the Chapel Jazz Ensemble this evening in Bowker Auditorium. The Ensemble will be joined by the Jazz Lab and directed by Professor Adam Kolker. The performance begins at 8 p.m. and tickets are available at 545-2511.

Video visions from gaming's past

By David Katzoff
Collegian Staff

As the year, decade and millennium draw to a close, I have been thoughtfully immersing myself with overindulgent recollections. Commemorating these recollections, I have categorically compiled a list of video games. Keep in mind, the following selections embody my own nostalgic regurgitations of a mindless, sub-cultural pastime.

10) MLB2000 – Playstation

In a photo finish, MLB 2 G edged out Nintendo's RBI Baseball for the number 10 slot. It was a tough call because both games are unique and simplistic, and each exemplify the animated joys of baseball. However, since all of my housemates are extremely addicted at the moment, MLB2000 it is. (Big up to Burk, Crad and Sheist, and especially to Shane, who corrupted our scholarly household by lending it to us.)

9) Contra – Nintendo

In its era, Contra was the ultimate two-player fighting game. Who remembers the code for 30 extra lives?! up-up-down-down-left-right-left-right-b-a-start…Actually try it out on all of your favorite Konami games.

8) Mortal Kombat II – Sega Genesis

Although fighting games were never really my forte, this cartridge was the essential tool in settling all crew related beef. After high school we would roll eight or nine deep up to Trenchtown (the house on High Street), and straight battle… winner stays on. Sub-Zero was my man, but quite honestly, I could never hang more than two fights.

7) Madden '99 – Ps4/ Playstation

A classic, modern football game, period.

6) Super Mario World – Super Nintendo

Expectations were high and this game delivered. It was pulse-pounding, frustrating and not reasonably hard to master.

5) NHLPA '94 - Super Nintendo/ Sega Genesis

See the movie Swingers.

4) Super Tecmo Football – Nintendo

Not to be confused with the inferior Tecmo Bowl, Super Tecmo was the ideal sports game. My team was the Raiders (Bo Knows video games!) but the "Niners with Montana and Rice on 'O' and Ronnie Lott on 'D' was a devastating match-up.

3) Donkey Kong Country – Super Nintendo

As an endless terrain of an adventure game, Kong was equipped with fabulous action, revolutionary 64-bit background graphics and an amazing soundtrack to appropriate each world on the map. I'm still in search of the six remaining secrets to complete my 100-percent, super-duper ending.

2) Super Mario Brothers – Nintendo

The game really speaks for itself, but the one thing I can say, is that I saved the Princess a horrific 84 times before losing count. Not only did we use the expedient "Warp Zones" to skip levels, playing this game put us all in a permanent one.

1) Mike Tyson's PunchOut – Nintendo

The tightest aspect about this game is that the kid with the quickest fingers was the best. Needless to say, I never quite "Punched Out" Iron Mike, but I could dodge him for a while eventually buckling at that one punch which would do me in. Yet fighting Bald Bull, Soda Popinski and that concealed purple dude along the way somehow made it all worth while.

Well, that's all folks… Stay tuned for more.

At these prices, it's too bad we don't sell cars.

Maybe one day we will sell cars, food and everything else you need. But right now, it's great deals on textbooks every day. You can save up to 40%, and you'll get your books in 1 to 3 days. Not that you would, but don't sweat using a credit card. VarsityBooks.com is 100% guaranteed secure. Try saying that about a new SUV.

SAVE UP TO 40% ON TEXTBOOKS.

VarsityBooks

Orangemen sink the Minutemen

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Staff

This may come as a surprise, but let it be known that sometimes in life, good news doesn't always precede the bad news. Last weekend, the Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team realized that this phenomenon could be applied to the sports world as well.

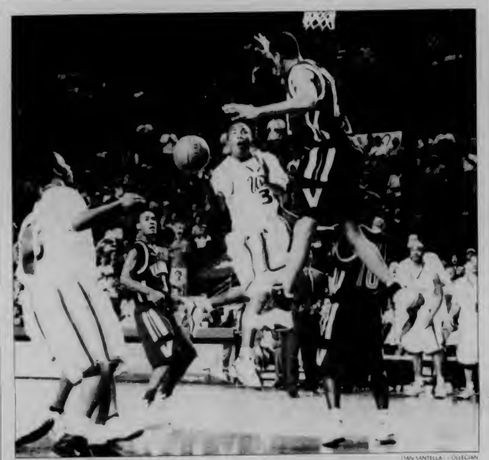
Here is the very bad news.

The Syracuse University men's swimming and diving team defeated UMass in a two-day meet December 3rd and 4th in Syracuse, NY at the Archbold Pool on the SU campus. UM was riddled 151-204 as they drummed-ed for the second straight meet.

Sophomore Djordie Filipovic led the Orangemen to victory, winning a whopping eight of the sixteen events by himself. Filipovic flew through the 100 and 200-yard butterflies in times of 51.62 and 1:52.30 respectively. He also took naval control in the 200 (1:42.29), 500 (4:40.31) and 1,650 (16:19.00) freestyles and the 200-yard individual medley, which he timed in at 1:56.02. He finished second in the 400 IM (4:09.20) to junior Dustin Riley who clocked a winning time of 4:06.81 in the event. Junior Josko Vucetic controlled the backstroke events, winning the 100 in 51.27 and posting a time of 1:50.25 in the 200. Senior Brett Bergmann followed Vucetic in second in both back events.

Four of Syracuse's men's swimmers were ranked in last week's Taper and Shave Magazine's College Quick 25. Filipovic cracked the top ten in the 200 butterfly as a result of his first-place finish in the 200 butterfly at the UNC/Nike Cup. Junior Ilia Mikhailov ranked nationally in the breaststroke events. Vucetic posted a Top-15 time in the 200 backstroke while Bergmann also posted a Top-25 time in the 100 back. The list, published weekly, ranks swimmers in each of the three NCAA divisions of competition.

Here is the not-so bad news.



Junior Billy Brown set two pool records while stealing victories in both the 100 and 200 yard-breaststroke. He started with a win in the 200-yard breast in 2:05.77 and followed up with a victory in the 100-yard breast in 58.08.

Senior Henry Turner matched Brown with two event wins in the 100 yard-free in 47.22 and the 50 yard-free in 21.83. Senior diver Ed Hefferon won both the one and three-meter diving events. He posted a career-high, second-best score in school history, 441.67 for 11 dives in the one-meter event. In the three-meter, he scored a 440.10, which was significantly lower than his 506.90, which broke the school record two seasons ago.

Because of the University of Massachusetts Men's Water Polo team's appearance in their sixth NCAA Championship, head coach Russ Yarworth was in California and unable to coach his team. Freshman swimmer Justin Houck also missed the event, scoring in the water polo's team win over UC San Diego.

The Minutemen fall to 4-2 in dual meets on the year.

The team returns to the boxed brook next Saturday, December 11, at 3:00 p.m., against the rival Huskies of UConn.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Sharing the Wealth

Maroon and White point guard Shannon Crooks dropped six dimes and hit the game winning three-pointer in last night's home thriller against the Wildcats.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

A bird's eye view.

Nathan Sell chases the puck along the boards as a BU defender looks through his five-hole.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Don't worry, coach!

No, Markus Helanen is not shrinking. A youth hockey player looks awestruck in the bright lights of the Mullins Center during the 1st intermission of Friday's game.

Ferraro inks contract

By Helene Elliott
Los Angeles Times

For three-plus seasons, center Ray Ferraro was the Kings' conscience. An articulate and passionate voice during some awful days, he was always honest about the team's failings but hopeful better times were ahead.

Better times are here, but Ferraro isn't. His age, 33, and creaky knees made him expendable, and the Kings didn't keep him from signing with the expansion Atlanta Thrashers as a free agent last summer. He's again enduring plenty of losses, but he's happy the Kings are thriving.

"Of all the teams I've played on, they're the one I'm glad is doing well," said Ferraro, who will face the Kings Wednesday at Staples Center. "I had so much fun in L.A. Some guys there, I consider close friends. We suffered through some tough times, but they've made some good moves. Getting (Ziggy) Palffy was a great move. Everybody knows he can score, but they're surprised how good a player he is without the puck. And with Blakey (Rob Blake) healthy, that's a big boost.

"I don't have any ill will toward anyone. I sure wish we would have won more, but the organization treated me really well... Everybody (in his family) had grown very fond of living in Manhattan Beach, including myself. When I first got to L.A., there was disappointment I had been traded from the Rangers and it took a while to get used to it, but it really became home."

He knew last season he wouldn't fit into the Kings' youth movement, but he was playing too well to quit.

"I wanted to play, and this is the best chance for me to play," said Ferraro, who is second in scoring among the Thrashers with five goals and 13 points. "I'm not ready to retire. I still love to play and can be effective."

In building the team, General Manager Don Waddell collected veterans such as Ferraro, Kelly Buchberger, Nelson Emerson, Mike Stapleton and Gord Murphy.

"We knew we'd struggle a bit, scoring goals, but one thing that's a little disappointing is, we're giving up more goals than I thought we would," Ferraro said.

Nonetheless, fans in Atlanta are responding enthusiastically to the first NHL venture there since the Flames left for Calgary in 1980.

"The fans have been great," Ferraro said. "At certain times, you can tell they might not have a grasp of everything that's going on, but they're excited. We're averaging well over 17,000 and have had quite a few sellouts."

He hopes to see some familiar faces on and off the ice Wednesday.

"It sure will be different playing against them and playing at Staples (Center). Last time I saw it, there were construction workers hanging off it," he said. "I'm not kidding anybody. I'd like to win there. I'm looking forward to going out there and playing well."

READ SPORTS EVERY DAY IN THE DAILY COLLEGIAN.

Is there an academic advisor who's been important to you?
We want to know!
Nominations are sought for UMass/ Amherst
Outstanding Academic Advisor Awards
Faculty and staff who advise undergraduates can be nominated for this award. Send written nominations to:
Outstanding Academic Advisor Award Committee
Office of the Provost
362 Whitmore Building
For further information, call Kyle Hoffman in the Provost's Office, at 545-2554

JAMAICA Spring Break
From $419
As seen on MTV
ONE LOVE. ONE HEART. ONE GREAT PARTY.
It's that time of year when thousands of students come to Jamaica and feel all right – for an unbelievable price.
YOUR SPRING BREAK PACKAGE INCLUDES
• Round-trip airfare
• 7 nights hotel accommodations
• Round-trip airport & hotel transfers
• Free welcome beach & evening parties
• Free admission to night clubs
• Discounts on restaurants, water sports & side excursions
• Porkages available to Negril and Montego Bay
• Professional on-site tour reps
• Complete weekly activities program offering optional sunset cruise, booze cruise, toga party & more
• Free bonus party pack
Sun Splash Tours 1•800•426•7710 Student Travel Services 1•800•648•4849
Price is per person based on quad occupancy from select departure cities. Other rates may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $66) and $12 handling charge additional. Rates increase $30 on 12/15/99. Peak-week surcharges/off-week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

Spring Break Experience
SUN SNOW FEST 2000
$299
www.skitravel.com 1-800-SKI-SNOW

Think About This:
You Want To Begin Investing. But You Can't Afford Much Per Month, And Inflation Is Eating Your Savings Account For Lunch.
Try Series I Bonds. They're guaranteed to stay ahead of inflation for up to 30 years, and you can get started with just $50. Visit us at www.savingsbonds.gov to find out more.
I Bonds
www.savingsbonds.gov
A public service of this newspaper

IN SHAPE NUTRITION
Nutrition Supplement Discounter
Great Products, Great Prices, Great Service!
END OF THE MILLENIUM BLOWOUT SALE!
November 29th-December 31st
65 University Drive, Amherst 549-7434
Get coupons online @ www.inshapeonline.com

Role reversals as the playoff picture begins to take shape

The Colts, Rams and Lions are in first place, the 49ers are 3-9 and the Cowboys and Packers are fighting for their playoff lives.

As Vince Lombardi once said, "What the hell's going on out here?"

First, to the team with a 62-year old who was thought to be insane, who has turned into 63-year old genius of a head coach, the St. Louis Rams.

The Rams won their first division title in 14 years this past Sunday. Through the non-stop crying that he does at post game press conferences, Dick Vermeil has done a phenomenal job turning around a team that entered this year averaging nearly as many losses per season in the 1990's as the Los Angeles Clippers.

St. Louis is now serious Super Bowl contenders – Take that, L.A. (and John Elway). The team is led by former Arena League star Kurt Warner, who has set a franchise record with 32 touchdown passes this year. Isaac Bruce is healthy for the first time since his 118-catch breakthrough season in 1995, and is proving to be one of the best receivers in the NFL. But the team prospered when they acquired Marshall Faulk from the Indianapolis Colts two days before the draft. Although no one seems to know what the hell their celebration in the end zone is, the one thing that is known is that the nucleus of the team is there for years to come.

And speaking of the trade for Faulk, that might have been the best thing that happened to the now 10-2 Colts. They got rid of a player who did not want to be there anymore and have prospered because of it. General Manager Bill Polian has to get 90-percent of the credit for the team's sudden rise (the other 10-percent to cool, calm Peyton Manning).

The past two drafts were nail-biters for Colts fans, as they took Manning instead of now San Diego Charger (at least I think) Ryan Leaf and Edgerrin James instead of now New Orleans bride, (not pride) running back Ricky Williams.

Polian was criticized for both moves, in particular, the drafting of James. What he has gotten is a quarterback already at superstardom, and a running back that will easily be Rookie of the Year. For all those who questioned those two moves, Leaf's best passes have been in a flag football game and William's best work has been writing a column in ESPN The Magazine entitled "A Season From Hell."

Speaking of teams that were supposed to have a season from hell, the Detroit Lions are in first place in the NFC Central. The team that supposedly had nothing after Barry Sanders left has won eight games this year. This past week, former Redskins quarterback Gus Ferrotte who once made an ill-fated attempt to put his head through the wall at RFK Stadium put his head through the wall of a paper thin Redskins defense with 280 yards on Sunday. Thanks to him and newcomer Desmond Howard, the Lions beat the Redskins for the first time since Muhammad Ali was talking trash to a laid out Sonny Liston in 1965.

At least Sanders did not do a Joey Galloway; see that the team is good after eight weeks and then show up. Hey, Joey, does it feel nice not being wanted?

Talk about a man who has gone from unwanted to a team savior, talk about Minnesota Vikings quarterback Jeff George. The quarterback who enjoyed more success yelling at former Atlanta Falcons and current Hawaii head coach June Jones (0-12 to 8-4 this year, not a good coach, right?) has single-handedly saved a team's season.

Heading into last night's game against the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the Vikings had averaged 30 points a game during a five game winning streak. For the year, George has thrown for 1637 yards and 17 touchdowns. He has done all this in nine games with only five of them being starts. This year's version of Randall Cunningham has taken over the job that belonged to, oddly enough... Cunningham, and has turned the Vikings from possible one-year wonders into Super Bowl contenders once again.

While the young crop of teams are shining in the spotlight, the dynasty formally known as the San Francisco 49ers are free-falling faster than Brett Mauser's predictions in the weekly college football column (I had to take a shot at my dog Mauser). While the Colts, Rams, Vikings, and Lions front offices are making sound decisions, the only sound people are hearing from the 49ers front office the same sound that normally is associated with the end of Boston Red Sox seasons, THUDDDDDDDDD!

The 49ers have lost eight straight, which coincides with the loss of Steve Young (for those who have always said that any quarterback could win in the 49ers system, this, if anything else, proves Young's greatness). Injuries and old age have been one problem. However, the team's achilles heal (other than their nothing for a second-) has been the draft selections in the past five years.

David Rose on the NFL

The team has had such great first round picks as Jim Drunk, my bad, Druckenmiller, and J.J. Stokes, who is a nice receiver, but not a 10th selection in the first round. Not only have Bill Walsh and the entire front office done a horrible job in drafting, they will already be 24 million dollars over the projected league salary cap next year. I wonder how 49er fans feel about their team going from 16 straight years of 10 wins to a team with a long rebuilding process ahead (Ah, for those who want to know how it feels, come talk to me).

The same thing goes with the Dallas Cowboys. Although 6-6 still keeps them in the playoff chase, this team does not resemble the team that dominated the mid 90's. Michael Irvin's unfortunate, and possibly career ending injury and concussion ridden Troy Aikman has transformed the Cowboys from America's team to "Is their anybody healthy in America that can play for this team?" The Cowboys offense Sunday night against the New England Patriots was about as good as Carl Lewis singing the National Anthem in the New Jersey Meadowlands back in 1994. The addition of Raghib "Rocket" Ismail has helped ease the pain of Irvin's loss, but at this moment, the Cowboys are on the outside looking in.

Also on the fringe of the playoffs are the Green Bay Packers. The difference between them and the 49ers and Cowboys is that right now, they have a leg to stand on or actually Brett Favre's right thumb. He is not the same quarterback without Mike Holmgren. However the Packers are getting healthy at the right time, and now with newcomer De'Mond Parker's 113 yards against the Rams, the Packers have the tools and the team to make a run. I dare say it: Super Bowl run.

Now to the week ahead: the New England Patriots are 7-3 and did not play well against the Cowboys on Sunday night. Drew Bledsoe has thrown 11 interceptions in the last four weeks. The Indianapolis Colts are coming off an emotional 37-34 victory over the Miami Dolphins. PERFECT SETUP.

The only time that the Patriots play well is if they are facing some sort of adversity. The Colts are high, the Patriots are barely hanging on. I like the Patriots in Indianapolis.

The Giants had their first 300-yard passer since Phil Simms. The streak of Kerry Collins and the Giants ends at one. Give me Doug Flutie and the Bills in Buffalo.

An unexpected big game is the Redskins and Cardinals play for first place in the NFC East. At home, look for the 'Skins to hold on to first in a high-scoring affair at Redskins Stadium.

The skinny on the rest of the games, give me the Jets over Miami, Jacksonville over Denver, Baltimore to officially put the final nail in the Steelers' coffin.

Also, Cleveland to get their revenge over Cincinnati, Seattle to turn out the lights on the Chargers, Minnesota to chop the Chiefs down to size, Dallas over the Eagles, Tampa Bay to beat the Lions as titans clash in Tampa, the Packers will send the Panthers packing and pick up their fourth straight win, St. Louis to trash the Saints and San Francisco to finally break their eight-game losing streak and defeat the Atlanta Falcons.

The season has been about as funny and as painful as a sign that I saw in Houston this weekend advertising "Vasectomy Reversal Procedures." Some of teams in the NFL this year wish that there were Record Reversal Procedures as well.

David Rose is a Collegian correspondent.

■ basketball

continued from page 12

some good looks, we just couldn't knock them down," said Flint. The Minutemen shot .393 from the floor for the game.

Kirkland, who exploded in the second half with 18 of his 22 points, also played a major role on defense as he saved a ball headed out of bounds and pushed it up to Mack. The senior guard set up Kirwana Rhymer for a 1-for-2 trip at the foul line. In back-to-back possessions, Kirkland sailed a 20-foot jumper through the net and then pump-faked a layup at 14-21 to cut the margin to 33-29. On the next play, it was Kirkland again converting a third-effort to bring UMass within two points.

After an Allen field goal at 19:17, it would be 8:43 before the Wildcats would score another basket. That basket happened at 10:34 when Jermaine Medley shot 1-for-3 at the candy stripe. One of Crooks' six assists happened at 8:07 when he hung a pass towards the net for Kirkland to bring down the alley-oop.

With the crowd of 6,643 behind the Minutemen, Mack banked a trey off the glass to make the game even at 36 all. Less than a minute later, Mack finished a layup from a Kirkland steal to take the first lead of the game at 6:29.

Villanova could never be counted out, however, with Lynch and Allen contributing seven points in a two-minute drill. It would be Ronnell Blizzard, who came off the bench to bank a jump shot at 4:09 that brought UMass back within three at 43-40. Blizzard recorded six points in 11 minutes.

"Bliz' made some big baskets for us, he rebounded the ball and played good defense," said Flint.

Allen scored just five points in the second half as the Minutemen focused on shutting the Belmar, NJ native down.

"In the first half, they just played behind me in the post," said Allen. "In the second half, they put a lot more emphasis on fronting me, it felt a lot more crowded in the second half."

Crooks turned his trick one more time at 3:24 when he relayed another alley-oop pass to Kirkland to make it 45-43, Villanova. Following freshman Ricky Wright's two-point score, Kirkland snagged an offensive rebound and went back up with it for a layup.

The Wildcats had resorted to a zone defense late in the second half, which the Minutemen foiled through by slashing in the paint for the deuce or a foul. Taking advantage of that, Kirkland cut through the lane towards a Winston Smith pass and the two points to tie it up at 47 apiece.

"I wanted to be more aggressive and the middle was open in the zone they were playing, we had to make hard cuts there," said Kirkland.

Both Nova and UMass would chalk two more points apiece before Crooks sunk his shot from downtown for the win.

"The ball started rolling and I looked up at the clock I was about to dive and Bruiser yelled 'Yo, shoot it,' so I just shot it," said Crooks. "I've been a little bit down, it felt good to help the team in that aspect. It could have happened to anybody."

Said Lynch, "The last thing I know, it was rolling right towards Crooks, I saw the shot go, I just looked straight up and I just said 'No, please.'"

In the second half the Minutemen evened out the rebounding but still finished behind at 41-36. Smith, seeing his second game of significant minutes on the court, pulled down two rebounds and distributed three assists while supplying a second wind for his team.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Look Ma, I can fly!

Ray Geever and Joey Culgin watch in awe as a BU player is sent sprawling in the Terriers' 2-1 win over the Minutemen Friday at the Mullins Center.

■ minutemen

continued from page 12

compared to three in the first 20 minutes that allowed Villanova to hold the Minutemen to one shot on offense.

"In the second half, we just came out with more energy and started getting second-chance points," senior co-captain Chris Kirkland said.

With Villanova cloaking Mack with a box-and-one defense, Kirkland took the reins, scoring 18 points and grabbing seven rebounds in the second half. Down a point with 1:01 left, Kirkland gave the Minutemen their first lead since 8-7 when he grabbed a Crooks miss and was fouled underneath, sinking a pair of free throws to send the Amherst faithful into a ruckus.

"[Kirkland] made some hard cuts to the basket and got some rebounds, some big rebounds," Mack said of the Timmonsville, S.C. native, "and he's the key to why we won the game."

Kirkland and Mack were gloves on defense, helping hold Villanova to 32 percent from the field in the second half. Each had four steals on the evening, allowing UMass to score 16 points off turnovers, much of which came on the break. Rhymer chipped in with four blocks.

STAY IN THE GAME. READ SPORTS.

Men's gym finishes second at UM open

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts men's gymnastics team finished a disappointing second at the annual UMass Open on Saturday. The Minutemen finished the meet with a score of 215.70, trailing Temple University's 218.25.

"We need to step it up on a few events," said sophomore Orrin Donley, who sat out last year, but brought in a respectable score of 8.75 on the parallel bars this weekend – the second highest for UMass. Parallel bars was one of the weaker events for the Maroon and White, and like Donley explained, the squad needs to iron out those problems in order to win EC AC's and beyond.

Although the team as a whole was rather frustrated with its performance, the Minutemen enjoyed the meet and remain optimistic about the rest of the season. "It was a totally different experience than earlier years," said freshman Ben Jacobs. "There's more comradery and it's a lot more fun. I'm kind of disappointed about the meet, but things will definitely get better."

On the flip side, Senior co-captain Jeff LaVallee finished first in the all-around competition with a 56.8, just passing Temple's Mike Moran (56.6). LaVallee won the pommel horse (9.70) and horizontal bar (9.6), while finishing second on both the parallel bars (9.25) and the still rings (9.50). Junior Michael Alexander had an awesome high bar set, which scored a 9.35, giving him the third place spot overall.

But there were even more solid scores for the Minutemen. Junior Bryan McNulty snagged second place on the floor exercise (9.55) and third on vault (9.60) while freshman Brian Peterson made his rookie debut with a great fourth-place-finishing pommel horse routine (9.40).

One of the events that seemed to give the Minutemen the most trouble was the vault. "It can definitely be a good event for us," said junior Eric Bacon, "but we really need to start using hard mats more during practice." The Belchertown native was on the sidelines most of last season due to an ankle injury, but managed to come back and score a 9.2 on the floor exercise at the Open – the second highest counted score for the Minutemen.

There is just an incredible amount of talent on this team and a 215.70 is clearly not reflective of that. It's very early in the season and history has shown that UMass drastically improves throughout the year. Be on the lookout for great tumblers like junior Clayton Kent and great pommel horse workers like freshman Justin Hammar. Once the Minutemen tidy up their routines and get more into the swing of competition, schools like Penn State will surely have a run for their money.

Great things can be expected from this team in the future and they have four weeks to prepare for their next meet where they will go to New York for the West Point Open on January 7th and 8th.

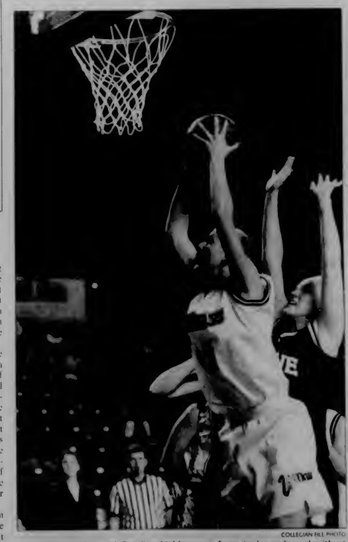
■ Texas

continued from page 12

teammate Kenya Tuttle by crashing through the paint for one and a trip to the free throw stripe. The Houston original then got back-to-back treyballs, giving her squad an extra three-point advantage.

The Minutemen muscled control over the next three minutes, committing eight consecutive fouls and allowing Rice to run their lead to 20-7. Sneed finally stopped UMass out of its funk, using a quick spin move along the left baseline to beat Rice's Kirra Jordan and get to the line for two shots, both of which he sank. Butler then followed suit, getting a second jumper by MacFarland, and a third chance hoop and a brilliant look-away pass from receptionist Bubbles on a UMass fast break gave MacFarland an easy deuce and cut the Owl lead to nine, 22-13.

But the Owls weren't about to cool off as Rice rush ed back up to 13, behind a treyball from guard Jenny Coffang and four assists from Brumfield over the last 90 seconds of the first half. UMass left the floor at halftime looking at a 35-20 deficit, and looking for answers.



"We came out kind of slow against Rice," Sneed said. "We definitely weren't getting the little things done out there."

Those little things turned into even bigger problems in the opening action of the second set, as Rice mounted a 9-0 run behind a trio of buckets from Tuttle. The Minutewomen came back to life at the 15:57 mark as another trey from Thomas keyed a 10-2 UMass run that chopped the Rice lead to eight, 49-41.

MacFarland then hoisted the team onto her shoulders and carried it back to the brink, 53-52, by earning eight trips to the free throw line over a span of 4:18. A devastating three by Brumfield and a free throw by Lawson put Rice back on top by five, but Coyner followed up a Butler foul shot by slicing into the lane and dishing to forward Caroline Nehls for an easy layup to bring the Minutewomen back within two, 57-55, with 1:15 to go.

The Maroon and White displayed its best defense of the night on the ensuing Rice possession, sealing off the paint completely and forcing the Owls into a shot clock violation. UMass then came down the court with less than a minute to play and a chance to force overtime, but instead opted to roll the dice on a Coyner three-point attempt, launched from two feet behind the arch at the left elbow. But the Ohio native's effort back-rimmed out, and a pair of free throws from Jordan left the Minutewomen in a four-point hole with 17 ticks to play. MacFarland's bold three as time expired made the 59-58 final score all the more frustrating, though the comeback itself spoke volumes about the team's character.

"Of course it's disappointing to come all the way down to Texas and lose like that," Sneed said. "But we just have to go with it. We need to focus on improving on the things we didn't do, and take it day by day."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Sophomore forward Caroline Nehls was a force to be reckoned with at the Hackerman Invitational in Texas, tallying 12 points and 13 rebounds on the weekend.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Local INDEPENDENT SHORT FILM needs interns for Jan. Recieve a film credit. Many position open: Sound, hair + make-up, art design, gaffer + grip. Contact # 413-286-7886

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom luxury apartment available January 1, 2000. Please call 413-253-7377 for more information.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Boulders $387 flexible avail. Call Chris 256-1629

Take over my lease! Large 2Bdrm, Cheap! Call 259-9183 on bus route

Beautiful 2-Bdrm in NOHO 2-floors, Jan 1 $775+electric Vicky or Angela 586-3132

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

92 VW Golf 50k auto/air $5000/bo 256-4177

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Dell Pentium2 Laptop 233mHz 64MBRAM 3.2 Hard Mod CD/Floppy 56k Modem + more $1500 negotiable call will 253-8074

Do you know Autocad and Microstation? If you do call Scott Yarosh at (413) 546-4895 Will pay up to $3000 per job that has to be done.

EMPLOYMENT

WINTER BREAK FLEXIBLE PART-TIME

Day, Evening and weekend hours available Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, Ma has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for winter break. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent readings/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increase to $8.00, health dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact:

Paul R. Bebo
Recruting Cooradinator
1-800-792-4514

EMPLOYMENT

ONE SUMMER, A LIFETIME EXPERIENCE. I could spend the summer learning someone else's bussiness, or I could be running my own. For more information visit our website and register to win a Palm Pilot www.collegeproedge.com or call 888-277-7962.

Fraternities * Sororities * Clubs * Student Groups

Student organizations earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 797-5743, x. 301, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

Holiday Jobs For The Environment! $300-400/week work with the Sierra Club over the winter break and beyond! Call Jesse 256-6434

Summer business internship available not limited to business majors earn up to $15,000 this summer call 1-800-390-4848 ext 100 ASAP or visit www.univ-paint.com

Movers Part time positions available for winter intersession and spring semester. Starting pay $8.00 per hour. Located close to UMASS. Call 584-4746

EMPLOYMNT

allstudents.com

Work for a College Internet Company
While Still In School

Leverage your Campus Knowledge to get paid well as a Campus Marketing Manager

Skills needed
- Outgoing & Motivated
- Leadership
- Organized & Resourceful
- Project management skills
- Familiarity with campus

Experience
- Sophomore or higher
- Live on or near campus
- Campus Involvement
- Active on Internet

Responsibilities
- Help Develop Marketing Plan
- Interview & Hire Support Staff
- Facilitate Campus Relations
- Local Account Management
- Manage Marketing Budget
- Execute Local Campaigns
- Help Conduct Campus Research

Open Interviews will be held on or near your campus the week of Dec. 6th. Go to allstudents.com for exact time, date, & location info.

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

Rental problems? Questons about your lease/security ~~deposit deductions?~~

FOR RENT

Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 campus Center, 545-1995

SNOWBOARD 97 M*I*A 153 Good condition Capped Edges, Dr Pro Model

FOR SALE

$300

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

Learn how to really fight! Don't be a victim. Private boxing lessons by retired

INSTRUCTION

pro Djata Bumpus. In Amherst on bus route 256-0364

3 Rooms for rent, next to SW dorm, Call 253-3670

ROOM FOR RENT

January-August lease in Leverett. $325/mo. utilities, washer and dryer included. Call Cemil 549-1643

Female roommate wanted ASAP. In 3 bedroom Townhouse $330 a month 549-2066

Two roomates wanted to share master bedroom in three bedroom apartment in Puffton. Private bath and walk-in closet $285+ each month call Pat/Steve 549-9310.

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Roommate Wanted 1 minute to bus busses every 5min CHEAP rent 549-9254

GREAT HOUSE NEEDS!! 1 or 2 Roommates to share 1 huge room in 1 great house. Jan/Feb-June. Bus stop across strees, backyard. Super, fun-loving, remarkable, roommates. Call 549-6886

Share Huge Room. Jan-Aug awesome house + roommates. $250 month cheap utilities on bus route 586-9552 Julia, Pam, Nate

Roommate Wanted in 2bedroom Brandywine Apt. utilities included $215/month on bus route call Eric, Greg 549-1029

Mill Valley 3 bedroom 2 bath on bus route. Looking for 2-3 roommates Call 256-1115

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment in S. Amherst on bus route oil/heat $300/month, utilities extra. Avail. next semester. Call Jill 256-1742

1 or 2 roommates wanted! Located in South Amherst. On bus route. Heat & hot water included. $270/one person. $190/2 people call 256-3201

Housemate Wanted for one room in a four bedroom apartment in Alpine Commons. Cheap rent, utilities inc. Starting January 1st. 253-2229

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom Apt. 2 people to share big room non-smoker. 3/4 miles from campus. Aprox $300 inclusive. Call Joe 253-4275

Personal Holiday Candygrams only $7.00! Delivery anywhere at UMass.

SERVICES

Personal greeting with candy 253-6722

Professional Male Alumni from South Shore (Boston) seeks sublet for winter session. Single or shared apartment on bus/near town. Leave message. Eddie (781) 837-2244

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

TO SUBLET

TRAVEL

Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.spring-breakdirect.com

Browse icpt.com for Springbreak "2000" ALL destinations offered. Trip Participants, Student Orgs & Campus Sales Reps wanted. Fabulous parties, hotels & prices. Call Inter Campus 800-327-6013

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

Be an internet star! Seeking off-campus students to host 24/7 live web cam in your home. Interested? Chect out www.masslive.com/offcampuscam or call 584-2777 for more information

WANTED

Seeking aspiring local bands to be featured in student film. Please send demo tape to UVC-TV19 216 Student Union c/o noise ASAP for more information call 545-1336

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, DEC. 7

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Biopolitics, GM Foods, and GM People" will be held at 8 p.m. in Wright Hall Auditorium at Smith College. A reception will follow in the Wright Hall common room.

Meeting – The Pride Alliance will hold its final meeting of the semester at 7 p.m. in rooms 904-908 of the Campus Center. After the meeting there will be a trip to the Black Sheep in Amherst. Call 545-0154 for more information.

Mini Mall – There will be a mini mall in the Student Union Ballroom showcasing a variety of vendors from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. The event is sponsored by Hillel.

Poetry – There will be a poetry reading by "spoken-word" poets Carl Hancock Rux and Suheir Hammad at 7:30 p.m. in the Davis Ballroom at Smith College.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 8

Mini Mall - There will be a mini mall in the Student Union Ballroom showcasing a variety of vendors from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. The event is sponsored by Hillel.

Open mic – There will be a Spectrum open mic night at 7:30 p.m. in room 163 in the Campus Center. Sign up will begin at 7 p.m. Coffee and homemade refreshments will be served. If you want to display artwork, drop it off in room 306 of the Student Union or call 545-2240 for more information.

NOTICES

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Demange Akpem entitled "Duvst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Community – The library hours for Dec. 6 through Dec. 19 will be from 7 a.m. 2 a.m. Study space is available, but there will be no staffed services from 7-8 a.m. and midnight-2 a.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for U Mass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Information – The last information sessions this semester for the domestic exchange program will be held Tuesdays and Wednesdays until Dec. 15 and by appointment. They will be in 614 Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Call 545-5351 for more information. The priority deadline for applications is Dec. 15, and the final deadline is March 1.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5201 for meeting times and locations.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks
Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!
*See Store for Terms and Conditions
University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER
Just another way that WE GIVE 100%
We give all of our profits to support University Programs

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 7, 1999

C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH 12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Jessye Norman – Home for the Holidays (In Stereo) (R)				Sessions at West 54th (In Stereo)			Scully World
WFSB 3	News (R)		CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Frosty	Frosty	60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (R)	Judging Amy The Pilot (R) (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WBZ 4	News (R)		CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Frosty	Frosty	60 Minutes II (In Stereo) (R)	Judging Amy The Pilot (R) (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WCVB 5	News (R)		ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Spin City (R)	Oh Grow Up (R)	Dharma-Greg	Sports Night		Once and Again (In Stereo) (R)	News (R)	Nightline (R)
WLVI 56	Sister, Sister		Fresh Prince	Friends (R)	Nanny (R)	Buffy the Vampire Slayer (R)		Angel Lonely Hearts (R) (R)			News (R)	Friends (R)	Nanny (R)
WHDH 7	News		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Just Shoot Me (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Frasier (R) (R)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX 20	Judge Lane		Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV (R)	Sharia Mc.	Dilbert (R)	The Strip Send Me an Angel			News	Real TV (R) (R)	Caroline
WVIT 30	News		NBC News	Extra (R)	Ent. Tonight	Just Shoot Me (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Frasier (R) (R)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC 61	Simpsons (R)		Frasier (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Friends (R)	70s Show	Ally (In Stereo)	Party of Five Ties that Bind			News	Friends (R)	Fraser (R)
WWLP 22	News (R)		NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Just Shoot Me (R)	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Frasier (R) (R)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)	News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY 57	World News		Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Your Money Matters		Finding Financial Freedom			Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB 40	News (R)		ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Fraser (R)	Spin City (R)	Oh Grow Up	Dharma-Greg	Sports Night		Once and Again (In Stereo) (R)	News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK 38	Judge Judy (R)		Judge Judy (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Fraser (R)	Sharia Mc.	Dilbert (R)	The Strip Send Me an Angel			Star Trek: Voyager The Cloud	Blind Date	Ricki Lake (R)
WTBS 72	Roseanne (R)		Roseanne (R)	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★ "Octopussy" (1983, Adventure) Roger Moore, Maud Adams						"From Russia With Love" (1963)
A&E 60	Simon & Simon "Psyched Out"		Law & Order "Mother Love" (R)		Biography: Bob Barker: Master of Ceremonies		Investigative Reports (R)		City Confidential (R) (R)			Law & Order "Virtue" (R)
CNN 29	Worldview (R)	Moneyline Newshour (R)		Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM 53	Saturday Night Live (R)		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★½ "Body Calf" (1997, Comedy) Jamie Foxx, Tommy Davidson				Premium	Canned Ham	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC 26	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery Web		On the Inside "Hard Time" (R)		New Detectives Case Studies		FBI Files "Dixie Mafia"		On the Inside "Hard Time" (R)
ESPN 27	Sportscenter		College Basketball: Great Eight – Kansas vs. Michigan State				College Basketball Great Eight – Arizona vs. Connecticut (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE 62	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope "A Time to Kill" (R)		★★ "I'll Be Home for Christmas" (1997, Drama) Ann Jillian				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV 33	Global Groove	MTV Jams	100 Greatest Videos		100 Greatest Videos		Biorhythm (R) Head Trip (R)		Real World (R) (In Stereo) (R)		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK 51	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold! (R)	Rugrats (R)	Hey Arnold! (R)	Skaater	I Love Lucy (R)	I Love Lucy (R)	I Love Lucy (R)		Love Lucy (R)	I Love Lucy (R)
SCIFI 59	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sentinel The Inside Man (R)		Sentinel Vendetta (In Stereo)		Storm of the Century (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3) (R)				Storm of the Century (R) (R)
TLC 63	Home Again	Home Again	68 Hours Betrayed (R)		Trauma: Life in the ER		Separate Lives (R)		Limits of Birth		Trauma: Life in the ER (R)
TNT 54	Due South (In Stereo) (R)		ER "The Healers" (In Stereo) (R)		NBA Basketball San Antonio Spurs at Indiana Pacers (In Stereo Live)				Inside NBA		★★½ "The Dirty Dozen" (1967)
USA 52	Baywatch "Nevermore" (R)		JAG "Second Sight" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★★ "Raiders of the Lost Ark" (1981, Adventure) Harrison Ford (In Stereo) (R)				Texas Ranger
HBO 35	★★ "Cool Paradise" (1996, Comedy) Robin Williams PG-13 (R)				★½ "You've Got Mail" (1998, Comedy) Tom Hanks PG (R)				Women Who Love Killers		Comedy Hall	Raverb
MAX 37	(4:15)	Scenes From a Transplant		Scenes	★★★ "Dead Bang" (1989) Don Johnson (R) (R)		★★ "Dirty Weekend" (1993, Drama) Kristoffer Tabori (R)					"Hollywood"
SHOW 36	5:30 ★★ "Seven Years in Tibet" (1997, Drama) Brad Pitt PG-13 (R)				Hoop Life (R)		Beggars and Choosers (R)		Rude Awaken. Linc's (R) (R)		Robert Zemeckis

HSCN 4 Hampshire Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	22	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	23	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	24	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	25	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	26	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch	27	CNN Si
9	UPN/20 Hartford	28	TBS
10	Weather Channel	29	BET
11	NBC/30 New Britain	30	College TV Network
12	Fox/61 Hartford	31	Univision
13	PBS/24 Hartford	32	Comedy Central
14	WGCH & HSCN	33	Cartoon Network
15	International	34	TV Land
16	UMass Academic TV	35	C-Span
17	WB/New Haven	36	ZDTV (Tentative)
18	Sundance	37	Bloomberg Financial Network
19	The Learning Channel	38	History Channel
20	UVC-TV19	39	HSCN Programming
21	ABC/40 Springfield

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Today, you'll want to splurge just a little, but not so much that you cannot enjoy what is coming to you just around the corner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – It's a good time to concentrate on your own state of mind, particularly as it develops when the unexpected comes your way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Others are likely to look to you for guidance today, but you may have to dig yourself out of a personal hold of sorts before you can offer it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Potential is increasing at this time, particularly on the job. Don't try to go against your own internal rhythms. Trust those "little voices."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – What you do today can count for much, but you don't want to let it go unappreciated. Make yourself and your efforts known.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You may be in need of a special kind of pick-me-up during the middle portion of the day. That's when you can look to a friend for assistance.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – You may have to distance yourself from a close friend for the time being, in order to discover just what you can accomplish alone.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – A personal, emotional assignment may come up and it is surely worthy of your whole-hearted commitment. Be innovative and experimental.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – An argument may come down to "your word against mine" today, but you've got an ace up your sleeve. Don't show your hand until it's required.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Someone has been selling himself or herself short recently. What does this have to do with you? The answer will be clear by day's end.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Something is about to get underway today, and you don't want to be left out. You have a great deal to offer and even more to gain.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – This is a good day to talk openly about those things that you usually keep under wraps. No one will doubt your motives or your integrity today.

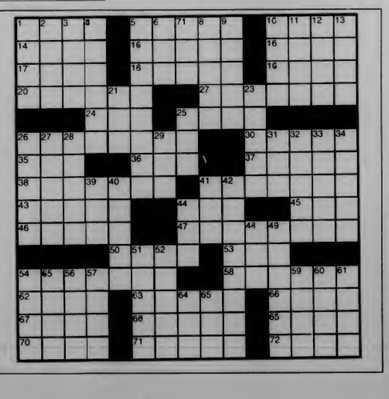
Close to Home By John McPherson

"Now don't be upset with the kids, Ray. They only did it so you'd be able to drive in the car pool lane."

Quote of the Day

"I was under medication when I made the decision not to burn the tapes."

–Richard Nixon



ACROSS
1 Sleep in a tent
5 Intoxicating
10 Pairs
14 Sandwich cookie
15 Ice house
16 Spellbound
17 Talk imperfectly
18 In good spirits
19 Theaters
20 Showy flower
22 Heaping
24 Very old: abbr.
25 Pt. of NBA
26 Soft leather
30 Wrapping paper
35 Gardner of films
36 Timetable info
37 Type of eclipse
38 Some stories
41 Assumption
43 Foe
44 Triumphant cry
45 Farm home
46 Play a guitar
47 Eternal
50 — and proper
53 In favor of 54 — Khan
58 Greece's sea
62 Aroma
63 Less hazardous
66 Football field, for short
67 Tang
68 Jeweler's concern
69 Singer Fitzgerald
70 Cook slowly
71 Lasting impressions?
72 Classroom item

DOWN
1 Frosty
2 Opera song
3 Be coordinated
4 Deciduous tree
5 Seized a vehicle
6 Alter
7 Everybody
8 Ken and Barbie, e.g.
9 Vacillates
10 Walked
11 Dry riverbed
12 Not closed
13 Doe's mate
21 Those holding power
23 Foot-leg connector
25 Santa — desert wind
26 Valleys
27 Happening
28 Planing to go
29 "— in the bag!"
31 Pina colada ingredient
32 Licorice-like flavoring
33 Observes Yom Kippur
34 Poker pair
39 Ostrich's kin
40 River deity
41 Letter after upsilon
42 Fortifications
44 Money dispenser, for short
48 Before, in a poem
49 Entered in a journal
51 Dangers
52 Violinist Stern
54 Heaps
55 Correct text
56 Short letter
57 Got larger
59 — Stanley Gardner
60 Has the flu
61 Sask.'s neighbor
64 Painter Angelico
65 Sense organ

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

JAPAN ALP TRACE
ABASH EAU RELAX
BUCKLESUP EMOTE
STE YODA TINES
SLIP ALTER
WEAPON MIDI
ARMING EVASION
ROOT DRY OLES
SKEPTIC SATIRE
RANT AMANDA
TUTOR JUTS
BERET LOUD OAR
ADORE ADORABLE
BLESS NIP ARISE
ASSET KEY PESOS

12-7-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni and Cheese
Golden Burger
Soup du Jour

DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetable Hot Wrap Bar

Worcester
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni and Cheese
Golden Burger
Soup du Jour

DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetable Hot Wrap Bar

Hampshire
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni and Cheese
Golden Burger
Soup du Jour

DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetable Hot Wrap Bar

Berkshire
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni and Cheese
Golden Burger
Soup du Jour

DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetable Hot Wrap Bar

Collegian Staff

Night Editor	Seth Koenig
Photo Technitian	Dan Sorrello
Copy Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor	Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff	Janine Tangney, Loves Gari

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday, December 7, 1999

Waterpolo places third in NCAA Tournament

By Matthew Bencal
Collegian Staff

Oh Baby! If there were a perfect way for the seniors of the Massachusetts men's water polo team to end the season, it would consist of winning a national championship. That didn't happen, but when the Minutemen returned from the NCAA tournament in La Jolla, California, they had posted the best performance in school history with a third place finish.

"Every season we set a national championship as our goal", said coach Russ Yarworth. "[This] will be used as a great stepping stone for the future of UMass water polo."

The water polo careers of the seniors came to a dramatic and unbelievable end on Sunday with a win in the consolation game of the Final Four.

The setting was Canyonview pool on the campus of the University of California at San Diego. The opponent was no one else but the hometown fan favorite and No. 3 seed UC San Diego. UC San Diego lost to No 2. Stanford on Saturday and was playing UM for the third place game. UMass had lost to No. 1 seed UCLA in the semi-final round, and was looking for some California vengeance.

UM took the pool Sunday morning against the Tritons, and little to be known, a battle was to be had. The Minutemen traded goals back and forth with UC for the first quarter of play, but couldn't match the Tritons second quarter output and went into the half down, 6-3.

Each team traded a couple goals in the third quarter, and going into the last frame of the season, UM was down by three.

"We were tired but it didn't matter," said Yarworth. It was the last game of the year, especially for the seniors, the last game of their careers. The guys played their hearts out. I didn't think we could comeback, but all of a sudden, Bam-Bam-Bam, we were back in it."

The Tritons had an 8-5 lead going into the fourth and hit again with less than five minutes left to go up by four.

"The crowd was pretty brutal," said UMass senior Ryan Gray. "In the second half, we were at the end of the pool where the student body was. We were down 9-5, but four goals later, it was pretty quiet."

In the blink of an eye, thunder struck. Five times. With 1:35 left, sophomore Adam Moore hit a big two point shot that tied the match at 9-9 and led to a five-point unanswered assault to win the war.

Junior Brooke O'Neill fired a two point shot of his own to close the door on UC San Diego. The lights were still on in the building, so with less than a minute remaining, senior Timmy Troupis decided to shut them off with the last goal of his career, which made the final 12-9.

"I've been encouraging Adam [Moore] and Brooke [O'Neill] to take the outside shot all season, and the timing was right," Yarworth said.

Of course, you can't forget that perhaps the best goal stopper in the country, senior All-America Richard Huntley, denied 14 shots from admittance to the net.

"We looked for leadership from Richard in the net and from Cory [Koenemann] and Pat Kain," Yarworth said. "We needed a total team effort."

When all was said and done, Moore finished the game with 3 points. Kain and O'Neill had two points apiece, and freshman Justin Houck netted a timely goal in the fourth.

The weekend didn't begin as successfully as it ended. The Minutemen were slated to compete with the top team in the country in the semi-final round, UCLA. UM began the match giving up three unanswered goals, and went into the half down 7-2.

Kain and sophomore Mike Foley netted two apiece, but it wasn't enough in the end. The Maroon and White were only down 7-3 going into the fourth, but they couldn't handle the heat of the last frame as UCLA threw seven to the back of the UM net while Yarworth's squad only netted three.

"14-6 wasn't indicative of the game. It was closer than that," said Yarworth. "But we lost to the national champions."

Huntley rejected 10 shots in the match and with the help of strong team defense in the third quarter in which the Minutemen didn't surrender a point to the vaunted Bruin attack.

"It was a very exciting weekend," said Huntley. "It was a big struggle all year, we had a lot of talent. My biggest fear was not getting through the Easterns."

"It was an awesome feeling," said co-captain Koenemann. "We didn't finish the last three years with a win. It has been a great four years."

You cannot have a successful season without a top-notch coach. In this case, Massachusetts has a top-notch person.

Yarworth "is amazing as a coach," said Gray. "With the facilities and money our program has, it is amazing how we're so successful. Coach is positive all the time. He's a great guy, period."

Huntley agrees. "He's great. Russ is capable of being strict and straightforward and he is a father figure. It's been a great friendship."

Crooks' shot puts UM hoops to 4-2

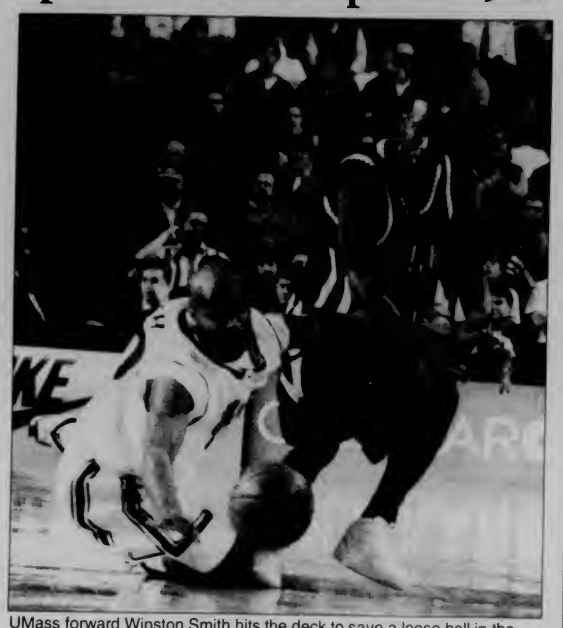
By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

With 16 seconds left, Massachusetts guard Shannon Crooks scooped up a loose ball that bounced off teammate Monty Mack's leg and drilled a 25-foot three pointer to clinch a 52-51 win over Villanova last night at the William D. Mullins Center.

The first home victory of the season brings the Minutemen to 4-2, marking the best start in Flint's four years as head coach in Amherst. The Wildcats in their first road game fall to 1-2.

"We've lost so many games which we play like that, we lost a ton of them like that last year," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "We needed a game like this so they can realize themselves that if this is what we do, we can win games like this in the end, and that was the most important thing about this game."

UMASS	52
VILLANOVA	51



Villanova set an early pace, scoring the first five points of the opening half before senior co-captain Mike Babul put back a layup following an offensive rebound at 17:38. Mack, who tallied 13 points, nabbed one of his season high-tying four steals and converted a breakaway layup at 15:26 to take an early 8-7 lead.

UMass struggled to contain Wildcat Malik Allen as the senior racked up 14 of his team's 31 points in the first half. In 1:05 minutes, Allen sunk six quick points to raise the game at 13-8. Rebounding became a sore spot for the Minutemen as Villanova outweighed them 24 to 13 in the first half.

Senior Brian Lynch added seven points in the first half for the visiting team including five in a span of four minutes. Down by a game-high 14 with 13.3 left in the half, Kirkland nailed a jumper and the first UM field goal in five minutes to cut the lead to 31-19. Mack closed out the first half by picking Lynch's pocket in the backcourt and taking him to the hole with a spinning layup with 38 seconds left.

"We had some good looks at the basket, I mean,

Turn to BASKETBALL page 9

UMass forward Winston Smith hits the deck to save a loose ball in the Minutemen's 52-51 win over Villanova at the Mullin's Center last night.

Not all goes well, but a win none-the-less

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team couldn't shoot.

All night long, the Minutemen were not so much blanketed by the visiting Wildcats of Villanova, but rather the shots simply wouldn't fall. Not even the usually dependable Monty Mack could bail them out this time. Nothing would fall, not even free throws, the team shooting It was a night to forget from the field, but a night that head coach James "Bruiser" Flint will file into the archives as a game won strictly on heart.

"No matter well you do offensively, if you guard and you rebound, you got a chance to win the game," Flint said. "We did a better job of offensive rebounding in the second half, I thought that was one of the keys."

There was no quit, no rebound too out of reach, no Wildcat dribble safe from a Minuteman paw. After a first half in which Villanova dominated from beginning to end, UMass headed to the locker rooms down a hefty 10 points at 31-21, a deficit seemingly insurmountable after shooting a wretched 36 percent. The 'Cats cleaned the glass, outrebounding the undersized Minutemen 24-13.

Rumor had it that this UMass team was going to light the scoreboard like none before, running up and down as if Paul Westhead were at the wheel. No one, however, can now say that.

The hallmark of Minuteman men's basketball, the foundation by which the Mullins Center years ago was built upon is defense. The hard-nosed, blue-collar attitude that many believed would be wiped [illegible] blackboard completely with the new transition-style, resurfaced and stole away a victory in the Minutemen's 52-51 nipping of Villanova.

The Wildcats lead grew to the game's biggest margin, a 33-21 lead with 19:17 left to play, when Malik Allen followed up a Brian Lynch miss underneath. UMass needed an answer and the 6,645 strong on hand waited for a sniff from its offense. Instead, the answer emerged over the course of the second half.

It took four minutes for the Minutemen to chip into the lead, Kitwana Rhymer sinking a free throw with 16 minutes left. Villanova stood still for nearly nine minutes while UMass crept closer, going on a 10-point run over a 5:24 span to cut the Wildcats' lead to 33-31 with 10:34 to go.

It was [illegible] Villanova was sensing the momentum swinging, offensive shots becoming more difficult as UMass' post players closed off entry passes to Allen, the team's leading scorer with 19 points.

"They just played behind me in the post [in the first half] and it was easy for guys to get it in," Allen said. "Then it was real tough, I always felt kind of crowded."

Not only did Villanova start missing, but the Minutemen began rebounding. The Minutemen went miss for miss with the 'Cats, but the difference was UMass cleaned up the mess it made underneath. The Maroon and White grabbed 12 offensive boards after intermission,

Turn to MINUTEMEN, page 9

UMass cooks up first win at Rice tournament

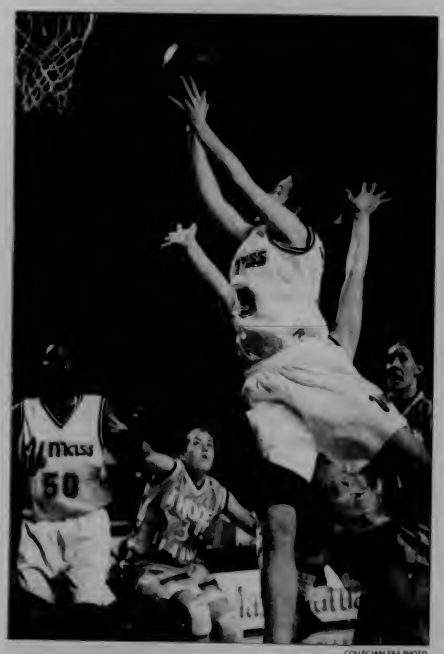
Team finds tempo to best NMS, challenge Owls

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

HOUSTON – As any Wrangler-clad cowpoke will tell you, everything is bigger in Texas. And what could be bigger than a determined young hoop squad notching its first victory of the season?

The Massachusetts women's basketball team packed crazy game for its trek down to Rice University for the Gene Hackerman Invitational. The team left it all on the court in an emotionally exhausting 59-58 opening game loss to the host Owls on Friday, then rebounded with a convincing 65-38 thrashing of New Mexico State in Saturday's action.

Both games featured the aggressive, up-tempo style promised by UMass coach Joanie O'Brien in the preseason. The difference in Texas came in the form of team defense and rebounding, as the Minutewomen (1-6) played phenomenally in the paint on both ends of the court.



"That's how you have to run," O'Brien said. "You run with your defense and your rebounding, and those are two things we've been struggling with."

The Maroon and White's first win came at the expense of an undersized Roadrunner team, a group that relies primarily on the perimeter play of its three guard set to beat bigger teams with speed and quickness. New Mexico State (2-3) launched 50 three-pointers in its three games leading up to the Hackerman Invite, using its outside prowess to set up post dwellers Carrie Sadat and Darci Arvizu.

"We knew that their best rebounders were their two post players," UMass center Jennifer Butler said. "We knew we had to box them out, and once we got the rebound, we needed to outlet and get running. And that's just the way it happened."

The way it happened was that the Minutewomen took off from the opening tip and never looked back. After trading hoops with the Roadrunners over the first 1:13, UMass took off on a 22-5 run behind three-pointers from Tonia Thomas and Kathy Coyner and two huge putbacks from Butler off missed Maroon and White foul shots.

The 6-foot-3 freshman snagged three offensive boards over the first 15 minutes of the game, punctuating her performance with a monster swat on New Mexico's Brooke Crawford in the post.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

UMass forwards Nekole Smith (50) and Alison MacFarland provided ferocious paint play for the Minutewomen in last weekend's Gene Hackerman Rice Invitational.

"We came in knowing that we had a speed advantage up front," O'Brien said. "The person who really set the tone for that was Jennifer Butler. And once we got some points early, it gave us a lot more energy on defense."

That defensive energy opened up the UMass transition attack, as the Minutewomen ran all over NMS to the tune of a 13-0 run that began with 7:37 to go in the half. Jaywana Bradley keyed the decisive shift with a short bank that staked the UMass lead to 30-17, and by the time freshman guard Ebony Pegues stuck a pull-up jumper at the 1:51 mark, the Roadrunners found themselves on the short end of a 41-17 score.

"The biggest thing in this game was the intensity," O'Brien said. "We played early with great intensity, got some easy rebounds, and really got an opportunity to run the floor. Once we got running, it really picked everybody up."

Heading into the locker room at halftime with a 43-19 lead, O'Brien's troops were riding high on what was easily their best half of hoop of the young season. But the coach knew that maintaining focus would be the key in the second half, and implored her troops to forget their first-half fireworks and keep their eyes on the prize.

"The biggest thing we talked about was starting the second half at 0-0," O'Brien said. "We said that we have to concentrate on doing things right, regardless of the score. For the most part, we were able to stay focused and do that. We're young, though, and we've got a lot of kids who got in, saw the score, and tried to make big plays. We just need to have a little bit more discipline."

One of those young players who stepped up and made veteran-caliber plays was freshman forward Amber Sneed, who showed deceptive speed and a knack for anticipation throughout the game. The 6-foot Ohio original canned an 18-foot jumper off a hasty inbound play to stake UMass to a 49-25 lead, then lobbed a beautiful over-the-top assist to Butler less than two minutes later. An offensive rebound off an Alison MacFarland miss sent Sneed to the free throw line on the next UMass next possession, and despite missing both shots, the fiery forward showed fantastic hustle in trapping New Mexico's Saidat out of bounds and causing another Roadrunner turnover.

"We five freshmen are always pulling for each other," Butler said. "Amber is someone else who did a great job today. She can run the three or the four spot, which makes her really versatile for us. She can also get up and down the court real well, and she comes up with a lot of rebounds."

Sneed's final masterpiece came with just under five minutes to play, as she scooped up an errant dump-in from New Mexico's Laura Mendoza-Govan and kicked out a sharp outlet pass to key a fast break the other way. Sneed then stunned teammates and opposition alike, streaking past all to finish off the break herself and give UMass a 60-36 advantage.

The Maroon and White's total domination gave O'Brien an opportunity to insert freshmen Kristin Cannon and Stasia Robinson into the lineup, the latter for her first action of the season. The 6-foot-3 Robinson made the most of her late entrance, sticking an eight-foot turnaround to cap the scoring at 65-38.

"We like to see each other get out on the court and get on the board," Butler said. "For Stasia to score her first two college points, that was great for the whole team."

Friday's melee with the Owls (4-3) featured two teams with incredibly gifted backcourts going toe-to-toe for 40 solid minutes. The Maroon and White's tandem of Coyner and Lone Star State native Thomas brought a combination of unbelievable court vision and lethal shooting, while Rice's Kim Lawson (5-foot-7) and Marla Brumfield (5-foot-9) challenged with unheard of size and slashing quickness.

It was clear from the opening tip that guard play would make the difference in the matchup. Thomas took the Minutewomen's very first possession and appeared to indeed be right at home at Autry Court, launching a three-pointer from the left elbow that snapped through the twine with authority.

After a Butler hank made it 5-0 UMass, the Owls' guard corps seemed to come alive at the Maroon and White's expense. Lawson buried a trey from the left baseline to get the Owls rolling, and Brumfield followed up a 10-foot turnaround by

Turn to TEXAS, page 9

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Tuesday, December 7, 1999

Waterpolo places third in NCAA Tournament

By Matthew Bencal
Collegian Staff

Oh Baby! If there were a perfect way for the seniors of the Massachusetts men's water polo team to end the season, it would consist of winning a national championship. That didn't happen, but when the Minutemen returned from the NCAA tournament in La Jolla, California, they had posted the best performance in school history with a third place finish.

"Every season we set a national championship as our goal", said coach Russ Yarworth. "[This] will be used as a great stepping stone for the future of UMass water polo."

The water polo careers of the seniors came to a dramatic and unbelievable end on Sunday with a win in the consolation game of the Final Four.

The setting was Canyonview pool on the campus of the University of California at San Diego. The opponent was no one else but the hometown fan favorite and No. 3 seed UC San Diego. UC San Diego lost to No 2. Stanford on Saturday and was playing UM for the third place game. UMass had lost to No. 1 seed UCLA in the semi-final round, and was looking for some California vengeance.

UM took the pool Sunday morning against the Tritons, and little to be known, a battle was to be had. The Minutemen traded goals back and forth with UC for the first quarter of play, but couldn't match the Tritons second quarter output and went into the half down, 6-5.

Each team traded a couple goals in the third quarter, and going into the last frame of the season, UM was down by three.

"We were tired but it didn't matter," said Yarworth. It was the last game of the year, especially for the seniors, the last game of their careers. The guys played their hearts out. I didn't think we could come-back, but all of a sudden, Bam-Bam-Bam, we were back in it."

The Tritons had an 8-5 lead going into the fourth and hit again with less than five minutes left to go up by four.

"The crowd was pretty brutal," said UMass senior Ryan Gray. "In the second half, we were at the end of the pool where the student body was. We were down 9-5, but four goals later, it was pretty quiet."

In the blink of an eye, thunder struck. Five times. With 1:35 left, sophomore Adam Moore hit a big two-point shot that tied the match at 9-9 and led to a five-point unanswered assault to win the war.

Junior Brooke O'Neill fired a two point shot of his own to close the door on UC San Diego. The lights were still on in the building, so with less than a minute remaining, senior Timmy Troupis decided to shut them off with the last goal of his career, which made the final 12-9.

"I've been encouraging Adam [Moore] and Brooke [O'Neill] to take the outside shot all season, and the timing was right," Yarworth said.

Of course, you can't forget that perhaps the best goal stopper in the country, senior All-America Richard Huntley, denied 14 shots from admittance to the net.

"We looked for leadership from Richard in the net and from Cory [Kuenemann] and Pat Kain," Yarworth said. "We needed a total team effort."

When all was said and done, Moore finished the game with 3 points, Kain and O'Neill had two points apiece, and freshman Justin Houck netted a timely goal in the fourth.

The weekend didn't begin as successfully as it ended. The Minutemen were slated to compete with the top team in the country in the semi-final round, UCLA. UM began the match giving up three unanswered goals, and went into the half down 7-2.

Kain and sophomore Mike Foley netted two apiece, but it wasn't enough in the end. The Maroon and White were only down 7-3 going into the fourth, but they couldn't handle the heat of the last frame as UCLA threw seven to the back of the UM net while Yarworth's squad only netted three.

"14-6 wasn't indicative of the game. It was closer than that," said Yarworth. "But we lost to the national champions."

Huntley rejected 10 shots in the match and with the help of strong team defense in the third quarter in which the Minutemen didn't surrender a point to the vaunted Bruin attack.

"It was a very exciting weekend," said Huntley. "It was a big struggle all year, we had a lot of talent. My biggest fear was not getting through the Easter."

"It was an awesome feeling," said co-captain Koenemann. "We didn't finish the last three years with a win. It has been a great four years."

You cannot have a successful season without a top-notch coach. In this case, Massachusetts has a top-notch person.

Yarworth is amazing as a coach," said Gray. "With the facilities and money our program has, it is amazing how we're so successful. Coach is positive all the time. He's a great guy, period."

Huntley agrees: "He's great. Russ is capable of being strict and straightforward and he is a father figure. It's been a great friendship."

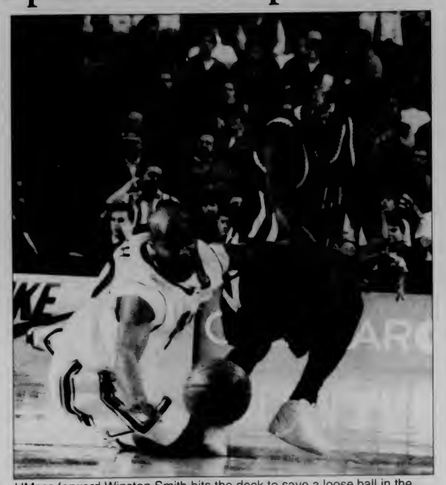
Crooks' shot puts UM hoops to 4-2

By Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

With 16 seconds left, Massachusetts guard Shannon Crooks scooped up a loose ball that bounced off teammate Monty Mack's leg and drilled a 25-foot three pointer to clinch a 52-51 win over Villanova last night at the William D. Mullins Center.

The first home victory of the season brings the Minutemen to 4-2, marking the best start in Flint's four years as head coach in Amherst. The Wildcats in their first road game fall to 1-2.

"We've lost so many games which we play like that, we lost a ton of them like that last year," said UMass coach James "Bruiser" Flint. "We needed a game like this so they can realize themselves that if this is what we do, we can win games like this in the end, and that was the most important thing about this game."



UMASS	52
VILLANOVA	51

Villanova set an early pace, scoring the first five points of the opening half before senior co-captain Mike Bahul put back a layup following an offensive rebound at 17:38. Mack, who tallied 13 points, nabbed one of his season high-tying four steals and converted a breakaway layup at 15:26 to take an early 9-7 lead.

UMass struggled to contain Wildcat Malik Allen as the senior racked up 14 of his team's 31 points in the first half. In 1:05 minutes, Allen sunk six quick points to raise the game at 13-8. Rebounding became a sore spot for the Minutemen as Villanova outweighed them 24 to 13 in the first half.

Senior Brian Lynch added seven points in the first half for the visiting team including five in a span of four minutes. Down by a game-high 14 with 13:3 left in the half, Kirkland nailed a jumper and the first UM field goal in five minutes to cut the lead to 31-19. Mack closed out the first half by picking Lynch's pocket in the backcourt and taking him to the hole with a spinning layup with 38 seconds left. "We had some good looks at the basket. I mean,

Turn to BASKETBALL page 9

UMass forward Winston Smith hits the deck to save a loose ball in the Minutemen's 52-51 win over Villanova at the Mullin's Center last night.

Not all goes well, but a win none-the-less

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team couldn't shoot.

All night long, the Minutemen were not so much blanketed by the visiting Wildcats of Villanova, but rather the shots simply wouldn't fall. Not even the usually dependable Monty Mack could hail them out this time. Nothing would fall, not even free throws, the team shooting 24-13.

Rumor had it that this UMass team was going to light the scoreboard like none before, running up and down as if Paul Westhead were at the wheel. No one, however, can now say that.

The hallmark of Minuteman men's basketball, the foundation by which the Mullins Center years ago was built upon is defense. The hard-nosed, blue-collar attitude that many believed would be wiped from blackboard completely with the new transition-style, resurfaced and stole away a victory in the Minutemen's 52-51 nipping of Villanova.

The Wildcats lead grew to the game's biggest margin, a 33-21 lead with 19:17 left to play, when Malik Allen followed up a Brian Lynch miss underneath. UMass needed an answer and the 6-8-1 duo strong on hand waited for a sniff from its offense. Instead, the answer emerged over the course of the second half.

It took four minutes for the Minutemen to chip into the lead. Kitwana Rhymer sinking a free throw with 16 minutes left. Villanova stood still for nearly nine minutes while UMass crept closer, going on a 10-point run over a 5:24 span to cut the Wildcats' lead to 33-31 with 10:34 to go.

It was only after Villanova was sensing the momentum swinging, offensive shots becoming more difficult as UMass' post players closed off entry passes to Allen, the team's leading scorer with 19 points.

"They just played behind me in the post [in the first half] and it was easy for guys to get it in," Allen said. "But it was real tough, I always felt kind of crowded."

Not only did Villanova start missing, but the Minutemen began rebounding. The Minutemen went miss for miss with the 'Cats, but the difference was UMass cleaned up the mess it made underneath. The Maroon and White grabbed 12 offensive boards after intermission,

Turn to MINUTEMEN page 9

UMass cooks up first win at Rice tournament

Team finds tempo to best NMS, challenge Owls

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

HOUSTON – As any Wrangler-clad cowpoke will tell you, everything is bigger in Texas. And what could be bigger than a determined young hoop squad notching its first victory of the season?

The Massachusetts women's basketball team packed crazy game for its trek down to Rice University for the Gene Hackerman Invitational. The team left it all on the court in an emotionally exhausting 59-58 opening game loss to the host Owls on Friday, then rebounded with a convincing 65-58 thrashing of New Mexico State in Saturday's action.

Both games featured the aggressive, up-tempo style promised by UMass coach Joanie O'Brien in the preseason. The difference in Texas came in the form of team defense and rebounding, as the Minutewomen (1-6) played phenomenally in the paint on both ends of the court.

"That's how you have to run," O'Brien said. "You run with your defense and your rebounding, and those are two things we've been struggling with."

The Maroon and White's first win came at the expense of an undersized Roadrunner team, a group that relies primarily on the perimeter play of its three guard set to beat bigger teams with speed and quickness. New Mexico State (2-5) launched 50 three-pointers in its three games leading up to the Hackerman Invite, using its outside prowess to set up post dwellers Carrie Sadat and Darci Arvizu.

"We knew that their best rebounders were their two post players," UMass center Jennifer Butler said. "We knew we had to box them out, and once we got the rebound, we needed to outlet and get running. And that's just the way it happened."

The way it happened was that the Minutewomen took off from the opening tip and never looked back. After trading hoops with the Roadrunners over the first 1:13, UMass took off on a 22-5 run behind three-pointers from Tonia Thomas and Kathy Coyner and two huge putbacks from Butler off missed Maroon and White foul shots.

The 6-foot-3 freshman snagged three offensive boards over the first 15 minutes of the game, punctuating her performance with a monster swat on New Mexico's Brooke Crawford in the post.

"We came in knowing that we had a speed advantage up front," O'Brien said. "The person who really set the tone for that was Jennifer Butler. And once we got some points early, it gave us a lot more energy on defense."

That defensive energy opened up the UMass transition attack, as the Minutewomen ran all over NMS to the tune of a 13-0 run that began with 7:37 to go in the half. Jaywana Bradley keyed the decisive shift with a short bank that staked the UMass lead to 30-17, and by the time freshman guard Ebony Pegues stuck a pull-up jumper at the 1:51 mark, the Roadrunners found themselves on the short end of a 41-17 score.

"The biggest thing in this game was the intensity," O'Brien said. "We played early with great intensity, got some easy rebounds, and really got an opportunity to run the floor. Once we got running, it really picked everybody up."

Heading into the locker room at halftime with a 43-19 lead, O'Brien's troops were riding high on what was easily their best half of hoop of the young season. But the coach knew that maintaining focus would be the key in the second half, and implored her troops to forget their first-half fireworks and keep their eyes on the prize.

"The biggest thing we talked about was starting the second half at 0-0," O'Brien said. "We said that we have to concentrate on doing things right, regardless of the score. For the most part, we were able to stay focused and do that. We're young, though, and we've got a lot of kids who got in, saw the score, and tried to make big plays. We just need to have a little bit more discipline."

One of those young players who stepped up and made veteran-caliber plays was freshman forward Amber Sneed, who showed deceptive speed and a knack for anticipation throughout the game. The 6-foot Ohio original canned an 18-foot jumper off a hasty inbound play to stake UMass to a 49-25 lead, then lobbed a beautiful over-the-top assist to Butler less than two minutes later. An offensive rebound off an Alison MacFarland miss sent Sneed to the free throw line on the next UMass next possession, and despite missing both shots, the fiery forward showed fantastic hustle in trapping New Mexico's Saidat out of bounds and causing another Roadrunner turnover.

"We five freshmen are always pulling for each other," Butler said. "Amber is someone else who did a great job today. She can run the three or the four spot, which makes her really versatile for us. She can also get up and down the court real well, and she comes up with a lot of rebounds."

Sneed's final masterpiece came with just under five minutes to play, as she scooped up an errant dump-in from New Mexico's Laura Mendoza-Govan and kicked out a sharp outlet pass to key a fast break the other way. Sneed then stunned teammates and opposition alike, streaking past all to finish off the break herself and give UMass a 60-36 advantage.

The Maroon and White's total domination gave O'Brien an opportunity to insert freshmen Kristin Cannon and Stasia Robinson into the lineup, the latter for her first action of the season. The 6-foot-3 Robinson made the most of her late entrance, sticking an eight-foot turnaround to cap the scoring at 65-38.

"We like to see each other get out on the court and get on the board," Butler said. "For Stasia to score her first two college points, that was great for the whole team.

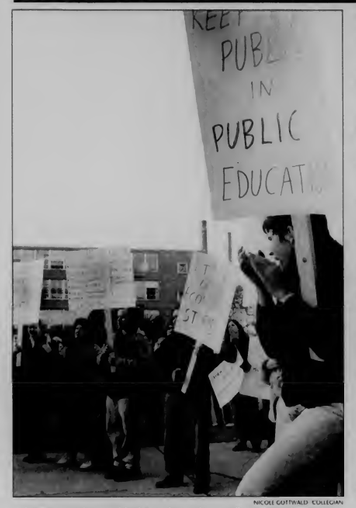
Friday's melee with the Owls (4-3) featured two teams with incredibly gifted backcourts going toe-to-toe for 40 solid minutes. The Maroon and White's tandem of Coyner and Lone Star State native Thomas brought a combination of unbelievable court vision and lethal shooting, while Rice's Kim Lawson (5-foot-7) and Maria Brumfield (5-foot-9) challenged with unheard of size and slashing quickness.

It was clear from the opening tip that guard play would make the difference in the matchup. Thomas took the Minutewomen's very first possession and appeared to indeed be right at home at Autry Court, launching a three-pointer from the left elbow that snapped through the twine with authority.

After a Butler bank made it 5-0 UMass, the Owls' guard corps seemed to come alive at the Maroon and White's expense. Lawson buried a trey from the left baseline to get the Owls rolling, and Brumfield followed up a 10-foot turnaround by

Turn to TEXAS, page 9

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO



UMass forwards Nekole Smith (50) and Alison MacFarland provided ferocious paint play for the Minutewomen in last weekend's Gene Hackerman Rice Invitational.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 62 — Wednesday, December 8, 1999

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Protestors gather outside the student union to rally against privatization.

Rallying students come together to decry privatization

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Concerned students and campus staff gathered together on the Student Union steps yesterday to protest the potential negative effects of privatization on the University of Massachusetts campus.

Among those in attendance at the rally were State Representatives Ben Swan and Steve Kulic. The message at the rally was that it is necessary for the campus unite to fight possible privatization.

According to Swan, the two reasons that the University would like to privatize are because of profit and to attempt to break unions within Massachusetts. "If they can break the union here, it will spread all over the state," he said.

He explained that many representatives were also against privatization and would do whatever possible to prevent it from becoming commonplace in the state. "We will do everything that we can legislatively do to turn this back," he said.

Representative Kulic also spread a similar message to the crowd. He explained that the University began to act as if they were a business. He commented that they had "forgotten the word 'public.'"

He urged the crowd to contact government officials and protest against the attempts to privatize. "We need you to contact the legislature and contact the trustees," he said.

Tom Coish, a member of SEIU Local union 509 said, "If we do not stand together we don't have a chance."

Coish explained that privatization is simply done for administrative profit and is not in the best interest of the students. "Privatization will not help to build our community," he said.

According to Coish, the administration not only ignored the unions on campus but also planned to attempt to allow private businesses to take over all aspects of campus life. "They are looking at privatizing every aspect of this campus," he said.

President of the University Staff, Rosemary Reiley, also spoke out against corporate greed and privatization on campus. "I know that privatization is not the answer," she said.

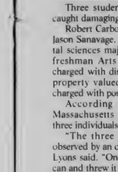
Last year, the University hired a consultant to look into the quality of the businesses on campus and see what can be done for improvement. The consultants brought back their reports, and the University began to accept bids from private companies that would provide the services and products currently provided by the campus bookstore. Three bids for the space were submitted and are currently being evaluated by the Board of Trustees.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Fighting corporate greed.

Students arrested after vandalism

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff



Three students were arrested last Saturday after being caught damaging vehicles.

Robert Carbone, 20, of Middleton, a junior English major; Jason Sanavage, 19, of Shrewsbury, a freshman environmental sciences major; and Sean Pelrine, 19, of Middleton, a freshman Arts and Sciences major, were arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and wanton destruction of property valued at more than $250. Sanavage was also charged with possession of a class D drug.

According to Jim Lyons, the University of Massachusetts Police Department spokesman, all three individuals were observed in Lot 32.

"The three students were walking and were observed by an officer on patrol shouting obscenities," Lyons said. "One of the three then picked up a trash can and threw it at an automobile."

According to Lyons, after the individual threw the trash-can, he started shouting obscenities and then another of the individuals got onto the roof of a car before climbing back off. A second individual climbed onto a second car, leaving dents and scratches. The last of the three climbed onto a roof of a third automobile before slipping off.

"All of the individuals were stopped on Sunset Avenue, patted down, and during the pat down, officers discovered the class D drug on Sanavage," Lyons said. "They were arrested and bailed."

Three automobiles, a gray Honda Accord, a red Dodge Colt and a red Oldsmobile Cutlass, were damaged in the incident.

On Monday night, a student called police from Johnson Residence Hall to report that a friend had a neck laceration.

"An ambulance was called to the scene and indeed, officers did discover an individual with a laceration on his chin," Lyons said. "However, when officers arrived, they noticed that both individuals smelled of alcohol."

The laceration on the man's chin was serious enough to take him to the hospital, Lyons said, and his friend, the individual that had originally called wanted to go to the hospital.

According to Lyons, Anthony Witman, 20, of Grafton, a freshman engineering major, pushed an officer when he was told that he could not ride with his friend to the hospital. He was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct on a police officer, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.

For his part, Witman said that he didn't push the officer and there were witnesses who would support his position.

Entrepreneurship program set

Spring brings new forum for student business ideas

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Although for many the spring semester is still in the distant future, a program to be launched in January aimed at enhancing student's abilities to embark on new ventures is currently being developed. The University of Massachusetts and Five College Entrepreneurship Program's goal is to provide students with the professional skills and networks to develop and carry through with their business ideas, according to Jaymie Chernoff, director of the economics department.

The Office of Economic Development and Mass Ventures, along with financial support from alumni and business sponsors, are supporting the program. Mass Ventures is a catalyst company that helps businesses successfully thrive in Western Massachusetts. UMass, the business community and the Commonwealth created the company, Chernoff said.

Beginning in February, the program will start with a forum for alumni entrepreneurs to present their stories. Following this forum during March and April, a team networking meeting and eight seminars will take place. At the completion of the events, $10,000 will be awarded to the student with the best business plan. As defined by Chernoff, a business plan is "simply a compelling statement of what your business is going to do and why it will succeed."

In addition to the possible award, the program is set up in such a way that students will be given the option to receive one honors credit for an interdisciplinary independent study, although the seminars are not exclusive to honors students, nor is the credit mandatory.

By attending the eight seminars, who will feature lawyers, entrepreneurs and marketing specialists as speakers, students will be able to work on skills that they would not otherwise gain through regular classes. The opportunities will also be available to all students, therefore not limiting access to specific majors. "There are good courses in the School of Management, but they are not accessible to a large number of students," Chernoff said. "New business ideas can happen in any field – retail, service, as well as high tech."

Many supporters of the new program feel that it will be a great asset to a student's education in that it is a convenient way to get more knowledge on skills that will be essential when they graduate.

"Without even leaving campus, they can meet entrepreneurs and business experts and learn how to describe a business idea in a way that persuades others to invest, join the team, or buy the idea," Chernoff said.

A student involved in planning the program agrees that the program should be very beneficial in the future. "I decided to get involved because I thought it would give me another option for when I graduate," Elizabeth Slaskovskis, a junior engineering major said. "I will learn more skills for business that I won't be able to get in my classes."

The program has been designed through the five colleges in order to create a diverse atmosphere where alumni and community entrepreneurs have the opportunity to create effective teams, in addition to teaching students what makes a team successful.

"A business is more than a good idea or a good manager – it has to have both, and someone who knows how to sell the good or service," Chernoff said. "We will help students to find the right team members to

Turn to ENTREPRENEUR page 3

Students rally for Puerto Rico

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Students will rally and march today to protest the presence of the United States Navy in Vieques, Puerto Rico. The protest will begin at noon today on the Student Union steps.

"We are protesting the United States Navy's presence on the island," Rene Gonzalez, a junior legal studies and political science double major and the organizer of the rally, said.

In the 1940s, the United States occupied two different Puerto Rican towns: Culebra, an island, and Vieques. After civil disobedience in the 1970's, the U.S. Navy removed itself from Culebra, but continued its occupation of Vieques. The town is used for military exercises.

The U.S. continued conducting exercises in Vieques, but earlier this year, a 2,500 pound bomb accidentally struck a guard tower on the island, killing a civilian guard. In response, Puerto Rico's three major political parties united for the first time ever to state that bombing would never be allowed to happen again in Vieques and that the Navy should leave the island town.

On Dec. 4, President Bill Clinton offered to phase out all training after five years and to immediately stop the use of live bombs on the island. He also said that U.S. training would continue, albeit scaled down, in the five years leading up to the total U.S withdrawal. That proposal was rejected by Puerto Rican leaders who demanded an immediate U.S. withdrawal from the island.

"Our immediate goal with this rally is to let people know that President Clinton's offer was unacceptable to Puerto Ricans," Gonzalez said.

Latin singer Ricky Martin, actress and singer Jennifer Lopez and boxer Felix Trinidad have all come out in support of Vieques, as have presidential candidates Al Gore, George W. Bush and Bill Bradley. Hillary Clinton has also voiced her support for the small island town.

Joining these national figures is Harvard University. The private Boston school passed a resolution of students and faculty against the occupation and usage of Vieques for military training.

Today's protest, led by Boricuas Unidos, is attempt by the registered student organization to both denounce Clinton's decision, and at the same time show support for the well-being of Puerto Rico.

Gonzalez hopes that the protest will bring out between 100 and 200 students.

Turn to RESEARCH, page 3

Feminist panel to present gender research today

The faculty of the University of Massachusetts-Amherst is known for its research, including the topic surrounding gender roles. In light of the recent violence against women on campus, the women's studies department believes it is important that this research not go unnoticed.

A panel discussion will be held today in the Campus Center room 905-09 from 4 to 6 p.m. for both the campus and outside community to give three new scholars an opportunity to discuss their research.

The interdisciplinary feminist scholars/feminist scholarship speakers panel is sponsoring the discussion, which will host Anne Cieko, Sunaina Maira and Jova Misra, all new members in their departments.

Anne Cieko, who received her Ph.D. from the University of Pittsburgh, will be speaking on gender and global pop cinema: Hong Kong action and Bollywood Masala. She is currently an assistant professor in the communications department.

Sunaina Maira, is currently an assistant professor from the English department. She has worked at Harvard's graduate school of educa-

NICOLE GOTTWALD / COLLEGIAN

If the hat fits wear it.

Apparel marketing major Cyndy Lopez, and Daniela Trammell, legal studies major; try hats on for size at the mini mall.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 52 LOW: 28	HIGH: 54 LOW: 28	HIGH: 48 LOW: 34

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Y2What? — Read the third installment of the Collegian's series on the possible effects of the Y2K bug at the University of Massachusetts inside today's news section. — NEWS, Page 2

"Welcome to Our Neighborhood" — Slipknot comes to Boston, also reflections on the year in mass media in today's Arts and Living. — ARTS, Page 6

The Man with the Golden Arm — Senior quarterback Todd Bankhead has put together a fantastic career for the Maroon and White, driving the team to the forefront of Division I-AA football. Read about him in today's sports — SPORTS, Page 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

UM and the year 2000

Administration works to avoid panic

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

This article is the third in a series.

Pandemonium, panic and mass destruction to computers all over campus. These are some of the images that the Y2K millennium bug conjures up in the minds of both students and faculty alike at the University of Massachusetts.

The University has already taken precautions to prevent major computer malfunction when the clock turns to 12:01 on Jan. 1, 2000. According to the Faculty Senate representative of the Provost Office, the administration has already taken some steps to ensure that the on-campus computers are Y2K compliant.

But, as a precaution, the Provost Office requested that, if possible, professors turn in their grades early. By requesting that faculty hand in their grades by the last week in December, the Provost Office hopes to avoid any possible computer glitches that might occur.

Some potential problems that could arise for the University due to Y2K include problems with transcripts, pre-registration, final grades for the semester and even problems with the phone system.

Philosophy professor Gareth Matthews said he was glad the administration had already planned out a course of action in case of problems with Y2K.

"The administration is doing well to be prepared," Matthews said.

Although he said, "I am not frightened myself," he explained that he was happy that there was someone looking out for the University's interests.

Lisa Selkirk, the head of the linguistics department, also had similar comments. She explained that the preparation at the University-wide level had been adequate.

"I have been pretty reassured that the computers on campus are going to be okay," Selkirk said. Faculty member Nina Scott, a professor of Spanish and Portuguese at the University, has already begun making plans for the Y2K bug in her own way. She explained she would be saving important information currently on her computer such as courses, programs and letters of recommendation for students onto disks for safekeeping.

"You can prepare, and if it was not necessary then it does not matter," Scott said. She also explained that the fear of Y2K has affected different parts of everyday life. For example, she commented that some people are afraid to fly in the first week of the new year because of the fear of a malfunction to the airplane. Scott also said that in order to prevent problems at the hands of Y2K that others could "make plans, and make preparations."

"You really don't know what is going to happen," Scott said.

■ entrepreneur

continued from page 1

cover the parts of the business the individual can't cover on his or her own."

Around the country, programs such as the one being set up at UMass are being planned. The idea of the program and having it involve a business competition is becoming a more common occurrence on college campuses, although Chernoff said UMass is leading the group.

Both students and faculty alike who have been involved in the planning of the seminars seem eager about the possibilities it could bring to the University. "I am excited about being involved in the program," Slavkovsky said.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Holiday shopping.

Satisfy all of your shopping needs at the mini mall, a holiday shopping extravaganza, being held at the student union ballroom.

Clinton and cabinet plan to intervene in gun lawsuits

By Charles Babington
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The Clinton administration plans for the first time to intervene in litigation against the gun industry, a move to pressure manufacturers to help keep guns out of the hands of criminals and to reduce accidental shootings, officials said yesterday.

The decision could dramatically strengthen the hand of numerous cities that have sued or threatened to sue firearms manufacturers, seeking redress for the public costs of gun violence. Federal officials will begin pressing the manufacturers to settle those lawsuits by making a variety of concessions, such as preventing "straw purchasers" from buying large quantities of firearms – a popular method for convicted felons to obtain new guns.

If the gunmakers don't agree, the administration says it is ready with a powerful weapon similar to one it is using against the tobacco industry: a massive lawsuit on behalf of the nation's 3,191 public housing authorities and their 3.25 million residents.

To some degree, the threatened litigation could allow the Clinton administration to use the courts to achieve gun control measures that have failed in Congress. The architects of the current wave of litigation against gun manufacturers are openly seeking quasi-legislative remedies: They want gunmakers to agree to distribute their products only to dealers who will not sell at gun shows; not to sell an individual more than one gun at a time; not to sell more than one gun a month to a buyer; and to cut off any dealers who have a disproportionate number of guns traced to crimes.

Other concessions being sought include manufacturers including safety locks on new guns; mechanisms that keep a gun from firing when the magazine is removed; and technology that personalizes guns so that only the owners may fire them.

"The federal government licenses people to make and sell guns," said James P. Dorr, an attorney for several gun companies. "These are products that are regulated by the government. To sue someone they have authorized to sell those products has no basis in the law."

Candidates' Night

Thursday at 7 p.m. in Campus Cente Room 174

Mandatory for all Collegian staff members

Voting will take place Friday and Monday

Warning!!!

Citizen Alert!!

Live365.com

A chip off the old Eastern Bloc

Close your ears and open your eyes, John Q. Public!!! Because the architects of audio armageddon are at it again. Despite our efforts, Live365.com(mic) is luring droves of unsuspecting citizens into its wicked web. And before you can say "Adios, America!", these fresh, freckle-faced victims are drowning in Live365.com's endless streams of radio. With no fees, no formats and... NO FCC.!! And what does no FCC lead to? A little thing called FMC. (Spontaneous Human Combustion!) Do not fall prey to the distortions!

magnified 200x

The Sonic Summit of '63

Unnamed sources provided this photo documenting the exchange of "non-terrestrial" technology that surfaced three decades later as Live365.com's purported "streaming audio"

Distortion 1

"Live365.com's wide variety of radio stations makes for a pleasant pastime." Yeah, and they put flouride in the water because it's good for us! (See our pamphlet, "Strong Bones & Teeth are Weakening America"). In the blink of an eye, you're listening 24 hours a day and the Liberty Bell is ringing in Red Square!

Distortion 2

"[Live365.com] is my own free radio allows me to express who I really am." Last time we looked at an American dictionary, there was no "I" in team. You should listen to licensed DJ's and regulated broadcasts just like everyone else. And if that means hearing one boy band too many, it's a small price to pay to keep our country great!

people listening to free radio
Pressure from above
THE AMERICAN WAY
Pressure from below
people broadcasting free radio

Distortion 3

"Live365.com is a place where I can meet like-minded individuals and make new friends." Chatting with other co-dependent enablers [and trained Live365.com operatives] just ensures your own audio addiction. We must rise as one against this pernicious evil. If you won't do it for yourself, at least do it for the children!-

Nostradamus saw it coming 500 years ago. A nation of good-for-nothings, attached to their "computers" like infants by umbilical cords. Doomsday is coming --in stereo!!!!!

Live365-v=Lie365

LIVE 365 COM Wrong for America

Paid for by the citizens against live365.com

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z, A is as important as Z
Buddhist saying
A To Z
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261

Think About This:
You Want To Begin Investing But You Can't Afford Much Per Month, And Inflation Is Eating Your Savings Account For Lunch.
Try Series I Bonds. They're guaranteed to stay ahead of inflation for up to 30 years, and you can get started with just $50. Visit us at www.savingsbonds.gov to find out more.
Illinois
www.savingsbonds.gov
A public service of this newspaper

Albright sounds upbeat about Syrian-Israel talks

By John Lancaster
Washington Post

DAMASCUS, Syria – Striking an upbeat note about the prospects for a resumption of Syrian-Israeli peace talks, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright said Tuesday she was "much more hopeful" following a three-hour meeting here with President Hafez Assad.

U.S. officials declined to provide even the sketchiest details of Albright's conversation with the autocratic Syrian leader, saying only that he had provided "new clarifications" on Syria's conditions for resuming talks with Israel that broke off in early 1996.

Still, Albright's buoyant tone appeared to signal a shift. Prior to her arrival here Tuesday, U.S. and Israeli officials had grown skeptical about Assad's desire to resume the talks, despite an initial burst of optimism after the election last spring of Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak.

"I feel, based on my discussions today, that President Assad is serious about finding the most productive way to" to resume the negotiations, Albright said at a news conference after meeting with Assad and Foreign Minister Farouk Charaa at Assad's imposing modern palace overlooking the Syrian capital. "I leave here feeling much more hopeful than when I arrived here this afternoon," she said.

After the news conference, Albright called President Clinton to brief him on her discussion, then flew to Israel, where she planned to meet Wednesday morning with Barak and other top officials.

The secretary, who arrived in the region Monday night, may be called upon to break a new deadlock between Israel and the Palestinian Authority that is threatening to undo their pledge to reach agreement by mid-February on the broad outlines of a final settlement.

Clinton has vowed to do everything he can to broker a comprehensive regional settlement by the time he leaves office in 13 months. While attention has lately focused on Israel and the Palestinians, Israel's conflict with Syria is in some respects more pressing in light of continuing Israeli losses in southern Lebanon, where Hezbollah guerrillas are waging proxy war against Israeli forces on behalf of Damascus and Tehran.

Barak's suggestion that he would consider a unilateral troop withdrawal from Lebanon by July has raised fears in the region that Israel could be drawn into direct military conflict with Syria if Hezbollah takes advantage of the pullout to attack northern Israel.

Despite Assad's public praise of Barak, the two sides have remained divided over Assad's insistence that Israel publicly commit to withdraw from the Golan Heights to the line it occupied on June 4, 1967 – the eve of the Six-Day War – as a condition for resuming talks.

Syria maintains that Yitzhak Rabin, then Israeli prime minister, pledged to do just that in a message relayed to Assad by then-Secretary of State Warren Christopher in 1995. Israeli and U.S. officials say that Rabin, who was assassinated the same year, broached the prospect of a withdrawal only as a "hypothetical" offer aimed at judging Syria's willingness to meet Israeli demands for full peace and normal relations.

Since Barak took office in June, U.S. officials have struggled – first with high hopes, more recently with deepening pessimism – to find a formula that would bring the two sides back to the negotiating table. Their failure to do so has led to doubts in Washington about the intentions of the Syrian leader.

Many analysts have speculated that Assad fears the consequences of a peace agreement. The Syrian president, who is 69 and in failing health, is said to fear that a treaty with Israel could threaten his grip on power – and his plans to ensure that his son, Bashar, succeeds him in office – by forcing the country to open its doors to foreign investment and influence.

A senior European diplomat here disputed that view, saying that Assad recently signaled through European and Arab intermediaries, including Jordan's King Abdullah, that he is willing to show "flexibility" on key Israel demands such as water rights and security guarantees.

On the other hand, the diplomat said, "I don't think Assad is going togo to the table unless he's given assurances that he regards as adequate." Assad, the diplomat added, "knows precisely what his bottom line is. He's not going to settle for less, and if that's playing it tough, that's playing it Syrian style."

■ research

continued from page 1

tion, Columbia University and New York University. Maira will be speaking today on fantasies of purity, remix youth culture and Asian American studies in the 1980s.

The third faculty member on the panel is Jyoti Misra, from the sociology department. Misra received her Ph.D. at Emory College. Her focus of research and topic today is on feminist approaches to the state, welfare, work and culture.

Mary Gavin is a Collegian columnist

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Master of the skateboard

Mike Duhl, skateboard expert and extraordinaire practices his technique by the campus center.

ANTHONY'S
Along with EXOTICA Entertainment

Is Now Recruiting Attractive Entertainers to Join Our Team!!
NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY.
Call Scott Today at
(413) 532-8888

500 new Ludlow Rd., South Hadley, MA
CLUB line (413) 532-3621
HOT line (413) 538-6969
Visit Us At www.anthonys.net

GIFTS!

The Jewish Student Union's 1999
MINI MALL
A Holiday Shopping Extravaganza
DECEMBER 7 & 8
10:00am - 5:00pm
Student Union Ballroom

Ad urges defeat of same-sex marriage ban

By Jenifer Warren
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD – Cast members of a popular TV sitcom featuring two gay characters are stepping out of their fictional roles to deliver a real-life message, urging voters to defeat a March ballot initiative aimed at banning same-sex marriage in California.

The four stars of NBC's hit show "Will and Grace," which draws about 13 million viewers a week, have filmed a television ad charging that Proposition 22 would legalize discrimination against gays and lesbians.

Just less than 30 seconds long, the ad will hit the airwaves in January in California's biggest cities. Opponents of the initiative say they will spend at least $1 million on television time for the spot.

"I think it's a particularly ugly proposition, and while I don't do a lot of preaching in front of the camera, with my series I'm blessed with the ability to make a difference in some way," said Max Mutchnick, co-creator and co-executive producer of the offbeat comedy. "Fortunately, I'm surrounded by actors who feel as strongly about this as I do."

It is not unusual for celebrities to champion a political cause. In recent years, actors have spoken publicly about everything from noisy leaf blowers to animal rights, famine relief and breast cancer research.

But it is rare – and some say potentially risky – for the entire cast of a show to take a position on a specific ballot initiative, especially a controversial one.

"When Ted Danson talks about pollution in the ocean, no one is going to say, 'How dare he,' " said Scott Seomin, entertainment media director of the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation. "But this is different...It's not a safe issue to speak against."

Mutchnick, who wrote the spot, said he was moved to speak because he views the "rhetoric surrounding the initiative as very mean-spirited." While he could simply have written a large check for the opposition campaign, the producer said he wanted to "be a little more involved" and figured an ad was a natural fit.

As for the potential risk, Mutchnick was careful to point out that the network played no role in the ad: "We are not speaking for NBC in any way. This was my cost, my time and the actors' time."

NBC was quick to echo that: "This is something that the cast chose to do personally and does not reflect NBC's beliefs at all," said network spokeswoman Shirley Powell.

Analysts said the use of celebrities in political campaigns can be helpful in putting an issue on the map. But they questioned how influential the spot would be.

U.S.-China tension grows over trade

By John Pomfret
Washington Post

BEIJING – Despite a landmark deal on China's accession to the World Trade Organization three weeks ago, ties between the United States and China appear to be getting more tense across a range of issues, including trade, Western diplomats and Chinese analysts say.

In some areas – most notably human rights – relations between the United States and China have soured since American and Chinese negotiators clinked champagne glasses on Nov. 15 to celebrate the end of 13 years of negotiations over China's accession to the world trade body. Recently, China's foreign ministry has been refusing to accept U.S. human rights-related protests, Western diplomats said.

The tension illustrates the mixed results achieved by President Clinton, who sought to use the trade talks to right a relationship rocked this year by allegations of Chinese nuclear weapons-related espionage, the White House's refusal of an earlier Chinese bid to join the WTO, and the deadly bombing of China's embassy in Yugoslavia by NATO warplanes. It also reflects the deep and, some would argue, growing mistrust and misunderstanding in relations between the two countries.

"Washington does not want to see this as a problem," one Western diplomat said of the stagnation in U.S.-China ties. "They are so focused on engagement with China but nobody can say what the engagement is for."

Top among the problems between the United States and China is, once again, human rights. On Nov. 29, Chinese police beat and detained a member of China's banned opposition political party after he met a U.S. Embassy official, Woo Lee, in Beijing, a Hong Kong-based rights group and other sources said Monday.

Police detained Fu Sheng of the China Democracy Party, who refused to disclose what he told Lee, the human rights officer at the embassy. Chinese police then "pinned him to the ground and punched and kicked him," according to the Information Center for Human Rights and Democratic Movement in China.

Since the bombing of the Chinese Embassy in Belgrade on May 7, China has suspended its dialogue with the United States over human rights issues. But in recent weeks, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs has even stopped accepting diplomatic protests from the United States about alleged Chinese violations.

Stylish, yet provocative music.

SQUINT
CHEVELLE
Point #1
YOUR CHOICE 13.99

MIKE NESS
Under The Influences
TIME BOMB

ARCADE AMERICA
TRANCE GLOBAL NATION 3
Various Artists
YOUR CHOICE 13.99

THIS IS RAVE 2
CLEOPATRA
THIS IS RAVE 2
Various Artists

CLEOPATRA
IN TO THE MIX III
Various Artists
YOUR CHOICE 13.99

MOONSHINE
HARDESSERTRANCE 3
Various Artists

NOFX
THE DECLINE
FAT WRECK CHORDS
NOFX
The Decline
9.99

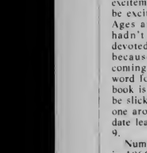
CHERRY/UNIVERSAL
EVAN OLSON
One Room
10.99

Visit our Jam Central Department.
Guitars, amps, drumsets, sheet music and more

MEDIA PLAY
Your Entertainment Superstore

For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Now online at www.MediaPlay.com
Product selection and pricing may vary online.
Sale ends December 18, 1999
Cassettes available on select titles.
885792

Editorial/Opinion



The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

We've come a long long way, baby

So the millennium's ending. Big deal. Who cares? What were the important events in Western History that make this millennium so special?

In order to answer that question, I decided to consult my dog-eared notebook from Mr. D'Agnese's Western history class at my high school. For those of you who are a little rusty on certain aspects of history, I am giving you my top eleven list of important events of the millennium.

Number one: the beginning. The first thing of any significance that happened this millennium was that it began. There was a lot of religious excitement because there wasn't anything else to be excited about; it was the Middle Ages and meatball alphabet soup hadn't been invented yet. People devoted time to building cathedrals because they believed the second coming of Christ was at hand. The word for this as written in my notebook is Parousia, and if you want to be slick on your next date, toss that one around and let me know if your date leaves you on the side of Route 9.

Alexis Pushkar

Number two: the Norman Invasion in 1066. According to my notes an ancestor of Norman Schwartzkopff went to either England or France, killed a bunch of people at the Battle of Hastings and became King on Christmas. Way to take some of the glory from God.

Number three: the torrid medieval love affair. In the 1100s Eleanor of Aquitaine and Louis the Seventh were getting it on. My history teacher was circumspect with the details, so I can't tell you more than that.

Number four: the Magna Carta. The next important G-rated event was the signing of the Magna Carta in 1215. Magna Carta was the Italian word for big cart. I guess the English used it to ride around the countryside while they were getting drunk on mead and searching for the proper cup of tea. I believe the wagon is still rolling around East Anglia somewhere.

Number five: the Capetian dynasty. According to my notes, the next thing of importance was that the Capetian Dynasty ended in 1328, and with them died the idea for Capetian blinds, which were vastly superior to both Venetian blinds and those noisy plastic blinds in Machmer.

Number six: Columbus. In the 1400s absolutely nothing of significance happened except that a certain Italian sailor bumped into "a whole new world" and composed a terrible song which was handed down through generations of Italian sailors until it made its debut in a Disney film called Aladdin.

Number seven: Luther's theses. Martin Luther hung up his 95 Theses in the 1500s. Hated by Catholics everywhere, he devoted many hours to singing the timeless children's ditty: Nobody loves me, everybody hates me, guess I'll go eat worms. As a result of his singing, the Diet of Worms was held where he extolled the virtue of eating a diet of only worms. I guess it lowered his cholesterol.

Number eight: the death of Shakespeare. The 1600s saw the death of Shakespeare, the only person to ever write anything worth reading in the English language. His death began more than 400 years of worship by overzealous English teachers. His real contribution to the world, though, was actually that he made men wear tights, revealing significant male body organs and causing virgins everywhere to get themselves to a nunnery.

Number nine: the American Revolution. In the late 1700s, the British were still looking for a proper cup of tea. American colonists decided that they would help them out by throwing large quantities of tea into Boston Harbor and praying that somehow they would reach Britain. Apparently, the tea never reached the cloudy shores of Cornwall because the enraged British started a war over it.

Number ten: the Polk presidency. The 1800s were significant simply because of the Polk presidency. He introduced polka dancing to the United States and Saturday nights were never the same again.

Number eleven: me. Ah, the 1900s, the last century of the millennium. Many things of great importance have happened. I was born for one thing. And meatball alphabet soup was invented.

And here we are again: pockets of people throughout the United States are preparing for the second coming of Christ, planning for the apocalypse as described by the Book of Revelation. Some people have started doing charitable things like feeding the hungry. Other people are questioning their wedding plans because they expect to be dead soon. Cathedrals aren't being built, but that's because we have meatball alphabet soup.

So here we are, exactly where we started the millennium. Despite the appearance of progress, we really haven't changed at all in spite of the meatball alphabet soup.

Alexis Pushkar is a Collegian columnist.

Privatization is a Mistake

As a land-grant public university, the University of Massachusetts at Amherst was created to offer members of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts a subsidized higher education. The members of the Commonwealth have the right to control this public institution created for their benefit. Students, faculty, university employees, and constituents of the Commonwealth deserve an administrative body that will listen to, accept, and implement their needs. Currently the Board of Trustees is exactly the opposite. Its members are requesting corporate bids to run the University Store and Textbook Annex, thereby seeking to serve only the needs of private interests. Fortunately, the local unions have submitted a counterproposal to privatizing. By focusing on bettering services to students as opposed to making a profit, the unions' "bid" follows the mission of the university.

Mike Stevenson

The Board of Trustees believes that it is acting in the best interests of the community. In the minutes of the latest meeting of the Committee of the Whole, the Board indicates it wishes "to increase and improve campus services." To that end "a survey was done of our peers" which found that "that parking, housing, and student health are universally provided by University employees, but when you come to the bookstore...it was much more of a mix." Other schools have privatized their book and supply stores, using lease companies that contract under the university and pay a given amount to use the space. That must mean that if UMass privatizes, it will provide better services to the members of the Commonwealth, right?

Not if it means that revenues for University use are cut, products are more expensive, valuable services not profitable to the company are dropped, work study jobs are lost, and living wages for full time employees are eliminated. Even the Trustees' own research, done by Campus Bookstore Consulting Corp., a group hired by the administration at the Trustees' request, does not foresee any improvement in service from privatization. The report weakly claims privatization will bring financial and service related benefits. However, in its "Financial Comparison" between self-operation and private operation, the "Total Financial Benefit" for the university is higher with self-operation: $1.65 million vs. $1.28 million projected for fiscal year '02. Though the consultants vaguely claim private companies could improve service because "contractors are in the business of operating... university bookstores," the University has been operating the Textbook Annex for decades.

The advantages listed for self-management are more forceful. The consultants determined the university would maintain employee "allegiance," "full control of retail pricing," and "the flexibility and autonomy necessary to offer the services...unique to UMass...[and] respond quickly to the needs of customers." Beyond meeting the community's needs, self-management could generate "a financial return that is superior to the return available from a contractor." Despite these facts, the Trustees requested private bids.

If a private bid is accepted, students will pay. In a study done by Connect 2 One Regional Consultants, comparing the prices of twenty best selling products sold by 38 university-run office supply stores and twelve on-campus lease stores, researchers found that the university-run stores provided on average a 14 percent lower price. A doctoral research study by Jeff Zeilenga at the University of Missouri-Colombia shows a similar disparity at self-run and privatized bookstores on campuses, where the differences range from 2.9 percent for new books to 19.4 percent for clothing and office supplies.

This makes sense. Private companies are driven by sales that give them a profit, which has to come at someone's expense, and that someone will be the consumers, the students, faculty, and employees of UMass. The university's lease space, which both Barnes & Noble and Follett Higher Education Group seek, would give these companies a virtual monopoly among the student market, as suppliers of office equipment and book retailers, allowing them to charge whatever prices they desire. Although the Textbook Annex and the University store already seem to have this monopoly, because they were created to provide a public service and not to reap profit from their consumers, they keep their prices low.

Beyond having better prices, the Annex and Store also serve the interests of the community by offering auxiliary services that private companies would not. The Annex and UStore provide many invaluable services to the university, like procuring advanced copies of new textbooks for faculty to evaluate, selling unprofitable items that students nevertheless need, and opening during off-peak hours for student convenience at the expense of profit. In addition, Textbook Annex manager Scott Cashman anticipates with the coming of privatization a stricter returns policy at the Annex and Store. As for book buybacks, Barnes & Noble would not pay UMass students half price for their used books, as the Annex does, when the Barnes & Noble wholesale division pays only 10-20% for books from other schools that have discontinued those editions. A private company would not see it as their mission to provide unprofitable yet important services.

The members of the Commonwealth that stand to lose most are the workers in the operations undergoing privatization. All work-study positions will be eliminated (federal law does not allow work-study at a private company). These will most likely be replaced with lower paying part time positions. The union employees of the Annex and Store presently have some power through collective bargaining to ensure a living wage and benefits such as health insurance. Privatization takes away this power. Since the subcontracting of Yale University's food and janitorial services in 1996, 250 HERE local 34 and 35 union employees have lost their jobs and all incoming dining hall workers face minimum wage, non-benefit level jobs. A private company lowers wages and slashes benefits, when workers have no bargaining power. These workers are part of the community that the University serves, but they will not be able to survive privatization.

Bringing private companies into the University of Massachusetts is a mistake. Even the Trustees' own research agrees with this. It will mean higher prices to students, lower diversity of products and services, no special services, which fit the needs of this campus specifically, and poorer pay and fewer benefits for the students and employees who work there. Though the Board of Trustees thinks that a private company will run more efficiently, this is a statement of faith: there is no guarantee that any private business will run efficiently, and the Annex and Store managers and workers are streamlining their operations in their present bid. Privatization does not benefit the interests of the community this university is chartered to serve.

Michael Stevenson is a UMass student.

A fairer trade with Canada

Last weekend, I went to Canada. I don't really like Canada. It is nothing against Canucks, but I just like my own country. I admit that that view is a little ethnocentric, but I just have a natural affinity for America and our way of doing things.

I realized right away that there is a big difference between English-speaking Canada and Quebec. Prior to this weekend's adventure, I once spent a total of about 15 minutes on the Canadian side of Niagara Falls. I bought the whole Snow Informer album on cassette, and I took Canadian politics so that qualifies me as an expert on all things Canadian. Anyway it was clear to me that, English Canada wants to be America and French Canada wants to be France.

Matt Frascella

Quebec looks like it is France. It is a cool old city and it is beautiful around this time of year, but I just couldn't get into the culture. Maybe that was because they steal our culture. Everything is American. They played "Born in the USA" at one of the clubs I went to. I thought that was a little ironic. All their music is straight out of the USA, but I could tell their priorities were a little off when they put so much emphasis on Will Smith. Hey Quebec, you can have Will Smith. No one in the US likes him anyway, except for my 12-year-old sister.

The long shadow of US culture dominates their pop culture so much that cab drivers who can't even speak English race around at 90 km/hour listening to American music on their radios. How can this province want to be independent from the rest of Canada, which is so much like the United States, when they can't live without our music, clothes, or fast food joints?

However, there is somewhat of a cultural exchange between Canada and the US. We give them all our quality music, and they give us Celine Dion and Alanis Morissette in return. That doesn't seem like a fair trade to me. Ironically, Canada's best musical contribution, Shania Twain, sings country music. I am still trying to figure that one out.

Although there were many cultural similarities between Canada and the United States, I missed my country and my language. I even missed Western Mass for the first time in my existence.

The worst part about Canada was the bathrooms. Not once did I see a Canadian wash his hands after using the facilities. Needless to say, I didn't shake hands with any of our neighbors to the North. Some bathrooms didn't even have soap or handles to flush the toilets. One bathroom had pictures of naked girls on the wall. I was puzzled and appalled. How can a whole nation of French-speaking people be walking around without washing their hands? Then I started thinking that it was kind of unusual that none of the restaurants had those nifty little signs that said "Employees must wash hands before returning to work." Maybe, it is just an American thing. I wish that the Canucks had stolen that concept instead of Jennifer Lopez's classic song "Waiting for Tonight."

The starkest contrast to the US was the pace of life. Other than the Cabbies who zipped around the wet foggy streets and ran red lights, Quebecois culture was very laid back. Meals were hours long events that encompassed several courses and always involved a plethora of alcoholic beverages. No one was in a hurry to race from place to place. It was a nice change from UMass where I am constantly worrying about where I have to be next and how I can cram in the million things that I have to do into my 15 hour day.

So Canada does have some good points. One of its best points is the fact that they don't have a moral problem associated with drinking. In Canada, I could buy beer with my sandwich at lunch, and I could have red wine with my Italian dinner. I could go out to clubs and not have to worry about breaking the law.

Why is drinking such a moral issue in this country? I am 20 and _ years old. I am an adult, and yet my country tells me that I am not allowed to drink. Can you actually tell me that in three months I will be more mature and responsible than I am right now? Years ago, when some US states still clung to an 18-year-old legal age, the federal government coerced them into the over-21 age limit standard that we have today. They did so in true mob fashion by threatening to take away federal funding for their highways. So in the end the rebel states backed down and the US government prevailed.

Only in this country could we attempt to ban alcohol altogether. Prohibition was a monumental fiasco and actually helped advance the interests of organized crime. So much for our country's moral leadership.

I think that the US is the greatest nation in all the world. I love my country, and I thank God that I am an American, but when it comes to drinking I think the US is way too uptight. There are far more important problems to focus our energies on than drinking. If Canada can take our pop culture, then maybe we should take some of their culture. We should relax a little now and then and try not to be so moral with our laws. After all, if I am old enough to go to war for my country and I am old enough to vote, I should be allowed to have a glass of red wine with my dinner.

Matt Frascella is a Collegian columnist.

Collegian candidates night is THIS THURSDAY from 7-9 p.m. in CC 175. This is a MANDATORY All-Staff meeting - the newsroom elections will be held this Friday and the following Monday. VOTE!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1903, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Pre-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Women's Issues

Girls rule? It's really nothing new

A little something to consider...

Thanks for your support. That's right, you who is reading this page. With the understanding that the Women's Issues page is not one of the most well read pages in the Daily Collegian, it has been our goal to open up the page this semester to more user-friendly topics that still touch the heart of matters.

It's understandable that this page doesn't rank as high as Sports or Ed/Op for most people, since it doesn't seem to apply directly to half of the world's population. This is a misconception on most everyone's part since everyday we all interact with both men and women, and must learn to live and play together. With this page we've been able to address and provide information on careers, politics and the recent assaults on the UMass campus.

Kathleen Ralls

The next fact is that this is a collegiate newspaper. Many of us are not paid and nobody has to submit samples or take a grammar test to get on staff. Trust me. It's as simple as walking into the campus center basement and announcing to nobody in particular that you have something to say or want to find something to write about.

Here's where the problem comes in. Nobody did that. Not once this semester. The 'we' I am talking about has been just two of us. Just TWO. We're two women who have enjoyed the power to say whatever they want and write about what their concerns are. Two who decide the agenda for this diversity page every two weeks. Two who are left to be the voice of this 24,000 deep campus. And two who wanted to hear what the rest of the campus had to say all semester. You talk about government or public relations putting a spin on current issues? That's pretty much the responsibility we have taken upon ourselves.

In the past couple of years there has been many debates on whether to keep the diversity pages of the Daily Collegian intact. Are they effective standing alone as they do? Does anybody really read them? It's a question without a definite answer for the moment.

Arguments against say that they exclude those whom they don't apply to. For instance, why would a white female like myself want to read the Black Affairs page? Why should I care? Letters to the Editor have been filtering through our mail this semester with strong opinions pertaining to this subject. Discussions in classrooms and in professional newspapers are at a loss for an agreeable answer as well.

Those who feel the pages should remain insist that the other sections of the newspaper still do not properly cover minorities. It's fact that minorities are often portrayed negatively and unfairly. Stereotypes fall into play and the public can fall into those. It's also fact that out of the top 20 newspapers in the country, only one-third of the photographs are of women, and many of them are pictured with their ambassador husbands or as supermodels. Which is not to say that supermodels are not valuable or upstanding, just that most are not portrayed as entrepreneurs or businesswomen.

Many would like to weave issues from the diversity pages into the mainstream pages so that more people will read them. In the future, this might be the answer. But for now, our pages stand, and they can stand limply and alone if others do not want to participate.

In truth, whether or not you are Jewish or have a connection to any other diversity page, the truth is that we all affect each other in some form or another. For instance, a friend of yours is black but you don't understand why he feels affirmative action is fair. You might not fully be aware of what the history is or know of anybody who has earned or been turned down as a result of the legislation.

I know, however, that there are those out there who want their programs covered. They want their groups heard, and their demands met with the support of the student body. As a pair, we cannot cover every speaker and demonstration. People want change, and change needs a voice. Change actually needs more than one voice, which it cannot possibly receive from us.

So, why don't you make your way down here next semester? You don't have to be a writer you just have to have something to say. Come feel the power.

Kathleen Ralls is Collegian columnist.

UMass intramurals: another athletic option

So let's face it, not every athlete is cut out for the collegiate level. So what do you do when you arrive here at UMass and want to play something? One option is to join an intramural sports team. Gather a group of your friends together and form a team, or join a singles team. Intramural teams seem to offer the perfect combination of features to attract college students: competition, an opportunity to play a sport, and a relaxed time commitment.

As Neil Middleton, a soccer supervisor of intramurals sports said, "For me it was for people who didn't want to play Divison 1. It gave me an opportunity to play sports. It just wasn't at that top level."

But wait a minute. It is not just men playing on intramural sports teams. The teams are co-ed. Women are playing and winning games as well. UMass junior Wendy Levesque has played intramural softball for two semesters now. Levesque's team, Eight Bucks, has made it to the championship. This semester the team won the final game for the title.

NICOLE COTTWALD / COLLEGIAN

UMass student Wendy Levesque enjoys playing intramurals after playing competitively in high school.

"Sports have always been a big part of my life," said Levesque. "They keep me in shape and they're fun."

Levesque has played softball since she was four-years-old. One of her earliest memories of softball is taking instruction from her coach to take the field.

"I remember they told me to go to left field and I asked where left field was," said Wendy.

Levesque played sports relentlessly during high school.

"Sports and extra-curricular activities came first for me in high school. I even passed up on academic opportunities. My whole summer was sports," said Levesque.

Whether it was softball, track, or volleyball Levesque devoted a good portion of her time to the team. She not only played for herself, but she played for the team too.

"To be on a team you have to be dedicated enough to make the practices and work hard. The team comes together during practice," said Levesque. "My dad used to say that you play like you play in practice. I think that is true."

Here at UMass, Levesque became involved with the intramural softball team when a high school friend, Justin Varricchione, contacted her. Varricchione, the captain, recalled Levesque's passion for softball, and asked her to join the team. At the time, Varricchione was struggling to find female players. As a co-ed intramural team, the softball team needed an equal number of men and women players. Levesque decided to join the team. She believes the benefits from it in various ways.

"First of all, it is fun. Second of all, I get to see some friends that I don't normally get to see on a day-to-day basis, and it makes me feel active," said Levesque.

Yet, these days, sports plays a different role in Levesque's life. As a junior communication disorders major, a member of an acapella singing group here at UMass, and working as a specialist in the Army National Guard, Levesque finds her free time is limited. She has cut back the time she devotes to sports. Levesque finds that playing an intramural sport is very accommodating to her schedule.

Christina Connare

"Academics come first now. The softball game is a one-hour game, one day a week. The only time we get to practice is when the other team forfeits," said Levesque.

Levesque thinks that the most important aspect of sports is the teamwork that it involves. She applies the notion of teamwork to everything she does – including her position in the National Guard and in her singing group. Encouragement from teammates comes in handy when you are pushing yourself to complete the last few minutes of the PT test or an obstacle course.

"Everyone helps everyone else along even though you are taking the test individually. I used to be called The Motivator," said Levesque. "For both things (the softball team and National Guard) I have a similar goal. To work as a team and succeed."

Levesque subscribes wholeheartedly to the theory that a team is only as strong as its weakest link. She looks for a strong relationship, alliance in every project she is involved with. Even when she is singing she relies upon the strength of the group for success.

"It's definitely a team effort - every voice, every note counts. The energy used to perform is all based on the team," said Levesque.

She finds all the qualities that go into playing sports can be applied to life.

"The discipline you need to be on a team is the same discipline you use in everyday life," said Levesque. "Motivation is my drive to excel."

Christine Connare is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

The Massachusetts women's lacrosse team understands the importance of playing hard and the importance of being a part of a team.

The real story of the Babe

Sports fans love to argue. Whether it's a statistical debate based on numbers or a simple dispute of who's better / who's best, followers of organized athletics always seem willing to fight to the death in defense of their favorite teams or players.

And the top banana of sports arguments, the one ever-important question on which fans can never seem to agree, still remains...

Who is the greatest athlete of all time?

Some point to Jackie Robinson, who lettered in four varsity sports at UCLA and paved the way for African-Americans to play professional baseball. Cases have been made for Wayne Gretzky, Bill Russell, Jack Nicklaus, Joe Montana and even Secretariat.

The problem is, these candidates all share one distinction (other than their individual domination) that negates them from this very argument: they're all male.

Yes, the greatest athlete of all time was a female. Ladies and gentlemen, I give you Babe Didrikson Zaharias.

Adam White

Born Mildred Ella Didriksen (she would later change the spelling of her last name) on June 26, 1911, this daughter of Norwegian immigrants claims to have gotten the nickname "Babe" for the tremendous home runs she swatted as a youngster. After excelling in basketball at Texas' Beaumont High School, Didrikson left school early to pursue a semi-pro hoops career with the Employers Casualty Company of Dallas.

While earning All-American honors for her basketball prowess with ECC from 1930-32, Didrikson decided to try her hand at track. She breezed through Olympic qualifications in 1932, single-handedly scoring 30 points against teams comprised of 20 or more competitors. Over the three-hour meet, Didrikson competed in eight of 10 events, winning five outright and tying for first in one other, the high jump. In the process, she set world records in the javelin, 80-meter hurdles, high jump and baseball throw.

It was at the 1932 Olympic Games in Los Angeles that Didrikson first encountered sex discrimination. Although she qualified in five separate events, Didrikson was only allowed to compete in three, due to the fact that she was female. She won the first women's Olympic javelin competition and set a world record in winning the first Olympic 80-meter hurdles in 11.7 seconds. She would have gone three-for-three, but a dubious ruling in the high jump on a since-eliminated stipulation relegated her record setting jump to a silver medal finish.

Having dominated track and field, Didrikson tried her hand on the amateur golf circuit in 1933. It was on the links that she met George Zaharias, a 235-pound wrestler whom she would eventually marry.

Didrikson turned pro in 1947, after winning 17 of 18 tournaments at the amateur level. The next year, she won the U.S. Women's Open, the World Championship and the All-America Open. Along with three other golfers, she founded the Ladies Professional Golf Association in 1949.

Over her eight-year professional golf career, Didrikson captured five titles – including three U.S. Open wins – and six Associated Press Female Athlete of the Year awards. Her third U.S. Open title, won in 1953 a mere 14 weeks after being diagnosed with cancer, was won by an unheard-of margin of 12 strokes. Over her golf career, she won 82 tournaments.

Didrikson retired from sports in 1955, due to complications from cancer. She died the next year in Galveston, Texas, at the age of 45.

During the course of her remarkable life, Babe Didrikson Zeharias captured titles in billiards, cycling, golf, shooting, speed skating, squash, swimming and tennis. She was a three-time All-American in basketball who also pitched in several major league baseball exhibition games.

Renowned sportswriter Grantland Rice called her "the most flawless section of muscle harmony, of complete mental and physical coordination, the world of sport has ever seen."

All of which adds up to the best argument yet for the greatest athlete of all time. In a field where men grab nearly all the glory, this Babe simply wouldn't be denied.

Adam White is a Collegian columnist.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Former UMass softball hurler Danielle Henderson was awarded the Honda Award for being the best Division I collegiate softball player for the 1999 season. Henderson is expected to compete in the 2000 Olympics in Sydney.

Sports supplies more than muscles

Over Thanksgiving break, I met up with a friend who had just finished playing four years of field hockey at Colby College. After being awarded Second Team All-America, she felt her athletic career was over.

"I'm no longer an athlete," she sadly replied.

Apparently my athletic career ended four years ago in high school, I just didn't know it.

My memories are the same as many American kids. I spent my summer nights watching the Red Sox with my dad and brother while waiting for the Jiffy Pop to pop, it's sad to think we can remember the days pre-microwave. My favorite player was leftfielder Jim Rice. I always thought I could play the green monster in left field. The Sox were the only reason I got to stay up past my bedtime.

Growing up, I played soccer with the same team spring after fall after spring. I chose number nine because I was nine-years-old when I started playing. Saturday morning games were the highlight of my weekends, even if we had to be up by 8 a.m.

Kathleen Ralls

In the winter and summer, I watched my cousin MaryBeth, ten years my senior, race to glory at the high school and collegiate levels all over New England. While babysitting for me, she would invite her track friends over to give me lessons on my front lawn. I can't remember a thing they made me do, but I just remember feeling like good about hanging out with the big kids on those nights.

Making new friends and having fun, I began playing basketball and softball. Although I loved playing, hanging out on the bench laughing and cheering wasn't so bad either. In high school, my focus turned to field hockey as my friendships developed and changed by the season of the sport.

I opted not to play college athletics, hoping to focus more time in other fields like journalism. A good idea at the time, I sometimes wonder if it was the right decision. If there's one thing I have learned about athletics, it's that they never seem to leave me.

What do I primarily write about at the Daily Collegian? Sports, of course. When I'm not doing homework or hanging out, I'm watching SportsCenter or whatever game is on. This fall I coached a junior varsity high school field hockey team. We had the banquet this past Sunday and I couldn't help myself. I started my speech with, "This is the best thing I've done in four years of college."

It was finally a way for me to give back what sports has provided for me. Every day after school, 16 high school freshmen and sophomores and I hung out and played field hockey. I watched as they improved as individuals, and I watched as they became a team. Talking during drills, playing one-on-one on the sidelines, these girls didn't just learn how to be better field hockey players. They learned how to improve themselves on the whole.

These girls learned the value of hard work as they begged for longer runs at the end of the season. They had begun to see the results of it and knew they needed it to attain their goals.

As on most teams, my group was comprised of girls who had a similar love for the game, but many did not have many similarities beyond. With diverse groups such as mine, conflicts arise within. Working through problems with teammates and on the field helped them balance their lives better off the field. A common take on competitive athletics is that they teach one how to be effective in their free time, and how to balance it.

Fortunately for all of us today, there are professional leagues for women who aren't ready to give up their dreams. It's not just little girls who have role models to look up to. Anybody could have witnessed Jackie Joyner-Kersee win her third gold medal in the 1996 Atlanta Olympics, despite being severely winded by asthma during the final event, the 400m. Adverse to age, Joyner-Kersee showed the world how a little girl with wheels could make the world stare in awe as an adult.

More and more, women are earning the front page of the sports section for their amazing athletic feats. Brandi Chastain stole most American magazines' front pages with her shirt-stripping goal to win the World Cup. It's becoming more apparent that sports in which men don't already compete at the professional level at such as level as baseball, are becoming the marquee sports for women. Unfortunately, male professional sports are still the dominant force in entertainment.

It's sad to me that female athletes are often labeled as "manly" or as lesbians because of their strong builds. It's even more sad when women give up their competitive edge in sports because they are expected to. Furthermore, it's a sorry practice when women allow the males on their intramural softball team to decide the line-ups. For many of us who grew up playing sports, males know no more about how to play the game than females. Many just think so because women let them.

Sports, aside from its struggles with poor role models and financial contract issues, allow us to physically express ourselves with no holds barred. Leaping for a rebound, stretching out to block a shot heading into your net, sprinting down the left flank for a breakaway goal- they really can't be compared with anything else for me.

I would have to disagree with my friend who said her athletic career was over. I know it never leaves you.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian columnist.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Slipknot brings the hardcore into Boston tonight

Hard rockers Slipknot will be performing at the Avalon in Boston tonight

COURTESY OF ROADRUNNER RECORDS

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

"That's hardcore!" was the reaction from a friend of mine after hearing Slipknot pounding through my speakers. Hardcore doesn't even do this band justice. Easily the heaviest release of the year, the band's self-titled album is also rather creative and way too catchy for something so morbid. The nine members of the group all hail from the metal capital of the world, Iowa, and are identified by numbers as well as the distinctive masks they wear on stage. The Collegian caught up with custom percussionist 6, a.k.a. Shawn, to talk about life on the road as well as the upcoming Slipknot show at the Avalon in Boston tonight.

"Get ready for the beginning of music" is how Shawn describes the statement Slipknot makes with its latest album. He lists genres, not individual bands, like death metal, black metal, and hardcore, as the band's influences. These influences are certainly evident, but Slipknot takes it a step further by getting some great beats from three different drummers, including DJ scratches, and adding electronic samples. Tracks like "Eyeless" and "Surfacing" incorporate all of these elements and add tremendously to the already battering ram-like aggression. Fans can expect the next album to be even more experimental, as the "traditional in-your-face Slipknot sound" will be aided by even more inventive percussion methods Shawn has planned.

Slipknot turned heads at this year's Ozzfest before their album was even released with their high-caliber live show. I witnessed the bedlam firsthand in Mansfield, and believe me, the opportunity to see this band in a smaller venue (such as the Avalon!) should not be missed. Slipknot managed to create chaos during an early afternoon time slot with a half-hour set, so one can only imagine the possibilities of this headlining tour. According to Shawn the set list will consist entirely of material from their most recent release, and in Boston many people have been introduced to the band via "Wait and Bleed," the single from the album that radio station WAAF has been playing as of late. And fans wanting a preview of Slipknot's one-of-a-kind live experience can pick up the recent video release "Welcome to our Neighborhood," which features live footage, or by visiting either of the band's two very well done websites at www.slipknot.com or www.slipknot2.com.

Shawn lists the current tour with Biohazard and the previous one with Coal Chamber among his favorite touring experiences, and names Snapcase and local boys Hatebreed as two bands he looks forward to hooking up with in the future. After their stop in the Hub, the group continues on to a brief European tour with will continue again shortly after the millennium hits. Shawn informed me that he and another member both have two broken ribs, and they still plan to play their ass off this week. So what's your excuse?

Slipknot will be performing with Anthrax, Biohazard, and 8Stops7 tonight at the Avalon in Boston. Doors open at 6 p.m. Tickets are available now through NEXT TicKeting by calling (617)-423-NEXT.

Media Bytes looks back as the year comes to a close

Nicholas Pizzolato

Today is indeed a sad day. It's the last time that you, the readers of this column (either by your own free will or by force) will be able to read my many opinions about the media, because let's face it that's what Media Bytes is all about. "What is Media Bytes," you ask? Well it's what you have been reading since the second or third Wednesday of September. That's right this column has a name, it's not just my ranting with a clever title, the theme is the media hence it's spot in the Arts section. It has had a purpose, maybe it's not that clear but it's there. So this being the last Wednesday edition of the Daily Collegian, I figured that this would be a good time to leave you, dear reader, with some valid information.

We learned that a film costing significantly less than the other summer blockbusters can blow them out of the water, amazing both critics and a majority of movie goers. Of course, I'm talking of the infamous Blair Witch Project. This film held an open-casting call in New York City to get its three main characters. It had a no-name director, working on his first project. The dialogue was mostly improvised and the actors used their real names. The crew was shaking the tent and screaming like dead children, causing the main characters to pee their pants. The slight thumping of one's heart was the only sound track to this movie which cost (depending on the Hollywood rumors) between $20,000 and $100,000. We all know what happened next, instead of crashing into the pit of failed movies and joining big budget disasters like The Road to Wellville and The Last Action Hero, it took off like a silver-screened phoenix, burning it's competition on it's way to the heavens. Making easily over 100 million dollars domestically and at least 140 million on video, it has changed the formula for the horror genre, spawning not only a sequel, but a million spin-offs.

However, in contrast we learned that a large "blockbuster" movie with a huge budget and expensive popular stars would indeed fail if it lacks important elements, like...a script. Wild Wild West was going to be Will Smith's third summer "blockbuster" movie, directed by the same guy who did Men In Black. To make it even bigger, they added Salma Hayek (who has never made a good film), Kevin Kline (who is usually funny and imaginative) and Kenneth Branagh (who took a break from Shakespeare this summer to play a crazy Southern scientist who rode a fifty foot tarantula and then a Disco bandit in Mystery Men) created the supporting cast. I really don't know what to say about this movie. I saw it, and I admit it; I still can't justify myself going. Six months later and I still feel bad for The Fresh Prince. These two films described this year's moral for movies, how the sure thing wasn't always so sure.

Originally, South Park: Bigger, Longer and Uncut was seen as the biggest waste of time and money ever produced by a major movie studio. I vowed to myself that I would not see it, saying that since the Christmas episode and the birth of Mr. Hankey, the show has gone increasingly downhill. Wild horses could drag me to Hell's chairlift for some skiing lessons with Satan, before I would see that movie. But when the time came, I saw it. I don't know why. Maybe I thought that nothing could be worse than Wild Wild West, but I think it was because my brother paid for me. South Park, the movie that was drawing more jokes than Suddenly Susan and Caroline in the City combined, told the world to F*#K Off with it's smart and controversial full length picture. Between Satan taking it up the tail-pipe by Saddam Hussein (who in all good rights should kill Matt Stone and Trey Parker), Stan's guest to find the clituris, Terrence and Phillip's film "Asses of Fire," and the hysterical take on "Oklahoma", the numerous jokes about Canada and Canadians (for more information on our neighbor to the north see today's Ed/Op page), as well as spoofs on Star Wars, the death of Bill Gates, Les Miserables, The Little Mermaid, the Baldwins, and even the heroic acts on Brian Boitano made South Park the best movie of the summer.

Star Wars received as much summer hype as any movie ever. Many people were subjected to the hype, including yours truly, who spent the last two days before the Phantom Menace opened counting down the time until the film opened, causing my entire floor to scream "Shut the f[place your favorite obscenities here] up, Nick". And the movie was indeed good, setting the story for the two non-existent movies and the three original ones. Despite everyone else's complaints, I didn't think Jar Jar Binks was that bad. Call me crazy but I enjoyed the Chewbacca

Turn to MEDIA BYTES page 7

Ho, ho, ho – take that Martha Stewart

By Peter Carlson
The Washington Post

A holiday fable:

It was 10 days before Christmas and Martha Stewart was busy stenciling cheery holiday scenes on each square of a roll of toilet paper when suddenly she heard a knock at the door.

She opened it and saw a dozen of her closest friends and relatives. They all looked very somber. They were clutching copies of the latest issue of Martha Stewart Living magazine, the one with a red wreath on the cover, a homemade artificial wreath garnished with, believe it or not, "velvet-covered acorns."

"Oh, come in!" Martha said. "I just love to have guests drop by unexpectedly during the holiday season. In fact, there's an article in the new issue about how to whip up quick hors d'oeuvres for unexpected guests."

"We read that, Martha, that's one of the reasons we came," said one relative. "We're worried about you, Martha. Do you realize how crazy that article is? When guests drop by unexpectedly, a sane person doesn't whip up 'Smoked Salmon and Caramelized Onion Stuffed Celery Stalks' or 'Chickpea Pimiento Crostini.' A sane person says, 'Hey, want a beer?' and starts looking for the Triscuits."

"Triscuits!" Martha said. "Funny you should mention them. I was thinking about doing a feature on how to weave your own Triscuits at home."

"Martha, listen: We're worried about your health," said one friend. "We think we've ... um ... lost touch with reality. That's why we brought Dr. Reiss with us. Dr. Reiss is a psychiatrist, Martha, and this is an intervention. We're here to help you."

"A psychiatrist!" Martha said. "You think I'm ... crazy?"

"Martha, look at the magazine!" the friend said. "It's gone completely around the bend. Do you realize that there's an article on how to decorate Christmas ornaments? Let me read it to you: 'The truly thorough decker-of-halls will even want to decorate her ornaments. This is most easily done with an artful application of glitter. ...' Martha, this is crazy. You don't decorate ornaments, Martha, ornaments are decorations."

"But it's fun to..."

"And look at this, Martha: Page 108, making poinsettias out of satin ribbons. Do you realize that nearly every church in America sells real poinsettias at this time of year? They're lovely. Nobody needs to make a fake one, Martha. And look at Page 158: Do you really think people need to decorate their window boxes with slipcovers made of birch twigs? And Page 174 — velvet-covered acorns. Martha, velvet-covered acorns! What were you thinking?"

"But..."

"Martha, sit down. Look at this. This is Page 118 of your magazine. What do you see there?"

The world's most famous multimedia homemaker gazed at the page. "It's a feature on decorating coffee bags," she said. "What's wrong with that?"

"It's crazy, Martha. Why would you want to decorate a coffee bag? A coffee bag is for carrying coffee home from the supermarket. Who cares what the bag looks like, for God's sake? And you're telling people to decorate it with a ribbon and a sprig of juniper."

"But people like to decorate things at Christmastime," Martha said. "It's traditional. It's good to make things."

"That's true, Martha, it is good to make things," said Dr. Reiss. "It's also good to wash your hands. But when someone washes their hands 47 times a day, we say they have a psychological problem. It's called an obsessive-compulsive disorder. I believe you have a similar problem."

"I do?"

"Yes, you do, Martha," the shrink said. "Think about it. In this magazine, you've got a feature on the song 'The Twelve Days of Christmas.'"

"I love that song," Martha said.

"So do I," said the shrink. "Everybody does. But, Martha, most people are content to listen to the song, or maybe sing it. But you, Martha, you've got a 20-page feature here on how to make all the gifts in the song — paper turtledoves, baked French hens, five different kinds of gold rings, ornate artificial goose eggs, pastry swans, lords-a-leaping paper dolls. It's madness, Martha, can't you see that?"

"I thought it was kind of cute," Martha said.

"It's way beyond cute," said the shrink. "You just take everything way too far. Flip to Page 116. What do you see?"

She found the page. "It's a feature about making cookie boxes."

"Martha, look at what you're doing. First you tell people how to make cookies. Then you tell them to make a box for the cookies. Then you tell them how to make a handle for the box. And then, Martha, you tell them how to decorate the handle by weaving it with ribbon in a candy-cane pattern. Don't you think that's gilding the lily a little bit?"

"Gilding the lily?" Martha said. She had a faraway gleam in her eye. "That's a great idea for one of my spring issues — how to gild your lilies at home!"

"Never mind, Martha," said Dr. Reiss. "You're not going to be doing any more work for a while. You're going to take a long vacation in a nice, quiet place where we can help you."

"But what about my magazine? My Web site? My TV show? My radio show? My newspaper column? People love this stuff."

"That's precisely the problem, Martha," Dr. Reiss said. "You've driven millions of women crazy. They think they have to be like you. They try to do what you do and they can't and it fills them with guilt. It's mass hysteria, and we've got to put a stop to it."

"But..."

"We have a court order, Martha," said the shrink. He turned to a couple of burly men clad in white coats. "Strap her into the jacket, boys."

"Is that a straitjacket?" she asked, her eyes filled with horror.

"Yes, it is," said the shrink. "It will keep you from hurting yourself."

"But it's so plain," she said. "Can I just decorate it a little? Maybe applique a cheery holiday scene..."

n media bytes

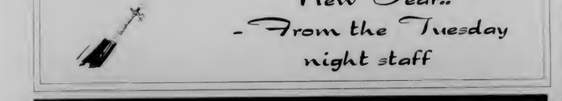
wanna-be: at least I understand the words Jar Jar was saying.

This year we also learned that Latin Music could make it mainstream. Between Ricky Martin, The Inglesi-clan, Carlos Santana and Jennifer Lopez we now know that they were the hot summer fad, causing more of a teenage stir than Hanson. But luckily, by the end of the summer everyone found out what I knew when I first heard "If you had my love" by Jennifer Lopez (who everyone knows slept with Puff Daddy for the sole purpose of getting her own album out), that she is awful. I'll admit that the first time I heard "Livin' La Vida Loca" I thought it was good. But as it began to be overplayed on the radio and on TV, it went out quicker than Chumbawumba. Even the CBS show "Becker," (starring that comedy savant Ted Danson) made fun of it. You know when the brilliant writers of a CBS sitcom make fun of you; it's time for you to get a new hit. The only song that is tolerable is "Mambo #5" and by this time next year no one will remember that either.



We also saw the emergence of the damn boy singing groups. If you thought that the Spice Girls started something when B*Witched jumped over from the United Kingdom, or how Britney Spears (now legal in all states) jump started Christina Aguilera's career (and also the numerous "Genie in a Bottle" sexual innuendos that were once reserved only for Britney). When the Backstreet Boys flooded the airwaves with their new album "Millennium" (must have taken a genius to come up with that title for that album), they opened the back door (pun intended) for other mediocre groups like N'Sync and 98 Degrees. Once again proving that if you don't plan on playing instruments and you call yourselves a band, your real band is going to get pissed, because they hate being stuck in the shadows, and pretty soon you're going to end up like the New Kids on the Block- burning down your hotel room and taking time off to "reflect" on your past popularity.

Well, I guess that about does it. There were probably more lessons that we should have learned this year, but I don't remember them. Instead we are off to a new year and not to mention millennium (as you will be hearing about in the next few weeks preceding the end of the 20th century). Have fun, and enjoy your respective holidays. See you all next year.

Nicholas Pizzolato is a Collegian columnist

100% Pure Improv
Active Ingredients, one of UMass' improvisation/comedy troupes, performs for their crowd.

Write for Arts!

The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
presents

Comedian
Kivi Rogers

California comedian Kivi rogers is gifted with a quick wit, a thousand voices, a knack for mischief, and 5 brothers for insurance. Kivi has been seen on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno", HBO's "Def Comedy Jam", NBC's "friday Night", and ABC's "Home Improvement".

Campus Center Auditorium
Friday, December 10, 8pm

The film "Eyes Wide Shut' will follow the show. Also Shown on Sunday in the Campus Center Auditorium at 8pm.

Visit us on the web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm
this program is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Services Department and the vice-chancellor for Student Affairs.

Winter Dance 2000:
Dance Through the Decades Semi-Formal

Dance into the new millenium with music from the century

Saturday
December 11, 1999
7:00 p.m.

All you can eat buffet and beverages
Cash bar available (positive ID required)
DJ and Dancing

7pm- 12 am
Peking Garden
$15 per person/ $50 for 4

Transportation will be provided
Tickets are limited - On sale now at
Tix Unlimited in the Student Union
http://www.umass.edu/rso/stars

YOU
WHY NOT!
Launch your business or learn how February 10 2000
click on www.entreclub.org
for academic credit and $10k
UMASS FIVE COLLEGE ENTRENEURSHIP

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS

Springfield:	413-731-6910
Worcester:	508-366-8847
Boston:	617-484-1788
North of Boston:	978-777-2253
South of Boston:	508-821-5591
Plymouth:	508-833-1145
Route 3 South:	781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast:	603-926-9813

Visit us on the concourse
November 29 & 30 and
December 8 & 9
Equal Opportunity Employer

JAMAICA Spring Break

YOUR SPRING BREAK PACKAGE INCLUDES
- Round-trip airfare
- 7 nights hotel accommodations
- Round-trip airport & hotel transfers
- Free welcome beach & evening parties
- Free admission to night clubs
- Discounts on restaurants, water sports & side excursions
- Packages available to Negril and Montego Bay
- Professional on site tour reps
- Complete weekly activities program offering optional sunset cruise, booze cruise, toga party & more
- Free bonus party pack

Sun Splash Tours 1•800•426•7710 Student Travel Services 1•800•648•4849

Price is per person based on quad occupancy from select departure cities. Other cities may qualify for reduction or require surcharge. US and Jamaica departure taxes (currently $65) and $12 handling charge additional. Rates increase $30 on 12.15.99. Peak week surcharges/off week discounts may apply. Restrictions and cancellation penalties apply. Limited availability. Subject to change without notice. Call for full details on hotel selection and availability.

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
IT'S FINALLY HERE
TONIGHT WE ARE GIVING AWAY A TRIP FOR 2 TO CANCUN
99.3 ROCKS WILL BE IN THE HOUSE GIVING AWAY ALL KINDS OF PRIZES
DON'T MISS THIS EVENT
AS USUAL DJ FOOZ WILL BE SPINNING ALL THE JAMS
FREE PRIZES from Souza Tequila, The Wearhouse and Oasis Body Wraps
63 N. PLEASANT ST. 259-1600

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Ice Ice Baby

UMass hockey will look to get back on the winning track when it travels to Notre Dame this Friday.

'Skins air gridiron grievances

By Liz Clarke
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — After studying videotape of the Washington Redskins' 35-17 loss to the Detroit Lions, wide receiver Michael Westbrook continued his criticism of the game's officiating, pointing to a handful of "mystery calls" that he said were not substantiated by the footage.

Westbrook also questioned the objectivity of line judge Byron Boston, whose son, David, is a rookie wide receiver for the Arizona Cardinals among the Redskins' NFC East rivals.

"Remember I said (Sunday night) there was a 12th man on the field?" Westbrook said Monday. "David Boston's dad was on the sideline. You think Arizona wants us to lose or not?"

Byron Boston, a member of the eight-man crew that worked the game at the Pontiac Silverdome, is in his fifth year as an NFL official and is highly regarded within the league. After Arizona chose David Boston with the eighth pick in the 1998 draft, the NFL's Competition Committee reviewed Byron Boston's status, according to Greg Aiello, the NFL's vice president of public relations. That panel decided Boston would not be assigned to officiate Arizona games, but its members otherwise had no concerns about his service.

Asked if there was reason to question whether Byron Boston could be impartial in calling a game involving an NFC East team, Aiello said: "Of course not. Obviously not, or he wouldn't be out there."

The Redskins were penalized 14 times for 122 yards in Sunday's loss to Detroit. Those infractions included five offensive holding penalties and four false starts, the result primarily of the aggressiveness of the Lions defensive line and the deafening noise in the Silverdome, which made it tough for linemen to hear quarterback Brad Johnson's count.

In the locker room afterward, Westbrook said the officiating made it feel as if the Redskins were playing against "12 men." The Lions were penalized nine times for 65 yards.

After viewing the videotape, Westbrook said he saw no basis for several calls — among them, a 10-yard penalty that Boston called against right tackle Jon Jansen for illegal use of hands with the Redskins trailing, 20-17.

"After viewing the film, there was like three mystery calls," Westbrook said. "... Somebody's father who plays in our division is a referee. I knew there was a 12th man on the field. I just didn't know who it was."

Westbrook also questioned a false-start penalty against center Cory Raymer.

"We sat there, rewound it, looked at it in slow-motion," he said. "Nobody on the offensive line, none of the receivers, no backs – nobody moved until the quarterback said, 'Hike.' ... What was he watching? I told y'all we had to be playing against 12 people out there."

Hokiemania running wild in VA

By Craig Timberg and Angie Watts
Washington Post

Blacksburg, the tiny Southwest Virginia town with the giant state university, has lost its head for the Hokies, college football's upstarts who are to play for the national championship at the Sugar Bowl.

Hokie Barbies are leaping off the shelves. The new Sports Illustrated with Virginia Tech wide receiver Andre Davis on the cover is a must-have. Anything in orange and maroon is so hot that the staff at Tech Bookstore on Main Street has time for little else.

"I am so busy with Hokie mania that I can't get textbooks," joked manager Jerry Diffell.

Beneath the euphoria is anxiety that Tech's emergence as an athletic powerhouse could jeopardize hard-won academic gains, a concern that has developed at other colleges with top-ranked sports programs. The school sometimes called "Virginia's other great university" does not want to be known as Football U.

An undefeated season, including a 31-7 thrashing of arch rival University of Virginia, has put permasmiles on many of Tech's 25,000 students. And the days when the football team had as many scandals as victories seem to be in the past, thanks to strict rules implemented more than two years ago, university officials said.

Maroon "VT" stickers have appeared on cars throughout the Old Dominion, as Virginia – a state with no professional baseball, basketball or football team — embraces the prospect of winning the collegiate equivalent of the Super Bowl for the first time.

Yet a bit of Hokie fatigue has set in on the sprawling campus in the mountains. Professors and a small percentage of students worry that the spotlight on football has left academics and even other sports programs in the shadows.

"We've been trying for 20 years to build up humanities and engineering, and now we're a national university for football," said American studies professor Marshall W. Fishwick, who contends that cutbacks in academic programs have squeezed his department.

"We're not being taken out and guillotined," Fishwick said of the campus's academics, "but we're being ignored."

To illustrate their claims, critics suggest a drive around Virginia Tech, first to the gleaming new athletic facilities and the soon-to-be-expanded football stadium. Then, work your way back to the administrative offices of the College of Arts and Sciences, housed for the past three years and at least two more in double-wide trailers parked atop an old tennis court.

University officials call this comparison unfair. Athletic programs are funded not with taxpayer dollars but with targeted donations and team revenue. Gate receipts this football season totaled more than $4.4 million. The Sugar Bowl will mean a payout to Tech of $4 million more for the game in New Orleans next month against top-ranked Florida State University.

And the publicity, said university officials, is priceless. University officials said football success has brought a surge in applications, inquiries and donations.

"The benefit to the broader university is we have access now to tell about the many accomplishments we have," said Robert C. Bates, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

Among the accomplishments is an engineering program ranked 18th in the nation, a business school ranked 45th and research investments ranked 44th. Overall, U.S. News & World Report ranked Virginia Tech 28th among public universities this year, a jump from 40th last year.

"We're really pleased with the football team," said university President Paul E. Torgersen, who has pushed back his retirement by five days so he can preside during the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 4. "But I'm probably more pleased that in our U.S. News & World Report rankings we've moved from 40th to 28th. That's pretty damn good."

But university officials worry that a sustained era of national football dominance could alter Tech's fragile self-image. The school has spent decades trying to shed its reputation as a cow college and as the poor cousin to U-Va., considered a "Public Ivy" with a culture of academic excellence dating to its founding by Thomas Jefferson.

Of the danger that big-time football creates, Bates said: "It could divert us from our primary mission. I think that happens a little."

Junior Megin Kennett, a 21-year-old communications major from Manassas, Va., has a similar fear. "I think we're getting a lot more attention," Kennett said, "but it's not for the right things."

Most students are simply enjoying the ride, rallying around the team as a unifying force at Virginia's largest school, though many have noticed that scores of classes get canceled when a game falls on a weekday and that football players enjoy some perks.

Body painting, Hokie-wear and temporary tattoos are the rage on game days. After Virginia Tech clinched its perfect season with a win over Boston College the day after Thanksgiving, students and alums gathered on the field for what many termed "a group hug."

Senior Frances Thrasher, 21, editor-in-chief of the Collegiate Times, sheds a bit of her journalistic objectivity when it comes to Tech football: Her car has a license plate that says "HOKYGRL."

"I got here and absolutely fell in love," Thrasher said. "The football team really does give you a sense of pride. It brings people together. And you can't get that out of a class."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

No man is an island

St. Thomas native Kit Rhymer brought his massive inside presence to UMass all the way from the Virgin Islands.

Beltre's fate to be decided

By Ross Newhan
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES – The baseball commissioner's office will not announce a decision on Adrian Beltre's request to be declared a free agent until late next week, Sandy Alderson, executive vice president for baseball operations, said Monday.

Alderson would not discuss the investigation or decision-making process, but a source familiar with the situation said the commissioner's office does not want to make a decision that would then become the focus of the winter baseball meetings, which open in Anaheim on Friday.

In the meantime, it was learned that the Major League Baseball Players Association will file a grievance on behalf of the Los Angeles Dodger third baseman, possibly as early as Tuesday, the first step in possibly sending the case to an impartial arbitrator. The grievance will also ask that Beltre be declared a free agent, claiming he was signed illegally by the Dodgers before his 16th birthday.

Scott Boras, Beltre's agent, would not discuss the pending union move, but a source said it is designed to put pressure on the commissioner's office, which has a poor record in arbitration duels with the union, and to get the arbitration process started in case the commissioner rules against Beltre. The union will ask for an expedited hearing but it could still take 30 days before an arbitrator even hears the arguments. The grievance will be withdrawn if the commissioner rules in Beltre's favor.

The alleged violation occurred when Beltre signed his first professional contract, but the source, labeling it the "fruit of the poisonous tree," said the union believes it has jurisdiction because Beltre is now a major league player – the first to seek free agency through a claim that he was underage when signed.

Boras, when informed that Alderson does not expect a decision for another 10 days at least, said that timetable is definitely "injurious to Adrian" in that all of the teams "will be making a lot of decisions between now and (the end of the winter meetings)."

Boras said that he wrote another in a series of letters to the commissioner's office Monday, requesting a decision this week.

"I don't have a clear-cut answer why they can't make a decision," he said. "The rule is specific, and there is indisputable evidence that the Dodgers violated the rule and that Adrian's behavior was honest and forthright. The only question they need to answer is, was he of age? Any other finding or any other discussions beyond the documents that we have provided the commissioner's office are extraneous."

Although precedent is in Beltre's favor, it is believed that the commissioner's office is under pressure from the clubs concerned as to how high salary scale as a free agent and that other players may pursue a similar course – to rule against him by invoking a statute of limitations, although there is no such statute in the rule book.

Boras claims that Beltre was signed when 15 and that the Dodgers falsified related documents. A series of work visas obtained by the Dodgers on Beltre's behalf may best support the claim of the agent and player that he was born on April 7, 1979, rather than 1978, as the Dodgers say. The visas list his birth date as April 7, 1979, and that information was provided to the immigration department by the Dodgers. It is a felony to provide wrong information.

A source said that Boras is scheduled to meet with Dodger chairman Robert Daly today, and that the Beltre situation is bound to come up. Discussions also are expected to involve some of Boras' free-agent clients, Seattle Mariner shortstop Alex Rodriguez, who is eligible for free agency after the 2000 season and is expected to be traded before then, and Dodger pitcher Darren Dreifort, who is also eligible for free agency after next season.

Boras had no comment on the meeting with Daly, but the source said Boras and Beltre remain perplexed as to why the new Dodger administration wouldn't simply say the former regime had made a mistake, it won't happen again and the club, in fairness, is going to release Beltre and then try to re-sign him as a free agent.

"Adrian would consider that a stand up gesture and feel much better about possibly returning to the club," the source said.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Todd Bankhead has been the perfect leader in directing UMass football to the upper echelon of Division I-AA.

IOC to open session to reporters

By Amy Shipley
The Washington Post

LAUSANNE, Switzerland – The leadership of the International Olympic Committee intends to open its weekend session to reporters, allowing them to watch every step of the organization's pivotal year-end reform process, including show-of-hands votes on 50 reform topics.

Such a meeting would be unprecedented for the IOC, which has always conducted its business behind closed doors and frequently has relied on secret ballots, thereby keeping the media and public in the dark about its innermost workings.

However, IOC Director General Francois Carrard said, the plan could be scrapped if many members of the IOC's 102-person body raise objections at the outset of the meetings to open sessions or open voting.

"I hope it will be open, that's by far our preference," Carrard said. "We are learning, you know."

Whether to hold open meetings in the future is among the reform issues members will vote on Saturday and Sunday as the IOC tries to demonstrate that it has overcome the vote-buying scandal that erupted last

IOC President Juan Antonio Samaranch dismissed a front-page article in Tuesday's Wall Street Journal that drew a link between his apparent willingness to embrace reform during this current crisis and the manner in which he allegedly distanced himself from the fascist regime of Spanish dictator Francisco Franco after Franco's death in 1977.

Samaranch, whose non-military ties to the Franco regime as a minister of sport and in other positions have long been known, said today, "I consider the International Olympic Committee and its president are very much important to get this coverage." He also added, "I think in this moment we need an agency in the United States to try to help in public relations."

Samaranch said he admired Franco for three achievements: preventing Spain from entering World War II, transforming the country into an industrial nation, and choosing the next head of state to be the King of Spain.

IOC vice president Dick Pound finally managed last week to convince U.S. drug czar Barry McCaffrey that Pound can lead – at least temporarily – the IOC's proposed world anti-doping agency without jeopardizing its independence. Tuesday, however, Pound showed he lacked command of crucial information and recent news on the anti-doping front.

Pound confessed to having no knowledge of the IOC's announcement this summer that it would employ blood testing – on at least a voluntary basis – of athletes at the 2000 Games in Sydney. That decision came out of an executive board meeting Pound said he did not attend.

"I read that somewhere," Pound said when asked about blood testing at the 2000 Games. "I didn't know we were doing it. ... Unless it's something I don't know about, we wouldn't have the facilits to do it."

■ football

continued from page 12

streak that took the Minutemen from a dangerous 1-3 start to a share of the Atlantic 10 crown and a second consecutive playoff berth.

"The adversity that we faced and the problems that we faced and the way we bounced back was very special and I'll always carry that with me," said the field general, who added that after the end of his Massachusetts experience, he wanted to stay close to the gridiron.

"I'd like to get close to home, back down to Southern California, maybe get into coaching," Bankhead said. "If there's any opportunity to keep playing, I'll give that a shot, but I'm going to miss my teammates. The time that we spent here is very special to me. As to where I go from here, I guess I'll just do what I always do and leave it up to God and see where I go."

It's worked so far.

■ NBA

continued from page 12

Vitaly Potapenko scoreless over the course of the contest, while Hughes came off the bench and chipped in 10 big points to help seal up the win.

And unlike the tendencies of his fellow cornrowed comrade, Hughes' line for the night was a study in restraint: 5-of-6 shooting from the field and a perfect 4-for-4 showing at the free throw stripe.

It's almost unfair to sling any more mud at the Mavericks, considering the fact that they've played the part of the NBA's whipping boy for oh, roughly 10 years or so. Dallas does have an undeniable superstar in Michael Finley and one of the league's most promising youngsters in Dirk Nowitzki, but it took an onslaught of injuries to the team's backcourt for the worth of these two to become truly apparent.

Heading into their Saturday showdown with the Timberwolves, the Mavs were without the services of guards Steve Nash and Robert Pack, who perched painfully on the pine with a right ankle sprain and a groin strain, respectively. While both had played important roles in the Dallas offense this year, their absence opened up the floor and allowed Finley, Nowitzki and journeyman Cedric Ceballos to bomb away with abandon.

The result? A 102-point outpouring by Dallas in a 19-point statement of a win. Finley shredded Minnesota for 32 points on 11-of-27 shooting from the floor, while Nowitzki and Ceballos teamed for 44 points and 20 boards against the much more celebrated T-Wolf front line.

Which just goes to show that in the world of pro hoops, that which does not kill a team may actually make it stronger.

Adam White is a Collegian columnist.

The Best JOB ON Campus

THE COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS DEPARTMENT IS NOW LOOKING FOR OUTSTANDING DESIGNERS FOR THE UPCOMING SEMESTERS! IF YOU HAVE AT LEAST 2 YEARS DESIGN EXPERIENCE ARE FLUENT IN DESIGN PROGRAMS SUCH AS QUARK, PHOTOSHOP, AND ILLUSTRATOR, THIS IS THE PERFECT CAMPUS JOB FOR YOU! BUILD YOUR RESUME BY DESIGNING ADS AND LAYOUTS FOR REAL CLIENTS IN A PROFESSIONAL DESIGN SETTING. FRESHMAN AND SOPHOMORE DESIGNERS, COME ON DOWN TO 113 CAMPUS CENTER TO FILL OUT AN APPLICATION!

COME SEE WHY WE CALL IT THE BEST JOB ON CAMPUS.

CLASS TRAVEL INTL, INC presents SPRING BREAK
For those who Know
CANCUN JAMAICA
Discounted Fall Semester Prices!
Free Nightclub Admissions!
Free Parties, Beverages, Prizes!*
Register NOW!
Special Good Through 12/20/99 >>Limited Space Remaining<<
800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 Savings on eyeglasses from the new on-site Optical Service at UHS.
2 A great place to get contacts lenses.
3 Convenient hours and location.
4 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
5 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
Frederick H Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

Ultimate Experience
Jamaica Spring Break
from $299
SUN SPLASH TOURS
www.skitravel.com 1-800-

PROJECT SAVE
STUDENT AGAINST VIOLENCE EVERYWHERE
UPC
DECEMBER 9 1999
12:00 PM - 12:00 AM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
ALL PROCEEDS BENFIT THE EVERY WOMENS CENTER
With performances by
LOCAL AND NATIONAL ARTIST
A DONATION OF $3.00 WILL BE APPRECIATED
PHONE: 545-2892

American Express Financial Advisors Is Investing Heavily In Excellence.

American Express Financial Advisors has become one of the country's leading financial planning companies by seeking out dynamic people and giving them the tools and training they need to succeed. If you're looking for a career that gives you the opportunity to develop professionally while helping others reach their goals, contact us about becoming an American Express Financial Advisor.

Fax resume to (413) 434-4323 or mail to:

American Express Financial Advisors Inc.
Attn: James zien, Field VP
14 Bobala Rd., Holyoke MA 01040

Financial Advisors

TTY: 1-800-766-2979 EOE M/F/D

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

INFORMATION SESSION
Wednesday, December 8, 4:30-5:30 p.m.
Campus Center 904-908
UMASS OXFORD SUMMER SEMINAR
July 6-August 17, 2000
Trinity College, University of Oxford
Located at one of Oxford's attractive colleges, the Seminar offers over 15 tutorial-based courses in literature, history, law and politics. Small classes are taught by British university faculty, and both graduate and undergraduate credits may be earned. The Seminar stipend includes room, board, tuition and field trips to Royal Shakespeare Company productions
For additional information, contact any of the following:
Internet: www.umass.edu/oxford
Telephone: 545-1914
E-mail: oxford@english.umass.edu
Office: 378 Bartlett Hall

Sports Bar and Dance Club
City Cafe
1 Pearl St. Northampton•584-4100
• 3 BARS 2 Dance Floors • Gameroom Pool Table • 19 Tap Line
• Satellite Dish, NFL Ticket • KENO • UMASS Alumnae Owned

THE GIFT THAT KEEPS ON GIVING
$1.00 PETE'S
AT THE HANGAR
• ALL YOU CAN EAT WINGS MON-WED 7-10 $5
• AUTOGRAPH PETE'S SNOWBOARD GIVEAWAY FRI NIGHT
• BEST PUB FOOD ANYWHERE
THE HANGAR Pub and Grill
55 UNIVERSITY DRIVE AMHERST, MA

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
Earrings by Ed Levin
The Finest
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324
www.silverscapedesigns.com

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is playing against MIT Saturday at 1pm at the Mullins Ice Rink. Free admission. Women's Ice Hockey is fun to watch!!

Local INDEPENDENT SHORT FILM needs interns for Jan. Recieve a film credit. Many position open: Sound, hair + makeup, art design, gaffer + grip. Contact # 413-286-7886

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom luxury apartment available January 1, 2000 Please call 413-253-7377 for more information.

1 bedroom in 2 bedroom apt. Boulders $387 flexible avail. Call Chris 256-1629

Take over my lease! Large 2Bdrm, Cheap! Call 259-9183 on bus route

AUTO FOR SALE

Toyota Camry '91 automatic, sunroof, alarm, top condition $4,300 549-0242

92 VW Golf 50k auto/air $5000/bo 256-4177

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Do you know Autocad and Microstation? If you do call Scott Yarosh at (413) 546-4895 Will pay up to $3000 per job that has to be done.

COMPUTERS

Hewlett Packard 15" Monitor .28 Dot pich maximum resolution 1024 x 748 $75.00 413-256-0583

Dell Pentium2 Laptop 233mHz 64MBRAM 3.2 Hard Mod CD/Floppy 56k Modem + more $1500 negotiable call will 253-8074

EMPLOYMENT

Now Hiring Mullins Center part-time staff events and operations department apply 2nd floor Mullins Center

CSS = Excellent Opportunities

CSS is a professional service that works with some of the most prestigious companies in the valley. We offer full-time, part-time, and Temp-hire opportunities in the following areas:

Administrative Support
Data Entry Operator
Entry Level Management
Front Office support
Customer Service Representative

CSS proudly offers holiday/vacation pay, medical insurance, and direct deposit. Call today for immediate consideration, or visit our website at www.cssit.com

Corporate Staffing Solutions
126 Northampton Street
Suite G
Easthampton,MA 01027
(413) 529-7100

Get Paid To Surf the web. I get paid to surf the web, now you can too, It's absolutely free. For more details e-mail me at pub2000@yahoo.com

Bartenders make $100-$300 per night no experience necessary call 1-800-981-8168 ext. 205

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Work for a College Internet Company
While Still in School!

Leverage your Campus Knowledge to get paid well as a Campus Marketing Manager

Skills needed
- Outgoing & Motivated
- Leadership
- Organized & Resourceful
- Project management skills
- Familiarity with campus

Experience
- Sophomore or higher
- Live on or near campus
- Campus Involvement
- Active on Internet

Responsibilities
- Help Develop Marketing Plan
- Interview & Hire Support Staff
- Facilitate Campus Relations
- Local Account Management
- Manage Marketing Budget
- Execute Local Campaigns
- Help Conduct Campus Research

Open Interviews will be held on or near your campus the week of Dec. 6th. Go to allstudents.com for exact time, date, & location info

E-mail resume to jobs@allstudents.com for more information 1-888-640-8810 ext 212

Fraternities * Sororities * Clubs * Student Groups

Student organizations earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 797-5743, x. 301, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

EMPLOYMENT

WINTER BREAK FLEXIBLE PART-TIME Day, Evening and weekend hours available Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, Ma has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for winter break. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent readings/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increase to $8.00, health dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact:

Paul R. Bebo
Recruting Cooradinator
1-800-792-4514

Wanted Dec 21-Jan 25 Longer, optional, student handyperson, also housecleaner. Car essential. 413-549-1578

Holiday Jobs For The Environment! $300-400/week work with the Sierra Club over the winter break and beyond! Call Jesse 256-6434

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

EMPLOYMENT

ONE SUMMER, A LIFETIME EXPERIENCE. I could spend the summer learning someone else's bussiness, or I could be running my own. For more information visit our website and register to win a Palm Pilot www.college-proedge.com or call 888-277-7962.

Summer business internship available not limited to business majors earn up to $15,000 this summer call 1-800-390-4848 ext 100 ASAP or visit www.univpaint.com

Movers Part time positions available for winter intersession and spring semester. Starting pay $8.00 per hour. Located close to UMASS. Call 584-4746

FOR SALE

All New Brass Bed Queen Size orthapedic mattress/box. Still in plastic. Cost $ 1100. sell $365 can deliver. (413) 781-0242.

All New Brass Bed King size orthapedic Mattress/box. Still in plastic. Cost $1500. Sell $525 (413) 781-0237.

SNOWBOARD 97 M*I*A 153 Good condition Capped Edges, Dr Pro Model $300

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

GREEK AFFAIRS

Congrats to all the newly elected officers of the ZBT Fraternity and a brotherly welcome to the Powerhouse of Excellence to the Delta Class

INSTRUCTION

Learn how to really fight! Don't be a victim. Private boxing lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus. In Amherst on bus route 256-0364

MISCELLANEOUS

Internet Based business offering an unique tridigital destination call or e-mail 413-263-6762 or gmm0819@aol.com

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom Avail. for 1-2 people. Cheap. Free gym. On bus route Jan/Feb - May 31st. 253-2518

Room Available in two bedroom apt in house. Female preferred. On bus route call 549-8969

LG 1 Bedroom Apt. Available 1/1/2000 perfect for 1 or 2 Call 549-4926

1 or 2 Rooms available in 4 bedroom house. Right next to Campus. Washer and dryer. Available Jan/Feb. $305/Mo. ONLY call Prav or Deepa 549-1543.

3 Rooms for rent, next to SW dorm, Call 253-3670

January-August lease in Leverett. $325/mo. utilities, washer and dryer included. Call Cemil 549-1643

ROOMMATE WANTED

Great House Needs!! 1 or 2 Roommates Wanted 2 share one huge room in 1, great house. Jan/Feb - June bus stops across street, backyard, super, fun-loving, remarkable roommates. Call 549-6886

ROOMMATE WANTED

One Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apartment available spring semester on North Pleasant St. $387/month includes heat female call 253-6726

Two roommates wanted to share master bedroom in three bedroom apartment in Puffton. Private bath and walk-in closet $285+ each month call Pat/Steve 549-9310.

1 Roommate Wanted 1 minute to bus busses every 5min CHEAP rent 549-9254

Share Huge Room. Jan-Aug awesome house + roommates. $250 month cheap utilities on bus route 586-9552 Julia, Pam, Nate

Roommate Wanted in 2bedroom Brandywine Apt. utilities included $215/month on bus route call Eric, Greg 549-1029

1 Bedroom in 2 bedroom apartment in S. Amherst on bus route oil/heat $300/month, utilities extra. Avail. next semester. call Jill 256-1742

1 or 2 roommates wanted! Located in South Amherst. On bus route. Heat & hot water included. $270/one person. $190/2 people call 256-3201

SERVICES

Know your rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Personal Holiday Candygrams only $7.00! Delivery anywhere at UMass. Personal greeting with candy 253-6722

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

WANTED

Be an internet star! Seeking off-campus students to host 24/7 live web cam in your home. Interested? Chect out www.masslive.com/ofcampuscam or call 584-2777 for more information

Seeking aspiring local bands to be featured in student film. Please send demo tape to UVC-TV19 216 Student Union c/o noise ASAP for more information call 545-1336

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 8

Mini Mall – There will be a mini mall in the Student Union Ballroom showcasing a variety of vendors from 10 a.m. 5 p.m. The event is sponsored by Billd.

Open mic – There will be a Spectrum open mic night at 7:30 p.m. in room 165 in the Campus Center. Sign up will begin at 7 p.m. Coffee and homemade refreshments will be served. If you want to display artwork, drop it off in room 406e of the Student Union or call 545-2240 for more information.

THURSDAY, DEC. 9

Community – Pride Alliance will present "In Memory of Brandon", and evening of transgender culture and information. The documentary entitled The Brandon Teena Story will be shown, and the evening will close with acoustic guitar duo "Late Bloomers." The event takes place in Thompson 104 at 7 p.m.

NOTICES

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space will hold an exhibit entitled "Filial Relationships" by Angela Temple until Dec. 10. Another exhibit, "Holding the Ocean" by Shannon Scilla will also be held until Dec. 10.

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Duyst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Community – The library hours for Dec. 6 through Dec. 19 will be from 7 a.m.-2 a.m. Study space is available, but there will be no staffed services from 7-8 a.m. and midnight-2 a.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Information – The last information sessions this semester for the domestic exchange program will be held Tuesdays and Wednesdays until Dec. 15 and by appointment. They will be in 614 Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Call 545-5351 for more information. The priority deadline for applications is Dec. 13, and the final deadline is March 1.

Support – AL-ANON and ALA-TEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 8, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N)		Business Rpt.	Women's College Basketball: Connecticut vs. Seton Hall (Live)			Lyle Lovett: Going Home				CD Highway
WFSB	3	News (N)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Martha Stewart's-Holidays		"A Holiday Romance" (1999, Drama) Naomi Judd. (N)				News (N)	Late Show (N)
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Martha Stewart's-Holidays		"A Holiday Romance" (1999, Drama) Naomi Judd. (N)				News	Late Show (N)
WCVB	5	News (N)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (N)	Two Guys-Girl (R)'s Like, You		Drew Carey (N) Norm (R) (N)		20/20 (N)		News (N)	Nightline (N)
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (N)	Nanny (N)	Dawson's Creek "To Be or Not to Be: That Is the Question" (N)		News (N)				Friends (N)	Nanny (N)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (N)	Dateline (In Stereo) (N)		West Wing "Pilot" (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Admissions" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV (N)	7 Days "Walter" (In Stereo) (N)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News		Real TV (R) (N)	Caroline
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (N)	Ent. Tonight	Dateline (In Stereo) (N)		West Wing "Pilot" (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Admissions" (N)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons (R)	Frasier (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Friends (R)	Billboard Music Awards (In Stereo Live) (N)		News				News	Frasier (R)
WWLP	22	News (N)	NBC News	Wheel Fortune	Jeopardy! (N)	Dateline (In Stereo) (N)		West Wing "Pilot" (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Admissions" (N)		News (N)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (N)		Members' Choice						Charlie Rose (N) (Stereo) (N)
WGGB	40	News (N)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Two Guys-Girl (R)'s Like, You		Drew Carey (N) Norm (R) (N)		20/20 (N)		News (N)	Nightline (N)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Frasier (R)	Frasier (R)	7 Days "Walter" (In Stereo) (N)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake (R)
WTBS	29		Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince		NBA Basketball: Los Angeles Lakers at Sacramento Kings. (Live)			Inside NBA		"The Man With the Golden Gun"
A&E	69		Simon & Simon "Pirate's Key"	Law & Order "Severance" (R)		Biography "Monty Hall" (R)				Investigative Reports (R) (N)		American Justice (R)	Law & Order "Pride and Joy" (R)
CNN	23		Worldview (N)	Moneyline Newshour (N)		Crossfire (N)		World Today (N)		Larry King Live (N)		Newsstand	Sports Moneyline (N)
COM	46		Saturday Night Live (R)	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Saturday Night Live (R)				Saturday Night Live (R)		South Park (R) Man Show (R)	Daily Show Stein's Money
DISC	63		Your New House (R)	Wild Discovery: Deep Water		On the Inside "L.A. SWAT"		Discovery News				Machines That Won the War	On the Inside "L.A. SWAT" (R)
ESPN	21		Sportscenter	College Basketball: Great Eight - Gonzaga vs. Temple (Live)				College Basketball: Great Eight - Cincinnati vs. North Carolina (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	45		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait			Chicago Hope (In Stereo) (N)		"Christmas in My Hometown" (1996, Drama) Melissa Gilbert.		Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	53		100 Greatest Videos			100 Greatest Videos				MTV Video Music Awards (R) (In Stereo) (N)
NICK	52		All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold! (R)	Rugrats (R)		Kenan & Kel	Rocket Power	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy
SCIFI	59		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys		Sliders "El Sid" (In Stereo) (R)			Sliders "Time Again and World"		Storm of the Century (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3) (N)			Storm of the Century (R) (N)
TLC	28		Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Road Rage" (R)			Extreme Machines		Countdown 100: The Greatest Achievements			Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	54		Due South "Body Language" (N)		ER "The Match Game" (N)			★★½ "The English Patient" (1996, Drama) Ralph Fiennes, Juliette Binoche.					"Shining Thru"
USA	62		Baywatch "Rookie Summer" (R)		JAG "Wilderness of Mirrors" (R)			Walker, Texas Ranger (N)		★★½ "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade" (1989, Adventure) Harrison Ford. (N)			Texas Ranger
HBO	65		(5:15) ★★½ "Wyatt Earp" (1994, Western) Kevin Costner. (In Stereo) 'PG-13' (N)					★ "Fair Game" (1995) Cindy Crawford. 'R' (N)		Unrlas (N)		Chris Rock (N)	Dennis Miller
MAX	66		★½ "Hope Floats" (1998, Romance) Sandra Bullock. 'PG-13' (N)					★★★ "The Man Without a Face" (1993) Mel Gibson. 'PG-13' (N)		"Hit and Run" (1997, Suspense) Kari Salin. 'R' (N)			Emmanuelle
SHOW	67		★★ "The Cowboy Way" (1994) Woody Harrelson. 'PG-13'					★★ "The Last of the Finest" (1990, Drama) Brian Dennehy. 'R'		★½ "Dogboys" (1998, Suspense) Dean Cain.			Lateline (R) (N)

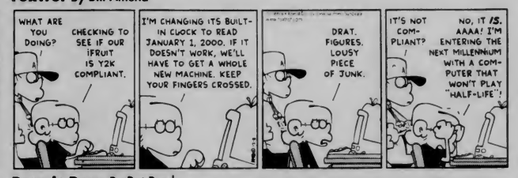
HSCN Hampshire Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	21	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch	26	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel	28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WGCH & HSCN	32	Cartoon Network
14	International	33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	34	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven	35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	37	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19	38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

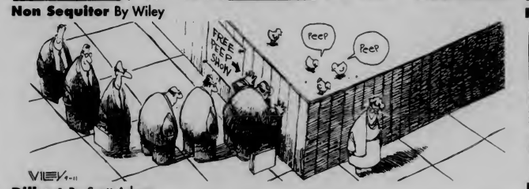
Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams



Robotman By Jim Meddick

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may be under more pressure than you are used to today, as a result of spreading yourself too thin in recent days. It's time to prioritize.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Be patient with a close friend's idiosyncrasies today. Although he or she can be annoying at times, your acceptance is just the ticket!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Seek today and ye may not find – unless you have a little help and know how to multiply your efforts without overdoing it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Take the initiative today and you may surprise those who supposedly have all the power. In no time, you may be in line for a promotion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You may have to brook some criticism today from someone who, under certain circumstances, does things differently from you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) –You're not yet ready to learn your lesson, so you must be prepared for even more in the way of humbling developments. Guard against loss!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – All eyes are likely to be on you when your turn comes. Now is not the time to back down! Be strong and aggressive in your attempts today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – The promise of something better will get you through a trying time today, and a little imagination goes a long way in this regard.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – This is a good day for setting things straight with a friend or partner who has been misinterpreting recent decisions and actions on your part.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – This is a good day to let that special talent shine. Even when you are not completely understood, you can surely be appreciated.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Today is a good day to get involved in the activities of the "little ones" in your life. They are looking forward to your tutorage.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Try not to be too possessive or competitive today. Any attempts to "lord it over" someone else will surely fall flat.

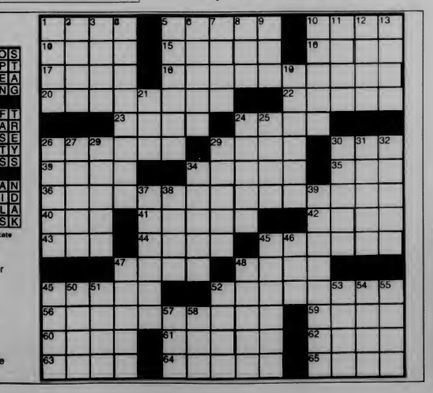
Quote of the Day

"I will not Xerox my butt."

–Stuff that Bart has written on the Chalkboard at the beginning of The Simpsons

Close to Home By John McPherson

"For an additional $50 can I interest you in our one-year stain-removal warranty?"



ACROSS
1 Health resorts
5 Wandered
10 Plentiful
14 Artist's dwelling
15 Lightning by-product
16 Theory
17 Emanation
18 Birds of prey
20 Pamphlet
22 Run-down
23 Barrel
24 Cut down (trees)
26 Igneous rock
29 Marathon unit
30 Chimpanzee
33 Mine entrance
34 Out of style
35 Morning moisture
36 Any which way
40 Have a snack
41 Friendship
42 Culture medium
43 Be rude to: slang
44 Movie
45 Safe places
47 Section
48 Elvis' daughter
49 Actor Hawke
52 Parts of computers
56 Breaking
59 Stage award
60 Corn bread
61 Edge
62 Bakery buy
63 Expressions of disgust
64 Unfathomable chasm
65 Cheer

DOWN
1 Thick slice
2 Serve the wine
3 Curly hairdo
4 Rapid-fire
5 Healthy
6 — Mountains of Missouri
7 Small rodent
8 Terminate
9 Poor grade
10 Bright star in Orion
11 Not working
12 Nourish
13 Simple
19 In dreamland
21 Actor Holbrook
24 Suspicious
25 "What — is new?"
26 Bleated
27 Dwight's opponent
28 River deposits
29 Dull finish
30 Wise saying
31 Thin-shelled nut
32 Jugs
34 Publish
37 Empty
38 Islamic prince
39 Restroom
45 Depends (on)
46 "— recall . . ."
47 Cracker spreads
48 Yearns
49 Discover
50 Old word for you?
51 Skein of yarn
52 Boggy
53 Woodwind
54 Brook
55 Market
57 A Gabor
58 Confederate soldier

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

C	A	M	P		H	E	A	D	Y		T	W	O	S
O	R	E	O		T	G	L	O	O		R	A	P	T
L	I	S	P		J	O	L	L	Y		O	D	E	A
D	A	H	L	I	A		L	O	A	D	I	N	G
		A	N	C		A	S	S	N
D	E	E	P	S	K	I	N		K	A	A	F	T
E	V	I	A		E	T	N		L	U	N	A	R
L	E	G	E	N	D	S		P	R	E	M	I	S	E
E	N	E	M	Y		A	H	A		S	T	Y
S	T	R	U	M		T	I	M	E	L	E	S	S
		P	R	I	M		P	R	O
G	E	N	G	H	I	S		K	E	G	E	A	N
O	D	O	R		S	A	F	E	R		G	R	I	D
B	I	T	E		K	A	R	A	T	E	L	L	A
S	T	E	W		S	C	A	R	S		D	E	S	K

12-8-99 © 1999, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Grilled Cheese Sandwich on Multigrain Bread
DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Worcester
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Eggplant-Zucchini Casserole
DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegetable Sheperd's Pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

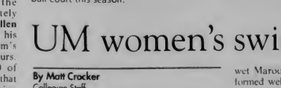
Hampshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Grilled Cheese Sandwich on Multigrain Bread
DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegetable Sheperd's Pie

Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Eggplant-Zucchini Casserole
DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegetable Sheperd's Pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Index Staff

Night Editor	Adam Martignetti
Photo Technician	Nicole Gottwald
Copy Editor	Mary Grein
Production Supervisor	Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff	Melanie Thomas, Roberto Delgado

Sports



Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Wednesday, December 8,1999

Only in the NBA: can injuries make a team stronger?

As the NBA chugs along through its brutally long season, nothing can derail a team faster than injuries to key players. Coaches and fans alike cringe at the prospect of their best hallers being bitten by the health bug, yet the players themselves will often grit their teeth and play through the pain, sometimes worsening their conditions and further damaging their teams' fortunes.

But what about those players whose surrender to injury actually helps their team? Is it possible that losing a key contributor can in fact improve a team's chemistry, opening up a chance for alternate hoopsters to shine?

That would appear to be the case with a number of pro teams over the last few days.

When Houston's aging anchor, Hakeem Olajuwon, was helped off the floor 13 seconds into the third period of the Rockets' Nov. 26 loss to Portland and diagnosed with a hernia, a collective groan swept across the Lone Star State. After all, the wizened pivot had laughed in the face of Father Time up to that point, averaging 14.8 points, 8.3 boards and a pair of blocks through 14 contests. So how would the team fair with its biggest paint presence relegated to cheerleading duty for 4-6 weeks?

Very well, thank you. The Rockets have won 4-of-5 since Hakeem took a seat, thanks in large part to the elevated play (literally) of Iowa State product Kelvin Cato. The 6-foot-11 middle monster came up huge in Houston's Saturday win over the resurgent Suns, tallying eight points and eight rebounds to complement his two swats in 27 minutes of play. Now if Rocket coach Rudy Tomjanovich could only persuade the slender Cato to spend a little more time in the weight room, Houston could have a prodigal son to take over when the Dream finally ends.

Another medical woe that has actually paid dividends for Houston is the sprained left ankle suffered by Steve Francis. Though the former Terrapin has lived up to his "franchise" billing with a 17.6 points-per-game average, he has made the Rockets extremely predictable and rubbed teammates Shandon Anderson and Bryce Drew of opportunities to shoot. With Francis on the pine licking his wounds, Drew in particular has had a chance to show off his sugar-sweet shooting touch, as he did with a 17-point performance in Monday's 102-99 win over Vancouver.

A little further out West, the once-laughable Nuggets have reloaded and earned a ton of respect by pummeling unsuspecting opponents behind the otherworldly play of Antonio McDyess, Nick Van Exel and Ron Mercer. So what happens when Mercer (who hasn't exactly been a poster child for durability since being drafted by Boston) is sidelined with a sinus infection? Can Dan Issel find a way to win without Mercer's 20.1 points-per-game?

Absolutely. The Nuggets' 94-77 thrashing of Philadelphia on Monday saw the most convincing 39 minutes of the year from Van Exel, who torched the Sixers for 34 points on 13-of-22 shooting from the field, including 4-of-7 from international waters. Add Nick the Quick's eight rebounds and seven assists, and you start to get the feeling that Issel may want to keep Mercer on the bench for a game or two longer, at least until Van Exel cools back off.

But then again, the Nuggets can't face Philly every night.

Speaking of the Sixers, the Cradle of Liberty was absolutely rocked when enfante terrible Allen Iverson fractured the thumb on his shooting hand during the team's November 22 nod loss to the Spurs. The Answer had netted 369 of Philly's 1,114 total points up to that point, accounting for a staggering 33.1 percent of the Sixers' total offense. With such a huge chunk of its firepower disarmed for 3-6 weeks, it appeared as though Larry Brown's crew would be shooting blanks for a while.

Not exactly. Philadelphia has managed to win 5-of-8 without Iverson, primarily through the return of Matt Geiger and the stepped-up play of Answer look-alike Larry Hughes. Though their playing styles are nearly as different as their hairstyles, both showcased their worth in Philly's 77-74 win over the Celtics on Saturday. Geiger held Boston's

Turn to NBA, page 9

A senior field general for UMass to bank on

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Massachusetts football coach Mark Whipple called just in time.

In trying to build a national contender from a 2-9 foundation in Amherst, Whipple needed a cornerstone for his offense going into the 1998 season. Tailback Marcel Shipp would get the bulk of the carries when the Minutemen ran the ball, as the sophomore had just finished breaking the school's freshman rushing record the year before with 756 yards.

Wide receivers Adrian Zullo and Jimmy Moore were on their way in, from St. Thomas Aquinas High School and Southern Methodist University, respectively, to haul in the passes once they reached the air.

But someone had to take the snaps. Someone had to lead the team, not only down the field, but hopefully to the playoffs.

Whipple called Todd Bankhead in San Marcos, California, where the quarterback had played two seasons at the helm of the Palomar junior College team. The 6-foot-3, 219 pound prospect had connected on 120 of his 137 career passes for 1,713 yards and nine touchdowns in his tenure there, and was an ideal candidate to step into the new Minuteman offensive system that the progressive coach was looking to implement.

Todd Bankhead

Unfortunately, Holstra, Western Illinois, Abilene Christian University and even San Diego St. were also interested in the junior field general.

"I was pretty much set on going to Abilene Christian, but then UMass and coach Whipple came into the picture," Bankhead said.

"It came by as kind of a split second decision. I got a chance to talk to coach Whipple and I got a feel for the kind of offense he wanted to run, and even though the team was 2-9 (the year before), they were in a good conference, and they were looking to build, and I wanted to be a part of that."

With the most crucial piece of the puzzle in place, the Massachusetts squad accomplished the impossible and captured the 1998 NCAA Division I-AA National Championship. The new quarterback was the shining centerpiece of the offense, remaining calm in high pressure situations to gun for single-season school records in an unprecedented six categories, including passing yards, attempts, completions, touchdowns, yards-per-game and total offense.

The All-American signal caller even got a shot to show Hofstra exactly what it was missing, by spiraling a bullet to Zullo in the end zone from 15-yards with three seconds left to secure a 40-35 UMass win. The victory over the No. 5 Flying Dutchmen pushed the Maroon and White back into the national rankings after a long drought.

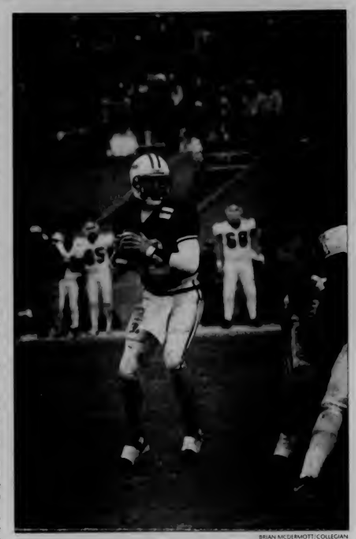
"After talking to (Whipple), I got a feeling of optimism," Bankhead said. "Not in my wildest dreams did I expect to have the season that we had, but I thought that I could get a chance to contribute and I thought we could do pretty well."

In his first two games at quarterback, Bankhead lit the skies up for two 323-yard performances, wasting no time turning heads... not only in the Pioneer Valley, but also, more importantly, in his own huddle.

"After the first couple games when we were playing well, and I was playing well, I started getting the feeling that great things could happen," Bankhead said. "I'm not a real outspoken guy, and I wasn't then either, but I knew that by playing well, I would get the respect of my teammates..."

And while No. 10 received the faith of his teammates, he continued to look to his spirituality for guidance. The devout Christian let God point the way, and, luckily for the Maroon and White, the Heavenly Father directed Bankhead to the National Title.

"Just kind of my background and me coming here was kind of a testament to God's will... I've got to put my best foot forward," the quarterback said. "On the field, I can't let down on any one play. When I practice, I've got to practice hard. In the good times, I give my thanks to God, and in the bad times, I've got to put my trust in Him and rely in Him for us to bounce back – the way we did."



Although not all of his fellow Minutemen necessarily subscribed to his pious views, Bankhead was taken in by the UMass family and became a key part of the tightly-knit football unit.

"To come in with a bunch of guys that had been here for so long, and had gone through some of the losing that they've gone through (is tough)," he said. "To be honest, this is one of the best groups of guys I've ever played football with, they're very close, and they welcomed me in and that meant a lot to me.

"A Christian belief like mine isn't as common here as it was back home, I guess. Still, my teammates kind of accepted me as one of the guys. They could have felt strange about me and that sort of thing, but they didn't, they were very open and willing to just accept me."

In his senior year, after leading the team to a 55-43 trouncing of top-ranked Georgia Southern in the Championship Game a year earlier, Bankhead followed up his legendary junior season with an eight-game winning

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 9

BRIAN MCGEARHOTT/ COLLEGIAN

Much of the credit for the resurrection of the UMass football program belongs to senior quarterback Todd Bankhead.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Leading scorer Monty Mack has stood at the head of UMass' resurgence on the basketball court this season.

First home win gets UMass hoopsters back in the game

By Kathleen Rails
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's basketball team are off to their hottest start, with a 4-2 record, in the four years since James "Bruiser" Flint took over the head coaching reins. The Minutemen began a four-day lay-off before they stare down Detroit on Saturday at Calihan Hall at 4:05 p.m. ET.

On Monday night, UMass pulled through with an exhilarating 52-51 win over Villanova at the William D. Mullins Center. It marks the first regular season victory at home after falling to Marshall last Monday night 65-55.

In comparison

The current record is much improved from last when UMass was limping along at 1-4 at the start of the season. The one win was against Boston College, which it devoured, 75-45. It marked the widest margin of victory all season for UMass. Not until Dec. 19 did the Minutemen clinch a second victory over Detroit.

Upcoming Schedule

Saturday's game will begin a month-long away tour for UM including trips to the HIP Health Plan Orange Bowl Basketball Classic in Miami, Fla. and to Puerto Rico Holiday Classic beginning Dec. 20. The first game back in the Mullins Center will be on Jan. 6 with a meeting against Atlantic 10 opponent, St. Bonaventure.

The road has been kind

Most coaches prefer to play at home. A home crowd behind them and traveling no further than the practice court is usually a top priority. This has not been true for UMass. Much like the slogan from three years ago, "Anywhere, any time" the Minutemen have better success on the road.

"I tell you what, I don't know what it is, but we are awful in shooting in this building (Mullins)," said Coach Flint. "I don't know what it is, we can't shoot in the Mullins to save our lives. We shoot better away."

In the win over 'Nova, the 21-point total in the first half is the lowest for the Minutemen this season. On Nov. 20, they put up a season-high 38 points in the first half away at Iona.

Mack keeps the pressure on

After coming off the bench to score a game-high 26 points against the Gaels of Iona, the senior shooter has averaged .400 from the floor so far. Shooting 17-for-20 for .850 from the free throw line, Mack went 0-for-4 against the Wildcats on Monday night; bring his average down to .708.

"I got frustrated with myself because I missed three free throws in a row and I don't think I have ever done that in my career," said Mack after the game.

All it takes is one

St. Johns transfer Shannon Crooks was forced to sit out a year because of NCAA regulations, but has since wasted no time fitting himself into the starting lineup. The 6-foot-2 point guard drilled a 25-foot trey Monday night with just 14.5 seconds left. Prior to the shot, Crooks was 1-for-12 from behind the arc.

Kit can do it

Keep on pluggin'

After last week's hullabaloo over dispatching a one-game suspension upon himself for using profanity during a post-game radio show, Coach Flint nailed down his 100th game as head coach in Amherst on Saturday against the Eagles. Spending seven years as an assistant coach to John Calipari, Flint has compiled a 58-43 record at the top.

Junior Kit Rhymer had some big shoes to fill prior to the season. With a history of dominating big men in the middle, the Minutemen were in search of a successor. On Monday night, the native of Virgin Islands registered his first double double against Marshall with 10 points and 10 rebounds. He also established a career-high six blocked shots including five coming in the first half, and 17 points against Marshall.

Getting into the swing

Senior Chris Kirkland has slowly progressed into the dependable forward he was in the second half of last season. At Boston University, he netted a season-high 23 points as the Minutemen depleted the Terriers, 70-51. The co-captain also shot 10-for-15 from the field, registering a career-high. Stepping up to the Wildcats, Kirkland littered a variety of shots from 20-feet out to inside the paint, leading the team with 22 points.

UMASS BASKETBALL
NEWS AND NOTES

UM women's swimming puts two in record books in defeat

By Matt Cracker
Collegian Staff

Not as widely recognized as Kermit the Frog's famous quote, "It ain't easy being green," is Kermit's brother Kirby's statement "It ain't easy beating orange" to which any member of the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team can attest after last weekend.

The previously undefeated Minutewomen were knocked from their position atop the log when they faced off against Syracuse University on Saturday, as they were defeated 216-127.

"Syracuse is probably the second best team we're swimming against this year," said women's swimming and diving coach Bob Newcomb when asked about their competition.

Although falling to 5-1 on the season, the day was not a total loss. Two members of the wet Maroon and White's diving squad performed well enough to post scores that enter them into the school record books.

Junior Robin Velona, a major asset to the UMass team, placed second in the three-meter event. With a score of 388.57, Velona posted a career best in the event that was good enough to earn her a spot in the record books, Velona's score was sixth best in school history.

Velona's diving teammate freshman Kate Allery made sure that Velona was not the only Minutewoman to go down in school history, as Allery reserved a space of her own after a strong showing in the one-meter event. Allery took the event with a score of 360.67, which is the fourth best score for that event in ten dives for any Minutewoman to date.

Also scoring points for UMass was the sophomore duo of Andrea Kazanjian and Anne Dettloff. The two did not set any records for the Minutewomen, yet heavily contributed to the Maroon and White performance on Saturday.

Kazanjian swam to victory in both the 50-yard and 100-yard fly. With a time of 26.53 in the 50 and 58.95 in the 100, Kazanjian gave swimming fans quite a show in her return to her home state of New York.

Dettloff may not be a New York resident, but she was as dominant in the chlorinated waters of Syracuse, as she has been all season; she once again hit the wall ahead of her competition. This time it was in the 500-yard freestyle, which Dettloff took with a time of 5:08.05.

However, even with strong performances coming from many of the Minutewomen in their attempt to leap to their next win, UMass came up just short. The team will get another opportunity this weekend, against the University of Connecticut, to reclaim their status as the big frogs in the pond.

Despite a record book performance from a pair of Maroon and White competitors, UMass fell to Syracuse.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian

New England's Largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 63 — Thursday, December 9,1999

Fourth UM campus assault recanted by alleged victim

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

The total number of November assaults has dropped from four to three after a woman attacked during a student-led rally recanted her tale. The University of Massachusetts has not released the name of the woman, who has only been identified as a student.

The woman, who claimed that a man attacked her and cut her with a knife, has said in a statement that the attack never occurred. The attack, perhaps the highest-profile of the assaults, reportedly occurred during on Nov. 16 at the same time that students had rallied near the Student Union to protest the previous assaults.

On three separate occasions, women were assaulted on campus in November. In three separate incidents, women were reportedly raped near the Campus Center Pond on Nov. 2 and Nov. 9, and a third woman was reportedly attacked on Nov. 14. In the case of the first two assaults, the alleged attackers were individual males, while in the third case, three males allegedly pepper-sprayed and physically assaulted a woman.

The fourth attacker's wounds, ones that she said happened when her assailant sliced her with a knife, were described by John Luippold, Chief of the University of Massachusetts Police Department, as "self-inflicted."

In response to the assaults, students led a walkout, David K. Scott, the Chancellor of UMass, held an open forum and Jackson Katz, a guest lecturer, spoke about the prevention of male violence.

Barbara O'Connor, the deputy chief of the University of Massachusetts Police Department, said that while the assault had still been under investigation, the police department was having doubts about the woman's story.

"With any investigation, we took the report from the victim, and then tried to retrace the victims steps, canvas that area for witnesses," O'Connor said. "Once we found the knife at the crime scene, we sent it to the state lab to have it tested."

She said that officers started to draw conclusions about the evidence when it became clear that the evidence pointed to certain conclusions. O'Connor said that, when the attorney faxed in the statement, the case was finalized and closed.

Asked whether or not she was surprised that the attack was faked, O'Connor said that all crimes have a certain percentage of false reports, all for different motives.

"However, it is rather uncommon to see one of this nature, especially considering the hysteria on campus at the time," O'Connor said.

"Sometimes victims say things that just don't seem plausible," O'Connor said. "The nature of the wound not being consistent with how the injury happened and that sort of thing."

Luippold said the police department had been contacted by the woman's attorney late last week.

"He said he might be able to help us," Luippold said, adding that the conversation led to the attorney's assistance with the written statement recanting the assault story. Both O'Connor and Luippold refused to speculate as to why someone would fake an assault.

Turn to ASSAULT, page 2

Dean of Students given failing grade by SGA, semester ends

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association adjourned its last meeting of the semester early last night, choosing to hold off on a motion involving creating a select committee on Dining Services. They also failed to put a motion on the agenda that stated due to the recent announcement that the fourth attack was recanted the individual responsible should be prosecuted by proper authorities.

It was enacted last night that the Senate issue a vote of no confidence on Jo-Anne Vanin, dean of students. Through the passage of the motion presented by President Jeff Howe it is stated that the SGA believes Vanin has not fulfilled her role as the dean of students. It further implies to her superiors that something needs to be changed to correct the current situation.

"Unfortunately, as we have seen over the past few years and most glaringly over the past eight months Dean Vanin has not functioned accordingly as our dean of students," Howe said.

Howe feels that Vanin has not made herself accessible to students, or to the student government especially during times where they needed the most assistance, in particular he pointed out the attacks over the past month.

"Dean Vanin is charged quite specifically with developing and implementing the University's response to campus emergency situations," Howe said. "The fact is that it took three violent attacks against members of our campus community to have actions taken. This is unacceptable and we should expect a much higher standard from our dean of students"

The Senate felt that it should not have to pressure its "chief advocate" for information involving incidents that endanger the safety of students, as it had to do recently when it continually made requests for more timely information on what had occurred. Howe also believed that Vanin should have been present had the numerous rallies and forums held on the issue.

The Senate felt that in addition to the occurrences of the last month, in the past Vanin has neglected to work with the student government body. It was said at the meeting that on various occasions she has failed to approve motions given to her by the Senate.

It was made clear by several senators in addition to Howe, that although the SGA is dissatisfied with the actions of Vanin, it is not a reflection of the office itself and it acknowledged that other deans and administrators have worked to the best of their abilities to aid the students of this university.

Jared Brooslin, secretary of public policy and relations said following the meeting, "Such as unprecedented vote of no confidence on an administrator shows how lacking she was in her duty as a dean of students."

A motion was passed to enact a pilot program governed by Parking Services, Public Safety and the SGA to install security cameras in two parking lots on campus. They would be placed in two yellow parking lots, one located by the football stadium and the other by the Mathers Career Center. Due to their isolated locations, an issue of safety has been raised for students and their property. The cameras would not be monitored and would only be viewed after a crime of personal injury or property damage was reported.

Some senators raised the question of the cameras being in violation of student's civil rights and that they were not in favor of "being watched." This was not the consensus, and the issue that it would create a campus where cameras could be installed elsewhere, including the dorms was contested.

"It will not lead to that. We will not stand for any nonsense of adding video cameras in the dorms," Trustee Seth Avakian said.

The senate also passed a motion that stated that the land between the Sylvan Residential Area and Orchard Hill Residential Area, defined as "the orchard" be named on campus as a wildlife sanctuary. Senator Phil Zetye, the author of the motion said, "It is the last piece of wildlife on our campus and the area is very important to students."

Other issues covered at last night's meeting involved the allocation of $1,800 to the Student Nurses Association from the Finance Reserves to be used for a bone marrow recruitment drive to be held on Feb. 28, 2000.

Chapdelaine named TIME student of '99

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Eric Chapdelaine, a junior Biochemistry major at the University of Massachusetts, was named the first TIME magazine UMass Student of the Year.

After being chosen from a group of ninety-four applicants, Chadelaine received a $500 scholarship from the magazine and became the University's first student of the year.

Chapdelaine is both an involved student and an active member of his community. He spends a great deal of time as a volunteer at the New England Medical Center and he also volunteers at a retirement community in his hometown of Wakefield, Massachusetts.

During the summer months, he holds down a job as park director in Burlington, MA. In addition, he also plays kickball with children in Burlington on Tuesday evenings during his spare time.

During the school year he is involved with a number of activities as well. He is a member of Zeta Beta Tau, a fraternity on campus that is well known for their support of the on-campus Pondwatch program. In addition, he currently serves as a tutor for the University and he has been chosen to be a Resident Assistant next semester.

According to Chapdelaine, some of his future goals also revolve around his community as well. One of his future plans is to become a high school teacher.

The competition was sponsored by M2K Promotions, a group of UMass marketing students, and is held in conjunction with TIME magazine. Some of the qualifications for Student of the Year included involvement in the community, grades, school activities and overall character.

All applications were looked over in the initial round and broken down to include a total of eleven finalists. Following this, Derek Shepard, Amy Anthony, Gladys Rodriguez and Larry Zacharias interviewed all the finalists.

Upon receiving the award Chapdelaine explained that he was excited and proud. He commented that he might use the award money towards paying for his books next semester or put it towards his off-campus meal plan.

In addition to the competition, the organization also ran a contest in which students had to fill out and turn in a crossword puzzle. The puzzle was based upon the Blair Witch issue of TIME magazine, and all students with correct entries were placed in a drawing for prizes.

The winner for that competition won a variety of prizes. First place winner Henry Bui won $100, second place winner Tara Burke won Boston Bruins Tickets. Bill Flach and Stacy Cruger both won tickets to a club in Northampton, and Erin Burke, Meghan Conway, Thomas D' Agostino and Ryan O'Conner all won tickets for a UMass Theater Guild production.

WOCH radio television shut down

Derogatory rape statements made by broadcasters

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Housing Services Cable Network (HSCN) declared last week that WOCH radio television, located in Field Residence Hall in Orchard Hill, will remain off-air for an infinite amount of time after station members made derogatory statements about rape over the air.

WOCH is the campus radio station that is broadcasted over the television on campus via Channel 13. It was the only radio station run entirely by students, until it was shut down last week by the university.

Junior journalism major Joe Lastowski is the general manager of the WOCH station. According to him, he was not aware of what was said or played over the air, but that it was of a sexual context pertaining to the past rapes on campus.

"It was inappropriate sexual content," Lastowski said. "I didn't hear the broadcast but from the reports I was given, it was inappropriate to be aired especially given the climate on campus."

Students hearing the comments over the air reported complaints to HSCN member Jean Lorelle Paul, Lastowski said. Paul reviewed the current setup of the station and according to Lastowski, she determined that it was not being run properly. She said the radio station would be forced to shut down until it was able to restructure its programs.

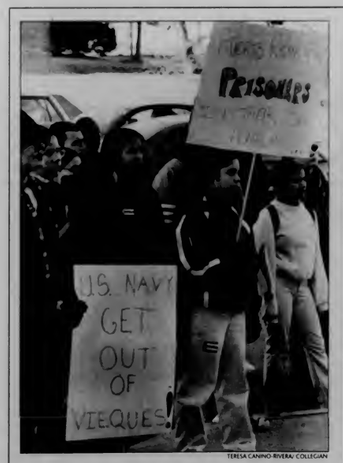
Paul could not be reached for comment.

Lastowski said they weren't shut down as a result of what was said over the air, but rather the incident brought the setup and organization of the station under review by HSCN.

"The University reviewed our setup and under our current setup, they didn't feel that we fit the model of what they thought would be a productive asset to the community," Lastowski said. "The University thought we should more closely follow actual radio guidelines if we were training people for real-world radio experience."

The University cited the station with the need to address their training policies. One of the policies Lastowski initially defined was that students would be required to go through a training procedure to gain radio experience. However, he said many of the ways they trained D.J.'s to handle situations over the air didn't follow existing guidelines.

These guidelines, set by the Federal Communication Commission (FCC), define regulations and laws according to the Communications Act of 1934. It states the appropriate means of conduct over the air and includes guidelines on how to screen phone calls and avoid using derogatory comments and swearing on the air.



Their future goals, according to Lastowski, are to form much clearer policies and training programs under the FCC laws and regulations.

Students hearing the comments over the air reported complaints to HSCN member Jean Lorelle Paul, Lastowski said. Paul reviewed the current setup of the station and according to Lastowski, she determined that it was not being run properly. She said the radio station would be forced to shut down until it was able to restructure its programs.

"We're trying to form a clear mission and set policies so that when we go back on the air we'll be better able to serve the community and train D.J.'s for radio experience," Lastowski said.

Looking through guidelines, constitutions and operations for other radio stations, he said he hopes to implement a reformed structure and be back on air in the spring.

"We're going to do heavy restructuring next semester, but we're looking forward to going back on the air with a new and approved WOCH."

TERESA CANINO-RIVERA/ COLLEGIAN

In favor for Puerto Rico

A rally was formed yesterday to protest the presence of the U.S. Navy in Vieques Puerto Rico. The rally was organized by the Boricuas Unidos group.

Breakthrough Israeli-Syrian talks in future

By Lee Hockstader
Washington Post

JERUSALEM – Middle East peacemaking is full of tortuous twists and turns, and the currency of diplomatic "breakthroughs" has been devalued by nearly a decade of advances and setbacks.

But President Clinton's announcement yesterday that Israel and Syria will resume peace talks after a four-year hiatus surely qualifies as a genuine breakthrough. And the fillip that negotiations will be launched next week in Washington – at a higher level than ever before – has sparked a burst of optimism in the Middle East, albeit a cautious one. In a scene that would have been unthinkable just a few years ago, an Israeli prime minister and a Syrian foreign minister are scheduled to shake hands.

"It's an unprecedented event, a meeting at such a high level between Israeli and Syrian officials," said Gadi Baltiansky, spokesman for Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak. "I don't think there is a done deal, this is not the case. There are still gaps and tough decisions ahead...But if both sides will take the courageous decisions and are genuine in their intentions to reach peace, it shouldn't take too long till we know if we're going toward a peace agreement or there is no chance to reach it."

Said another Israeli official, slightly more wryly: "I wouldn't book a

Turn to MIDEAST, page 2

UMass and the year 2000

UMPD Y2K compliant, say chiefs

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

If the world continues to exist into the year 2000, the University of Massachusetts Police Department will be there to make sure crimes are prevented or solved. After much preparation, the UMPD is ready to take on the task.

"We have checked on all of our computers and their Y2K compliancy," Barbara O'Connor, the deputy-chief of the UMPD, said. "We have also checked the breathalyzer equipment, the taping machine at the dispatch center, the police cars computer chips, our radio system, our repeaters and whatever else had to be checked."

John Luippold, the chief of the UMPD, agreed, saying the that testing of the UMPD equipment has been extensive and that staffing will be placed at key locations around campus, in case people come to UMass to celebrate Y2K.

Luippold also said he had been a part of a larger group on campus planning for possibilities if something is to happen.

"We've been working with other agencies on campus, especially with physical plant. They've really been taking the lead on all of the planning for this upcoming situation," Luippold said.

He said that, among other preparations, generators will be available to ensure that certain buildings still have energy.

O'Connor said the planning for Y2K was wise, but she questioned whether people, in anticipation of a major event, would themselves cause a major event with various behavior.

"Our job here on campus is less troubled because so few people will be here, but we have to prepare for no phones, electricity, computers," O'Connor

Turn to Y2K, page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

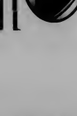
Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 48 LOW: 28	HIGH: 51 LOW: 30	HIGH: 39 LOW: 24

SOURCE: ICWU.COM

Not playing tug-of-war

President Bill Clinton announces his opposition to letting politics get involved with a dispute with Cuba.

PAGE 3



Ten years in Review

Arts reviews the influential music, and all around favorite albums of the decade.

PAGE 5

Fighting the Irish

Jeff Turner and the Massachusetts hockey team will head out to South Bend, In. this weekend to face the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 14

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

PAM FITZPATRICK/ COLLEGIAN

Tim scissor hands

Senior plant and soil science major, Tim Cote, cuts up some fabric in the craft center to create a holiday gift.

■ y2k

continued from page 1

said.

On a personal level, Luippold would only say that he would have to wait and see what happened on Jan. 1. O'Connor, on the other hand, said that she found it humorous that people thought that the sky would be falling.

"This has really taken on a life of its own," O'Connor said. "But on a personal level, I am not really worried about any of this."

O'Connor said while she thought that there would be no problems, she thought that people would have to wait and see.

"I think that we are going to be just fine, and I'm not really worried about our computers. I hope that I'm right, but I guess we'll just find out in a couple of weeks."

Bush debate inadequate, poll numbers slipping

By Mark Z. Barabak
Los Angeles Times

The Republican race for president grew more competitive yesterday as a new poll showed major slippage for George W. Bush in New Hampshire following his less-than-commanding performance in two debates.

While Texas Gov. Bush remains a heavy favorite for the GOP nomination, his poor debate reviews – even from some supporters – suggest he faces a far tougher fight than was expected just a week ago.

Underscoring the reality, the new poll in New Hampshire showed Arizona Sen. John McCain surging past Bush to his biggest lead ever, 37 percent to 30 percent, in a shift of 10 percentage points from a survey in mid-November.

"In the debates Bush offered up the same canned responses the people of New Hampshire have heard for the past six to eight weeks," said Dick Bennett, a nonpartisan New Hampshire pollster who conducted the survey of 600 likely Republican voters."

You could have put a TV and VCR up on the stage and played his ads, because that's how he answered every question."For Bush, more troublesome than sagging poll numbers may be his failure to dispel questions about his intellect and preparedness for the White House. To many, Bush came

Turn to BUSH, on page 3

■ mideast

continued from page 1

ticket to Damascus right now, nor to the White House signing ceremony. But from a procedural point of view, this is definitely a major step."

American mediation was critical in bringing the two sides to the table, and apparently in papering over a dispute over the point at which their talks broke down four years ago. The Israelis insist they are resuming negotiations with no preconditions, while the Syrians have maintained that Israel agreed in 1995 to return the Israeli-occupied Golan Heights and must fulfill that commitment before talks are revived.

It's uncertain whether Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright squeezed concessions from one side or the other on that point, or coaxed them simply to agree to disagree.

"It's unclear who blinked here," said Jerusalem Post Executive Editor David Makovsky. "There's a creative ambiguity that enables both sides to define where the point is" at which talks were suspended.

For the first time since early 1996, the Middle East drama's major protagonists – Israel, Syria and the Palestinians – will be engaged in what are likely to be intensive land-for-peace negotiations in the coming weeks.

Israel will be bargaining with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat over handing over large chunks of West Bank territory in exchange for a comprehensive peace deal, and with Syrian President Hafez Assad over returning the Golan Heights in exchange for a similarly sweeping settlement.

The dual negotiations present a special opportunity for Barak, who will have the tactical advantage of using progress with one partner to spur talks with the other lest he be left behind. Moreover, on both major tracks of negotiations, the sides will be laboring under a tight timetable set principally by Barak.

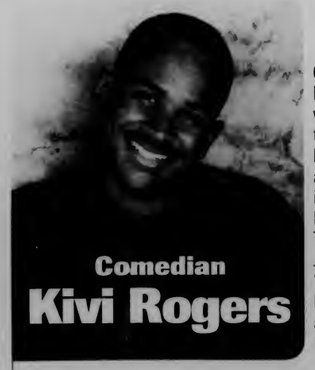
The Israeli prime minister, who took office only in July, has committed himself to sealing a comprehensive deal with the Palestinians by next fall. Arafat appears determined to proclaim the birth of an independent Palestinian state by September, if not sooner.

At the same time, Barak has reiterated time and again his commitment to withdraw Israeli troops

■ assault

continued from page 1

While charges could be filed against the woman for creating the assault story, the district attorney has said that none will be pursued.



Luippold said the other three investigations were still open and the officers who had been investigating all four cases will have one less to examine.

"Our officers are still out there, investigating, doing their best to gather new information," Luippold said. O'Connor echoed the sentiment, but both refused to comment further on the investigations into the three different assaults.

Stay informed
Read the Collegian!
And, if you're a staff member, don't forget to attend candidate night, so you can be informed for Friday's ballot.

Collegian News

IT JUST MAKES SENSE.

The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
presents

Comedian
Kivi Rogers
California comedian Kivi rogers is gifted with a quick wit, a thousand voices, a knack for mischief, and 5 brothers for insurance. Kivi has been seen on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno", HBO's "Def Comedy Jam", NBC's "friday Night", and ABC's "Home Improvement".
Campus Center Auditorium
Friday, December 10, 8pm
The film "Eyes Wide Shut' will follow the show. Also Shown on Sunday in the Campus Center Auditorium at 8pm.
Visit us on the web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm
this program is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Services Department and the vice-chancellor for Student Affairs.

Winter Dance 2000:
Dance Through the Decades Semi-Formal
Dance into the new millenium with music from the century

Saturday
December 11, 1999
7:00 p.m.
All you can eat buffet and beverages
Cash bar available (positive ID required)
DJ and Dancing
7pm- 12 am
Peking Garden
$15 per person/ $50 for 4
Transportation will be provided
Tickets are limited - On sale now at
Tix Unlimited in the Student Union
http://www.umass.edu/rso/stars

PAM FITZPATRICK/ COLLEGIAN

Food for people

Communications major, Sarah Holland, collects money from Anya Stack in the People's Market. The People's Market is a student run store that provides food for people – not for profit.

Clinton wants politics out of dispute

By Steven Mufson
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The tug-of-war over a 6-year-old Cuban boy who survived a disastrous boat trip to Florida should be settled by "what would be best for the child," President Clinton said yesterday. But an influential Cuban American organization said the boy should remain with relatives in Florida and warned the administration against "playing into [Cuban leader Fidel] Castro's hands."

In Havana, thousands of people – including many students in their school uniforms – demonstrated for the fourth straight day in front of the seven-story building that houses the U.S. diplomatic interests section along the city's oceanfront boulevard, the Malecon.

The boy, Elian Gonzalez, has literally become a poster child for the politically charged issue of U.S.-Cuban relations since he was found Nov. 25 clinging to an inner tube off the Florida coast. His mother and stepfather had died after a powerboat loaded with 14 people sank during an attempt to reach the United States.

In Miami, the Cuban American National Foundation has printed posters of Elian lying on a stretcher, depicting him as a victim of communist repression. But in Havana, his picture has been plastered on one of two large billboards opposite the U.S. interests section, with the slogan "Return Elian to his country." The other billboard has a picture of Elian's empty school desk and the caption, "Send Elian back to his classroom."

Since his rescue, the boy has been staying with his father's uncle and cousins –one of whom arrived from Cuba just four months ago – pending a Dec. 23 hearing of the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS).

Faced with the street demonstrations in Havana and demands from Cuban American groups that the boy be allowed to stay in Florida, Clinton tried to keep out of the fray.

"The question is – and I think the most important thing is – what would be best for the child. And there is a legal process for determining that," he said at a White House news conference. "I don't think that politics or threats should have anything to do with it, and if I have my way, it won't."

The Cuban American National Foundation, a strongly anti-Castro organization, said the United States should insist that Cuba allow the boy's father, his sole surviving parent, to travel to Florida to make a decision free from political pressure.

"We have said from the beginning that the only hostage here is the boy's father, who is not being allowed by the Cuban government to come to the United States and make a decision about whether the boy stays or goes, without any pressure from the Cuban government," said Ninoska Perez, a spokeswoman for the group.

Cuba has charged that the U.S. failure to return Elian to his father violates an accord signed in 1994 to halt illegal migration to the United States, and the government in Havana has vowed to keep demonstrations going until the boy is returned. Yesterday, the protest featured salsa music, a popular singer of children's songs, dancing, speeches and people holding signs saying "We love you Elian" and "We're waiting for you Elian."

Formally, the Cuban government also has sent the United States a diplomatic note demanding Elian's return; the State Department said it will reply by Thursday and promised to outline both the father's rights and the procedures he can use to request his son's return.

Jury decides civil rights leader King assassination victim

By Sue Anne Pressley
Washington Post

MEMPHIS, Tenn. – After deliberating for barely three hours, a jury yesterday decided that slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr. was the victim of an assassination conspiracy and did not die at the hands of a lone gunman.

The verdict in Shelby County Circuit Court came in a wrongful death lawsuit that the King family filed last year against former Memphis cafe owner Loyd Jowers, who claimed in 1993 that he conspired with others to kill King at the Lorraine Motel here on April 4, 1968.

The jury of six whites and six blacks awarded damages of $100. The family had sought a minimal sum because, they said, their motive was to search for the truth about the slaying, not to make money.

Juror David Morphy said the panel believed the assassination was too complex for Ray to have planned and carried out alone. "We all thought," he said, "it was a kind of cut-and-dried case, with the evidence...brought forth that there were a lot of people involved."

Although James Earl Ray pleaded guilty to the murder in March 1969 and received a 99-year sentence, he recanted three days later and died in prison last year insisting he had been framed. In 1997, in a move that surprised many, King's widow, Coretta Scott King, and his four grown children allied with Ray and his controversial attorney, William F. Pepper, in supporting the conspiracy theory.

"I'm just so glad the people have spoken," said King's younger son, Dexter, after the verdict. "This is what we have always wanted...This is history."

The trial attracted surprisingly little national attention, even though the family had described the nearly month-long proceeding as "the first and only" trial into King's death. They said they hoped the information gleaned would force a new investigation into the slaying. A congressional committee working in 1977-78 concluded that while Ray shot King, two of Ray's brothers might also have been involved, hoping to collect a bounty on King's life offered by white supremacists in St. Louis.

Pepper, an American based in London, has spent much of the past 20 years investigating the circumstances of King's death, and claimed in a 1995 book, "Orders to Kill," that a vast conspiracy involving the Mafia, the FBI and CIA, and the military was responsible for the slaying.

■ bush

continued from page 2

across in the debates as uncertain, propped up by rehearsed responses and a series of stilted talking point.

If that image takes hold, Bush could face the same kind of burden that plagued former Vice President Dan Quayle, to whom he is being increasingly compared.

"He gets the deer-in-the-headlight look that Quayle used to get," said Fred Davis, a GOP media strategist and former Quayle adviser, who nevertheless feels both men are smarter than their performances suggest. "You almost see his brain trying to remember what he was told, and Quayle came across that way."

While some criticism is to be expected – especially from rivals keen to undercut the front-runner and pierce his aura of inevitability – even Bush supporters have expressed concern about his performances, which gave voters their widest exposure ever to a front-runner who has campaigned mostly in scripted settings.

"We've seen two performances where he is not meeting the expectations that the political community has for him as their leader who was going to take them to the promised land," said one Republican strategist close to the Bush campaign. "If he doesn't improve markedly, especially vis-a-vis McCain, he's looking at a much more competitive race than he ever planned on."

For his part, chief campaign strategist Karl Rove insisted he was delighted with Bush's performance, especially given the "slings and arrows" that he faces running at the head of the pack. "Look, in the last five days Gov. Bush has doubled his debate experience," Rove said, adding somewhat defensively, "You do not get to be governor of Texas unless you have a vision." Still, as the campaign moves closer to the opening bill – the Iowa caucuses and New Hampshire primary, now less than two months off – Bush is facing closer scrutiny than ever before.

Among political insiders two scenes from Monday night's debate have played over and over the past few days. The first was when Bush was asked to describe the lessons he learned reading a biography of former Secretary of State Dean Acheson. He replied with a rote recitation of standard lines from his foreign policy stump speech that offered no reflection of Acheson's principles.

PAM FITZPATRICK/ COLLEGIAN

Tired feet

Mark Gawlak, a freshman pre-communications major, gives his legs a break as he decides to slide down the railing rather than take the stairs.

At these prices, it's too bad we don't sell cars.
Maybe one day we will sell cars, food and everything else you need. But right now, it's great deals on textbooks every day. You can save up to 40%, and you'll get your books in 1 to 3 days. Not that you would, but don't sweat using a credit card. VarsityBooks.com is 100% guaranteed secure. Try saying that about a new SUV.
SAVE UP TO 40% ON TEXTBOOKS.
VarsityBooks

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

What's a minority?

Anna Faktorovich

What is the definition of a minority?
Is a minority an individual of color?
If so, which color?

Am I a minority because I am a white, Russian, Jewish and a creative individual? Or am I a minority because I am a white, middle class and a politically active Irish male?

Is the definition of a minority "those who are minor?" Or is the definition of minorities "those who are few?"

If one chooses the first definition then she or he should realize that America is the country made of immigrants and Indians. Those who are not pure Indians are not pure Americans – therefore, they appear to be "minor." Within our society there are many sects of varied Americans of numerous backgrounds. Of those varied shades: women, African Americans, Jews, communists, populists, workers, Germans, Irish, Japanese, homosexuals, Poles and even Indians, along with just about every other ethnicity, race, religious group, class, sexual orientation and gender were discriminated against at some point in time.

On the other hand, one can perceive the definition of a minority to be "those who are few." From that perspective the size and essence of minority groups, in a given society are constantly changing. An individual can fall into more than one minority group and this would actually increase the size of a group of people who are similar to her or him. But beneath all of the different shades that color each individual's skin, mind, body, history and soul, we are all simply humans. A species that, genetically, is the closest knit species of all that exist on earth.

Culturally, each individual is a minority of one.

Now, you might ask yourself the question, "how do politics fit into this complex American social structure and into our university?"

In the recent meeting of the Student Government Association, it was decided that the students at the University of Massachusetts do not have the right to vote on whether ALANA-appointed (not student-elected) seats should exist. In this motion, both Democracy and cultural values were put into question, as 24 senators decided that 13 percent of the student body is composed of minorities and should be represented by 13 percent of the SGA regardless of how they win the seats.

Here I am not trying to disregard or underestimate the struggle of the students of certain colors – instead I am simply trying to point out that the entire University is diverse. How can 13 percent be pointed out as "special" or in need of privileges?

Here, I further question the role of a political body in a system. Can it truly be a complete representation of the entire social body? Can it include each and every "minor" group?

Some philosophers, such as Locke, argue that, "Men living together according to reason, without a common superior on earth with authority to judge between them is properly the state of nature."

But if the utopian state of a self-governing community were implemented today, it would most likely be too great a shock for America and would result in mass killings or overall hysteria and chaos.

If we agree that a governing body should exist in a state then it becomes crucial to add to the constitution or the laws of this body that – the masses should be the ones that decide on the necessities of a given community. If the masses do not have a say in the law, a government of 50 to 100 individuals can never be just.

The job of a political body then is simply to listen. Listen to their constituents and put their constituents' words into action or to execute the majorities' desires. The majority in this case does not have to be of a similar shade but rather of similar ideal.

This ideal political body should not be adventurous but rather reasonable, active and attentive! No one individual can come up with a legible campaign that satisfies the diversity of a 25,000-student body (without losing his mind). To do so she or he would have to look a year ahead and know what each one of the 25,000 people desires. Each one of those constituents wants different kinds of food, clothing, housing, entertainment, fun and social interaction. And to complicate the issue, each one of those constituents comes from a different "type" of people.

It is far more realistic to expect a senator to keep track of the 250 residents that live in his or her building or the 250 students that share the experience of living off-campus. In such a system, a representative has a better chance to listen to her or his constituents and respond to their immediate needs.

As to the "popularity" of a senator – she or he must be social or she or he would be unable to interact with the students she or he is trying to represent. Once again if you define "popularity" as knowing a lot of people, this quality is a positive characteristic in a representative.

According to Machiavelli, or the "greatest prophet that the lews ever possessed." "The initiation of a new order of things is one of the most difficult acts since mankind doesn't believe in any thing new until they actually experience it." Locke, the establisher of democratic ideals, supported Machiavelli's view by arguing that, "People are not so easily gotten out of their forms as some are apt to suggest."

Indeed, to actually change an existing system or an existing law is far more difficult then it is to theorize about changing it, or keeping things as they are.

Anna Faktorovich is a Collegian staff member.

If I was the boss...

Gary Mendese

Did you ever take a good look around you and wish you could change some things? Now, I'm not talking about large-scale things like wars and drug abuse, although they're very important. No, I'm basically talking about the small stuff: essentially the little things that annoy us all, those things that seem to pop up all the time yet nothing can truly be done to change them.

Well, I've been thinking about them and I'd like to share some of my great, earth-shattering ideas with you. I hope you enjoy...

As I look around me, I notice that a huge percentage of students on this campus are smokers. This is really disgusting. And I'm not talking about marijuana; I'm talking about cigarettes. Hey, I don't give a damn if you smoke crack, pot, hash or crystal meth – those things are just fine. I'm just talking about the nicotine freaks.

Well, I thought long and hard about what to do with these people and one day, when I was in the shower doing the Running Man to "Ice Ice Baby," it hit me. I decided that if I were the Surgeon General, I would propose a fairly simple solution to the smoking crisis in this country. My new law ("recommendation") would state that if anyone were caught smoking more than 2 cigarettes per day, they would have to continuously smoke cigarettes with no breaks in between each one until they were asphyxiated. And there are no exceptions to this rule... except for my housemates and friends living in North Amherst (represent!). Nope, there will be no exceptions for the people that say, "I'm trying to lose weight, that's why I don't want to quit," or "I plan on quitting when I get out of college." And if you're the type of person that thinks smoking is cool or glamorous, then you deserve a different punishment: you should just flat out be beheaded!

There's also something else that has recently come to my attention. My friend Matt informed me that some skinhead decided to go on CNN and nationally announce that he and his fellow sheep-impregnating white supremacist friends are going to attack and kill random Jews and blacks on New Year's Eve. Now, if I were the president of the United States, I would have a great idea (aside from getting "oral satisfaction" from my interns!).

These guys would definitely get the death penalty. And not just the ones that are planning to take part in this ridiculous act: I'm talking about all of these losers. And they should be crucified, since they're so into religion. And the cross should be burning (just to remind them of the things they've done in the past). Where the hell do these people even come from? What the hell are they eating? These people are the biggest wastes of sperm and egg I've ever seen and the world would be a much better place without them. So, if I were president, those "heffer screwers" would be charcoal.

The next oh-so-wonderful thing I'd like to change would be unions of students on college campuses. Actually, I don't want to change them, I just think they should flat out be abolished. You know what I say to these people? I say, "Go to class and shut up!" You know who I'm talking about: that's right, your favorite union and mine, the Graduate Employee Organization (GEO).

This union is full of 45-year-old twelfth-year graduate students who do nothing but speak about the union's "threatened existence" and "ratifying contracts." They are a bunch of narcissistic, crying infants who accomplish nothing. They force all graduate students to pay mandatory dues, and they sit in their pretty little office every day thinking about new benefits they don't deserve but feel they should fight for: like housing vouchers and dental care. What's next? A pension plan?

Now, I could sit here and talk about GEO all day, but I'd rather not throw up. So, I'll just propose my solution to get rid of this "parasite" that serves no purpose other than to suck every resource out of the University. If I were the president of United Auto Workers (which GEO is part of), I would carefully place (ever-so-gently) a few hundred sticks of dynamite in the Student Union Ballroom when GEO was having its ridiculous "please insert the binky into our mouths" meeting and blow them all to smithereens. Does this seem harsh? Well, it probably is, but that's the price I'm willing to pay.

Speaking of GEO, most of you probably know that it is primarily composed of Teaching Assistants (TAs). Well, my next pet peeve about this campus deals directly with these people. Now, I know that TAs are crucial components of such a big university with such large, overwhelming classes. But I definitely think that they should speak English! I can't tell you how many times I've had a TA named something like "Ti Szhng" that I can't understand. And the real kicker is that sometimes they can't even understand me! Now, I know that I have a Boston accent and all, but damn! At least people can understand me!

If I were the Chancellor, I would have two solutions to this problem: one nonviolent and one that's... well, not so nice. First, any person who is from a non-English speaking nation that applies to this school should have a spoken English competency exam, not a written one. Many people can read languages better than they can speak them and that doesn't make them fluent. If you don't pass the exam, then you don't come here. Plain and simple. And my other solution is to randomly test TAs that are already here and see if they can speak and understand spoken English. If they can't understand you or vise versa, then it's deportation time. Sionara, Ciao, Au Revoir, Adios, Auf Wiedersen! Then these people should be replaced with some competent people and perhaps then the quality of education at UMass would improve... I'd be willing to bet that it would.

So that's about it for me. Actually, it's not, but I'm running out of space. There are a number of things that annoy us all and I'm just skimming the surface here. Ah, if I were in charge... I would fix it all. The world we be a much better place... OK, maybe not. But a guy can dream, can't he?

Gary Mendese is a Collegian columnist.

Those important sneakers

Dan Viens

From what I understand I am a human. Like most humans I have two legs. At the bottom of these two legs are feet that I use to walk. This makes me what has come to be called a biped. By no means am I the first biped. They've been around for a while. As a result of the bipeds being around for so long, shoes have been invented to protect our feet. Before shoes everyone had calluses on their feet and it really sucked to give someone a foot massage. Now with the novel invention of shoes, we all have really soft virgin feet.

There are many positive aspects to shoes. For instance, our feet don't get soaked when it rains and when you wear Michael Jordan's, it is easier to dunk. Also thanks to sneakers it is impossible to get struck by lightning. I don't really understand this, but it has to do with lightning coming from the ground up and sneakers being made out of rubber. The two most important things shoes do for us are (1) they make it easier to run through the woods when you are getting chased by the cops and (2) they make it easier to cook meatloaf.

However, don't go thinkin' that shoes are all good. There are plenty of problems with them. First of all, if you stepped in dog poo or gum with your bare feet it would be easier to remove than if you stepped in them while wearing shoes. Also they have the tendency to make your feet sweaty and smelly. Then when you're gettin' with a girl for the first time and she goes down to untie your shoes with her teeth, she catches a whiff of your smelly feet and gets so turned off that she isn't even in the mood anymore. Tell me that doesn't happen all the time. By far, the worst thing about shoes is that they come untied. My shoes are always coming untied and it makes me want to commit murder.

There is a fairly good reason for why my shoes always come untied. At first I thought that maybe all of my laces were made with some sort of Vaseline-based thread. However, the true reason why my shoes are constantly coming untied is that I tie them using the "bunny ears" method rather than the "rabbit around the tree and through the hole" method. For some reason my way of doing it is just not as effective as the standard way. I guess it would be more effective if I double knotted, but there is no way in hell that I'm doing that. I mean every time I do a double-knot I end up throwing my sneakers away because I can't get them untied. I don't have the kind of money to be buying five pairs of shoes a week.

What it comes down to is that I can't tie my shoes using the more popular method very effectively. When I was younger, one of my dad's roommates (he had roommates because he and my mom got divorced and he had a whole big house to himself) showed me how to tie my shoes. Unfortunately, he thought I was too young to handle the real way so he showed me the "bunny ears" way. To this day I have been unable to learn the "correct" way. For a while I thought that my way was faster, but every time that I've raced someone, I have been defeated. Another problem with the "bunny ears" is that it doesn't really look that cool when you tie your shoes the same way that and eight-year-old does. Also I have been ridiculed and laughed at by a good number of people, some of which I could have easily beat the hell out of. However, beating someone up for making fun of how you tie your shoes isn't really a cool thing to do especially if she's a good-looking girl.

Believe it or not though, there is one huge advantage to tying one's shoes using the "bunny ears" method. You see, the reason that I can't tie my shoes the regular way is that I am genetically inept. There is something in my father's genes that was passed down to me which will not allow me to tie my shoes correctly. The advantage to this is that the "bunny ears" gene will have to be passed onto my offspring. As a result of this my children will never be able to tie their shoes correctly. This may seem like a curse because my kids will have to live through a life of ridicule. However, this is not the case. My genetic inability to tie my shoes correctly is a safeguard against my future spouses infidelity. You see if ms wife cheats on me and gets knocked up, I will eventually find out because her kid will be able to tie his shoes correctly. So for any of you girls who were thinking about marrying me, cheating on me, getting pregnant and trying to pass your lover's kid off as mine, forget it. I've got a foolproof way to ruin your scheme. If you just want to come over and "tie our shoes together" then feel free to call.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

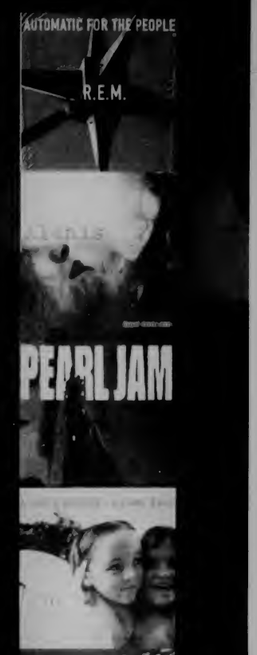
The Massachusetts Daily Collegian



113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Shawn Ilnitch Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Every Thursday!

Three days left of classes before five long-awaited weeks of break. The last weekend of the semester kicks off tonight and leading the evening, Luna plays at Pearl Street. Later, Sensual Thursday's are on top at the Box with Wal-Gee and SD spinning hip-hop and reggae. Last week, an impressive crowd danced the night away to Chubby Chub.

It's an end of an era come Friday when Hurricane Dave plays their final show. And not a better place to have them perform for a final time then a venue that they were so instrumental in establishing. At last February's "Big Night" a sold-out crowd witnessed Hurricane Dave's enlightening performance. The incredible success of The Big Night, the first trial show for The Skybox Nightclub, confirmed a need for additional on-campus entertainment. Hurricane Dave will play in the sky tomorrow night for just their second time and just maybe, as the band's concert-listing email states, they'll make VH1's "Behind the Music".

With the football season complete and both hoop and hockey away, its time to get creative with activities to engage in. Try ice-skating at the Mullins Center Practice Rink, otherwise look for Sevendust to tear up Hartford as they play The Webster. The Barenaked Ladies return to their second home as they perform with Guster at Boston's Orpheum Theatre in a special intimate Mix 98.5 appearance. But forget about getting tickets for that show and instead opt for BNL in Worcester on Dec. 29. Phish journeys to Hartford.

Otherwise rent a movie, grab a leisure book, or sit down and kick a few back. Come Tuesday finish your projects, write your papers and start studying for exams.

Happy Holidays, best of luck this winter, build up the cash flow, and relax.

-tc Tom Sadlowski

Thursday, Dec. 9

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
North of Center, 10 p.m., 21+
IRON HORSE
Shirley King, 8:30 p.m.
The Slip, 10 p.m.
PEARL STREET
Luna plus Gorky's Zygotic Mynci, 8:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs
HOT CLUB
Techno and Top 40 with DJ Bill
THE SKYBOX
Sensual Thursday's with DJ SD and DJ Wal-Gee spinning Hip-Hop 'n' Reggae, 18+
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Top 40, Hip-Hop, R&B with DJ's KLS and M.I.C., 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts
CURTAIN THEATER - UM
Equus, 8 p.m.
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Sports
BLUE WALL
WMLA's Sportsline, 5:30 p.m.

Friday, Dec. 10

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Pirate Radio, 10 p.m., 21+
IRON HORSE
Patty Larkin plus Anni Clark, 7 p.m.
Ice Gallant & Illuminati, 10 p.m.
PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Indigenous, 7 p.m.
PEARL STREET
The Slackers plus Conehead Buddha, 8:30 p.m.
THE SKYBOX
Hurricane Dave plus The Magnets, 8:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
House with DJ Ranpage, 9 p.m.-2 a.m.
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Meg Hutchenson, 8 p.m
Mokjam, 10 p.m.
HOT CLUB
70's and 80's Hits with DJ Donnie
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Disco with DJ Michael Kane, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
PEARL STREET
Chemistry Friday with Heather Heart (Sonic Groove, NYC) and Casey Hogan (Plastik City, Sonic Groove, NYC), 10 p.m.-2 a.m.
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Otis, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Performing Arts
CURTAIN THEATER - UM
Equus, 8 p.m.

Karaoke
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+

Additional On-Campus Events
BLUE WALL
Something Every Friday with comedian Kivi Rogers. Followed by the film, Eyes Wide Shut, 8 p.m.

Saturday, Dec. 11

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Love Bomb, 10 p.m., 21+
IRON HORSE
Ellis Paul plus Mark Geary, 7 p.m.
Jiggle the Handle, 10 p.m.
PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Rubyhorse plus My Favorite Relative, 7 p.m.
PEARL STREET
Stubborn All-Stars, Filibuster, and Slightly All-Stars, 7:30 p.m.
THE WEBSTER
Sevendust plus Static X

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.
HOT CLUB
House, Dance and Top 40 with DJ Andy
MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Dave The Wave, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+
PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m., 21+
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts
CURTAIN THEATER - UM
Equus, 8 p.m.

Comedy & Improv
CAMPUS CENTER 163
Improv Blowout Weekend with Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.

Sunday, Dec. 12

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
7th Street Jazz Band, 9 p.m., 21+
HARTFORD CIVIC CENTER
Phish
IRON HORSE
Tish Hinojosa Christmas Show, 7 p.m.
ORPHEUM THEATRE
Barenaked Ladies, 7:30 p.m.
THE RONY
Steriolab plus Jim O'Rourke, 9 p.m.

Dance Clubs
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Upscale Hip-Hop and R&B with DJ Kurupt, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts
FIRST CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH, AMHERST
"A Night of Chamber Music", 4 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Movie Eyes Wide Shut, 8 p.m.

Monday, Dec. 13

Notices
Last day of classes.

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Amherst Jazz Orchestra, 8:30 p.m., 21+
AVALON
Sevendust, Static X, Dope, and Chevelle, 8 p.m.
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Open Stage, sign-up at 6:30 p.m., starts at 8 p.m.
IRON HORSE
The Black Rebels, 8:30 p.m.
PROVIDENCE CIVIC CENTER
Phish, 7 p.m.

Tuesday, Dec. 14

Notices
Reading Day.

Wednesday, Dec. 15

Notices
Reading Day.

Dance Clubs
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing and salsa with DJ Jitterbug, lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.
THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Film
Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8455)
Sleepy Hollow

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9
Hadley (584-9153)
The Bone Collector, Pokemon: The First Movie, Sleepy Hollow, Toy Story 2, The World Is Not Enough

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-5426)
200 Cigarettes

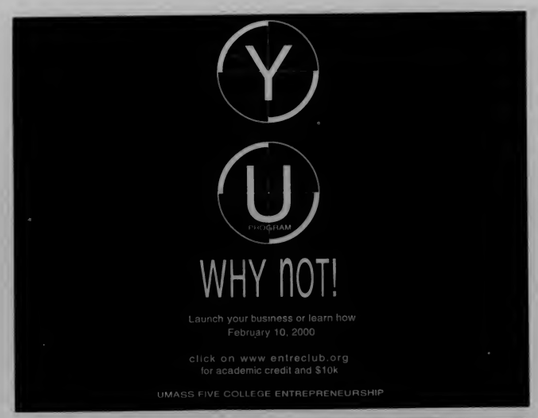
Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0280)
American Beauty, Anywhere But Here, The Bone Collector, End of Days, Pokemon: The First Movie, Sleepy Hollow, Toy Story 2, The World Is Not Enough

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0935)
American Beauty, Dogma, The Lovers on the Bridge

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (733-5131)
The Bachelor, The Bone Collector, Dogma, Double Jeopardy, End of Days, House on Haunted Hill, The Insider, Pokemon: The First Movie, The Sixth Sense, Sleepy Hollow, Toy Story 2, The World Is Not Enough, Deuce Bigalow: Male Gigolo, The Green Mile

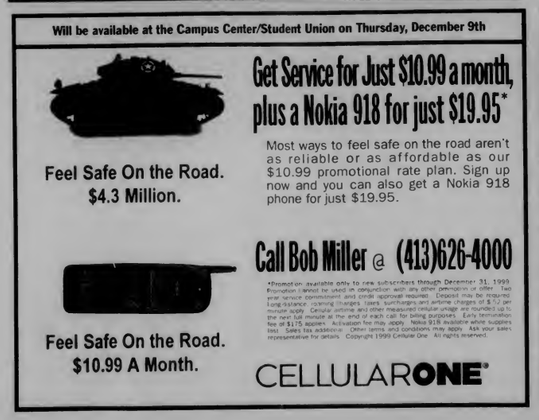
Tower Theatres
19 College Street, South Hadley (533-3456)
Toy Story 2, The World Is Not Enough, The Green Mile

Recreational Activities
UMass Ski 'n' Board Club
434 Student Union (545-3437)
Learn-to Ski/Board (Killington, VT), Dec. 12
Quebec Weekend, Dec. 3-5
Millennium Ski and Party Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Dec. 30 – Jan. 2 or Dec. 29 – Jan. 2
Winter Gateway Weekend (Quebec, Canada), Feb. 18-21
Escape to the Rockies (Location TBA), March 12-17
Mount Tremblant (Montreal, Canada), March 12-15
Jamaica, March 12-17
Day Trips on 2/5, 2/12, 2/26,3/4, 3/25



Outing Club
432C Student Union (545-3131)
Kayak Rolling, Every Friday at Curry Hicks Cage Pool from 7-10 p.m.

Public Skating
Mullins Center Practice Rink (545-3990) Free for UMass students, $2 skate rental
Mon-Fri 12-12:50 p.m.
Wed (adult skate) 10-11:50 a.m.
Fri 9:30-11:20 p.m.
Sat 1-2:50 p.m., 7:30-9:20 p.m., 9:30-11:20 p.m.
Sun 2-3:50 p.m.



Raquetball
Mullins Center Practice Rink (545-3990) Free for UMass students, courts may be reserved
Mon-Sun 8 a.m. - 10 p.m.

Other Activities
If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disco bowling at Northampton Bowl; biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northampton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains; visiting Puffer's Pond; shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall; hayride at the Bison Farm in Hadley; mini-golf on route 9; billiards in the UMass campus center, Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in Northampton.

Turn to THE SOURCE, page 8

Youth rules metal world for 1999

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

1999 was a cool-down period for heavy music. After last year's avalanche of quality titles and big name releases, this year was much more relaxed in terms of big releases, opening the door for a lot of new bands to come and show their worth. 1999 saw disappointing releases from Megadeth and Sevendust, two albums I was excited about until I heard them. Rap/metal is going strong with two solid but un-extraordinary releases from Rage Against the Machine and Limp Bizkit, and low quality products such as Godsmack and Kid Rock continue to grow in popularity. Don't get me wrong. Kid Rock is a cool pimp, and Godsmack can rock as hard as an Alice In Chains cover band, but finding any originality or experienced musicianship in these releases is like finding the latest Dio record at number one on the Billboard charts. Anyway, here are my personal picks for the best of 1999:

1. Metropolis Pt. 2: Scenes From A Memory – Dream Theater

Easily the best concept album I have ever listened to, accompanied with the insane musical talent that has garnered Dream Theater a dedicated fan base. Every track is practically a mini-album in itself, and songs like "Fatal Tragedy" and "Home" must have aspiring guitarists heading for the pawnshop. Amazing.

Call To Arms – Sick of it All

New York hardcore legends deliver their finest album in years, featuring quick blast hardcore songs like "Let Go" and "Morally Confused." But the band lets its metal sound shine through on great tracks like "Potential for a Fall" and "Just (A Patsy)." Running only about 30 minutes in length, I found this CD in my player this year more than any other.

The Fragile – Nine Inch Nails

Fans expecting The Downward Spiral Part 2 were no doubt disappointed, but this two-CD epic is undeniably brilliant. None of the singles are especially memorable, but taken as a whole, or even by individual CD, it makes perfect sense and sounds incredible.

Slipknot – Slipknot

Without a doubt the heaviest album of the year, but it's also the scariest, most twisted and most original. While comparisons to Korn are valid, Slipknot has more rage than Jonathan Davis ever did, and they channel it through a creative blend of samples, DJ scratches, innovative percussion and head-banging guitar riffs. If you have any doubt to their integrity, the chorus of "Surfacing" should make everyone believers.

The Burning Red – Machine Head

Machine Head returns to the metal scene with a bunch of new tricks up its sleeve, including a surprising mastery of rap/metal. "From this Day" and "Desire to Fire" prove Robb Flynn and the boys just as capable as Bizkit or Rage in adding some flava to their aggression, while barn-burners like "Nothing Left" and "The Blood, The Sweat, The Tears" display that MH can rock as hard now as they ever did.

Fly Eyes – H·BLOCKX

Germany puts itself on the metal map again with H·BLOCKX, a necessary group to insure that amongst metal's current rampant experimentation there still are bands who will play straightforward metal to its very best. The beauty of songs like "Paradise Valley" and "9:08 a.m." is unsurpassed, and for head-banging goodness you can't do any better than "Fly" or "One Day."

For the Bleeders – Vision of Disorder

A compilation of old tracks released before their debut album, For the Bleeders isn't the adrenaline-charged follow-up to Imprint, but rather a look back at this band's roots. Every track is enjoyable, making this a must for fans or a perfect introduction for the curious.

Urban Observer – DDT

In the wake of so many bands with serious political agendas or self-loathing anthems, DDT manages to make a statement while having a good time. The Canadian five-piece definitely has something to say, nowhere more evident than their biting "MCDDT," but they do so alongside such impossibly catchy lighthearted tunes like "Hey Steve" and "Walkabout."

Amen Amen

Disgusted with seemingly every aspect of American culture, Amen lash out at everything and everyone, put to some of the most aggressive music of the year. It's not always an easy listen, but the solid musicianship saves it from being just a rant, and I get the feeling this debut is just a blueprint for something even bigger to come.

Wisconsin Death Trip – Static-X

Among the band's descriptions of its sound are "evil disco" and "rhythmic trancecore," but under any label it is still a lot of fun. The Ministry and Nine Inch Nails influences weigh a little heavy, but the band keeps the beats amazingly tight, and adds enough originality and charm to set them apart from the pack.

Top Ten Modern Rock Albums of the 90's

By Ryan Bensharris
Collegian Staff

1. Ten – Pearl Jam
2. My Own Prison – Creed
3. Sixteen Stone – Bush
4. Metallica – Metallica
5. Nevermind – Nirvana
6. Under the Table and Dreaming – Dave Matthews Band
7. Sublime – Sublime
8. Superunknown – Soundgarden
9. The Colour and the Shape – Foo Fighters
10. Vs. – Pearl Jam

Collegian's picks for the year in music

By Tom Sadlowski
Collegian Staff

GUSTER, Artist of the Year – Major Label

There is no surprise for Boston's Guster that a packed hometown crowd would witness a remarkable performance at the Hatch Shell only days after playing Woodstock. Headlining a club tour that has been selling out venues across North America, there is no surprise that the public is warming up to Guster.

PAT MCGEE BAND, Artist of the Year – Independent Label

Last year, the band sold out Boston's famed Paradise in only their second time in the city and without the benefit of airplay. In 1999, they played the Paradise again along with making their first trip to the Pearl Street Nightclub Ballroom, and then drawing nearly 2,000 at Boston's newly renovated Avalon. Recently signed to Giant Records, they will be going into the recording studio very shortly to record the band's major label debut.

GUSTER, Lost and Gone Forever, Album of the Year – Major Label
Found and Here Forever.

SHEILA DIVINE, New Parade, Album of the Year – Independent Label

Quality songwriting and craftsmanship returns from the winners of last spring's WBCN Rumble.

MARK ERELLI, Songwriter of the Year

Winner of the Kerrville Folk Festival this past summer is only one of the reasons why the folk world is abuzz about this accomplished songwriter. If folk is the next genre to go mainstream, expect Erelli to be at the forefront of the revolution.

STAIND, Breakthrough Artist of the Year

What a year Springfield's Staind has had. A spot on the Family Values Tour, a tour slatted with Korn early next year, and an album that is burning up the charts.

ALMOST SPEECHLESS, Five College Artist of the Year

Headlining a sold out show at the Iron Horse is just the beginning for this acoustic four-piece with UMass ties. They were recently showcased as the artist of the week on Billboard's Talent Net while the band's first on-campus gig came on opening night of The Skybox.

■ metal

continued from page 5

4. Roots – Sepultura (1996)
Sepultura's last album with vocalist Max Cavalera is a hell of a way to say goodbye. The album has such a unique feel, thanks to the band's collaboration with the Xavantes tribe and the diverse styles represented throughout, that it will certainly be remembered as one of the most innovative metal albums ever.

5. Korn – Korn (1994)
The new sound that Korn introduced with its debut album was like a breath of fresh air for the metal community. The album's influence is only more evident by its throngs of imitators, and "Blind" remains among the best opening songs ever.

6. Demanufacture – Fear Factory (1995)
Fear Factory's grim vision of the future is downright scary on tracks like "Replica" and "H-K (Hunter Killer)," but the execution is flawless and their use of technology makes their message even stronger. Music that makes you fear the future.

7. Whoracle – In Flames (1997)
Swedish metal at its finest is represented on this album, an atmospheric journey through amazingly gified and diverse guitar work and other-worldly lyrics. They're equally adept at churning out massive riffs like on "Jotun" and "Episode 666" as they are at beautiful instrumentals like "Dialogue with the stars."

8. River Runs Red – Life of Agony (1993)
What can be a horribly depressing album during the title track and the disturbing closer also has uplifting moments like the fist-pumping "Underground" and the hopeful "Method of Groove." LOA's recent demise is a great loss, but with RRR they left their undeniable mark on metal history.

9. NOLA – Down (1995)
This collaboration between Pantera's Phil Anselmo, Corrosion of Conformity's Pepper Keenan and members of Crowbar result in one of the most fruitful unions in metal history. This isn't some one-off one song get-together, but instead a fully realized vision that plays out over thirteen beautifully aggressive tracks.

10. The Chemical Wedding – Bruce Dickinson (1998)
Iron Maiden, for all their former glory, couldn't hope to create anything in the 90's as brilliant as their current singer Bruce Dickinson's latest solo effort. The Accident of Birth with better songs, the excess trimmed, and some musical compositions that would have never been possible in the Maiden camp.

■ ages

continued from page 5

Butch Vig would be producing Matchbox 20 albums and Shirley Manson would be waiting tables in Edinburgh, if it weren't for this band. Toni Halliday and Dean Garcia were miles ahead of the competition and waited for everyone else to catch up. Their early singles showed all the signs of an excellent band, but disappointed many with their formulaic first LP, Doppelganger. Their second LP, Cuckoo, released in 1995, was their masterpiece- a dark, moody, and gritty compilation of songs. Their 1998 album, Come Clean, probably deserves a spot on this list as well.

7. Post – Bjork
"No, you mean Homogenic?" No, I mean Post – the Icelandic pop queen's second album after leaving the Sugarcubes. Exceeding the excellence that is Debut, Post is a quirky, happy little album. True, Homogenic may have more musical merit, but it's not as fun.

8. Different Class – Pulp
The best thing about the explosion of Britpop in the mid 90's was that there were plenty of great bands around (Pulp, Blur, Suede) to prove that Oasis sucked. This 1996 release was Pulp's claim to fame and the single "Common People" became the anthem for the disenchanted.

9. If You're Feeling Sinister – Belle and Sebastian
This album is so damn cute. Songs like "Other People," "Like Dylan In the Movies" and the title track are only a few that will be stuck in your head forever. FOREVER.

10. Masinquave Tricks
The bad boy from Bristol, UK's debut was the album that marked the birth for the term "trip-hop."

11. Serpentine Gallery – Switchblade Symphony
This San Francisco duo breathed new life into the dark music scene. The song "Wallflower" became a modern club hit.

TWO YEARS AGO, TWO GUYS WENT OUT TO HAVE A BEER IN AMHERST. THEY DECIDED THAT UPTOWN WAS TOO BUSY AND WENT TO A LOCAL BAR AND GRILL. THEY PAID TOO MUCH FOR THEIR LOUSY FOOD, AND PAID WAY TOO MUCH FOR A PINT OF BEER.

COME SEE THE RESULT OF THEIR FRUSTRATION...

■ The Sourse

continued from page 6

Volunteer
Xmas Bell Ringers Needed!
27 Brewster Court, Northampton (585-8720). Join in the spirit of giving by volunteer to be a bell ringer for the Salvation Army's kettle campaign during Nov. and Dec. Flexible hours, outdoor work, sites in Northampton, Amherst, Hadley and Easthampton. Last year the Salvation Army spent $185,926 in Hampshire County alone, helping 4,308 residents with emergency needs. Help raise money for this worthy cause.

Lectures & Discussions
None scheduled at this time.

Book Readings
None scheduled at this time.

Art Galleries
None listed at this time

Libraries
Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.
Biological Sciences
214 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011)
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-3 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418)
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Sat-Sun 10 a.m.- midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225)
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.- midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.- midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910)
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Lowrise, 2nd floor, UMass (545-1370)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2519)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2587)
Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts
AMAZING CROWNS
Dec. 17, Bill's Bar
BARENAKED LADIES
Dec. 29, Worcester Centrum
GODSMACK, REVEILLE
Dec. 31, Bayside Expo Center
GUSTIR
Jan. 28, The Palladium
BEN HARPER
Feb. 5, John M. Greene Hall

Venues
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
56 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-4400)
AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street Boston (617-262-2424)
BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8515)
BILL'S BAR 55 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9078)
BUTTERFIELD RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass Amherst
CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610)
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College South Hadley
CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road Belchertown (323-4117)
THE ASYLUM 1342 Main Street Springfield (739-7400)
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (582-9898)
FIRE & WATER CAFE 5 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8536)
FLEETCENTER 1 Fleet Center, Boston (617-624-1000)
HOT CLUB 10-12 Stearns Square, Springfield (781-4509)
HOTEL WARREN 13 Elm Street, Deerfield (665-2301)
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610)
JOHN M. GREENE HALL Smith College, Main Street, Northampton
LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL 239 Westminster Street, Providence (401-272-5876)
MARS NIGHTCLUB 350 Worthington Street, Springfield (746-8282)
MIDDLE EAST 472/480 Mass. Ave., Central Square, Cambridge (617-864-3278)
MULLINS CENTER UMass, Amherst (545-3001)
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS 17 New South Street, Northampton (584-7327)
ORPHEUM THEATRE Hamilton Place, Boston (617-679-0810)
PARADISE ROCK CLUB 967 Commonwealth Ave., Boston (617-562-8804)
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB 10 Pearl Street, Northampton (584-0610)
SOMERVILLE THEATRE 49 Davis Square, Somerville (617-625-4088)
THE GROTTO 25 West Street, Northampton (586-6400)
THE SKYBOX 1109 Campus Center, UMass (545-3216 or www.umass.edu/skybox)
THE SOLUTION 84-90 Worthington Street, Springfield (733-4400)
THE WEBSTER 31 Webster Street, Hartford (860-525-5533)
TSONGAS ARENA 300 Arcand Drive, Lowell (978-848-6900)
TT THE BEARS 10 Brookline Street, Cambridge (617-492-BEAR)
VAN METER RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
WORCESTER PALLADIUM 261 Main Street, Worcester (508-797-9696)
WORCESTER CENTRUM 50 Foster Street, Worcester (508-755-6800)
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN. 50 Conz Street, Northampton (586-5515)

General Information
All events all ages unless otherwise noted. What do you think? Would you like to read one-line event previews, desire a format change, or post an event? Please call (413) 545-1361, fax (413) 545-1592 or email eventcalendar@excite.com

DANNY CLINCH PHOTO

OK Commuter

Members of Radiohead Thom Yorke, Phil Selway, Ed O'Brien, Colin Greenwood, and Jonny Greenwood (L-R) take a moment out of their busy tour schedule to relax.

PATRICK GIARDINO/STAFF

Is that Mr. Clean?

Billy Corgan and band memebers pose for a smashing good picture.

THE NEW BREED OF PUBS IS HERE

THE HANGAR Pub and Grill

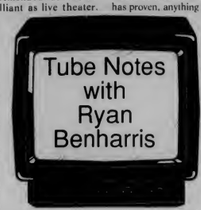
55 UNIVERSITY DRIVE

- 24 TAPS OF THE BEERS YOU WANT AT THE PRICES YOU DESERVE
- 15 FLAVORS OF THE BIGGEST WINGS AVAILABLE
- BEST PUB FOOD ANYWHERE
- ALL YOU CAN EAT WINGS - FIVE BUCKS EVERY MONDAY, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY 7-10
- GRAND OPENING SPECIAL PETES WICKED AND WINTER FOR A BUCK

FINALLY YOU CAN GET WHAT YOU PAY FOR IN AMHERST

Tube Notes ends millennium with its top 10

I had to do this, because it was simply inevitable. For the past two weeks in the Arts section there have been tons of lists of the best entertainment from the past 10 years. I think it would completely wrong if I didn't participate in the fun, so here are my top 10 television shows from the 1990's.



10. "Seinfeld" – For those of you who have been faithfully reading my column for three years, you'll know that I would rather not even have this show on my list. I have yet to find an entire episode of the show funny, and never understood what the big deal was. However, there's no way that anyone should have a top ten list of 90's TV shows without it. What the series did for pop culture and society is irreversible. Every series that has been aired since "Seinfeld," including "Friends," "Just Shoot Me" and even "Ally McBeal," are a direct result of Jerry and his gang's continuing impact. Even though I don't like the series, I certainly appreciate what it has accomplished.

9. "The Larry Sanders Show" – Don't dare forget about the greatest HBO series ever made! After going off the air a few years ago, the show seems to have fallen off the face of the earth. Just because it won't run in syndication, or that it is way too controversial to air on network TV, doesn't mean that it shouldn't be remembered. The writing on this series may be the best on any show ever made, and for its small band of loyal followers, the characters are extremely memorable.

8. "Party of Five" – Remember when this show ruled? Back in the day, Bailey was a drunk, Charlie had cancer, Julia was married to Griffin and Claudia was only a baby. Now the show is pure crap. Whenever I watch it now, all I can think is, "Why won't they buy a gun, and put it out of its misery?" With all kidding aside, "Party of Five" definitely deserves to be on this list. It also should have won many more awards back in the prime of its career, but all it will ever have to show for a decade of hard work, is one lowly "Outstanding Drama Series" at the Golden Globe Awards.

7. (Tie) "Friends," "Mad About You," "Home Improvement" and "Fraiser" – Due to room constraints, and inability to pick which one of these series is the best, I'll just put them all at number seven. "Friends" has become a trend-setting device that helps define a culture. "Mad About You" proved that with excellent writing and two tremendous actors, TV can be as brilliant as live theater. "Home Improvement" is Tim Allen's personal achievement of superiority. And, "Frasier" has won more awards than any sitcom in the history of television. Between the four series mentioned, there is a strong bond of television greatness, and the fact that they all ran at the same time says something about TV in the 90's.

6. "The X-Files" – Arguably, "X-Files," is the greatest science fiction series ever to grace the world of TV. Though it has announced that it is going off the air later this year, the rumors are flying that it will stick around a bit longer. Another film may be in the works, or a spin-off series would be nice. However, as this show has proven, anything can happen.

5. "NYPD Blue" – The best police show in a long time has also worn out its welcome. However, when it was truly awesome, it was the best show on TV.

4. "ER" – "ER" has set a standard for drama series in the next millennium. It has become the example that all series seem to strive for. There were many attempts to copy it this decade, but the fact remains that it can never be matched. "ER" has gone on to gain all of the fame and recognition that it deserves. It has topped the ratings for years, and has won many awards. "ER" will be remembered long after it is gone, not only as one of the best series of the 90's, but as one of the best series of all time.

3. "Law and Order" – I think this is the best drama series produced in the past ten years. Though it has been on for a while, you can still watch every episode with the same edginess that it created during its first series. It seems that NBC has done a good job pumping all of its best producers into this single series. With all of the work that has been done, "Law and Order" has not gone unrecognized. It has won two Emmys for "Outstanding Drama Series," and NBC is confident that it can run on the air as long at it shall see fit. "Law and Order" certainly defines the term television drama.

2. "Roseanne" – "Roseanne" is one of the few shows that not only established a superstar, but made her an American icon. What this show did in the ratings is phenomenal, and what it did for pop culture is even more extravagant. Throughout the course of the series, the star changed her name twice, but what she stood for remained the same. Roseanne is truly a piece of 90's history.

1. "The Simpsons" – Entire books can be written about the series that, without a doubt, is the greatest piece of satire ever created in American entertainment. There has never been a show that stood for so many different values and symbolic elements as "The Simpsons" does, and because of this, people look towards it for an alternative view of life. When the show's creator Matt Groening publicly announced that his goal was to overcome "The Cosby Show," which was the epitome of television in the 80's, you knew that it must be something special. One thing that "The Simpsons" has not had to endure over its eleven-year run, is the problem of its characters aging. Because of this, we would always know what to expect every Sunday night. It's still uncertain how far "The Simpsons" will last into the 21st century. However, the one thing that is certain is that it is one of the most prolific pieces of pop culture every produced.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist

■ NHL

continued from page 14

If there is anyone that can operate a team under the heavy Canadian tax laws and still come out in the green, it's this tightwad. Desperate times call for desperate measures, so the saying goes, and right now the game of hockey in Canada is against the wall, blindfolded, and puffing away. Let's hope something is done.

Marty McSorley has become the latest catch in the Boston Bruins quest to sign every available veteran free agent in the league. The Bruins, who in the off-season struck gold with Dave Andreychuk, and are expecting big things out of Joe Murphy, signed the 36-year-old defenseman on Tuesday. McSorley will never be known for his offensive game, but he will give the Bruins a big body to put on the ice. The question is, what else does he bring to the table? He has two Stanley Cup rings, so the experience factor is a plus. And, seeing as the Bruin's best fighter carries the tag of assistant coach now, perhaps it's a good thing we have somebody who can throw a decent right now and then. Other than that, the jury is out until he laces up the skates and produces something that is worth the ink it took to sign him.

Lastly, the NHL Board of Governors met on Tuesday, and among other things, thankfully decided to drop the idea of eliminating inter-conference play. Where would a move like this get the NHL? They want to promote the game, and make it more universal, so confining teams to schedules that pit them exist squads in their own conference exclusively is hardly the way to go. The NHL is citing finances and schedule conflicts as to why the idea was proposed. Hopefully they keep their senses, and continue to shoot down this foolish idea until it finally goes away.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian Columnist

Winter Tenant Matters and Protections for Renters

Heating Your House Or Apartment Over Winter Break: Frozen Pipe Alert

If you are leaving your house or apartment over the winter break please remember to keep your thermostat turned up at least 55 degrees throughout your residence. Neglecting to do this may cause significant damage to the residence from pipes freezing and water damage. If you are a renter the costs from these damages-which can be in the thousands of dollars-could potentially be passed on to you. SO...if you plan to be out of town for any time over the winter break make arrangements with your landlord to safeguard your residence against this potential serious and costly problem.

$$ Fuel Assistance

If your household is having trouble paying for home heating oil and fuel then you may qualify for assistance from the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program. Qualified households will receive assistance based on their household size and income. Locally residents from both Hampshire and Franklin counties should contact the Franklin Community Action Corporation based in Greenfield. Call 1-800-370-0940 to get access to this program as funds are only available for a limited time.

Winter Protection Plan for Households Facing Electricity Shut Offs

If you are the head of a household and can honestly say that " I cannot pay my electric bill in full and I will not be able to afford food, clothing, rent, medical treatment and other basic necessities" then you may qualify for a special program called The Winter Protection Plan from Western Mass Electric Company (WEMCO). Under this plan WEMCO will agree not to shut off your electric service non payment; not to send you a shut off notice this winter; not to charge you a late payment fee. To qualify contact your local public assistance agency or mail a copy of either a fuel assistance award letter; a Medicaid card; a food stamp identification card; a copy of your social security card; your unemployment booklet or claim from or notice of action and or eligibility from MA Department of Social Services to:

Northeast Utilities, Office of Credit Administration, PO Box 270, Hartford CT 06141-0270

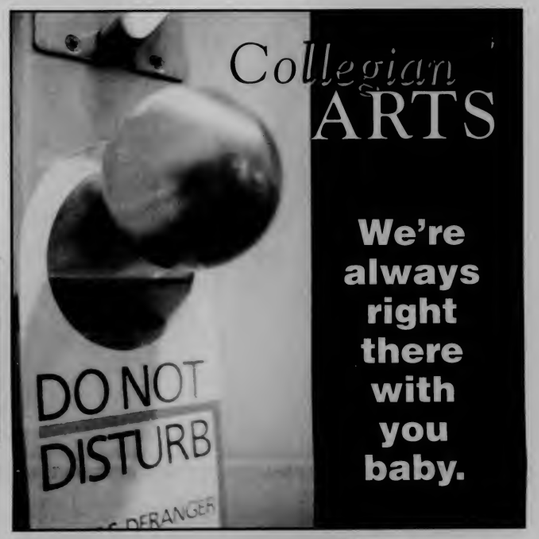
Important Information for Renters brought to you by Commuter Services (formerly Off Campus Housing office), Rm. 428 Student Union

The Pride Alliance Presents:

In Memory of Brandon

Featuring
The Brandon Teena Story

The Brandon Teena Story is a documentary that was made in the aftermath of the slaying of Brandon, a 21 year-old female bodied person who lived as a man. Brandon was murdered on December 31, 1993 by John Lotter and Marvin Nissen. The event occurred two weeks after Brandon's legal name and gender were released to local papers by the police following his arrest on a misdemeanor check forgery charge and one week after he was beaten and raped by Nissen and Lotter. This film interviews the people who knew Brandon, including his killers, as well as those involved in the aftermath of his murder.,



Brandon

Introduced by Grace Sterling Stowell
Director of the Boston Alliance of Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, and Transgender Youth
&
Alejandro Daviko Marcel
Director of the Transgender Education Network

Tonight!!!
7pm
Thompson 104

Collegian ARTS

We're always right there with you baby.

Chances are we've got what you need.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

oh behave!

shoes to party in.

ZANNA

downtown Amherst

Ultimate Experience

$299

SUN SNOW FEST 2000

www.skitravel.com 1-800-SKI-SNOW

Think About This:

You Want To Begin Investing But You Can't Afford Much Per Month, And Inflation Is Eating Your Savings Account For Lunch.

Try Series I Bonds. They're guaranteed to stay ahead of inflation for up to 30 years, and you can get started with just $50. Visit us at www.savingsbonds.gov to find out more.

I Bonds

www.savingsbonds.gov

A public service of this newspaper

Top 10 Rap Albums of the Decade

By Dave Katzoff
Collegian Staff

Determining lists of music deemed supremely influential to the architectural sound-scapes of the decade is a difficult, if not completely ambiguous task. Since the 1980's has progressively become the most pivotal period in the history of urban aesthetics and commodified Black culture, there have been innumerable offerings to uniquely impact the field. Certainly, hip-hop purists are wholeheartedly welcome to disagree, but in my lone, humble opinion, these are the selections, which have innovated, vitalized and reinvented the genre

10. The Score – Fugees (1945)

Conventionally, sophomore albums do not musically eclipse their predecessors. However, Refugee Camp took painstaking care to elicit the energy they sought after Jumpstarting the illustrious solo careers of each member (Wyclef Jean, Lauryn Hill and Pras), virtually every track is laden with multi-layered instrumentation and verbally significant wisdom.

9. Aquemini – Outkast (1998)

After their stunning, revolutionary debut, Southernplayalisticadillacmuzik, Outkast returned to abduct our auditory inhibitions with a thorough, musically opulent rendering Capsulating the "fish and grits" funk of the deep South, Dungeon Family producers, Organized Noize, endowed each beat with a distinct soulfulness, exquisitely appropriating Big Boi and Dre's carefully conceived cadence.

8. All for One – Brand Nubian (1990)

Arguably, Brand Nubian's debut marked a turning point in lyrical ethnocentrisms inspired by the philosophies of the Nation of Islam. With front man Grand Puba's devastating flow and Derrick (now Sadat) X and Lord Jamar's biting cadence, All for One was heavily equipped with fresh sounds and positive (yet separatist) messages.

7. Mecca and the Soul Brother – Pete Rock & CL Smooth (1992)

As a groundbreaking achievement, this album was inwardly competitive in that each jazz-fused rhythm, each funky horn riff, each haughty metaphor seemingly outdueled the last, Instating the messages presented by Brand Nubian, Mecca became an essential musical shrine in the fortification of positivity.

6. The Chronic – Dr. Dre (1992)

Reinventing an entire coastal genre became the task at hand for Dre in the post-N.W.A. period. Needless to say, The Chronic took us to new heights and literally redefined "gangsta rap."

5. The Infamous – Mobb Deep (1994)

As 19-year-old adolescents, Queensbridge duo Havoc and Prodigy unscrolled their street sagas with the confidence and hotness of BDP's Criminal Minded. Concurrently, M.O.B.B. sculpted a deeply personal album around revolutionary, next era ruggedness. Their lightly synthesized, bass-blustering beats coated each track with a sombering yet refreshing flavor.

4. Enter the Wu-Tang: 36 Chambers – Wu-Tang (1993)

Before this album dropped, hip-hop had become a stagnant pool of repetition. Among its countless achievements, 36 Chambers broke the conventional grounds of studio-realized music. With RZA's dust-crackling samples, wintry Karate flick antics and haunting orchestrations, he literally resuscitated the community of rap with innovation. Like the radiant Batman symbol shinning high in the misty midnight horizon, the wings of Wu-Tang's 'W' emblemized a salvation. Resonating with an all-star arsenal of emcees, the Shaolin Clan constructed an imperial empire (primarily without the help of radio and television) and began an undisputable reign over hip-hop.

3. Ruhloone Mind State – De La Soul (1993)

"It might blow up but it won't go 'pop.' Although the credited excellence should properly reside upon the shoulders of its producer, Prince Paul, De La rendered an unequivocal lyrical and musical masterpiece. In essence, Mind State is the antithesis to both pop music and passive atmospheric sound, not because of its counter-commercial vulgarity or boisterous clamor, but because of its organized, melodic chaos. Each moment throughout its long play is packed with animation and energy, creating a rare jambalaya that is fully engrossing yet constantly aware of its sonic surroundings.

2. Low End Theory – A Tribe Called Quest (1991)

With this extraordinary, archetypal opus, Tribe opened the doors to whole new range of styles in production and rhyme. The filtered basslines, the concepts of social and sexual unification, the recollections of a jazz epoch fading into a hip-hop youth hood, the mic passing, verse exchanging fluidity, the polyphonic vibrations, the poetic abstractions... each secular element invented a nuance, a musical terrain adventured by Q-Tip and Phife. Simply, the contributions initiated by this album will be measured well into the next decade.

1. Illmatic – Nas (1994)

Illmatic is a complete classic in every sense of the word. What Nasir Jones accomplished cannot be measured as critical musicology or poetry. Each rhyme, rather each syllable, fits together with the intricacies of masterful, gig-saw craftsmanship. Endowed by his ingenious insights and horrific realisms, Nas stationed himself behind the windows of obdurate, street-lit apartments and gracefully scripted the everyday experiences of his concrete milieu. His voracious appetite as an emcee and writer was served with every verse, spraying a forceful verbal faucet on each beat, meticulously engineered by hip-hop's finest producers. And unlike any other album in the genre of rap music, the second coming of Illmatic is purely an impossibility.

Genufelecting, there are several glaring absences. Where is Gang Starr or the Roots? How could Raekwon's Only Built for Cuban Linx or Black Sheep's Wolf in Sheep's Clothing not make the cut? Who could leave out Biggie's Ready to Die or Jay-Z's Reasonable Doubt? Why is there no representation post-1996? Again, these "lists" are ridden with ambiguity and equally balance bona fide quality and personal nostalgia. So, for the subsequent categories and picks, I have selected hip-hop forms and which elude proper recognition. (Please note, the "singles" list does not include any songs that come from the "albums" list.)

5 Singles of the Decade

5. "Do What Ya Feel" – Redman feat. Method Man
4. "Shadowboxing" – Genius feat. Method Man
3. "Take It Personal" – Gangstarr
2. "'93 Till Infinity" – Souls of Mischief
1. "Passing Me By" – Pharcyde

5 Mix-Tapes of the Decade

5. Volume 1 & 2 – World Famous Beat Junkies
4. Summer Jam 1994 – Doo Wop
3. Reggae # 11 "Champion Sound" – DJ Camillo
2. Tape 50 (Freestyles) – Tony Touch
1. Hip-Hop History 101 – Pimp Gear

5 Hip-Hop Eclectic/Ambient Albums

5. Mavinquay – Tricky
4. Hello Nasty – Beastie Boys
3. Ki-Oku – DJ Krush w/ Toshinori Kondo
2. Mad Blunted Jazz – DJ Cam
1. Entroducing... – DJ Shadow

Well, that raps up the 1990's. Hopefully this was merely a stepping-stone for even brighter, subsequent ten years. Watch out now! Stay tuned...

Actors to present Equus

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

Just when you thought the semester was over and the University couldn't possibly provide another opportunity to challenge your artistic perception, the A Casa Actors' Theatre arrives with a wonderfully thought-provoking production. This weekend in the Curtain Theatre they're presenting Peter Shaffer's Equus, directed by University of Massachusetts student Tim Matos.

The play follows the work of a psychologist, Martin Dysart. His latest patient, a unique young man named Alan Strange, has a rather mixed-up relationship with horses. He was sent to Dysart after blinding five of them with a metal spike. In trying to dissect the boy's motivation for such a brutal act, the doctor becomes almost obsessed with Alan. He finds himself envious of the boy's ability to act on instinct, and entranced by his odd neglect of social expectations. The result of these circumstances is a deeply psychological observation about human interactions, questioning the delicate balance of our natural impulses and practiced morality.

Equus urges us to question ourselves, and that's the best any good piece of art can do. If that isn't enough to get you interested, the production also features full male and female nudity. For something to think about instead of finals week, be sure to stop by the Fine Arts Center this weekend. You'll never look at a horse the same way again. Performances begin this evening at 8 p.m. and will run every night through Saturday at the same time. There is an additional matinee on Saturday afternoon at 2 p.m. Tickets should be reserved by calling the Fine Arts box office at 545-2511.

■ rock

continued from page 5

eight million copies. In all likelihood, had they continued down the same musical avenue, they would have become a musical artifact, a caricature of themselves and totally unable to retain the public's interest. Instead, they completely re-invented themselves by embracing the emerging ideas of electronica and incorporating them into their already brilliant style. The result was Achtung Baby, a stunning collection of songs of unparalleled stylistic consistency and lyrical beauty. Adam Clayton's rock-solid bass lines mix with Edge's enigmatic guitar playing and Bono's powerful vocals, giving life to "One," "Mysterious Ways," "So Cruel," and 11 other pop music masterpieces.

3. Automatic for the People – REM

The southern-folk-rock opus of the band that helped to invent alternative rock and roll. The songs on Automatic demonstrate REM's gift for brilliant instrumentation, blending guitars, organs, strings, accordions and pianos together with Michael Stipe's free-associative lyrics, creating one of the most consistently mesmerizing albums I've heard. Each of the songs is completely unique and wonderful in its own right, but the subtle atmosphere of spiritual weakness and longing that emerges from the entire record is nothing short of sublime. The final track, "Find the River," is perhaps the most softly uplifting song I've encountered. No one should be without this album.

4. In Utero – Nirvana

Even now, I don't think the full significance of this band, not only to rock music but to modern culture in general, has revealed itself. Nirvana's music is artistic honesty in its purest form: brutal, even ugly, at times, but undeniably powerful. Grunge music is predicated on the idea that emotion should be unfiltered, unencumbered by learned social inhibitions, and songs like "All Apologies" and "Rape Me" are perfect examples of that idea.

5. Vs. – Pearl Jam

If Nirvana personified the spirit of Seattle grunge music, Pearl Jam refined that spirit with amazing instrumental talent, tighter vocals and a more focused, narrative approach to lyrics. Ten, their explosive debut album, gave the world 11 songs of detonating guitars and festering teenage angst that swept high schools like wildfire. Their sophomore effort, Vs., kept everything amazing about their first record, while demonstrating the degree to which they had matured, lyrically and musically, in such a short time. Eddie Veder's talents as a lyricist and vocalist are astounding, and permanently shaped our perceptions of what a rock front man should be (just look at Creed's Scott Stapp as an example of someone who desperately wishes he were Eddie). Simply put, this is great rock and roll: loud, visceral and emotionally charged.

6. Siamese Dream – The Smashing Pumpkins

The Smashing Pumpkins, under the leadership of Billy Corgan, managed to take the energy of the grunge movement and transform it into a meticulously chiseled masterpiece of layered guitars and liquid musical textures. The complexity of Corgan's guitar work, combined with the poetic angst of his lyrics and the band's saturated, wall-of-sound style propelled them forward as a leader of alternative rock. Jimmy Chamberlain's phenomenal talent as a drummer completed the Pumpkins' mastery of combining instrumental precision with relentless, painful emotional expression.

7. Odelay – Beck

It's not rock, it's not folk, it's not hip-hop, and it's not electronica. It's Beck, and it's great. "Loser" got the world's attention, but Odelay proved that Beck had an understanding and vision of where music could be taken that was infectious, fascinating and completely unique. His songs betray an appreciation for the naked, honest song writing of folk and country, the textural potential of hip-hop and techno, and the over-the-top energy of rock. At the same time, however, his songs defy categorization and must be closely listened to before their complexity and intelligence becomes completely apparent. It may not be the most accessible music, but it's a great indication of where music can be taken, and of how much unexplored territory still exists.

8. Crash – Dave Matthews Band

It's like a breath of happy, hippie air in an industry choking on its own cliched anger. Dave Matthews is easily one of the most inventive guitarists in mainstream music, and the largely acoustic approach he and his bandmates take flies in the face of most current pop music trends. Under the Table and Dreaming was an incredible major label debut, but Crash represents the band's finest moments of song writing, jamming and textural complexity. The album is thicker and more turbulent than its predecessor, its lineup more balanced; the moodiness of "Two Step" and "#41" help to emphasize the hedonistic, happy feet tones of "Tripping Billies" and "So Much to Say."

9. Mezzanine – Massive Attack

If it were possible to translate moods directly into music, this album would be the ultimate translation of manic delirium and pensive depression. Mezzanine is electronica at its finest, a haunting, subtle album that worms its way into your mind and refuses to leave. It's like a Hitchcock movie for your ears.

10. I can't bring myself to leave any of the following albums off the list, so I present them here as all being tied for 10th place:

Dookie – Green Day. A fun album, full of fun songs with fun lyrics. Blink 182 wishes they were this cool.

Tiny Music... – Stone Temple Pilots. STP strays from their grunge roots to explore quirky, gritty and thoroughly amazing alt-rock.

Whatever and Ever Amen – Ben Folds Five. Two words: piano rock. These guys are innovative, extremely talented and Ben Folds personifies the charming poet-nerd.

Grace – Jeff Buckley. A musical genius whose tragic death left us with only one complete studio album, and a collection of demos and unfinished pieces. This is truly beautiful music.

Pet Sounds (re-release) – The Beach Boys. This is a wonderful reissuing of The Beach Boys' most intricate and mature album, remastered and with added bonus tracks.

Blind Melon – Blind Melon. Yeah, yeah, the Bee Girl. Forget the Bee Girl. This CD is full of raw, scratchy guitars and Shannon Hoon's desperately honest vocals. Please, check this album out.

UMASS
Student Speaker Undergraduate Commencement
are invited to nominate a graduating undergraduate student for the position of Undergraduate Commencement Speaker
Who is Eligible? Graduating Amherst Campus senior (Class of 2000). Subject Matter: Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests. It should address your impressions and experience(s) both academic and extracurricular. Format: Submit approximately three word processed/typewritten pages, double spaced, or the equivalent of three to five minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered. Selection Process: A non-voting staff person will delete author's names after which the committee of students (*majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Three to five finalists will be invited to read/recite before the Commencement Committee, after which the speaker will be selected. Deadline: Wednesday, February 9, 2000, 4:30pm. Submit Proposals To: Paula R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 308 Whitmore (545-3441)

PROJECT SAVE
STUDENTS AGAINST VIOLENCE EVERYWHERE
UPC
DECEMBER 9 1999
12:00 PM - 12:00 AM
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
ALL PROCEEDS BENEFIT THE EVERY WOMENS CENTER
Donations are excepted. Come help us stand against assault and rape.
With performances by:
LOCAL AND NATIONAL ARTIST
A DONATION OF $3.00 WILL BE APPRECIATED
PHONE: 545-2892

Spirit Haus
SPECIALTY BEVERAGE STORE
Welcome Grad Students! 10%off regular Fine Wine Prices with I.D.
THIS WEEK'S SPECIALS!
GREAT GIFT FOR DAD: ABSOLUT GLENFIDDICH 750 ML $24.99 $12.99
CAROLAN'S IRISH CREAM 375 ML $8.99 GOLDSCHLAGER $7.29
BEAUJOLAIS NOUVEAU $6.99
HYLAND'S AMBER/PALE ALE 6PK $5.49 +dep
MAGIC HAT 6PK $5.99 +dep
GUINNESS 8PK PUB CANS $9.99 +dep
PETE'S WINTER BREW 12PK BTLS $9.99 +dep
WINTER HOOK 12PK BTLS $9.99 +dep
COME IN TO SEE MORE!
338 COLLEGE ST, RTE. 9
1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER
OPEN 9AM - 11PM
FULL REDEMPTION CENTER • (413) 253-5384

DELIVERY HOTLINE
549-0077
Newly Rennovated Sushi Bar!
CHINESE &JAPANESE RESTAURANT
103 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 • 256-8924
NOW ACCEPTING OCMP!

Collegian ARTS

We're ready to knock the king right on his arse the second you turn your back.

NFL Week 14	Las Vegas Point Spread Note: Selections for entertainment purposes only	 Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief	 Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor	 Kathleen Ralls Women's Affairs Editor	 Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor	 Adam White Sports Associate
Last Week (Overall)		9-5 (80-89)	9-5 (87-82)	6-8 (67-102)	7-7 (74-95)	7-7 (79-90)
Oakland @ Tennessee	Tennessee by 3	Tennessee	Oakland	Tennessee	Tennessee	Tennessee
New England @ Indianapolis	Indianapolis by 7	New England	Indianapolis	New England	New England	Indianapolis
Atlanta @ San Francisco	Atlanta by 3	Atlanta	Atlanta	Atlanta	Atlanta	San Francisco
N.Y Giants @ Buffalo	Buffalo by 8	N.Y. Giants	N.Y. Giants	Buffalo	N.Y. Giants	Buffalo
Philadelphia @ Dallas	Dallas by 9	Dallas	Dallas	Philadelphia	Philadelphia	Philadelphia
Carolina @ Green Bay	Green Bay by 8	Carolina	Carolina	Carolina	Green Bay	Green Bay
Minnesota @ Kansas City	Kansas City by 1	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota	Minnesota
Miami @ N.Y. Jets	Miami by 3	N.Y. Jets	Miami	N.Y. Jets	Miami	Miami
Baltimore @ Pittsburgh	Pittsburgh by 1 1/2	Pittsburgh	Baltimore	Pittsburgh	Baltimore	Pittsburgh
St. Louis @ New Orleans	St. Louis by 10 1/2	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis
San Diego @ Seattle	Seattle by 9 1/2	San Diego	San Diego	San Diego	Seattle	Seattle
Detroit @ Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay by 4	Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay
Arizona @ Washington	Washington by 5 1/2	Arizona	Washington	Washington	Arizona	Arizona
Denver @ Jacksonville	Jacksonville by 9	Denver	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville

CORRECTION

In last weekend's men's swimming and diving meet between Massachusetts and Syracuse University, the Orangemen were allowed to compete in more events than the undermanned Minutemen, thus giving SU an advantage that accounts for much of the final margin of victory. The Daily Collegian regrets the error.

Collegian Sports...?

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark it!

安城中國餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
LAST DAY OF CLASSES BASH
AT THE MONKEY BAR ON MONDAY
Featuring Free Prizes and DJ Fooz spinning all the jams
WEDNESDAY - PROMO NIGHT WITH DJ FOOZ. FREE PRIZES!!
THURSDAY - HOUSE MUSIC WITH DJ FOOZ
FRIDAY - HOUSE, HIP-HOP & TOP 40 WITH DJ FOOZ
SATURDAY - HOUSE, HIP-HOP & TOP 40 WITH DJ CREME
63 N. PLEASANT ST. 259-1600

Council Travel
Student Travel from A to Z
On the journey from A to Z, A is as important as Z -Buddhist saying
A To Z
44 Main St.
Amherst MA
413-256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Don't Miss This TIM BURTON Film
Fri. at 7:00 Only - SAT & SUN at 7:00 - 9:15
STUDENTS - 1.00 Discount GIANT Screen-Stereo
ROLLING STONE
Sleepy Hollow
Check us out on the World Wide Web
http://www.angelfire.com/biz2/academyofmusic/
ACADEMY MUSIC Theatre NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS
Springfield: 413-731-6910
Worcester: 508-366-8847
Boston: 617-484-1788
North of Boston: 978-777-2253
South of Boston: 508-821-5591
Plymouth: 508-833-1145
Route 3 South: 781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast: 603-926-9813
Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9
Equal Opportunity Employer

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Art of Living: A world renowned workshop based on breath- yoga meditation and kriya in Amherst. Un-recognized for stress elimination and holistic healing. Durgesh 549-5551. Starts Friday 10 December 6:30pm.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is playing against MIT Saturday at 1pm at the Mullins Ice Rink. Free admission. Women's Ice Hockey is fun to watch!!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom luxury apartment available January 1, 2000. Please call 413-253-7377 for more information.

Take over my lease! Large 2Bdrm, Cheap! Call 259-9183 on bus route

AUTO FOR SALE

1997 VW Jetta 43K, Sunroof/Moonroof, 6 CD changer, alloy wheels, new tires; brakes;met. blue. Excellent condition $13,500. 546-3989

1989 Toyota Corolla GTS 50,000 miles white 5spd moving $3200 Klay 397-8951

Toyota Camry '91 automatic, sunroof, alarm, top condition $4,300 549-0242

92 VW Golf 50k auto/air $5000/bo 256-4177

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

AUTO FOR SALE

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Powerbook 1400 w/ethernet card + modem $800 firm. Sarah 5-3704

Hewlett Packard 15" Monitor .28 Dot pich maximum resolution 1024 x 748 $75.00 413-256-0583

Dell Pentium2 Laptop 233mHz 64MBRAM 3.2 Hard Mod CD/Floppy 56k Modem + more $1500 negotiable call will 253-8074

Do you know Autocad and Microstation? If you do call Scott Yarosh at (413) 546-4895 Will pay up to $3000 per job that has to be done.

EMPLOYMENT

Childcare needed two afternoons a week (Mon & Wed) for 6 and 9 year old girls. starting 1/10/00. No TV. Active outdoor oriented person perferred. Some lite housekeeping. References required. Car perferred. 549-6158.

Now Hiring Mullins Center part-time staff events and operations department apply 2nd floor Mullins Center

ONE SUMMER, A LIFETIME EXPERIENCE. I could spend the summer learning someone else's bussiness, or I could be running my own. For more information visit our website and register to win a Palm Pilot www.college-proedge.com or call 888-277-7962.

EMPLOYMENT

Get Paid To Surf the web. I get paid to surf the web, now you can too, It's absolutely free. For more details e-mail me at pub2000@yahoo.com

WINTER BREAK FLEXIBLE PART-TIME

Day, Evening and weekend hours available Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, Ma has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for winter break. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent readings/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increase to $8.00, health dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact:

Paul R. Bebo
Recruiting
Cooradinator
1-800-792-4514

Fraternities * Sororities * Clubs * Student Groups

Student organizations earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 797-5743, x. 301, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

Bartenders make $100-$300 per night no experience necessary call 1-800-981-8168 ext. 205

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Work for a College Internet Company

While Still In School!

Leverage your Campus Knowledge to get paid well as a Campus Marketing Manager.

Skills needed
- Outgoing & Motivated
- Leadership
- Organized & Resourceful
- Project management skills
- Familiarity with campus

Experience
- Sophomore or higher
- Live on or near campus
- Campus Involvement
- Active on Internet

Responsibilities
- Help Develop Marketing Plan
- Interview & Hire Support Staff
- Facilitate Campus Relations
- Local Account Management
- Manage Marketing Budget
- Execute Local Campaigns
- Help Conduct Campus Research

Open Interviews will be held on or near your campus the week of Dec. 6th. Go to allstudents.com for exact time, date, & location info.

E-mail resume to jobs@allstudents.com for more information 1-888-640-8810 ext.212

Holiday Jobs For The Environment! $300-400/week work with the Sierra Club over the winter break and beyond! Call Jesse 256-6434

Movers Part time positions available for winter intersession and spring semester. Starting pay $8.00 per hour. Located close to UMASS. Call 584-4746

EMPLOYMENT

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

FOR SALE

Loveseats (5), Coffee tables (8). Free delivery. 586-2221.

All New Brass Bed Queen Size orthapedic mattress/box. Still in plastic. Cost $ 1100. sell $365 can deliver. (413) 781-0242.

All New Brass Bed King size orthapedic Mattress/box. Still in plastic. Cost $1500. Sell $525 (413) 781-0237.

SNOWBOARD 97 M*I*A 153 Good condition Capped Edges, Dr Pro Model $300

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition triniton. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

MISCELLANEOUS

Internet Based business offering an unique tridigital destination call or e-mail 413-263-6762 or gmm0819@aol.com

ROOM FOR RENT

Furnished Room for rent. Private entrance. $285 utilities enclouded. 4 miles from UMASS. Needs transportation. 253-3670.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment in Hadley. $278/month and utilities. On bus route. Nice yard. Call Alexa. 582-1821.

1 Bedroom Avail. for 1-2 people. Cheap. Free gym. On bus route Jan/Feb - May 31st. 253-2518

Room Available in two bedroom apt in house. Female preferred. On bus route call 549-8969

LG 1 Bedroom Apt. Available 1/1/2000 perfect for 1 or 2 Call 549-4926

1 or 2 Rooms available in 4 bedroom house. Right next to Campus. Washer and dryer. Available Jan/Feb. $305/Mo. ONLY call Prav or Deepa 549-1543.

January-August lease in Leverett. $325/mo. utilities, washer and dryer included. Call Cemil 549-1643

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 or 2 People Wanted for large bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment in Puffton. Next to bus stop and laundry. Last months rent paid utitlities included. Available start of spring semester. Call 548-6861.

Female Roommate Wanted 1 room in a 2 bedroom apartment. Cheap, clean on bus route. Call Jen, Noelle or Katie 253-0538.

Share Huge Room. Jan-Aug awesome house + roommates. $250 month cheap utilities on bus route 586-9552 Julia, Pam, Nate

ROOM FOR RENT

Great House Needs!! 1 or 2 Roommates Wanted 2 share one huge room in 1, great house. Jan/Feb - June bus stops across street, backyard, super, fun-loving, remarkable roommates. Call 549-6886

One Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apartment available spring semester on North Pleasant St. $387/month includes heat female call 253-6726

Two roomates wanted to share master bedroom in three bedroom apartment in Puffton. Private bath and walk-in closet $285+ each month call Pat/Steve 549-9310.

1 Roommate Wanted 1 minute to bus busses every 5min CHEAP rent 549-9254

Roommate Wanted in 2bedroom Brandywine Apt. utilities included $215/month on bus route call Eric, Greg 549-1029

SERVICES

Personal Holiday Candygrams only $7.00! Delivery anywhere at UMass. Personal greeting with candy 253-6722

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

ROOM FOR RENT

#1 SPRINGBREAK Operator! Check our website for the best deals! www.vagabond-tours.com Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica & Florida Group organizers EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH...Call today! 800-700-0790

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummer-tours.com

WANTED

Be an internet star! Seeking off-campus students to host 24/7 live web cam in your home. Interested? Chect out www.masslive.com/ofcampuscam or call 584-2777 for more information

Seeking aspiring local bands to be featured in student film. Please send demo tape to UVC-TV19 216 Student Union c/o noise ASAP for more information call 545-1336

The Classifieds... 545-3500 Your Answer to everything!!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, DEC. 9

Community – Pride Alliance will present "In Memory of Brandon," an evening of transgender culture and information. The documentary entitled The Brandon Teena Story will be shown, and the evening will close with acoustic guitar duo "Late Bloomers." The event takes place in Thompson 104 at 7 p.m.

Meeting – The Poetry Society will have its weekly meeting at 8 p.m. in rooms 805-809 of the Campus Center.

FRIDAY, DEC. 10

Service – There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. A free Shabbat dinner will follow.

SATURDAY, DEC. 11

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable, UMass' improvisational troupe, will perform its improvisational show at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Concert – There will be a concert entitled "English Voices," offering works from the Middle Ages through the early Baroque Era at 8 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall at Smith College.

SUNDAY, DEC. 12

Procession – The Festive Advent Procession will begin at Helen Hills Hills Chapel at 7 p.m. and will proceed to St. John's, St. Mary's, Edwards, and the First Churches. A reception will follow.

Reading – Local writers Roget Lockard and Penny Quiggins will read from their works at 4 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College.

NOTICES

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space will hold an exhibit entitled "Tribal Relationships" by Angela Temple until Dec. 10. Another exhibit, "Holding the Ocean" by Shannon Scilla will also be held until Dec. 10.

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Ibuot/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Community – The library hours for Dec. 6 through Dec. 19 will be from 7 a.m.-2 a.m. Study space is available, but there will be no staffed services from 7-8 a.m. and midnight-2 a.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Information – The last information sessions this semester for the domestic exchange program will be held Tuesdays and Wednesdays until Dec. 15 and also by appointment. They will be in 614 Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Call 545-5351 for more information. The priority deadline for applications is Dec. 15, and the final deadline is March 1.

Support – Al-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

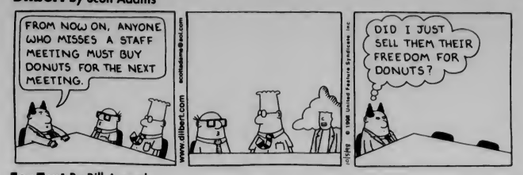
*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs



HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	TBS
9	Weather Channel	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN	Cartoon Network
14	International	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 9, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Andre Rieu: The Christmas I Love			Are You Being Served? Marathon				This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Billy Graham (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	48 Hours "Miracles" (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Story of Santa Claus (R)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	48 Hours "Miracles" (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Totally Out of Control – Nature	20/20 Downtown		News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Popular "Fall on Knees"		Charmed "P3 H2O" (In Stereo)	News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "The Storm" (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	8	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Rest TV	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				News	Change-Heart	Caroline
WVIT	9	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Friends (R)	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "The Storm" (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Guinness World Records		Action	Action	News	Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	22	News	NBC News	Whee-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "The Storm" (R)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Great Performances "Burn the Floor" (In Stereo)					Great Performances "Burn the Floor" (R) (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Totally Out of Control – Nature		20/20 Downtown	News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				Star Trek, Voyager (In Stereo)	Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	72		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder		★★★ "Thunderball" (1965, Adventure) Sean Connery.
A&E	43		Simon & Simon "Pirate's Key"		Law & Order		Biography: Reys Philbin		Investigative Reports (R)		Inside Story: Dangerous Seas	Law & Order "Self-Defense"
CNN	10	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline
COM	53	39	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "She's the One" (1996, Comedy) Jennifer Aniston.				★★★ "Thunderball" (1965, Adventure)	Stein's Money
DISC	42		Your New House		Ultimate Guide: Whales (R)		On the Inside: U.S. Customs		Sleep Files-Sickness		Into the Unknown (R)	On the Inside: U.S. Customs
ESPN	51		3,000 College Football Awards		Sportscenter	NFL 2Night	NFL Football Oakland Raiders at Tennessee Titans (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	49		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope "Divided Loyalty"		"A Holiday to Remember" (1995, Drama) Connie Sellecca.			Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV	33		100 Greatest Videos		100 Greatest Videos		I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	Biorhythm (R)	Head Trip (R)	Celebrity	Tom Green	Spankin' Live Music, Metallica
NICK	63		All That	Caleog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Rugrats	Sheeler	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy
SCIFI	45		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		★★ "The Beast" (1996, Horror) William Petersen, Karen Sillas				★★ "The Beast" (1996, Horror) William Petersen, Karen Sillas			★★ "The Beast" (1996)
TLC	72	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Fire" (R)		Nature's Fury (R)		Mayday: Dangerous		Mayday: The Fatal Flaw (R)	Nature's Fury (R)
TNT	62		Due South "The Duel"		ER "A Shift in the Night"		★★½ "Overboard" (1987, Comedy) Goldie Hawn, Kurt Russell					"A Christmas Carol" (1999) Patrick Stewart.
USA	47		Baywatch (In Stereo)		JAG "Soul Searching"		Walker, Texas Ranger "Anger"		★★★ "Patriot Games" (1992, Suspense) Harrison Ford, Anne Archer. (In Stereo)			Walker, Texas Ranger
HBO	59		5:45) ★★ "Fairy Tale: A True Story" (1997) "PG"		Stuart Little		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		★★ "The Replacement Killers" (1998)		Chris Rock	Sex Bytes	Sex Bytes
MAX	60		★★ "Unlaw Expectations" (1998, Drama) Ethan Hawke.				★★★ "Sixteen" (1989) Warren Beatty.		★½ "Shadow of Doubt" (1998, Suspense) Melanie Griffith.			★½ "Femalien 2"
SHOW	55		4:30)		★★★ "The Borrowers" (1998) John Goodman.		★★ "Apt Pupil" (1998, Drama) Ian McKellen. (In Stereo)					★½ "Ringmaster" (1998) Jerry Springer.	Linc's

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Joe Banani By J.D. Schneider

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Doonesbury By Gary Trudeau

Doonesbury By Gary Trudeau

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Treat yourself to something special today that you've been longing for over the past few days or weeks. Don't hold back!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You don't want to do anything casually today, or skim over the surface of things. You're in the mood for some in-depth exploration.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may find yourself regretting a missed opportunity from weeks, months, or years ago today. A word to the wise: get over it!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – Your diligent, organized approach will surely pay off today, and you may find out precisely what you want to find out – sooner or later.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – A collaboration can result in the timely completion of a difficult, but essential, project. Feel free to show your gratitude openly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – Even a major disagreement can result in ultimate good for those involved today, particularly if you are willing to make an extra effort to look good.

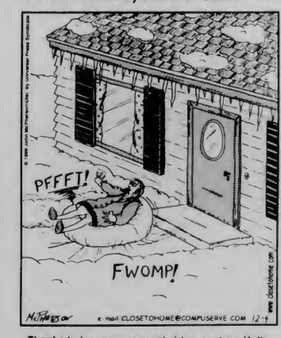
GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – It is easy to overload your schedule at this time and strive for too much at once. Today, however, a low-key approach is certainly favored.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Much that you have assumed to be out of your control at this time is actually well within your own field of influence.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Take care to deal with accusations or misjudgments with a fair and open mind today. Honest talk can avoid any lasting conflicts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Take the time to reach those certain family members with whom you haven't spoken in some time. There is some news you need to catch up on today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You can soar above your own mundane concerns today merely by indulging in a flight of fancy at the right time. Explore what lies hidden within.



SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – All the care and sensitivity you've been showing toward a certain person will be fully realized today. You'll feel appreciated.

Quote of the Day

"Don't you know there ain't no devil, just God when he's drunk..."

-Tom Waits

Close to Home By John McPherson

Thanks to her new personal airbag system, Holly was no longer afraid to venture out on icy mornings.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Breakfast

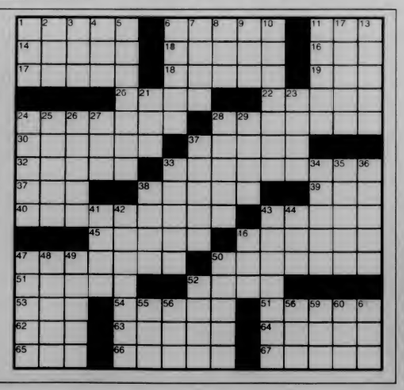
Scrambled Eggs
Texas French Toast
O'Brien Potatoes
Whole Wheat Cereal
Coke and Sprite

Lunch

Worcester Breakfast Sandwich (but...for lunch)
Chicken Tetrazzini
Spanikopita
Garden Burger (F only)
Sweet & Sour Tofu (B&W only)

Dinner

Wassail
Prime Rib
Shrimp Scampi
Bean Nut Scampi
Braised Potatoes
Green Bean Almondine
Glazed Baby Carrots
German Chocolate Torte



ACROSS
1 Leavening agent
6 Man-eating fish
11 Regulation
14 Stan's co-star
15 Major artery
16 St.
17 Shadow
18 Subway-nder's need
19 Female deer
20 Musical symbol
22 Twists
24 Blotto
28 Opposed
30 Dance introduced in 1650
31 Porcine utterance
32 Bakers' needs
33 Repair places
37 New Zealand parrot
38 Goods
39 Spigot
40 Inform
43 Up and about
45 Plunders
46 Stick to 47 Creeks
50 Varying
51 Smallest amount
52 — over: study
53 Desire
54 Outdo
57 Dynamite inventor
62 UK part
63 Call forth
64 Swap
65 Deli bread
66 — with: supported
67 Authority

DOWN
1 "— Make Loving Fun"
2 Shade tree
3 Priest's vestment
4 Knight's title
5 Instructs
6 Replete
7 Horse foot
8 Noah's boat
9 Map abbr
10 Jayhawkers
11 Weighed down
12 Swears
13 Tiniest
21 Allow to
23 — and kin
24 Have a Mariboro
25 Invigorate
26 Actor Ryan —
27 Type of block or deck
28 Shakespeare's forest
29 Fellows
31 Skirt parts
33 Stuffing pieces
34 Riverbank dweller
35 Twosomes
36 Shopping —
38 "For — the Bell Tolls"
41 Seine sights
42 Some beards
43 Pre-Christmas seasons
44 The lady
46 Breathe it!
47 Crafter
48 — -bopper
49 Gamut
50 Allotted
52 Snub-nosed dog
55 Caesar's 16
56 Marine fish
58 Mouths, in biology
59 Biscay, for one
60 Mss. workers
61 Name for a lion

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

SPAS ROVED AIEE
LOFT OZONE IDEA
AURA BALDEAGLES
BROCHURE SEEDY
CASK FELL
BASALT MILLE APE
ADDITIONPASSE BEW
ALLOVERTHEPLACE
EAT AMITY AGAR
DTS CINE HAVENS
PART LISA
ETHAN MONITORS
SHATTERING ORBIE
PONE VERGE ROLL
YUKS ABYSS YELL

12-9-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Ken McDonald
Photo Technition	Pam FitzPatrick
Copy Editor	Melissa Hammel
Production Supervisor	Lisa Metcalf
Production Staff	Brian McDermott, Dan McGuiness-Rossi

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Thursday, December 9, 1999

UM hockey team heads west to play Notre Dame

Minutemen pucksters prepare for a weekend series against Fighting Irish

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Two hockey teams that bear a striking resemblance will face-off for a pair of games this weekend in South Bend, IN. The pucksters from Massachusetts are set to hattle the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame in a matchup between teams from Hockey East and the Central Collegiate Hockey Association.

This weekend the Minutemen [3-7-2] open up a span of five consecutive non-conference games. That may be a blessing in disguise for UMass, who is 3-1-1 outside of Hockey East this season. Inside the league the Maroon and White are 0-6-1.

While the play of goaltender will be one of the defensive keys for the Massachusetts hockey team.

DAN SANTELLA- COLLEGIAN

However, if the Fighting Irish only take UMass' record into account, then it could be a long weekend for the hosts. The Minutemen have lost five games by one goal and have been playing some of their best hockey of the year as of late. In its most recent outing on Saturday night against No. 10 Boston University, UMass rallied back from a 3-1 deficit to tie the game before falling 4-3 in overtime.

"I don't think that we can play any better than that. We did everything but get the last goal," said UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen following the contest. "It would have been nice to walk away with at least one point from BU. I have to give our guys credit though. We were short three forwards, but Mike Johnson and the rest of the guys did a great job."

UMass should have two of those forwards back tonight. Junior winger Nick Stephens and senior captain Nathan Sell both missed time last weekend because of back injuries, but should be in the lineup tomorrow night. On the other hand, sophomore winger Martin Miljko, who is tied for the team lead in goals with five, will not make the trip to South Bend this weekend because of a knee injury.

Like the Minutemen, Notre Dame was also picked to finish in the middle of the pack in its league. However, the Fighting Irish stumbled out of the blocks to a 1-5 start and are still trying to climb back to the .500 mark. The Blue and Gold have gone 5-3-2 in their last 10 games, including a win over nationally ranked Michigan State last weekend.

"I think that they expected to be playing better, but they had a big win over Michigan State last weekend," Mallen said. "They are a very good team at home [4-2-1], so that will be a challenge for us."

"If there's one thing, it seems like we've been on the road a lot. We've played good teams like New Hampshire, BU and Northeastern at their building already," added Mallen. "These are going to be two really tough road games for us."

Top offensive threats for the Minutemen include senior alternate captain Jeff Blanchard and junior alternate captain Jeff Turner. Both players are tied for the team lead with 15 points, while Turner is riding a six-game point streak.

Mallen will either look to junior Markus Helanen or sophomore Mike Johnson between the pipes. Both netminders played well in defeat to BU last weekend. Thus far, Helanen is 3-5-1 with a 3.17 goals against average, while Johnson is 0-2-1 with a 2.90 GAA.

Notre Dame [6-8-2, 4-6-2 in CCHA] features a diverse offensive attack. Eight players on the club have at least seven points, led by All-America candidate Ben Simon and Joe Dusabek [nine points each]. Simon was tabbed the pre-season CCHA Player of the Year by The Hockey News. For his career, Simon has impressive credentials of 35 goals and 72 assists.

Freshman goaltender Tony Zasowski has emerged as the top netminder for the Fighting Irish. In 11 games thus far, he has posted a 4-3-2 record. Back-up goalie Jeremiah Kimiento is 2-5 in seven games for Notre Dame.

The last time these two teams faced each other was back in the 1994-95 season at the Mullins Center. Each club won a game, and will now battle for the first time in five years.

"We got an invite out there based on the earlier series, and we saw it as a good opportunity for us. It would be easy for us to play ECAC teams based of the geography, but with these games and the trip to Minnesota later in the month, we get to play a few teams who we don't see too often," Mallen said. "We can see how much they have progressed since then and how far we've come."

Former NHL All-Star Dave Poulin coaches the Fighting Irish. The 1982 graduate of the South Bend school has helped to turn around the program at his alma mater since being hired midway through the decade. Last season Notre Dame went 19-14-5 and just missed out on an NCAA tournament berth.

Game time is set for 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday nights at Joyce Arena.

...the Minutemen will look to senior Jeff Blanchard to provide offensive punch against Notre Dame.

COURTESY HOCKEY EAST CONFERENCE

Cash reigns supreme in Canada; Ottawa may be heading south

Matt Despres on the NHL

Once upon a time, not all that long ago, a game called hockey thrived in Canada. Young boys played in the streets and on frozen ponds, growing up to be superstars and heroes to another generation of youngsters. Fans clamored to fill such hallowed buildings as the Montreal Forum and Maple Leaf Gardens. And a team from Montreal went on to become one of the most awe-stating dynasties in all of sports. Ever.

So what's happened to it all? Where has the game of hockey, once so deeply rooted in the Canadian culture, gone to? While America has seen baseball go through a rebirth, and we can now once again cling onto "our" game, Canada has lost its beloved pastime in the dark shadow of the all mighty dollar.

Last Thursday, Ottawa Senators owner Rod Bryden announced that he is looking to sell the team, a move which could lend them in the states. He pointed his finger at the Canadian government for a lack of commitment over establishing tax breaks that would financially benefit the team.

According to reports on ESPN.com, Bryden has approached three levels of the Canadian government, saying he needs help to compete with the U.S. teams, which pay lower taxes. Bryden said he is looking for between $2.47 million and $3.5 million a year from the federal government to ease the U.S. Canada dollar exchange rate.

In response to this request, and similar pleas from other owners, the Canadian government has come up with what it thinks is a solution to the problem – establishing sports lottery-licensing fees. This plan states that those provinces with an NHL club pay a licensing fee to the teams, in effect because they are being bet on in sports lotteries.

Okay, let me get this one straight.

The citizens of Alberta – a province which has two NHL teams (Edmonton and Calgary) – would have to pay money out of their own pockets to support the two teams, because they are franchises that are bet on? Have I missed something? Has Pete Rose given up on baseball and somehow gotten himself elected into the Canadian government?

For a brief moment, I can sympathize with the NHL teams here. Basically, through this deal, they are saying, "Hey, you guys are profiting off of us, now we want some if it back." If you're involved in an organization that's making money for other people, there's certainly nothing wrong with wanting a piece of the action. However, this isn't the way to go about things. The intentions are good, but the method is all wrong.

Betting is a sticky situation in the world of sports, and the idea of it somehow being connected to the welfare of a team doesn't sit well. No, it's not directly involved, but the fact that these folks will have to pony up some sort of cash because they live in the area of a sports enterprise that betters on profit is, for lack of a better word, shady. There are other ways to go about this, methods that steer clear of the betting world entirely.

The Canadian government could install a tax into the existing system that would have all citizens contribute financially to the teams. This method, while it would have its drawbacks, would at least stand more morally upright than the current proposition. Also, the financial burden would not lie squarely in the hands of those living in the vicinity of the team. Having the cost dispersed amongst the entire country would be a better deal for all involved parties. No one province would have to shoulder the responsibility of keeping a team afloat. I would like to believe that the Canadian people would support something like this, even if it was employed as a temporary fix.

If this course of action that they are planning to take for some reason hits a dead end, and they ignore my idea of a tax system, there's always Plan B. Harry Sinden. What, you ask, does Hardhall Harry have to do with any of this? It's easy. Sinden has, for years now, run the tightest ship in all of professional sports, notoriously underpaying his players.

Turn to NHL, page 9

Departure of Finley leaves Angels in the way outfield

By Tim Brown
Los Angeles Times

Chuck Finley, ace of the Angels for more than a decade and the organization's only link to its last playoff appearance, will pitch elsewhere next season.

A 9 p.m. (PST) Tuesday deadline passed without an offer from the Angels, according to agent Tim Shannon, leaving Finley to consider offers from Seattle, Cleveland or Boston.

A clause in Finley's expired contract forbade the Angels from offering salary arbitration, and therefore the Angels may not negotiate again with him until May 1. So, rather than having the Angels bid farewell with a ceremony that retired his number or inducted him into their hall of fame, Finley departed with the sound of a deadline closing, and with not so much as a draft pick to the Angels in compensation.

Shannon said Angel General Manager Bill Stoneman, barely six weeks on the job, "was very cordial and respectful to Chuck," but that, in the end, he offered "nothing that was close enough to get serious."

Said Stoneman: "This is a business decision. It's based on value, the way we value the player. It might seem tough from Chuck's point of view that we have placed a financial value on him that is lower than Tim Shannon is telling us other clubs have."

Asked Finley's reaction to leaving the Angels, Shannon said, "Over the last few months he could see it coming. He's been getting used to the idea. He's definitely ready to do this."

For all of his years and starts, Finley has not pitched in the post season since 1986. When he signs what probably will be his final contract, it will be with that in mind. And, Shannon said, it became part of the reason he decided against a 14th season in Anaheim.

"Winning is the majority of the reason," Shannon said. "I don't want to say the dollar figures don't matter, because they do. But he has this one chance to do the things he wants to do. It's not intended as a knock on the Angels. He just assessed the situation and in his opinion he chose the best chance he has to get to the postseason. That's who we're talking to."

Seattle appears to have made the most substantial offer, though Shannon said of the latest bid, "It's not good enough yet, I can tell you that. As far as the situation, that's one of the teams Chuck thinks highly of."

In a period of change that could become an overhaul, the Angels have said Finley's contract demands of three years and about $25 million were beyond their means. The Angels had previously decided not to sign him at a cut rate early in the season and not to deal him for younger talent at the trading deadline.

Without Finley, the Angels will have one 10-game winner returning – reliever Mark Petkovsek.

The rotation, as it stands, looks something like Ken Hill, Tim Belcher, Jarrod Washburn, Ramon Ortiz and Brian Cooper. Hill pitched 38 innings after the All-Star break, partly because of a sore elbow and partly because he was shoved into the bullpen. Belcher had surgery this week.

Finley leaves as the organization's all-time leader in wins (165), starts (379) and innings (2,675). His 2,151 strikeouts are second to Nolan Ryan's 2,416.

Outfielder Tim Salmon, part of the Angel organization since 1989, said it will be odd to return to a clubhouse that lacks the earthy and respected Finley. Stranger still, he said, would be to face him.

"People that want to write him off so easily, they're not the ones who have to go up there and hit off him," Salmon said. "The guy's a good pitcher."

Change seems to have paid dividends for Giants

By Neil Best
Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. – Jim Fassel's gentlemanly image is deserved, but remember: He is a football coach. And like most, he has a healthy ego and a stubborn streak.

That was what made Sunday's bombshell that quarterbacks coach Sean Payton now will call plays for the Giants such a shock. Reporters who cover the team regularly would not have been much more surprised had Fassel announced Payton will replace Kerry Collins at quarterback.

Playcalling is Fassel's baby. He noted he has been doing it since before many of his players were born. That was why no one expected him to give it up, even though some players and reporters had suggested he would benefit from a wider view of the game, and that Payton was the right man to replace him.

His willingess to do so spoke volumes to players and management about his leadership. Even if it hurt his reputation as an offensive whiz, it elevated his stature as a head coach.

"If you let your ego get in the way, it's because you have a strong ego and a very small, I think, self worth," he said.

Fassel's view of the Jets game was vastly different after he emerged from behind the oversized playcalling sheet that had become an object of ridicule. Now, he held a smaller card. He talked to the special-teams coach. He listened in on the defensive coaches' phones for the first time. He advised Payton, but told everyone on the sideline mostly to leave Payton alone.

At times, Fassel has shown little feel for the big picture, and he said giving up playcalling lets him think more clearly about game decisions. "It frees your mind to look at the game," he said.

Fassel made the move last week because he missed two days of game-planning while attending his mother's funeral and was generally out of sorts. It might not have happened this year otherwise, but Fassel said he always had expected to eventually hand over the reins.

So why Payton and not coordinator Jim Skipper? Fassel said Skipper primarily is responsible for deploying personnel, while Payton is better suited to call plays because he works with the quarterback all week and during the game.

Payton, 35, spent 1997 and '98 as the Philadelphia Eagles' quarterbacks coach. Fassel interviewed him in January upon the recommendation of defensive line coach Denny Marcin, who had worked with him at Illinois.

"I said, 'This is the best young coach I've ever been around,' and I've been around the block a little bit," said Marcin, a coach since 1974.

Payton first made an impression in the preseason opener on Aug. 13, when he filled in because Fassel was visiting his mother. The Giants led 17-0 after three possessions, just like Sunday. They went on to beat the Minnesota Vikings, 36-21.

Was Payton the difference in Sunday's rout of the Jets? "It comes down to executing," quarterback Kerry Collins said. "I think our execution was much better than it has been. I'm not sure how much (play calls) had an effect on what we did."

Payton agreed.

"We called the same plays we always call; the difference was we executed," he said Sunday. (He has refused a torrent of interview requests since Monday, citing game-planning for the Buffalo Bills' second-ranked defense.)

Still, Payton has more of a reckless streak than Fassel, and the players like it. The biggest eye-opener Sunday came with 3:57 left in the game. The Giants led by 13 and had a third-and-10 from their 20. Collins completed an 80-yard pass to Amani Toomer.

"I'm thinking we're going to run out the clock," running back Tiki Barber said. "We throw a bomb... Sean's a cocky guy. We need that."

Actually, it was supposed to be a simple out pattern, but Toomer made a sight adjustment and went deep. So, was it the play, or the player? It was a little of both, and that bodes well for the Giants.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CXVI Issue 61 — Friday, September 10, 1999

Commonwealth College completes first semester

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

After a semester on the University of Massachusetts campus, the Commonwealth College is receiving a positive response from the University administration and has plans in the works for the future, Kay Scanlan, University spokesperson, explained that one of the college's long-term plans is to increase the number of students in the college.

"We hope to eventually increase the number of students to between 2,400 and 2,500," Scanlan said.

An additional plan for the college is to find a permanent dean to act as head of the program. The national search is already underway, and is headed up by a committee in the faculty senate.

"The administration is very much behind the Commonwealth College," Scanlan said.

According to Scanlan, the college has positively added to the reputation of UMass, attracting exceptional high school students to the program and reenergized faculty enthusiasm for the program. Scanlan said that the University hopes to eliminate the existing honors program in about three years, so that all honors students will be a part of the Commonwealth College. As of now, both programs are in existence concurrently.

Admission to the college is based on academic achievement, test scores and an essay. Average first-year Commonwealth students rank in the top eight percent of their high school class, attain a 3.9 grade point average and score a 1329 on their SATs. Students transferring may be admitted to the college by invitation or by applying to the program during the first month of the entering semester, provided they have a 3.2 grade point average or higher. Students currently in the University may apply based on their current academic record.

Scanlan said that some of the benefits of the college include the honors computer laboratory located in Goodell, guidance from the Office of National Scholarship Advisement and the possibility of applying for Honors Research Fellowship to decrease the cost of thesis research. There are currently between 500 and 600 students in the Commonwealth College.

In addition to providing honors courses for students residing on campus, the college also provides distance-learning courses for students at other colleges. This allows students who do not attend UMass to take advantage of the courses available.

The Commonwealth College was established in June 1997 by the state Board of Higher Education.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Men at work

Workers fill in the ditch left after they installed the new call box near the campus pond.

CRC seeks signatures for marijuana petition

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The Cannabis Reform Coalition has not stopped its mission to have the question of legalizing marijuana on the town ballot, despite being turned down during a public hearing with the Amherst Select Board. The group is currently collecting signatures for a petition supporting a repeal of the prohibition of marijuana. The petition also urges the Amherst Police Department to deprioritize the enforcement of laws involving the possession of marijuana.

Members of the coalition said that although the Select Board was not supportive, the issue is still very important and will not simply go away. Last year, the coalition was 99 signatures shy of getting the petition on the ballot; the group did, however, register 1,300 people to vote. This year, by the tentative Feb. 14 deadline, the group needs to collect between 1,700 and 1,900 signatures in order for the town to consider their petition this spring.

The group's main way of accessing students is through petitioning in the residential dormitories, in which they go room to room asking for signatures and registering students to vote if they are not already. In addition, the coalition has arranged to have a table on the Campus Center Concourse where students can both register to vote and sign in favor of the issue.

The president of the coalition said that if the group is able to get the question on the ballot, it will make a positive statement in their favor. "It will be another step in the process of making it [marijuana] legalized," Vernon Coffey, a sophomore engineering major, said.

As explained by Coffey, the group feels legalization of marijuana is important because there "isn't any reason why it's restricted. The use of marijuana is not hurting anyone and it is an issue of personal liberty."

The campaign to enable the question to appear on the ballot extends further than the town of Amherst. Terry Franklin, the press spokesman for the Citizens for a Sensible Marijuana Policy said, "By getting this on the ballot for voters to decide, we are hoping it will pick up momentum and spread to other towns."

He went on to say, "There is going to be a statewide ballot on this in the November election, including all of Massachusetts, and what we are doing could help to build on that."

If the coalition is successful in receiving enough signatures, they will start a campaign to continue education of why they feel legalization is vital. Vernon quoted a 1998 statistic that stated there were 682,885 people arrested for marijuana offenses. "People are suffering," he said.

Five-college students rally for human rights

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Today at 11:30 a.m., the Students For A Free Tibet will join groups from Mount Holyoke, Smith, Hampshire and Amherst Colleges and other state groups in a march for human rights.

The march, organized by the S.F.A.F.T., will start on the Student Union Steps and head for the Amherst Common. At the end of the march, speakers will discuss various issues including global labor rights, and the United States prison system, including cases involving Mumia Abu Jamal, Kemba Smith and Leonard Peltier. Speakers will also discuss human rights violations in Tibet, East Timor, Iraq and other locations.

Matt Kozuch, the president of S.F.A.F.T. and the main organizer of the event said the planning for the march had been going on since the organization's last major event, a presentation on Nov. 9 by a guest lecturer and the showing of a video, both pertaining to Tibetan freedom in the Asian country now occupied by China.

"For today's event, there are going to be a great number of different speakers," Kozuch said. "Rick McDowell will be there speaking against problems in Iraq, while his wife will be speaking about the School of the Americas and prison systems. Simon Doolittle will speak for East Timor and Lisa Robinson from the women's studies department will speak for Kemba Smith."

Kozuch also said that speakers might also speak about Jamal and Peltier.

Kozuch said he is hoping that UMass will contribute at least 100 people to the rally, and he said that once in Amherst, he is hoping that between 200 and 300 individuals from the five colleges will be at the event.

To plan for the event, Kozuch had to go to the town of Amherst to get a permit for the gathering, as well as informing the Amherst Police Department.

"We also had to get PA systems so that everyone can hear what we're saying," Kozuch said.

Kozuch estimates that the march will take a half hour to get to Amherst from UMass, and after the speakers are finished in the Amherst Common, the S.F.A.F.T president said that there would be a march to Smith College.

"That's for the hardcore people on these issues, but we basically just want to get people from UMass to Amherst so that we can be represented and that our communits can hear what the speakers have to say," Kozuch said.

Amherst students do well on MCAS

By Bob Gardner
Collegian Correspondent

Amherst public school students, on average, did quite well on the latest Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System Test (MCAS), according to the Massachusetts Department of Education.

Overall, the district tied for 25th in the tenth grade grouping and 21st among eighth graders. The Pelham fourth grade group was among the highest in the state, tying for 8th statewide.

For Amherst eighth graders, and eighth graders across the state, this test is no academic exercise. Students are mandated by the Education Reform Act of 1993 to pass the tenth grade test in order to receive a high school diploma. The prospect of judging all students on the basis of one test has some educators, parents and students upset.

Kathy Mazur of Amherst public schools is worried about the kids giving up.

"What if kids just quit after failing their tenth grade test?" Mazur said.

Not all Amherst students fared as well as the statistical average indicates, however. Substantial numbers in all age groups registered scores in the "failing" or "needs improvement" categories. For example, 57 percent of fourth grade pupils tested in the "needs improvement" category in English language arts, and 15 percent came back with "failing" scores. Similar problems are evident at the middle and high school levels.

While sporting strong numbers in the advanced category (22 percent in mathematics, 17 percent in science and technology), the eighth grade at Amherst Middle School also had a 19 percent failure rate in mathematics and a 29 percent failure rate in science and technology.

The disparity seen between those struggling and those achieving at the highest level mirrors the divisions around the state between rural and urban, wealthy and poor communities. As in last year's testing, many of the richest towns in the state are registered in the top 20, while the large, low-income cities log in at the bottom.

Opponents are increasingly raising their voices to argue for a variety of alternatives, including altogether dropping the tie between the test and diplomas, or arguing for different versions of the test depending on career track and other criteria. This past Tuesday, 150 people attended a forum on the MCAS, where most spoke out against the standardized test.

As the day of reckoning – spring 2000, when the first MCAS class graduates – approaches, those voices may get louder.

Libertarian candidate Howell raises more money than Ventura while running on small government platform

By Benjamin Rivard-Rapoza
Collegian Correspondent

In 1998, Reform Party candidate Jesse Ventura "shocked the world" with his election to the seat of governor of Minnesota. Libertarian Carla Howell hopes to repeat this third party victory right here in Massachusetts.

Sixty days before his election, Ventura had raised only $61,121. Senatorial candidate Howell exceeded that amount by $10,000 as of Dec. 3, 11 months before her expected run against Senator Ted Kennedy.

This is more than just a symbolic milestone for Howell, who hopes to become Massachusetts' first female United States Senator as well as its first third party candidate elected to the Senate in 150 years. As the 1988 Libertarian candidate for state auditor, Howell garnered over 100,000 votes and received endorsements from the Boston Herald, columnist Jeff Jacoby of the Boston Globe and Barbara Anderson, director of Citizens for Limited Taxation.

Howell declared her candidacy for the Senate on Nov. 5 at a rally of over 200 supporters and party faithful at the Waltham Marriott. Although she will have to win the Libertarian Primary in September 2000 to be the party's candidate, Howell currently faces no declared opposition for the nomination.

Howell is running her campaign on the trademark Libertarian principles of individual liberty, personal responsibility and limited government.

"The federal government is too big, too costly, too sloppy, too nosy and too bossy," Howell has said. "Every year, the federal government imposes more laws, more prohibitions, more restrictions, more guidelines, more standards and more mandates."

Running with the slogan, "small government is beautiful," Howell has said she hopes her philosophy of limited government will resonate with voters. Among her proposals is the elimination of the personal income tax. This change, she has said, will give individuals and families more control over their lives as well as greater opportunity to help their communities.

Howell is not concerned about the possibility of facing a Republican in the race. "Big government Senator Ted Kennedy will be his party's nominee," Howell said. "A big government Republican politician will run against him. I am the small government candidate for the U.S. Senate."

Founded in 1971, the Libertarian Party is one of the country's older third parties and has traditionally drawn criticism for its innovative and sometimes controversial positions, such as the legalization of drugs. As a result of its showing in the 1998 statewide election, the Libertarian Party is now Massachusetts' third Major Party, with the right to conduct primaries and start town committees.

There is estimated to be over 8,000 registered Libertarians in Massachusetts.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Maestro!

Students were entertained yesterday by a group of band members, including sophomore Ed Doyle, serenading the Campus Center with Holiday music.

Muslims start month of Ramadhan

By Meraj Hydary
Collegian Correspondent

Yesterday, almost one-fifth of the world's population began fasting to mark the holy month of Ramadhan.

Fasting is one of the most important articles of Islamic faith and the best means of purification of one's self. It has been an integral part of all major religions. According to scripture, the prophet Jesus fasted for 40 days before he was called to prophethood. Similarly, the prophet Moses fasted for 40 days and nights before he was given the Law. The Qur'an states "O You who believe fasting has been made obligatory for you as it was made obligatory for the earlier people so that you may become pious" (Surah Baqurah 2:185).

Muslims all over the world fast during the month of Ramadhan from sunrise to sunset. Each year, Ramadhan goes up by 10 days; this particular year it started on Dec. 9. The Muslim fast means a complete abstinence from eating or drinking between dawn and dusk. The word Ramadhan is derived from the root 'Ramad' which indicates 'heat' and 'restlessness.' It is said that the month signifies the hardships that accompany a fast, such as thirst and a comparative sluggishness.

Fasting during the month of Ramadhan is obligatory for every Muslim man and woman. There are a number of conditions attached to fasting. The most important of these conditions is that one must not eat, drink, smoke, allow the dust and steam to enter into the throat and refrain from having sexual intercourse from dawn until dusk. There is no distinction between the rich and the poor in the matter of fasting.

To make fasting acceptable in the eyes of God; it is not sufficient to abstain from eating and drinking only. It is necessary for a Muslim who fasts to refrain from falsehood, backbiting and injustice with others. Muslims should help the needs and the poor and behave nicely to everyone. According to the prophet Muhammad, "One who, while fasting, does not guard his tongue from

Turn to RAMADHAN, page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 51 LOW: 34	HIGH: 39 LOW: 24	HIGH: 46 LOW: 28

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Jamaican me crazy

Read about Spring Break options, including trips to Jamaica, in today's news section.

NEWS — PAGE 3

Give us a green smile

Before you head out to see Tom Hanks's flick, The Green Mile, check out today's Arts page for other weekend events, including a music fest in the Greenough Basement. Arts: It's like finding out the exam you forgot to study for is open-book.

ARTS — PAGE 6

What's your price for flight

Chris Kirkland leads the men's basketball team into the Motor City to take on the Detroit Titans. Check out the back page for more...

SPORTS — PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
GCBT Issues 5
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Andrea M. Peers • Photos by Pam Fitzpatrick

Question: How have your feelings changed after the recent news about the fake assault?

"I don't know if I feel any safer. It kind of scares me that someone would lie about that."

Merritt Loomis
Sophomore
Building Materials and Wood Technology

"I'm angry. I think it's unfair to other victims who will be doubted now about their assaults."

Katie Neff
Junior
Psychology/Sociology

"It's kind of scary that people will take advantage of a situation like this to get attention."

Juan Suarez
Sophomore
Biology

"It's a known fact that you can get raped anywhere, but this pisses me off. I got all worried that I wasn't safe on campus."

Hannah Kim
Senior
Sociology

"My feelings haven't really changed. I think the police should have investigated the case more, though. It's strange that more stories were not made up with all the partying that goes on at this campus."

Vanessa Cabral
Freshman
Undeclared

■ ramadhan

continued from page 1

telling lies, does not refrain from doing bad deeds, is not respecting his fast and God does not approve of mere abstention from food."

Islam does not subject any person to a responsibility which is beyond his competence or which causes him severe hardships. If a person is sick, traveling, or under medication, fasting is not required or obligatory upon them.

Ramadhan is also known to be a month of forgiveness. During this month it is known that the doors of heaven are open and the doors of hell are closed for the Muslims. Muslims are required to pray five times a day regardless of whether they are fasting or not. However, for the fast to be accepted, one should pray five times a day. When Muslims are fasting, they are not just avoiding the desire of food but any action that is concerned sinful in the eyes of God. Muslims are cleansing themselves from all the sins that they have committed.

Ramadhan has another special significance for the Muslims, for it was in this month that the first revelation of the Holy Qur'an (The Holy Book) was made to the Holy Prophet. Muslims believe that the Holy Book was revealed during the last 10 odd nights of the month. Usually, Muslims stay awake all night in worship of God.

According to the sighting of the moon, the month of Ramadhan has come to an end. On the last day is a celebration known as Eid-ul-Fitr. During this celebration, Muslims gather in a congregation to perform special prayers for the Eid. It is obligatory for every same Muslim who has attained the age of puberty to give fitra (alms). It is usually given by the head of the family member for the entire family at the rate of three kilograms of food for each person. The money is to be distributed to the needy believers who cannot afford his/her living for one year. This year the Eid-ul-Fitr will be either on January 7, or around that date, according to the sighting of the moon.

Six firefighters praised at memorial

By Elizabeth Mehren
Los Angeles Times

WORCESTER – His name was Tim, a beefy Vietnam veteran who rode a Harley and raised prize lilacs. Fifty-one-year-old Timothy Jackson had a screaming eagle tattoo on his shoulder, 27 years on the Worcester Fire Department and a face, friends said, like the Cowardly Lion from "The Wizard of Oz." But Jackson had courage in abundance. "He was a real brave kid," said Jim Cassus, a classmate from Worcester Boys Trade High School.

At a memorial here yesterday that drew 20,000 firefighters from as far as Australia and Ireland, as well as the president and vice president, Jackson and five fellow firefighters who died here one week ago were remembered in equal measures for their courage and their compassion. Thomas Spencer, Paul Brotherton, James Lyons, Jeremiah Lucey, Joseph McGuirk and Jackson were killed when they entered a burning warehouse in search of a homeless couple believed to be living there.

"They hastened to the dreadful place to save others," said President Clinton, quoting from an essay by Benjamin Franklin, and noting, "He might have written it last week, not 2 centuries ago."

Along with Vice President Al Gore, the president met privately with relatives of the six. Clinton urged all Americans to thank those working for the public in their own communities.

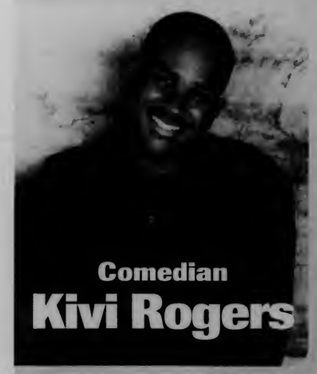
So often, firefighting is a family affair. Collectively, for example, the family of Joseph McGuirk has given more than 200 years to the craft of putting out fires. But even when not related by blood or marriage, firefighters eat together, work together, live together – and sometimes die together.

"Every firefighter is an individual, and in many ways we're all different," said Alfred K. Whitehead, president of the International Association of Fire Fighters. "But when it comes to our profession, we're all very much the same."

As a half a dozen speakers tried to make sense of the tragedy, no mention was made of Thomas S. Levesque, 37, or his 19-year-old girlfriend, Julie Ann Barnes –who authorities say started the fatal fire when they kicked over a candle during an argument. Both were living in the warehouse, and have been charged with manslaughter.

With two brothers in jail for murder and one recently released for robbery, Levesque boasted about setting the fire last weekend at a homeless shelter here, authorities said. "None of us believed him," said Mike Wallace, another Public Inebriate Program habitue. "We thought he was just talking."

Worcester District Attorney John J. Conte said the pair attempted to quell the flames with a pillow. When that, too, caught fire, they first tried (unsuccessfully) to save their pets, then headed to a nearby mall to listen to music.



On the street as yesterday's procession marched by, Don Frabotta, an actor who for 20 years played Dave the bartender on "Days of Our Lives," lauded the firefighters for trying to save Barnes and Levesque.

"They were doing their job," said Frabotta, who moved home to Worcester from Los Angeles three years ago. "They thought there were people in there, and whether they were homeless people or whatever people didn't matter."

"That's the beauty of it," agreed Charles Cook, a food service worker here. "They didn't stop to make a value judgment. We should celebrate that."

The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
presents

California comedian Kivi rogers is gifted with a quick wit, a thousand voices, a knack for mischief, and 5 brothers for insurance. Kivi has been seen on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno", HBO's "Def Comedy Jam", NBC's "friday Night", and ABC's "Home Improvement".

Campus Center Auditorium
Friday, December 10, 8pm

The film "Eyes Wide Shut" will follow the show. Also Shown on Sunday in the Campus Center Auditorium at 8pm.

Visit us on the web: http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm
this program is made possible by a grant from the Auxiliary Services Department and the vice-chancellor for Student Affairs.

Jamaica offers relaxation in the sun

Cliff jumps, bars, clubs, food mark vacation hot spot

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Towards the end of October, when school is wearing students down, when the weather is turning cold and when the need to relax can overwhelm the system, one University of Massachusetts student escaped it all and took a trip to Jamaica.

Lisa Metcalf, 22, of Southwick, is a senior double majoring in arts and communications. The trip, given to college newspaper staffers, was a tour of the Caribbean nation courtesy of Sunsplash Tours and the Jamaican Tourist Board. It gave Metcalf a chance to relax in the sun from Thursday, Oct. 28 to Sunday, Oct. 31.

Early on Thursday morning, Metcalf left from New York's LaGuardia airport and flew to Montego Bay, where she then headed towards her first hotel, The Doctor's Cave.

While traveling, Metcalf observed main highways that were like America's unpaved backstreets.

"We drove by churches and schools and farms that were so small, all the while, animals like goats and cows and chickens were crossing the roads," Metcalf said.

"It was really cool there. There was a rec room with ping-pong and pool tables, but the room had no walls, only a ceiling. Instead of walls, there was a courtyard," Metcalf said. "The hotel was really nice and well air-conditioned which is great when it's hot and muggy and the temperature is in the mid-80's."

For its part, Jamaica is a 146 mile-wide island in the Caribbean, roughly 700 miles south of Miami. The nation doesn't require United States residents to have a passport to enter, but does require an official statement of residency.

After reaching their first destination, their room for the night, Metcalf's group, which included students from other college newspapers including those of Temple, Tufts and Western Connecticut, went to Margaritaville. At the restaurant, Metcalf got away from the typical college fare and instead ate what she described as "fantastic yellowfin tuna."

"After that, we went to a bar/club type place with really good margaritas. They had televisions like sports bars, except there weren't sports on the television, but rather, naked women. It was hard to talk any of the guys on the trip as they were too mesmerized by the women on the television."

On the second night, Lisa stayed at Merrill's 2, a hotel in Negril with an all-you-can-eat buffet that Metcalf described as being "a stumble" away from the beach.

"Basically, if you fell off the patio where you ate, you'd be on the beach."

It was there that Metcalf took a tour of Negril, a town that she said featured beautiful cliffs on the ocean. While in Negril, she attended a craft fair and was also given a chance to look at cliffs and properties.

On Friday night, Metcalf said her group wandered around the beaches.

"During the off seasons, there will be big parties as designated places on the beaches. Each place had a reggae concert," Metcalf said. "Those concerts were absolutely phenomenal."

Also on Friday, Metcalf's group was able to make it to "hotspots" seen on MTV Spring break celebrations. Metcalf likened her brief stay in Jamaica to such things, saying, "if anyone's ever seen Spring Break, it really is a lot like that down there, or at least where we were taken it was."

On Saturday, Metcalf's highlight was a sunset catamaran cruise that featured, among other things, "lots of food and alcohol."

"They've got a drink called the hummingbird," Metcalf said. "It's a rum cream and a Jamaican kind of Kahlua, and it's the best drink."

At one point in the cruise, the catamaran is stopped "and the scuba gear is broken out." Everyone is allowed to scuba or dive off the high cliffs about the water.

The Cliff Jump

"We'd been drinking on the catamaran cruise, and then we were let off to snorkle," Metcalf said. "There were guys jumping from the cliffs and so we climbed up there to see what was going on."

According to Metcalf, from the top of the cliff, the sky was blue and the water turquoise and totally transparent.

"I could see the bottom, but I couldn't have ever reached it. It was something like 40 feet under the top of the water. There were a couple of American guys up there, and one of them had jumped. Another was looking down and thinking about jumping. I offered to go first, and I did."

She described the free-fall as fun, and said that afterward, back on the boat, the men on the trip said she was "one of the boys" for jumping off the cliff."

"My only response is that I didn't see any of them jumping off those cliffs," Metcalf said.

People

"Everybody on the trip got along," Metcalf said. "There were two girls and the rest guys, but we all got along."

Metcalf also told a story of Chris, her tour guide, who seemed to know where everything was on the island, how to get it and, by extension, everyone. While those were the people with whom she went on the trip, Metcalf told other stories about people she met or saw while she was in Jamaica.

"They were giving us shows near cliffs, jumping off the tops of 30 foot trees into the water, hamming it up for the foreigners who always clapped appreciatively," Metcalf said. She added that one night, while at a bar called Risky Business, two men stood on the beach juggling and spitting fire.

According to Metcalf, the stories that she was told about hostile Jamaicans were untrue, and rather that people were both very respectful and very nice.

"We didn't encounter people who wanted to shoot us or rob us or whatever," Metcalf said. "I didn't really come into contact with one person that I'd describe as being truly dangerous."

Final Thoughts

According to Metcalf, the tour was well-planned and enjoyable.

"Sunsplash Tours and the Jamaican Tourist Board create an excellent tour with solid planning and exotic locations," Metcalf said, adding that she'd happily return at the "drop of a hat."

Scenes from a tropical paradise where both rich and poor cultures collide

Added incentive for students to enlist

By Roberto Suro
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The secretary of the Army will propose a new plan today to boost recruitment by offering buck privates an extensive curriculum of college-level courses delivered via the Internet, with the promise that they could earn a two-year associate's degree during their initial four-year enlistment at virtually no cost.

The plan, which would mark an unprecedented expansion of educational opportunities for soldiers in uniform, is a measure of the Army's distress as it competes for personnel with a booming civilian job market. Searching for an advantage, the Army wants to ensure that its 165,000 first-term soldiers have enough free time and access to computers to take online courses from accredited colleges even when deployed far from their home bases.

The "distance learning" initiative, along with a related proposal to help soldiers earn high school equivalency diplomas, also represents a major shift in the Army's approach to potential recruits.

Since the World War II generation went to college under the GI Bill, the Army has emphasized programs that provide educational benefits for soldiers after they are discharged. Convinced that many young people worry about losing ground if they postpone their educations, Secretary of the Army Louis Caldera hopes to sell the idea that schoolwork can be as much a part of military life as going on maneuvers.

"The Army has traditionally been a place of opportunity, and now it is going to be a place where you learn while you serve, in addition to being a place where you earn benefits and save money so you can keep learning when your service is completed," Caldera said in an interview.

Caldera will outline the proposals and other efforts to make Army service more appealing during a speech today at a conference of Hispanic leaders in Miami, according to senior Army officials. Some of the measures, such as a program to help recruits pass the high school equivalency test, are designed specifically to attract Hispanics, who have shown a high propensity for military service but are under-represented in the Army, the officials said.

The equivalency program is aimed at young people who dropped out of school to work; one Army study showed Hispanics make up 40 percent of the potential recruits who score well on screening tests but lack a high school diploma. The Army would help such recruits prepare for and take the equivalency exam before the start of basic training.

During earlier consultations, Latino leaders raised concern that this program might backfire by luring students out of high school. Today, Caldera is expected to reassure a broad audience of Hispanic educators, business people and public officials that the Army has fine-tuned the program to avoid that problem: Only prospects who have been out of high school for at least a year and are too old to return will be eligible, and they will have to score high in the screening test.

COLLEGIAN STAFFERS!!!!!
VOTE FOR ALL DESKS!
TODAY & MONDAY
9-5

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
Saturday - Sunday
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 853-5799

Great Gifts
Bags Stocking Stuffers Hats
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Earrings Rings Bracelets Sweaters India Print Bedspreads
Candles Chains Toys
Incense Mugs
Baskets Merry X'mas Cards
Paper Lampshades Gloves Chinese Shoes
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile
Nights Mon.-Sat. 9PM, Dec. 2 - 22
Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Amherst-Carriage Shops
Northampton-108 Main St.

EAST TAKES ON FLORIDA'S BEST
HIP HEALTH PLAN ORANGE BOWL Basketball Classic
SATURDAY DEC. 18TH
NATIONAL CAR RENTAL CENTER
FT. LAUDERDALE, FLORIDA

FIU Men's Basketball Head Coach Marcos "Shakey" Rodriguez
FLORIDA INTERNATIONAL UNIVERSITY

GAME 1
1:30 PM

St. Bonaventure Men's Basketball Head Coach Jim Baron
versus ST. BONAVENTURE

FSU Men's Basketball Head Coach Steve Robinson
FLORIDA STATE

GAME 2
4:00 PM

University of Massachusetts Men's Basketball Head Coach Brunin Filini versus U. MASS

Miami University Men's Basketball Head Coach Leonard Hamilton UNIVERSITY OF MIAMI

GAME 3
7:00 PM

UNC Men's Basketball Head Coach Bill Guthridge versus NORTH CAROLINA

Come and see the Miami Hurricanes take on pre-season favorite North Carolina, UMass tip-off against Florida State and St. Bonaventure go against Florida International. See all three games for one low price. Buy your tickets for this great basketball tournament in the sunshine!
THREE GREAT GAMES FOR ONE LOW PRICE!
TICKETS ARE ON SALE NOW FOR $15, $25, $30
Orange Bowl Big Buddy Program and Junior High Basketball Program.
TICKETMASTER www.ticketmaster.com
(305)358-5885-(954)523-3388-(561)800-3388
SEARS - PEACHES - SPEC'S MUSIC
UNION PLANTERS BANK CENTEX ROONEY
SNYDER'S OF HANOVER

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

In the Year 2000

This is the end, I tell you. This is the final installment of the wisdom of Boo in this millennium. The next time you hear from me, it will be the year 2000, and we should all be dead according to the doomsday cults and the Y2K wackos. The fostering of a new millennium must be viewed with some fundamental questions. What is the destiny of humanity in the future? Usually my thought processes do not go beyond my next meal, but I have taken the time to speculate a possible future.

In order to make sense of the new millennium, one must look back the past 1000 years and map the progress of this millennium. In the year 1000, it was believed that the Earth was the center of the universe. Men who had all the money, lavish castles and little honest regard for the public good ran the governments. The general public's main focus was on religion, constantly performing rituals to ensure their own happiness. Wars that were fought between nations were elevated to a noble, spintual level, as people slaughtered each other in the name of God. Foreigners were always eyed with suspicion, and many people were slaughtered because of their ethnicities. Any thought that was a threat or differed from the dominant ideology was subverted, and the participants were persecuted and killed. Men had the divine right to treat women as objects, beating them at will. Men took their disputes to the battleground, where they often engaged in a fight-to-the-death combat. Russia, as always, was behind everyone else in Western culture.

Boo Downs

In the year 1999, it is believed that the Earth is centralized relative to other astronomical bodies in an infinite universe. Male C.E.O.'s have all the money, have lavish mansions and have little concern for the common good. The public's main focus is on popular culture, constantly performing rituals to ensure their own happiness. Wars that were fought between nations are elevated to the defense of Democracy in the world, and people bomb and murder others in the name of "God". Minorities are always eyed with suspicion, and countless innocent people have been victimized by corrupt law enforcement and hate groups. Any thoughts that are a threat to the status quo are discredited, and the participants are harassed and sometimes killed. One in four women are raped in their lives, and the hands of men abuse countless others, who are treated as sex objects. Men take their disputes outside where a volley of gunfire proceeds to kill both them and anyone else in the area. Following the Cold War, Russia is behind everyone in first world economics.

Ladies and gentlemen, civilization has progressed so far in the past thousand years. Technology has allowed us to travel to the moon, perform feats of healing through medicine and communicate to each other at a touch of a button. Those sorry people of year 1000 would have been lucky to ever leave their village during their entire lives. However, our human existence is plagued by many of the injustices that faced us for a thousand, even two thousand years. We are still intolerant, closed minded and unequal.

Of these thousand years, the century that has been a high point and a low point of human existence has been the 20th century. We sunk to new lows as Nazi Germany killed off six million Jews in a genocidal attempt to wipe a productive culture off the globe. We soared to new heights as the struggles for gender and racial equality took root into our mass psyche. The entire progression of Humanity has compressed and accelerated to a point where entire culture movements have come and gone in a matter of a decade, compared to the centuries of culture development.

We have reached this point of existence through trial and error, and our progression has often been the result of learning from our mistakes. While we still haven't learned some of the most obvious and fundamental aspects to the construction of any societs, we are slowly learning the lessons of yesterdas to apply them for tomorrow.

What of the future? It is written in the Book of Boo that, "Putting together a just society is not something we can do in our spare time. We must act now, and decisively." We are at a threshold of a new age, an age of equality, or productivity and of enlightenment. However, many of the barriers that have been holding us back now are threatening to suppress the steps we have made in the last few decades. These barriers have made us look as primitive and underdeveloped as our ancestors of the year 1000. We as a society must make a New Year's resolution, fostering a spirit of good will and of tolerance to all peoples. The flaws in human nature such as violence, intolerance and abusive power must be examined, not ignored.

Boo Downs is a Collegian columnist.

Some final words

Y2K is almost here! I'm so upset because I only got a chance to write thirteen different columns this semester. With only 21 days before the end of the millennium, I absolutely need to get some simple points across. Unfortunately, there wasn't nearly enough time or Collegians for me to get everything I needed to say out there into the open. So here's my final shot for you, my loyal readers, my posse.

- If I learned anything from "Y2K: The movie," it was to avoid nuclear power plants in the Midwest at midnight on the first of the year.

- Although extremely flattering when used in the right context, I don't know any men that actually like to be called the, "Hooters' guy."

- When are diehard Jim Carey fans such as myself going to realize that he'll never win an Oscar? He could actually be sent to the moon to film his next picture, and the academy would ignore him because he became famous by talking with his ass.

- Never eat anything for dinner in the DC that you think you saw at lunch.

- Even though I have no idea whatso-ever about where I'll be two years from now, I'm 100 percent sure that Bert and Ernie were getting it on!

- Earlier this year, my friend and I walked into the wrong class. I'm a junior, and he's a senior. Hey, I'm young, I have an excuse, but dammit, he's a senior, he should know better.

- Actually, scratch that. If I learned anything from "Y2K: The Movie," it's that "made for TV" movies suck.

- Take German 191: "From Grimm to Disney" next semester.

- Not only should the Patriots fire Pete Carroll, they should fire the entire coaching staff. Ernie Zampese is the worst offensive coordinator in the league, and Steve Sidwell has ruined what was once the best defense in the NFL. I'd bench Bledsoe as well.

- My Wednesday nights have been frenzied disgustingly with "Dawson's Creek." The fact that I need a thesaurus to watch the show is the most unfortunate catastrophe that my existence could encounter.

- If Eddie Vedder had committed suicide and Kurt Cobain did not, Pearl Jam would be considered, by every critic, the greatest band of the decade.

- Everyone thinks that I'm a suck-up. I don't think I'm a suck-up. I think I'm just good at getting important people to like me.

- Isn't it funny to see how people are initiated as cast members into certain TV shows? On "NYPD Blue," you have to get naked. On "Dawson's Creek" you need to use some ridiculous un-interpretable phrase. And on "Party of Five," you need to get completely drunk and give a long, coherent and meaningful soliloquy about your life.

Ryan Benharris

- I think the biggest threat to the female population is an all-star charity event starring O.J. Simpson, Dennis Rodman, Mike Tyson and Tonya Harding.

- The worst pick-up line I've actually heard someone use is, "I've got something that'll make you itchy!"

- Sometimes I genuinely miss high school. Then I realize that I had to wake up at 6 a.m., and no one liked me.

- I was laughed at while attending two separate sexual harassment seminars for raising my hand when the instructor said, "do any guys out there check the back seat of their car when they get in?" I don't think that's fair at all.

- It's R.A. appreciation week. I appreciate all of you.

- I wrote a column about no one attending the football games, and the next day, there were less people in the stands than the week before. I wrote a column entitled "Bashful boy goes to hooters," and received more feedback than I ever have before. I think I've found what this campus cares about.

- According to kodi, the way to get chicks is to make mayonnaise bombs.

- Can someone please explain to me what actually happened with that satellite that was sent to Mars? I heard that one person working on it used miles, and another used kilometers. Hey, my study group did that in eighth grade Algebra. We failed, but at least we didn't lose $156 of taxpayer's money.

- The people that get interviewed on "Jay Walking" during the Jay Leno show should be deported. When Leno asked a woman "who Gerald Ford is," she responded with, "the car guy?" If we force immigrants to take extremely difficult tests to gain citizenship, we should kick morons like that woman out.

- The NCAA men's basketball team to beat this year is going to be Florida. Billy Donovan is the best coach in the country.

- If I were a betting man, I'd say that Tom Hanks will win his third Best Actor Oscar for The Green Mile. I've never seen early reviews for a film that were as good as the ones that this film is getting.

- Over the past ten years, we've lost some pretty important people. Some, however, as important as Vanilla Ice. Where the hell did that guy go?

- I need a job over winter break. I quit my old job, and plus I'd never go back there at this time of year. In January, it's much too cold to be standing out on a street corner asking random men if they're looking for some action.

- If the world does come to an end on New Years, I hope that it's not by computer failure. That way I can laugh at all the scientists who were so painfully wrong.

- Am I the only person on the planet that knew that Eminem was just a fad that would only last as long as MTV allowed him to? Guess what, Kid Rock. You're not a "Cowboy-baby," you're a two week trend.

- If there's one thing I'd like to give up, it's my unfortunate ability to turn bright red all the time. I turn red no matter how embarrassing the topic may be. It's very sad.

- If there's one thing I'll never surrender, it's my sense of humor. Anyone who can make people laugh is definitely my best friend. Laughing makes everyday situations more enjoyable to go through, and difficult situations easier to handle.

- Thank you all for reading and responding to anything that I may have contributed to this newspaper over the past four months. However, I'm not sure if you'll ever hear from me again because I am not now, nor have I ever been before, Y2K compliant!

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

Cruel and unusual?

A tired fireman is walking out of a desecrated building with fire and smoke in the background. He is carrying a small helpless baby that is barely alive, and because of the severity of her condition you cannot tell if she is alive or dead. In an attempt to look beyond her mutilated face, you can get a glimpse of the fear and terror she just faced. In her state of shock, she survives the devastation around her trying to find a familiar face, but none were found.

Can you imagine being her 10 years from now, still scarred both physically and mentally from this act of terrorism. In her attempt to sleep, she wakes up from a restless night and looks into the mirror, hoping to see no scars on her face, but instead she realizes once again, that her nightmares are real.

The man who was behind this act of mass destruction has a possibility of only going to prison and not facing the true punishment he deserves, death.

Another example of this malignant behavior occurred recently when two young males lured a gay student away from the bar and into their car. They began to drive away and before the young man realized what was happening to him, the two young guys had driven to a desolated area where they forced him out of the car against his will. Then they tied him to a fence and beat him to death. How can our societs allow people of this nature to live, after they have committed such brutal crimes?

I feel that our government is being too lenient when it comes to punishment of criminals, especially murderers. And we should begin to give harsher penalties that compare to the crimes that they have committed. People who oppose the death sentence arguments such as "criminals who have murdered innocent people and go to jail instead of being put to death begin to change their lives around by taking college classes and helping the community through service programs."

This idea can be refuted by asking a very simple question: why do they deserve a second chance? They did not give the victim (or victims) a second chance to live during their crime. And why should a person who takes college classes and does community services get a second chance to live, when many people in this campus are taking college classes and at one time have completed a community service project? You have not received any privileges through the government because of your kind deeds.

Ben Kandel

Harsher penalties like capital punishment should be enforced because so many criminals are repeat offenders and commit more crimes or murder another person. If we were to create harsher penalties such as the death penalty, the criminals would not be able to kill again because they would be dead and it's kind of hard to murder again when you are "gone."

People who are against the death penalty argue that there is more money spent to execute the murderer than having the criminal spend the rest of his life in prison. I have a hard time believing this, but even if this is true, how can the government compare the cost of putting a criminal to death with the horror of what the innocent victim had to deal with right before he or she was murdered?

Advocates of capital punishment use arguments that talk about the victim's family and how they must feel not knowing if the criminal will escape from jail and try to kill them. They live in constant fear that the perpetrator will be set free and strike again. With the death penalty, families would not have to worry about the dangerous criminal, because he or she would be dead, allowing the victims' family to sleep a little better at night.

People who oppose the death penalty take into consideration that capital punishment is considered cruel and unusual punishment. They believe this because in our society, killing someone is considered immoral. But what this criminal did is even more immoral because they killed an innocent person, which is wrongful and they should be punished aptly for the crime they committed.

Through this column, I have given two horrific examples that show the human species at its worst. Compared to other animals, we by far are the cruelest to our own. Why do we find it so repulsive to watch a lion chase and kill a young zebra for food, but feel no remorse for the innocent victim who was murdered by another human being for ridiculous reasons? Furthermore, when we watch these two animals chase after each other, we want to help the prey by shooting the predator! But when we hear of a murder that occurred, we are not so quick to seek revenge and feel remorse for someone who killed for no reason at all.

I have given examples of arguments that are used to explain why the death penalty is bad, such as the possibility of the criminal being rehabilitated in prison, or that the act of killing someone is considered cruel and unusual punishment. But these two examples are easily refuted by a very simple argument: why do these murderers deserve a second chance when they didn't give their victims a second chance? It seems a bit unfair to me.

Ben Kandel is a UMass student.

Write for Ed-Op...
If you survive Y2K, that is.

Letters to the Editor

Column had criticism all wrong

To the editor:

I was puzzled to read the Dec. 7th edition of the Collegian that I had criticized the editors for the coverage of the reported assaults on campus. I have never done so. I have criticized the media for the violent images on television night after night and asked the question, "what the world would be like if larger amounts of time were devoted to the portrayal of human dignity?"

David K. Scott
Chancellor

Tidings of comfort and joy from everyone at the Collegian.....❄ ❄ ❄ ❄

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor

Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Randall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1907, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

GLBT Issues

Brandon Teena, right, was the victim of a brutal rape and murder in Nebraska.

Dear Readers... We'll be back next semester! In the meantime, Happy Holidays and enjoy your winter breaks.

Exploring transgender issues

By Meg Hebert
Collegian Staff

Yesterday in the Campus Center, Grace Sterling Stowell, the Director of the Boston Alliance of Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, and Transgendered Youth, gave a presentation entitled What is the f in GLBT?" Ms. Stowell began by asking the group some questions. Had we ever heard the word transgendered? Everyone raised their hand. Do we know a transgendered person? Again, a definite majority, if not everyone, in the audience knew a transgendered person. At many presentations Ms. Stowell gives, the number of raised hands for the second question decreases drastically from the first question.

Since terms often have various definitions, Ms. Stowell next drew a triangle on the board and wrote words at the points of the triangle. Ms. Stowell defined sex as the biology that one comes into the world with such as genes, hormones, and physical make-up. Gender is different from sex. Ms. Stowell defined gender as anything that a given culture, at a given time, defines as appropriate for someone of a certain sex. Sexuality encompasses more than sexual orientation for Stowell. It includes elements such as how and where a person likes to have sex.

Stowell broke gender down into three categories. Gender identity is one's sense of self, the gender one with which personally identifies. Gender expression involves how one presents in terms of hairstyle, clothing, job choice, and other aspects of life that a culture perhaps genderizes. Stowell noted that the way someone expresses gender might be influenced by societal stigmatization: that is, it may vary from one's gender identity. Also, people may alter their gender expression depending on whom they are with at the time. Gender attribution denotes what gender others attribute to a person.

Some people are intersexed, that is they are born male with some female physical characteristics, or female with some male physical characteristics. Parents and physicians generally view this natural phenomenon as a crisis. They often try to decide if the person is more male, or more female, and subject the infant to surgery in attempt to "correct" the situation. Deciding for an infant which sex they should live as is a very delicate issue. It is impossible to know in advance how this person will identify in terms of gender. Some people are now realizing that if there is no medical reason why surgery is necessary, it may be best to allow the intersexed children to mature and then make their own decisions about their sex.

Stowell then placed three horizontal arrows on the board, one representing sex, one for gender, and the third for sexuality. Near the left arrow points, Stowell wrote female, woman (feminine), and attracted to men. In the middle, she wrote intersex, intergender, attracted to men and women. Near the right arrow points, Stowell listed male, man (masculine), attracted to women. Societal views generally say that a "woman" should be all of the things near the left arrow points, and that a "man" should be all of the things near the right arrow points.

However, so many people's actual placement on these continuums vary from this structure that it makes some people, including Stowell, want to throw it all out the window. Also, this structure does not include all people. Where would a female-to-male who is only attracted to femme lesbians be placed? Where would a man who is only attracted to tall masculine men be plotted? The conclusion is that it is best to respectfully ask individuals how they identify.

Stowell then led an open discussion in which the audience actively participated. As a final question, Stowell asked if the group felt that it is beneficial to have transgendered people included in the gay, lesbian, and bisexual community. Debra Shaw summed up the vocal members of the group perfectly with "Yes, we are stronger together."

Imaginary Love
By Dave Lambert

Rufus always gets his man.
Hearing me say this I'm sure he'd laugh, shake his head and light a cigarette because I picture him smoking and that's all that matters here.
Rufus, at least, sings of men he's lost whereas I...

won't complain.
Know things are better this way,
picturing:

Old city bricks redder wet, 7eleven, cars streak by
as he lights my cigarette.

The Brandon Teena Story: hate and fear

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

One attendee of last night's screening of the film The Brandon Teena Story called the movie, "the first I've ever walked out of."

Normally, this would be taken as a criticism of the film – as if it were so boring that the audience was unable to bear it. But the reason this viewer was unable to stay through the movie had nothing to do with boredom. The Brandon Teena Story is a documentary about the brutal gang rape and murder of a female-bodied Nebraska woman living as a man, Brandon Teena's story is so heart-wrenching that many viewers of the film were overcome by their own anguish.

The film was screened as part of "In Memory of Brandon," an event sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Stonewall Center. The evening began with an introduction by Grace Sterling Stowell, the director of the Boston Alliance of Gay and Lesbian youth. Stowell spoke about misconceptions surrounding the transgendered, and her own identity as a transgendered woman. Stowell was followed by Alejandru Parikomarcel, the director of the Transgendered Education Network, a department of the Justice Resource Institute in Boston. Parikomarcel spoke about the challenges faced by the transgendered in our society.

"Those of us who are here have demonstrated a remarkable strength," said Parikomarcel, who went on to say that the transgendered have an attempted suicide rate of over 50 percent. According to Parikomarcel, the city of Boston has one of the highest rates of violence against the transgendered, despite having one of the lowest crime rates in the country. He described several recent incidents of transdered discriminations, such as when a male-bodied woman was refused the opportunity to apply for a loan at a bank unless she dressed as a man, and when another male-bodied woman was prevented from using men's or women's bathrooms in the Cambridge Galleria.

After Parikomarcel's speech, the film In Memory of Brandon was screened. The film follows the ill-fated journey of a woman from Lincoln, Nebraska named Teena Brandon who moved to the nearby town of Fall River and began to use Brandon as her first name. The film begins with several women, all of whom dated Brandon under the assumption that he was a biological male, stating that Brandon was "a perfect man."

"He knew exactly how women wanted to be treated," said one woman. She went on to say that Brandon was ideal, "because he'd been a woman and knew how to relate to them, and he was a man and knew how to relate to them."

Despite Brandon's luck with women, he was unable to maintain his charade for long, and moved to Fall River for anonymity. There he began to date a girl named Lana Tisdel, who never suspected that he might physically be a "she." His ruse couldn't last forever, though. He was arrested for check forgery, and the local newspaper reported his real name and gender. Two acquaintances of Brandon and Lana proceeded to brutally rape Brandon upon realizing that he was a woman, and threatened his life if he went to the police. Brandon went to the police, who, after some reluctance, questioned the two men. After being released, the two men followed Brandon to a nearby town and shot Brandon, as well as two people he was staying with. One man was sentenced to life in prison, while the other is on death row.

The most sobering moments of the film included not only details of the rape and murder, but also hateful comments from members of the police department and townspeople. The sheriff in charge of the case refused to arrest the rapists after Brandon's complaint, because, he said, "If she would lie about her sex, she would lie about other things, too." A local resident told a reporter, "If God wanted there to be gay people, he wouldn't have put women on this earth." At one point, one of the murderers claimed that Lana "was so brain-washed she still probably refers to her [Brandon] as he." In fact, he is right – she does.

CALENDAR OF EVENTS

Dec. 10
In order to commemorate Human Rights Day, various RSO's and students will gather at the Student Union steps to prepare for a human rights march at 11:30 a.m. For more information, contact Matt from Students for a Free Tibet at 545-0198.

Dec. 10 – 11
Auditions for "The Vagina Monologues" will be on Friday, from 7-9 p.m. and Saturday from 2-4 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center room 2. "The Vagina Monologues," an Obie-award-winning play, is written by Eve Ensler. It was performed on Broadway as Eve's one-woman show for two years in a row. A prepared monologue is fine for the audition, or something will be provided for you. No theater experience is necessary. Any questions should be directed via email to redelman@student.umass.edu.

Dec. 13
"Sexual Assault, Domestic Violence, Workplace Violence, Gay-bashing: The Experience Rendered in Words and Art" is a collective exhibition of works by survivors of violence, this presentation of collages, poetry, music, and film reaches across the University campus and out to the community. The exhibition will share personal narratives of recovery and healing, in hopes of giving others a better understanding and awareness of those who have been traumatized and who find themselves living in fear. This collaborative presentation will be shown on Monday, for one day only, at the Student Union Art Gallery.

Dec. 14
In place of a Pride Alliance meeting, the Stonewall Center has planned a Movie Night Study Break at the Center at 7:30 p.m. Snacks provided and we will choose a movie to watch together. For more information, call the Stonewall Center at 545-4824.

ANNOUNCEMENT – 3 Cr. SPRING 2000 GLBT COURSE
Are you interested in exploring identity, diversity, oppression, internalized oppression, analysis and strategy? This class will offer you skills in facilitation, conflict resolution, decision-making, event planning, fund-raising, and PR/Outreach. The class involves a weekend retreat (Feb. 5-6), 3 Skills-Building Workshops (Feb. 12 or 3 evenings), and working on a queer leadership conference and/or completing a hands-on practicum credit. For an application stop by the Stonewall Center or the Pride Alliance Office. Applications due Dec. 17. For more information, contact Aaron Hans at the Stonewall Center 545-4824.

Write for GLBT Write for GLBT Write for GLBT Write for GLBT

Audition

By Dave Lambert

Serendipity.
At that moment
Conjoined, two boys
Precisely.
At the eyes.
Precisely at the eyes.

Precision, never worked so hard
To make such impressions
As would last these days,
Precisely this day,
Serendipity.

Never, again
Would anything be so Precise.
Deep green were
His eyes, deep green

The smiles,
Imperfect noses and skins
The sweaty palms (breathe in) (keep on breathing

in.)

Exxon Mobil halts benefits to partners

By Jeff Leeds
Associated Press

Newly merged Exxon Mobil Corp. said Monday that it will cease offering health-care benefits to its employees' same-sex partners, touching off heated criticism among gay rights advocates. A spokesman for the company said executives overseeing the union of the two oil giants had approved what amounts to an extension of the former Exxon Corp.'s policy.

Under the new policy, which took effect in the Nov. 30 merger, the company offers benefits only to spouses in "legally valid" marriages, spokesman Tom Cirigliano said.

Mobil had offered domestic-partnership coverage since last year. Exxon Mobil will continue extending benefits to unmarried partners of Mobil employees who already were enrolled in the benefits plan. But no new partners can join the health plan.

"We believe that basing benefits coverage on a legally recognized relationship eliminates the need for the company to establish criteria of its own with which to assess the legitimacy of any relationship," Cirigliano said.

Human Rights Campaign, a Washington-based gay rights lobbying organization, derided the move as a "huge step back in time" and a break from the trend among major corporations to offer domestic-partner benefits.

"The new company clearly does not believe in equal pay for equal work because that's what these benefits are," said Kim Mills, the group's education director. "This move is bad for business. It's bad for employee morale and it demonstrates that Exxon Mobil's human resources policies are mired in the past."

Companies that provide benefits to unmarried partners include Boeing Co., IBM, Microsoft, Walt Disney Co. and Times Mirror Co. A spokesman for BP Amoco said the company had offered benefits to partners of former Amoco employees since last year and will extend them to partners of the merged company's employees beginning in April.

A Call For Performers

By Jamie Schiffer and Heather Lember
Collegian Correspondents

The University of Massachusetts-Amherst Pride Alliance, the registered gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender, and straight ally student organization, is pleased to announced Queer Fest 2000. Queer Fest is the Pride Alliance's annual celebration of queer life and culture. This year's Queer Fest will be held on April 27, 2000, and will be divided into two venues: one in the afternoon and one in the evening. We are looking for local and national talent including music performers, poets, speakers, comedian-stage performers and other queer-friendly artists to perform at the event. The day portion of the festival is free and will be held on our campus lawn, where there will be local vendors as well as information tables from local University groups and departments. The night event will be held inside our Student Union ball room and will be more of a formal event with a small admission cost.

Anyone who is interested in performing or has questions pertaining to Queer Fest can call us at (413) 545 0154 or via e-mail at queerfest2000@hotmail.com.

Bush ignorant of AIDS

By Cliff Rothman
Associated Press

Here's another political pop quiz. Guess the name of the politician:

He opposes same-sex marriage. He opposes gay and lesbian child adoption.

He has never publicly said the word AIDS after five years in office. He scuttled a pending hate-crimes bill that contained a sexual orientation clause.

He supports mandatory AIDS reporting, in opposition to local and national advocacy groups.

Jesse Helms? Pat Robertson? Gary Bauer? Wrong. It's George W. Bush, Republican front-runner and poster child for the new, softer, fuzzier big GOP tent that's been given the image make-over a la Martha Stewart. And just as skin deep.

On Nov. 21, Bush let the cat out of his bag of tricks, finally coming out of the compassionate-conservative closet: He refused to meet with the gay Log Cabin Republicans. Ironically, the group, anathema within the largely Democratic gay community, could not have been more benign or conciliatory toward Bush, hoping despite his devastating five-year homophobic record that he was really a sheep in wolf's clothing. It turned out there was just more wolf.

Ladies and gentlemen, now the bonus round. Forty-nine governors responded to an urgent personal letter in early September from Children Uniting Nations Chairperson Daphna Ziman for assistance regarding the AIDS epidemic in Africa. Only one governor ignored the plea. Which one?

George W.? Correct.

"Even his brother responded," says Ziman, who just received the global peace and tolerance lifetime achievement award from the Friends of the United Nations, along with Mikhail Gorbachev. "When it comes to AIDS, I just think he doesn't care."

There seems to be a lot that George W. Bush doesn't care about – or if it doesn't register within the limited radar of his interest, it's tuned out.

AIDS can't be tuned out. Even if it shifts away from high-profile urban white gay men, who have the resources – or political savvy – to keep it on the foreground, to inner-city minority communities. Even as it shifts from men to women, for whom medicine historically under-calibrates a gender-specific paradigm. Even as it now swallows vast portions of Africa and Russia, oceans removed from the immediacy of North America.

In Bush's home state of Texas, the entire AIDS – not to mention gay and lesbian – organizational infrastructure is war-wears and alarmed that Bush has not addressed AIDS publicly as a social, policy or health issue in his 60 months as governor, despite the state's ranking as fourth highest in number of cases in the country. Nearly 20,000 Texans have been diagnosed, and just under 10,000 have died under his watch.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Slam Fest set to kick off tomorrow

By Anna Faktorovich
Collegian Staff

Tomorrow, December 11, there will be a SLAM/JAM FEST held in the Greenough Basement in Central Residential Area. The fest will take place from 6pm to 1am. Proceeds will go to AIDS Response Seacoast, which is an AIDS foundation. The event's main objective is to promote the nationally recognized World AIDS Day, December 1st. Admission is two dollars.

The festivities will include music, dance, comedy and poetry readings. Music will include a DJ and several bands, including waterpistol, almostJune and Sugar Maple Voodoo. The poetry will be read in performance style, commonly referred to as slam poetry.

In the midst of the event, there will be a raffle that will award winners a Timbuk2 bag, a coffee maker, a free admission to a UMass Casino Night, a camera, a health-ed kit, a $100 gift certificate towards online textbook purchases and a variety of other great prizes.

Teresa Rodrigues, a senior communication disorders major, organized the event along with the help of Leana Mooradian, a sophomore psychology major. Leana and Teresa are both resident assistants on the Baker, Chadbourne, Greenough staff. This staff is sponsoring and hosting SLAM/JAM FEST. When asked about the event, Teresa stated, "A dream has become a reality thanks to an amazing staff and the strong supporters of this cause."

Earthfoods, Greenough Sub shop, the Bike Co-Op, Tix Unlimited, and Campus Design & Copy have all donated items, as well as their efforts, towards this event. Also, the CHS Peer Health Education 214 class has donated its time and will be available to distribute information and free condoms courtesy of Tapestry and Health Education.

A speaker will be presenting his personal story during SLAM/JAM FEST. He is HIV positive, and will speak about his experiences and answer any questions during the fest.

The SLAM/JAM FEST should present a powerful experience that will heighten the understanding of HIV and AIDS in our world.

Auditions to be held

Beginning today, tryouts will be held for next year's performance of the Obie award-winning Vagina Monologues, a play that supports the idea of stopping violence and abuse against women. Auditions for today will be held from 7 – 9 p.m. and tomorrow from 2 – 4 p.m. in Rm. 2 of the Fine Arts Center. Theatre experience is not necessary.

For those trying out, a prepared monologue is acceptable or something will be provided. The performance will be given on February 14th, 2000 by UMass students and will be held in the Campus Center Auditorium from 4:30 p.m. to 7 p.m. with free admission. Sponsors include the Everywoman's Center, the Stonewall Center and the Jewish Woman's Collective as of right now. Self Magazine will serve as an international spon-

Turn to VAGINA, page 7

The magic of chamber choir to grace Amherst

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

For those of you that have ever been lucky or interested enough to hear a chorus sing in a church, you know that there is something inexplicably moving about voices resounding in a house designed with sanctity and community in mind, regardless of your religious affiliation. This weekend the UMass Chamber Choir performing at the First Congregational Church in Amherst, under the direction of Professor F. Wayne Abercrombie, will present you another opportunity, or perhaps your first, to experience this synaesthetic enlightenment.

The Chamber Choir is a select group of fifty students, comprised primarily of music majors or minors, but also features a variety of non-music majors from UMass. They have introduced many premiers of new work by local composers.

Turn to CHAMBER, page 7

FRUGAL FRIDAY

Buy one item of UMASS CLOTHING at the regular price and get the second item of equal or lessor value for

HALF PRICE

Collegiate casuals

M-F 9 TO 5
SAT. 11-4

(413) 545-2619

New University Store

PLENTY OF "HO HO HO" HOLIDAY SAVINGS

LIQUORS 44

OPEN SUNDAYS 12-5

LITE & LITE ICE 30 PACK $16.49
KEYSTONE LIGHT 30 PACK $10.49
ICEHOUSE & RED DOG 30 PACK $10.49
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LT $14.99
PABST BLUE RIBBON $8.99
SIERRA NEVADA $6.99
Berkshire Brewing Co. $3.99
GUINNESS PUB DRAUGHT $4.99
HEINEKEN & AMSTEL LT $10.99
NEWCASTLE $11.99
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD ICE, BUD LIGHT, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, AMBER BOCK, COORS LIGHT, COORS $39.99
1/2 KEGS NATURAL, NATURAL ICE $34.99
1/2 KEGS BERKSHIRE BREWING TRADITIONAL, PORTER, STEEL RAIL, I.P.A. $82.99

DON'T DRINK AND DRIVE
WINES OF THE MONTH
ROBERT MONDAVI COASTALS $8.49
LIVINGSTON CELLARS $6.99
VENDANGE $6.99
LINDEMAN'S BIN 65 $12.49
TURNING LEAF $5.99
SUTTER HOME $3.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF 1999 $6.49
MARTINI & ROSSI $7.99
KORBEL CHAMPAGNE $10.49
MOET & CHANDON $29.99
FREIXENET $6.99
BALLATORE SPUMANTE $4.99
ANDRE CHAMPAGNE $2.99
WE HAVE DOM PERIGNON AVAILABLE

SMIRNOFF VODKA $13.99
BACARDI RUM $14.99
CANADIAN MIST SALE $11.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $8.99
SEAGRAM'S 7 BLENDED WHISKEY SALE $13.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $10.99
DEWARS SCOTCH $26.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN SPICED RUM $18.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT $16.49
JIM BEAM BOURBON $16.99
ABSOLUT VODKA $12.49
KAHLUA COFFEE LIQUEUR $12.99
AMARETTO DI SARONNO $15.99
BAILEY'S IRISH CREAM $15.99
Canadian Club. SALE $16.49 MAIL-IN REBATE -4.00 FINAL COST $12.49
FRANGELICO HAZELNUT LIQUEUR $14.99
TANQUERAY GIN $23.99
Crown Royal $15.99
GLENLIVET SCOTCH $23.99
SCOTCH $22.99

Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 • NORTHAMPTON 586-5007 • HOLYOKE 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 12/9 TO THU WEDS. 12/15/99

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week

Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends

RGIS Inventory Specialists

Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS

Springfield:	413-731-6910
Worcester:	508-366-8847
Boston:	617-484-1788
North of Boston:	978-777-2253
South of Boston:	508-821-5591
Plymouth:	508-833-1145
Route 3 South:	781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast:	603-926-9813

Visit us on the concourse November 29 & 30 and December 8 & 9

Equal Opportunity Employer

Winter Tenant Matters and Protections for Renters

Heating Your House Or Apartment Over Winter Break: Frozen Pipe Alert

If you are leaving your house or apartment over the winter break please remember to keep your thermostat turned up at least 55 degrees throughout your residence. Neglecting to do this may cause significant damage to the residence from pipes freezing and water damage. If you are a renter the costs from these damages-which can be in the thousands of dollars-could potentially be passed on to you. SO...if you plan to be out of town for any time over the winter break make arrangements with your landlord to safeguard your residence against this potential serious and costly problem.

$$ Fuel Assistance

If your household is having trouble paying for home heating oil and fuel then you may qualify for assistance from the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program. Qualified households will receive assistance based on their household size and income. Locally residents from both Hampshire and Franklin counties should contact the Franklin Community Action Corporation based in Greenfield. Call 1-800-370-0940 to get access to this program as funds are only available for a limited time.

Winter Protection Plan for Households Facing Electricity Shut Offs

If you are the head of a household and can honestly say that " I cannot pay my electric bill in full and i will not be able to afford food, clothing, rent, medical treatment and other basic necessities" then you may qualify for a special program called The Winter Protection Plan from Western Mass Electric Company (WEMCO). Under this plan WEMCO will agree not to shut off your electric service non payment; not to send you a shut off notice this winter; not to charge you a late payment fee. To qualify contact your local public assistance agency or mail a copy of either a: fuel assistance award letter; a Medicaid card, a food stamp identification card; a copy of your social security card; your unemployment booklet or claim from or notice of action and or eligibility from MA Department of Social Services to:

Northeast Utilities, Office of Credit Administration, PO Box 270, Hartford CT 06141-0270

Important Information for Renters brought to you by Commuter Services (formerly Off Campus Housing office), Rm. 428 Student Union

Rhody Pentathalon to test mettle of Minutewomen indoor track team

By Adam Valachovic
Collegian Staff

And you though one sport was tough. Try five.

Today in Kingston, RI, four members of the Massachusetts women's indoor track team will give it a go at the Rhode Island Pentathlon. With this event consisting of the 55-meter hurdles, high jump, shot put, long jump and 800 meters, one can see how difficult this truly is. All of the women involved have the basics: endurance, composure, strength and, of course, extreme athletic talent. But nothing is more important than heart.

Although senior Andrea Comeau tells of this event as being rather "low key and not super competitive," it still acts as a stepping-stone for future honors. This event will dictate if an athlete should qualify for the New Englands, and eventually the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference Indoor Championships held in March. This is quite an accomplishment; none of these athletes are worried, however, as all have total confidence in their abilities as athletes.

"We all qualified last year," explains Comeau, "and I feel that we all will again."

Making up the quartet are Melissa Ward, newcomer Crystal Therrien, Comeau and Johanna Lelke. Ward is a strong athlete who was almost immediately chosen for this event. Although she benefits the team in numerous areas, her best events are the shot put and the long jump. These events allow her to exhibit all that she has to offer, and give her the chance to shine brilliantly. Ward is no stranger to elite competition, remembering vividly how UMass won the A-10 championship last season. Furthermore, she has always come forth with her best efforts, and even though she "hasn't been feeling well all week," she will try her best to step up to center stage like she always has.

Another staple of UMass women's indoor is Comeau. She is not only a tremendous talent, but always comes up big in pressure situations. She is the school record holder in the high jump at an unbelievable 5' 10", and also holds the record in this elite event. She was one of the key performers to last year's championship run and although she knows that "this is a very young team," she also feels that a repeat may be in the future.

And why should it not with Lelke, a sophomore, and the newcomer Therrien. Lelke, with her strongest event being the high jump, also has some varied experience with this event. She is a strong athlete with unlimited potential, and will be ready today when she enters the realm of qualifying. Although Therrien is only a freshman, she is a pure talent. Merely starting on a team of this caliber is amazing in itself, but Crystal takes it all in stride. Her strong point of the event is the 55-meter hurdles, which will help out the team dearly.

Women's hockey eyes Division I

By Melissa Hammel and Julie Robenhymer
Collegian Staff

Many students here at the University of Massachusetts don't even know that the school has a women's hockey team, let alone that it wants to become a varsity sport. This year's team, with a new coach and an intense sense of dedication, hopes to raise its level of play and prepare for Division I hockey.

The team ended last season with a record of 15-8 and picked up the regional championship title for women's club hockey by defeating rivals Holy Cross, Clarkston, and St. Michael's. Other teams in the tournament included Syracuse, Penn State, UMass Lowell and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Top goal scorers for the Maroon and White were Jenna Nolan, with 34 points on 23 goals, and Michelle Kehyaian, who netted four goals and 20 points.

The team, lead by senior captain Nolan, hopes to improve upon last season as well as repeat its championship title. The squad currently has a record of 3-1.

With the addition of new coach Jodie Herman, the team is optimistic about achieving its goals. A first-year coach and athletic trainer, Herman also works in the Biochemistry department at UMass.

According to Nolan, Herman is "a great addition to our team," and "she kicks our butts in practice."

Senior forward Ellie Fernandez explained that the lazy days of last year are long gone. If the ladies step onto the ice even one minute late for their 6am practices, they do sprints as punishment. She also said that the "dedication is so much better than last year."

Nolan, who leads the team in points, commented on the varying levels of ability on the team, which includes one graduate student, three seniors, eight juniors, eight sophomores, and one freshman. They look to the seniors, Nolan, Fernandez, and Molly Sherman, as well as junior assistant captains, Janine Denoncourt and Gina Lostracco, for leadership. The net is kept by Erin Murphy, who is backed up by Mindy Core. The versatile Core also plays in the forward position.

Because the team thrives while it is short-handed, penalties serve as both a positive and negative factor. "Our weakness is our strength," she said.

Despite the success of the team, it still remains a club sport due to Title IX of the NCAA rules. This states that there must be an equal number of both male and female athletes on varsity teams. If women's ice hockey were to be raised to varsity status, the current balance would be thrown off.

The other factor that is holding back the advancement of the team is lack of funding from the athletic department. The team currently receives assistance from the Student Government Association, the Alumni Association and the Intramural Department. Any other funds are provided to the team personally or through fundraisers.

If women's ice hockey were to become a recognized varsity sport at the University, it would play in Division I of the Eastern College Athletics Conference (ECAC). This would give the team the opportunity to play against teams like Boston University, the University of Connecticut, and Harvard. All three of these teams were only granted varsity status themselves within the past two years.

Currently, the only Division I team scheduled to play against the club is Boston University. This game will therefore be the team's most competitive match of the season.

The ladies' next game is at home in the Mullins Center this Saturday, against MIT.

■ hoops

continued from page 1

bined 8-of-26 from the field over the course of the two-game tournament.

O'Brien sees that unfortunate trend as one that, while not limited to just a few players, cannot continue if the team expects to persevere against opponents like Stanford.

"We've really shot the ball fairly poorly as a team," O'Brien said. "Especially some individuals that usually are much better shooters. Tonia and Kathy are good shooters who just haven't shot well, and one of them is due to break out for a good game."

As far as figuring out a way to beat Stanford, O'Brien doesn't really see any clear-cut answers. While every player on the Maroon and White's squad must rise to the occasion and play the best possible brand of basketball, it will take a little something extra, a little magic even, for the Minutewomen to prevail in this battle. The coach is counting on one unnamed individual to provide the spark necessary to torch the mighty Cardinal.

"This is the kind of game where you need somebody to step in and have a special game," O'Brien said. "You never know who it's going to be it could be somebody coming off the bench, or a starter who hasn't really played that well."

■ vagina

continued from page 6

sor.

Created by Eve Ensler, Vagina Monologues was performed on Broadway for two years in a row. In 1998, Monologues was performed by many leading women in Hollywood, including Glenn Close, Susan Sarandon, Marisa Tomei, Calista Flockhart, Margaret Cho, Whoopi Goldberg and Winona Rider, among others.

"V-Day" was created for the purpose of unifying and strengthening any anti-violence efforts that exist. The goal is to set the first layer for protective, legislative and educational purposes. It is a campaign to end sexual violence and to declare Valentines Day a time to celebrate women and demand an end to the abuse. This will mark the second year in a row that V-Day College Initiative has come out to colleges and universities worldwide.

If you need any additional information, please contact Rachel Edelman at redelman@student.umass.edu or check out www.feminist.com/vday.

- Kathleen Rall

■ chamber

continued from page 6

and perform regularly on and off campus. A few months back they represented UMass at the Earth Mass with the Paul Winter Consort at St. John's Cathedral in New York City. They, like a wide collection of local artistic endeavors, too frequently go unnoticed. But their devout practice and desire to create and share music is commendable and deserving of our attention. Before the semester closes, the Chamber Choir's performance is a wonderful chance for you to give some of your time and open your mind to the fine arts in Amherst.

Sunday's program includes songs representing a variety of musical styles. To name a few: Festival Te Deum and Rejoice in the Lamb, both by Benjamin Britten; Ave Verum and Benedictus by UMass alumnus Jonathan Green; Yo Le Canto by Brunner; and Water Night by Whitacre. UMass faculty member Rod Gilsick will be providing organ accompaniment for all pieces.

Director Abercrombie is looking forward to the concert "I am excited about this because the Chamber Choir has reached a level of musicianship that enabled me to choose truly great works from the choral repertoire."

There is no excuse for not attending this performance as admittance is free and the show begins conveniently at 4:30 Sunday afternoon. Most people already know the elation that can be had from live music. Why neglect the prospect of feeling that way again?

Battling it out for your movie dollar

Tom Hanks of The Green Mile and Rob Schneider of Deuce Bigalow: Male Gigolo, locked in a fierce staring contest

amc There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM.
Mt. Farms 4 • Mt. Farms Mall 584-9153

THE WORLD IS NOT ENOUGH: PG13
Today at (5:00 @ $3.50) 7:40 10:30
Sat 1:00 (5:00@ $3.50) 7:40 10:30
Sun at 1:00 (5:10 @ $3.50) 7:50
Mon - Thur at (5:20 @ $3.50) 8:10

TOY STORY 2: G
Today at (4:40 @ $3.50) 6:50 9:20
Saturday at 12:00 2:20 (4:40 @ $3.50) 6:50 9:20
Sunday at 12:00 2:20 (4:40 @ $3.50) 7:00
Mon - Thur at (5:30 @ $3.50) 8:00

SLEEPY HOLLOW: R
Today at (5:10@ $3.50) 8:00 10:40
Sat at 1:20 (5:10@ $3.50) 8:00 10:40
Sun at 1:20 (5:20 @ $3.50) 8:00
Mon - Thur (5:40@3.50) 8:20

THE GREEN MILE: R
Today at (4:00@ $3.50) 7:50
Sat at 12:10 (4:00@ $3.50)7:50
Sun at 12:10 (4:00 @ $3.50) 8:00
Mon - Thur (4:20@ $3.50) 8:00

$3.50 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
Special Engagement No Passes or Coupons

puttin' on the glitz.

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark it!

By serving America part-time

In the MA Army National Guard YOU CAN...
- Get free undergraduate/ graduate tuition
- Earn from $400-$800 for one weekend
- Receive a $5000–$8000 cash bonus
- Repay your student loans
- Develop leadership ability
- Build a POWERFUL resume

Call Today!
1-800-GO-GUARD
or visit
www.1-800-GO-GUARD.com

YOU CAN

Think About This

You Want To Begin Investing But You Can't Afford Much Per Month, And Inflation Is Eating Your Savings Account For Lunch.

Try Series I Bonds. They're guaranteed to stay ahead of inflation for up to 30 years, and you can get started with just $50. Visit us at www.savingsbonds.gov to find out more.

I Bonds

www.savingsbonds.gov

MASS SKATE 'kick A skate park'
Route 202 • Westfield
(413) 534-1000
Monday & Sat- • BMX Sessions
Friday- • Live Punk Shows
COMPLETE SKATEBOARD, SNOWBOARD, & BMX SHOP.
ELEMENT • SPITFIRE • INDY • SANT CRUZ • FORUM • FOUR SQUARE • DC • OSIRIS • EMERICA • BLACK LABEL • ZERO • 151 • ANTI HERO • VOLCOM • SPLIT • PRISMO • FBM • LOOSE • GLOBE • S • M • GIRL •
WEEKDAYS $5 OFF with COLLEGE ID
LARGEST INDOOR PARK IN MASS. OPEN 7 DAYS • NOON-NINE

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Don't Miss The BUSTOn Film
Fri. at 7:00 Only! SAT & SUN at 7:00 - 9:15
STUDENTS - $ 1.00 Discount! GIANT Screen Stereo
ROLLING STONE
"Sleepy Hollow" is gorgeous filmmaking that brims over with fun house thrills and ravishing romance.
TIME
"Sleepy Hollow" is a total Tim Burton experience, his richest, prettiest, weirdest film since "Batman Returns." "Sleepy Hollow" may be late for Halloween, but this trick is a real treat.
Sleepy Hollow
JOHNNY DEPP CHRISTINA RICCI
Check out our on the World Wide Web
http://www.angelfire.com/ma2/academymusic/
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON 584-8438

UMASS
PUBLIC ADDRESS

Claiming Power, Facing Fear: Women Resist Violence

Janet Aalfs '79
Poet and Writer
Director, Valley Women's Martial Arts
4th Degree Black Belt Shuri-ryu Okinawan Karate

Monday, December 13, 1999, 4 pm
Campus Center 163C • Free and open to all

Sponsored by Women's Studies, Everywoman's Center, Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Women, Chancellor's Office, Student Affairs Office, Alumni Association, Human Relations

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

Art of Living: A world renowned workshop based on breath- yoga meditation and kriya in Amherst. Un-recognized for stress elimination and holistic healing. Durgesh 549-5551. Starts Friday 10 December 6:30pm.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey is playing against MIT Saturday at 1pm at the Mullins Ice Rink. Free admission. Women's Ice Hockey is fun to watch!!

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom luxury apartment available January 1, 2000. Please call 413-253-7377 for more information.

AUTO FOR SALE

VW Jetta 1988, 5Speed manual, power window/seat, alloy wheels, great tires, $2100, call 665-7232.

1997 VW Jetta 43K, Sunroof/Moonroof, 6 CD changer, alloy wheels, new tires; brakes;met. blue. Excellent condition $13,500. 546-3989.

1989 Toyota Corolla GTS 50,000 miles white 5spd moving $3200 Klay 397-8951.

Toyota Camry '91 automatic, sunroof, alarm, top condition $4,300 549-0242.

92 VW Golf 50k auto/air $5000/bo 256-4177.

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779.

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773.

COMPUTERS

Powerbook 1400 w/ethernet card + modem $800 firm. Sarah 5-3704.

Hewlett Packard 15" Monitor .28 Dot pich maximum resolution 1024 x 748 $75.00 413-256-0583.

Dell Pentium2 Laptop 233mHz 64MBRAM 3.2 Hard Mod CD/Floppy 56k Modem + more $1200 negotiable call will 253-8074.

Do you know Autocad and Microstation? If you do call Scott Yarosh at (413) 546-4895 Will pay up to $3000 per job that has to be done.

EMPLOYMENT

Internship available. Come aboard and grow with us. We are a new, web-based retail business in Amherst. We can offer you a great learning experience in growing a business. Work with us during Interterm, Spring or Summer. Hours and location convenient for you. Call Shirley at 1-888-LIGHT -15

Wanted Dec 21-Jan 25. Longer optional student Handyperson, also housekeeper. Car essential. 413-549-1578.

Childcare needed two afternoons a week (Mon & Wed) for 6 and 9 year old girls. starting 1/10/00. No TV. Active outdoor oriented person perferred. Some lite housekeeping. References required. Car perferred. 549-6158.

Now Hiring Mullins Center part-time staff events and operations department apply 2nd floor Mullins Center

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Work for a College Internet Company

While Still in School!

Leverage your Campus Knowledge to get paid well as a Campus Marketing Manager

Skills needed
- Outgoing & Motivated
- Leadership
- Organized & Resourceful
- Project management skills
- Familiarity with campus

Experience
- Sophomore or higher
- Live on or near campus
- Campus involvement
- Active on Internet

Responsibilities
- Help Develop Marketing Plan
- Interview & Hire Support Staff
- Facilitate Campus Relations
- Local Account Management
- Manage Marketing Budget
- Execute Local Campaigns
- Help Conduct Campus Research

Open Interviews will be held on or near your campus the week of Dec. 6th. Go to allstudents.com for exact time, date, & location info.

E-mail resume to jobs@allstudents.com for more information 1-888-640-8810 ext.212

Get Paid To Surf the web. I get paid to surf the web, now you can too, It's absolutely free. For more details e-mail me at pub2000@yahoo.com

Holiday Jobs For The Environment! $300-400/week work with the Sierra Club over the winter break and beyond! Call Jesse 256-6434

EMPLOYMENT

WINTER BREAK FLEXIBLE PART-TIME Day, Evening and weekend hours available Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, Ma has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for winter break. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent readings/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increase to $8.00, health dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact:
Paul R. Bebo
Recruting Cooradinator
1-800-792-4514

ONE SUMMER, A LIFETIME EXPERIENCE. I could spend the summer learning someone else's bussiness, or I could be running my own. For more information visit our website and register to win a Palm Pilot www.collegeroedge.com or call 888-277-7962.

Fraternities * Sororities * Clubs * Student Groups
Student organizations earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 797-5743, x. 301, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com

Bartenders make $100-$300 per night no experience necessary call 1-800-981-8168 ext. 205

EMPLOYMENT

Movers Part time positions available for winter intersession and spring semester. Starting pay $8.00 per hour. Located close to UMASS. Call 584-4746

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

FOR SALE

Loveseats (5), Coffee tables (8). Free delivery. 586-2221.

All New Brass Bed Queen Size orthapedic mattress/box. Still in plastic. Cost $ 1100. sell $365 can deliver. (413) 781-0242.

All New Brass Bed King size orthapedic Mattress/box. Still in plastic. Cost $1500. Sell $525 (413) 781-0237.

SNOWBOARD 97 MIA 153 Good condition Capped Edges, Dr Pro Model $300 Call 546-0647

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

LOST & FOUND

Found Purple Jacket outside of LGRT before Thanksgiving. Call to claim 546-4427

MISCELLANEOUS

Internet Based business offering an unique tridigital destination call or e-mail 413-263-6762 or gmm0819@aol.com

ROOM FOR RENT

Take over my lease. One lg bdrm in a lg 3 bdrm house in Amherst. Call Christina at 253-7140

Furnished Room for rent. Private entrance. $285 utilities encluded. 4 miles from UMASS. Needs transportation. 253-3670.

1 Bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment in Hadley. $278/month and utilities. On bus route. Nice yard. Call Alexa. 582-1821.

1 Bedroom Avail. for 1-2 people. Cheap. Free gym. On bus route Jan/Feb - May 31st. 253-2518

Room Available in two bedroom apt in house. Female preferred. On bus route call 549-8969

LG 1 Bedroom Apt. Available 1/1/2000 perfect for 1 or 2 Call 549-4926

1 or 2 Rooms available in 4 bedroom house. Right next to Campus. Washer and dryer. Available Jan/Feb. $305/Mo. ONLY call Prav or Deepa 549-1543.

January-August lease in Leverett. $325/mo. utilities, washer and dryer included. Call Cemil 549-1643

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 or 2 People Wanted for large bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment in Puffton. Next to bus stop and laundry. Last months rent paid utitlities included. Available start of spring semester. Call 548-6861.

Female Roommate Wanted 1 room in a 2 bedroom apartment. Cheap, clean on bus route. Call Jen, Noelle or Katie 253-0538.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Great House Needs!! 1 or 2 Roommates Wanted 2 share one huge room in 1, great house. Jan/Feb - June bus stops across street, backyard, super, fun-loving, remarkable roommates. Call 549-6886

One Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apartment available spring semester on North Pleasant St. $387/month includes heat female call 253-6726

Two roomates wanted to share master bedroom in three bedroom apartment in Puffton. Private bath and walk-in closet $285+ each month call Pat/Steve 549-9310.

1 Roommate Wanted 1 minute to bus busses every 5min CHEAP rent 549-9254

Share Huge Room. Jan-Aug awesome house + roommates. $250 month cheap utilities on bus route 586-9552 Julia, Pam, Nate

Roommate Wanted in 2bedroom Brandywine Apt. utilities included $215/month on bus route call Eric, Greg 549-1029

SERVICES

Feeling Ripped off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined your favorite suit! Are debit collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

SERVICES

Personal Holiday Candygrams only $7.00! Delivery anywhere at UMass. Personal greeting with candy 253-6722

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.spring-breakdirect.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummer-tours.com

WANTED

Be an internet star! Seeking off-campus students to host 24/7 live web cam in your home. Interested? Chect out www.masslive.com/offcampuscam or call 584-2777 for more information

Seeking aspiring local bands to be featured in student film. Please send demo tape to UVC-TV19 216 Student Union c/o noise ASAP for more information call 545-1336

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, DEC. 10

Service – There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. A free Shabbat dinner will follow.

SATURDAY, DEC. 11

Comedy – MISSION IMPROvable, UMass' improvisational troupe, will perform its improvisational show at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Concert – There will be a concert entitled "English Voices," offering works from the Middle Ages through the early Baroque Era at 8 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall, Sage Hall at Smith College.

SUNDAY, DEC. 12

Procession – The festive Advent Procession will begin at Helen Hills Hills Chapel at 7 p.m., and will proceed to St. John's, St. Mary's, Edwards, and the First Churches. A reception will follow.

Readings – Local writers Roger Lockard and Penny Cuniggim will read from their works at 4 p.m. in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College.

MONDAY, DEC. 13

Lecture – Jacqueline Field will talk about her research on the history of a small silk company in Maine from noon-1 p.m. in Seelye 207 at Smith College.

NOTICES

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space will hold an exhibit entitled "Filial Relationships" by Angela Temple until Dec. 10. Another exhibit, "Holding the Ocean" by Shannon Scilla will also be held until Dec. 10.

Art – An exhibit by artist D. Denenge Akpem entitled "Dayst/Akpem: A Tale of Two Families," a multi-dimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience, will be on display at Smith College's Alumnae House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Community – The library hours for Dec. 6 through Dec. 19 will be 7 a.m.-2 a.m. Study space is available, but there will be no staffed services from 7-8 a.m. and midnight-2 a.m.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Information – The last information sessions this semester for the domestic exchange program will be held Tuesdays and Wednesdays until Dec. 15 and also by appointment. This will be in 614 Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Call 545-5351 for more information. The priority deadline for applications is Dec. 13, and the final deadline is March 1.

Support – AL-ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 10, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Great Performances "Andrea Bocelli: Sacred Arias" (In Stereo) (R)				Great Performances "Burn the Floor" (R)		Wash. Week
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Figure Skating (In Stereo)		Candid Camera (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Kill Switch" (R)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Figure Skating (In Stereo)		Candid Camera (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Kill Switch" (R)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Holiday at Pops				20/20 (R)		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (R)	Nanny (R)	Roswell "Price" (In Stereo) (R)		Angel "Cry Oh" (In Stereo) (R)		News (R)		Friends (R)	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Providence "The Letter" (R) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Cherished" (R) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV (R)	"Lost in the Bermuda Triangle" (1999, Adventure) Tom Verica (R)				News		Real TV (R) (R)	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (R)	Ent. Tonight	Providence "The Letter" (R) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Cherished" (R) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons (R)	Frasier (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Friends (R)	★★★ "Door Runnings" (1993, Comedy) Leon (In Stereo) (R)				News		Friends (R)	Frasier
WWLP	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Providence "The Letter" (R) (In Stereo)		Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Law & Order "Cherished" (R) (R)		News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Jessye Norman – Home for the Holidays (In Stereo) (R)				Business Rpt.	Frasier
WGGB	20	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Boy-World	Odd Man Out	Sabrina-Witch	Hughleys (R)	20/20 (R)		News (R)	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	"Lost in the Bermuda Triangle" (1999, Adventure) Tom Verica (R)				Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	17	Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★★½ "Moonraker" (1979, Adventure) Roger Moore, Lois Chiles						"You Only Live Twice" (1967)
A&E	23	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Paranoia" (R)		Biography: Merv Griffin		Investigative Reports (R) (R)		Porot "Problem at Sea" (R)		Law & Order "Vengeance"
CNN	29	Worldview (R)	Moneyline News	hour (R)	Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	36	Com -Presents	Canned Ham	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★½ "Tales From the Crypt Presents Bordello of Blood" (1996)				Saturday Night Live (R)		Saturday Night Live
DISC	49	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Moose		On the Inside: State		News		Discover Mag.	Storm Warning (R)	On the Inside: State
ESPN	43	Sportscenter		Sportscenter of the Decade: The 1980s (R)				Up Close		Hesman Prev.	50 Greatest	Sportscenter
LIFE	69	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope "V-Fibing" (R)		Figure Skating		U.S. Trophies Lalique (Live)		Once and Again (In Stereo)
MTV	53	100 Greatest Videos		100 Greatest Videos		100 Greatest Videos		Biorhythm (R)	Head Trip (R)	Daria (R)	Fanatic (R)	9 Days That Rocked the '90s
NICK	46	All That	Caldog	Hey Arnold! (R)	"Alien Vacation" (1999)	Angry Smith. (In Stereo)		I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy	I Love Lucy
SCIFI	68	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Brimstone "Slayer" (In Stereo)		Brimstone "Repentance" (R)		Brimstone "Executioner" (R)		Brimstone "Ashes" (In Stereo)		Brimstone "Slayer" (In Stereo)
TLC	26	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Secret History of Bikers (R)		Mayday: The Investigators (R)		Mayday: On the Bridge (R)		Secret History of Bikers (R)
TNT	54	Due South "Red, White or Blue"		ER "Fire in the Belly" (In Stereo)		★½ "Tales From the Crypt Presents Bordello of Blood" (1996)		NBA Basketball: Philadelphia 76ers at New York Knicks. (In Stereo Live) (R)			Inad NBA	★½ "Silent Hunter" (1994)
USA	59	Baywatch "To the Max" (R)		JAG "Yeah, Baby" (In Stereo) (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★ "No Escape" (1994, Science Fiction) Ray Liotta, Lance Henriksen. (In Stereo) (R)				"Tales-Crypt"
HBO	33	5:30) "Seven Minutes"		Inside the NFL (In Stereo) (R)		★½ "I Know What You Did Last Summer" (1997)				★½ "I Still Know What You Did Last Summer" (1998, Horror) (R) (R)		Chris Rock (R)
MAX	70	1:45) ★★ "U.S. Marshals" (1998)		Tommy Lee Jones. PG-13 (R)		★★★ "Little Boy Blue" (1997) Ryan Phillippe. (R)				★½ "Soldier" (1998, Science Fiction) Kurt Russell. (R) (R)		Windows
SHOW	66	"Gift of Love: The Daniel Huffman Story" (1999) Eileen Henson.				★ "Species II" (1998) Michael Madsen. (R) (R)				Movie News	Stargate SG-1	Outer Limits "Small Friends" (R)	Total Recall

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	21	Gavel to Gavel
3	CBS/3 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4 Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5 Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57 Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN Movie Ch	26	CNN Si
8	UPN/20 Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel	28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain	29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61 Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24 Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WOCH & HSCN	32	Cartoon Network
14	International	33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV	34	C-Span
16	WB/New Haven	35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance	36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel	37	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19	38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Robotman ByJim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot ByBill Amend

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Joe Banani By JD Salinger

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Embrace the ordinary today, for even in the most routine, mundane affairs you can find some enlightenment and excitement. Take a fresh look!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – Organization is the key to success at this time. Don't let someone try to fool you into believing there's order in all the chaos!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – There is a possibility that a conflict will develop today between your personal life and your professional life. Stay true to your needs.

PISCES (Feb 19-March 20) – This is a good day to embrace parts of your own past which have recently given you some trouble. You certainly don't want to hold a grudge.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You may be quite accident-prone today. Now is no time to get yourself involved in unfamiliar, highly complicated endeavors.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – You may have a run-in with someone who doesn't wish to tell you what you need to know at this time. Be warned: looking good will get you nowhere!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – An infatuation you've been suppressing for some time may come to a head today. It's a good time to let certain secrets out of the bag.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – Home affairs may prove trickier than expected today. Focus on those things which bring you immediate comfort and pleasure.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Make plans to get together with loved ones whom you haven't seen in a while. Now is not the time to let family members go unnoticed or unappreciated.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Reassess your financial situation today. Future issues are coming to a head. Planning ahead can pay off handsomely in the days to come.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Working for a lost cause may seem the noble thing to do today, but the fact is you are wasting your abilities. Turn to things that can be done!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You and a partner may experience a little friction today as a result of an inequitable distribution of responsibility. Be fair!

Quote of the Day

"Montana - At least our cows are sane!"

–seen on bumper sticker

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Conventional mousetraps are next to useless. Just let us leave Jimmy here overnight and I guarantee your mouse troubles will be over, Mrs. Hoffman."

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Breakfast

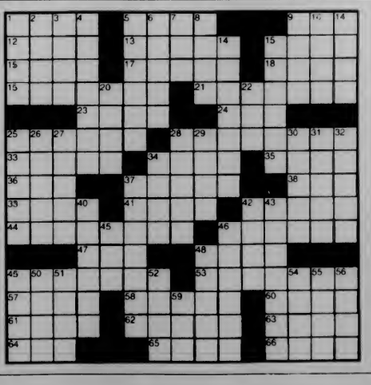
Oatmeal
Fried Eggs
Banana Pancakes
Corned Beef Hash
Hash Browns

Lunch

Soup du Jour
Hot Turkey Sandwich
Ravioli
Cuban Black Beans
Pasta Bar
Salad Bar

Dinner

Soup du Jour
Lemon Pepper Fish
Baked Chicken
Moroccan Vegetables (B,F,W only)
Zucchini Mushroom Crepes (B,H,W only)
Pasta Bar
Salad Bar



ACROSS
1 Practice boxing
5 Snare
9 Samoyed, e.g.
12 The — of the party
13 Spooky
15 Grant
16 PDQ relative
17 — down clinches
18 Tilt
19 Wreath
21 Lunar spectacle
23 Stonkiee bird
24 Barnyard animal
25 Spears
28 Complaint
31 Pen name
34 Gusted
35 Animal's stomach
36 "— been thinking"
37 Arrives
38 Fish eggs
39 Pilot base
41 House part
42 Creature of folklore
44 Sporty shoes
45 Kohl target
47 — Dawn Chong
48 Sofa ends
49 Antique photograph
53 Hook up
57 Bryce Canyon's state
58 Avoid adroitly
60 Actress Adams
61 Races the engine
62 Goes by horseback
63 Emerald and sapphire
64 Cook in a skillet
65 Didn't win
66 Tiny fly

DOWN
1 Smelting residue
2 Galileo's birthplace
3 From a distance
4 Copy
5 Game played with rackets
6 Frequents the library
7 Jackie's second mate
8 Stack
9 Intense
10 Harem pants
11 Trait carrier
14 Shuns
15 Doctor's place
20 Vigoda and others
22 Guided
25 Dens
26 Chipmunk's leader
27 Sibling's daughter
28 "Stand and Deliver" star
29 Red meat
30 Swashbuckler Flynn
31 A Judd
32 Surf material
34 Oaf
37 Baby's one-piece garment
40 Paint — chemical elements
42 Fitness centers
43 Money for a rainy day
45 Round Table knight
46 Actor Borgnine
48 White House staffers
49 Domain
50 Caesar's road
51 Blue shade
52 Harmful
54 Middle Eastern gulf
55 Capital of Peru
56 For fear that
59 Stir

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

Y	E	A	S	T		S	H	A	R	K		L	A	M
O	L	I	V	E		A	O	N	T	A		A	V	E
U	M	B	R	A		T	O	K	E	N		D	O	E
			C	L	E	F		S	K	E	W	S
S	L	O	S	H	E	D		A	G	A	I	N	S	T
M	E	N		G	I	N		R	O	S	E
O	V	E	N	S		B	O	D	Y	S	H	O	P	S
K	E	A		W	A	R	E	S		T	A	P
E	N	L	I	G	H	T	E	N		A	S	T	A	R
			S	L	O	T	S		A	D	H	E	R	E
S	T	R	E	A	M	S		D	I	V	E	R	S	E
L	E	A	S	T		P	O	R	E
Y	E	N		E	X	C	E	L		N	O	B	E	L
E	G	O		E	V	O	K	E		M	I	N	D	E
A	Y	E		S	I	D	E	D		S	A	Y	S	O

12/10/99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam White
Photo Technition	Dan Santella
Copy Editor	Mary Grein
Production Supervisor	Katie Ross
Production Staff	Vlad Zakashansky, Lisa Metcalf

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

Motor City Melee: UM battles Detroit

Titans look to exact revenge, end UM's three-game streak

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

A wise man once said that it wasn't where you started, but rather where you finished. The Massachusetts men's basketball team certainly hasn't had to take that into consideration in the "Bruiser" Flint regime – not until now.

Like clockwork, Flint's teams have come out of the gates slow, digging themselves a hole that Amherst faithful have come to expect early. Some have picked themselves up while others, namely last year's 14-16 squad, have dug too far and never had the strength to pull themselves up.

This year's edition has run its record to 4-2, winning three straight, most recently a pressurized 52-51 slaying of the Villanova Wildcats on Monday. In his fourth season on top, Flint takes his squadron and his best-ever start to Detroit tomorrow afternoon to take on the 4-2 Titans, who fully remember last season's loss at the hands of the Minutemen.

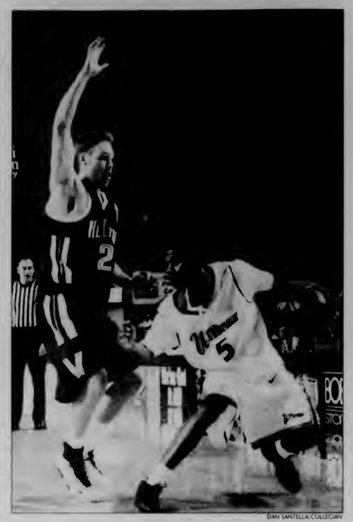
Smothering defense held the Titans to their second lowest point total of the season, falling to the Minutemen 59-46 at the Mullins Center. Otherwise, Detroit was spectacular, finishing the regular season 25-4 and earning a berth in the NCAA Tournament, where it knocked off UCLA before succumbing to Final Four-bound Ohio State.

"Last year, we did a good job in defending their guys," Flint said. "I thought overall, it was our best defensive effort of the season."

If he hopes for a repeat, Flint better hope for an answer to Detroit's Rashad Phillips, an answer previous opponents have failed miserably to find. The senior leads the nation in scoring, averaging 26.3 points per game. This included a 34-point explosion against Georgia State and a 22-point performance at Michigan. The Motor City native scored nearly half of the Titans' points in last year's meeting with the Minutemen, tallying 20 in the loss.

Phillips will pair up with senior Desmond Ferguson at guard to form the Midwestern Collegiate Conference's most potent backcourt combination. The duo shoots a combined 50 percent from the field, with Phillips shooting a torrid 48 percent from behind the arc.

"Last year, we did a great job of switching off. We're going to try to take them away and make somebody else handle [the ball]," Flint said. "We need to make [Phillips] work to get the ball. We can't let him beat us, we have to make somebody else beat us."



UMass will combat the Titans' little big men with one of the Atlantic 10's deepest and most skilled backcourts. Monty Mack averages 20 points per game, good for 41st in the nation. In recent past, though, Mack has been shadowed by an opposing guard, adversaries playing a box-in-one on the Boston native to force the Minutemen to go elsewhere for scoring. Shannion Crooks has been inconsistent in the scoring column while others have been gun-shy.

"Villanova didn't score because we didn't let them. We were always in their face. They had a tough time scoring against us," Flint said. "We didn't score because we couldn't make a wide-open shot and there's a difference. Somebody's got to step up. We have to make some shots."

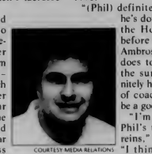
Crooks has been off-and-on with his shot, shooting a disastrous 35.6 percent from the field, but has slowly taken the lead point guard spot away from Jonathan DePina. Although DePina has started in all six games, he only played 11 minutes in the victory over Villanova, compared to Crooks, who registered 34.

Co-captain Chris Kirkland has slowly worked his way in to late-season form, averaging over 20 points per game in the last three, all of which have resulted in wins. After a sluggish start against Villanova, Kirkland rallied the troops in the second half, scoring 18 points and adding seven points leading up to Crooks' dramatic 25-footer to put the Minutemen ahead late in the game. Kirkland would finish with a game-high 22 points just two games after dropping a season-high 23 on Boston College.

UMass is holding opponents to just 40 percent shooting from the field. Meanwhile, through six games, the Titans are shooting the lights out, knocking down 49.5 percent of their shots. Similar to the Minutemen, Detroit fields a very inexperienced frontcourt.

DAN SANTELLA COLLEGIAN

Monty Mack averages 20 points to lead the team, but the opposition has tailed him in recent games, forcing others to toe the line.



MEN'S HOOP
UMASS @ DETROIT
SATURDAY, 4 P.M.
91.1 FM-WMUA
ADAM DEYOUNG-PLAY
JAKE ANDERSON-COLOR
PREVIEW

Women's lax makes a switch at head coach

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

After pulling off the unimaginable, Francesca McClellan will step down as the head coach of the Massachusetts women's lacrosse team.

McClellan guided the Minutewomen to two consecutive nine-win seasons after rebuilding the program literally from scratch – she took over as coach one 0-8 season after the team's two-year dispansion over the course of 1991 and 1992. By her fifth year at the helm, UMass had worked its way into the ECAC tournament, finishing its season one score away from top-ranked Penn St., 14-13.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Phil Barnes

In her final stint last year, the former two-time Ivy League Player of the Year coached straight through the ninth month of her second pregnancy to lead the Maroon and White into the first-ever Atlantic 10 women's lacrosse tournament.

McClellan will leave the team to spend more time with her two children and her husband, John, while second year assistant Phil Barnes steps up as the interim head coach.

"Everyone's disappointed (that Francesca's leaving), because she's an awesome coach, but its definitely the best thing for her," sophomore midfielder Christy Ambrose said. "She's got a baby and a four-year-old. Some people don't realize how much time coaching takes up."

"(The team was) surprised, and at the same time, they understood, from her perspective, what was going on in her life at a personal level," Barnes said. "The players have been very supportive."

Barnes is no stranger to the position of head coach. As the skipper at Holy Cross from 1996 to 1997, the Assumption College graduate picked up the honor of Patriot League Coach of the Year after leading the Crusaders to their best season in four years. He also brought the New England II team to the United States Women's Lacrosse Association National Championship that same year, 1996.

"(Phil) definitely knows what he's doing – he coached the Holy Cross team before he came here," Ambrose said. "He also does tons of camps in the summer. He definitely has his own styles of coaching. It should be a good season."

"I'm excited that Phil's taking over the reins," McClellan said. "I think it's the best decision for the program and players. It should prove to be an exciting spring."

While Barnes will likely have his own slant on running the squad, he insists that the Minutewomen will continue in their winning ways.

"I plan to keep improving the team on the same path that we have been," Barnes said. "The first year I was here, we really made a jump up as far as wins, and after that we really did a great job improving our defense. Last year, with all the things that the players had to go through, we really had a great year... and hopefully we'll do as well this year. Hopefully even better."

UMass will not be able to miss a beat, as this year's schedule includes perennial ACC powerhouse North Carolina, as well as lacrosse giant Syracuse and defending A-10 champ Virginia Tech. In addition, the university will be hosting the conference tournament in only its second year of existence.

"Adding North Carolina improves our strength of schedule tremendously, and it will be great to have a southern team come up and play a northern school," Barnes said.

"We're very excited about (hosting the A-10's). It gives other schools' family and friends a chance to come out to UMass and see what a great Campus this is."

UMass set to stun ranked Stanford

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

After pulling off a tasty win at this past weekend's Gene Hackerman Rice Invitational, the Massachusetts women's basketball team will have had a full week to savor the flavor. But on Sunday, it's back to work, as the Minutewomen host No. 22 Stanford in a 2 pm showdown at the William D. Mullins Center.

UMass (1-0) left the Lone Star State on Sunday wearing a Texas-sized grin, after pummeling New Mexico State on Saturday, 65-58. The tournament's opening faceoff, in which the Maroon and White dropped a barnburner to host Rice, 59-58, also went a long way in defining the changing face of this young team.

"The one thing that has been a process with every game is the intensity," O'Brien said. "We came out kind of flat in that first half against Rice. Then we made some substitutions and had some players in the second half, players like Amber Sneed, playing with a lot of emotion and playing hard. That kind of rubbed off on everybody, and we carried that over into the New Mexico game. Hopefully that's something that we take into this weekend."

The Stanford Cardinal (2-1) returns 11 letterwinners, including four starters, from its NCAA Tournament team of last year. That fact would seem to heap some additional pressure on the shoulders of O'Brien's veterans, as the Minutewomen count seven underclassmen among the 11 players currently on their roster.

"To a certain degree, our veterans are going to need to step up," O'Brien said. "But Stanford has an awful lot of sophomores and juniors on their team; they have some good experience, but not great experience."

Head coach Tara VanDerveer, in her 14th season at the Stanford helm, will employ a staggeringly large lineup (eight players at 6-feet or taller) in vying for her 370th career win. Such large adversaries may create some matchup problems for the Maroon and White, particularly when defending 6-foot-6 forward Carolyn Moos and 6-foot-7 center Cori Enghusen.

"The size is just one of those things you deal with," O'Brien said. "We'll probably try to front them a little bit more down in there. Carolyn Moos is a pretty good athlete for her size, so you're going to have to play her pretty honest. She also has a pretty good shot, right out to 16 or 17 feet. [Enghusen] is a little slower afoot, and left-handed, so we've got to approach her a little differently. We're going to be more athletic in the post, so they'll have to use speed, as opposed to using their size, to beat us there."

The Maroon and White's athleticism in the post will only provide part of the answer to upsetting the Cardinal. Stanford and UMass both rely heavily on veteran leadership at the point position to set their tone at both ends of the floor, and O'Brien foresees play at the one as the most crucial factor in Sunday's contest.

"I think the key to the game is going be at that point guard spot," O'Brien said. "They've got a senior point guard; we've got a junior. Those two are going to control the tempo for each team, and how they handle the situation will probably dictate how the teams can play and adjust."

Tempo has been the Maroon and White's saving grace this season, as O'Brien's transition scheme has capitalized greatly on the play of fleet-footed guards like Kathy Coyner and freshman Ebony Pegues. While Coyner entered this season as the team's undisputed floor leader, Pegues has emerged recently as an offensive force with the ability to put points on the board as well as get others into the act.

Even as Pegues has done a fantastic job spelling Coyner, and giving the Ohio native some much needed breathing time, O'Brien now has the luxury of playing both guards simultaneously, as a backcourt battery that should create some difficult assignments for the Cardinal defensively.

"Flores and Carey, who make up their starting backcourt, aren't that big," O'Brien said. "They've got good size at their three, four, and five, but we match up real well size-wise with their guards. So we could very easily plan Ebony and Kathy together.

"At a couple of positions, Ebony has the speed and the quickness to get herself to the basket. So we may try to get her into a position where she can take someone off the dribble a couple of times, and use that to our advantage," O'Brien added.

Whereas Pegues has just begun to realize her potential within the UMass system, several other big guns along O'Brien's roster have fallen curiously silent over the last few games. Guards Coyner and Tonia Thomas, both of whom were looked to as primary scoring options earlier in the season, endured lukewarm shooting performances in Texas; the pair shot a com-

Turn to HOOPS page 7

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Tonia Thomas will be looking to rebound from a lukewarm shooting performance in Texas when the Minutewomen square off against Stanford on Sunday.

UM/UConn rivalry rages on

Men's swimming tries to tame UConn

By Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

Almost all stories, whether truth or fiction, have an antagonist. The antagonist helps make the story interesting by creating suspense, and keeps onlookers on the edge of their seats as they await the outcome of the vexatious situation they are captivated by. For the University of Massachusetts, whether the sport is football, basketball, tennis or hockey, the antagonist has always been the same: its bitter rival, the University of Connecticut.

For the UMass men's swimming team, the antagonist is no different. But unlike the football team and the school's other sport teams, the men's swim team has historically been successful against the Huskies. That however still doesn't put a pleasant spin on the relationship between the two. Head coach Russ Yarworth still considers the Huskies a serious threat, referring to them as "huge rivals", and says that his team has been gearing up for the confrontation. When asked whether his team was taking any extra measures in training for their meet against UConn this Saturday, Yarworth responded that the rivalry between the two schools is so great that the team didn't need any extra prompts or motivation from him, that the motivation was already there.

The Minutemen started off their season bulldozing their opponents, seizing their first four meets, but their smooth ride was interrupted when they dropped two meets. The first was to Columbia University at the Joseph Rogers Pool, where they were defeated 17-13, and the second was last week, to the Orangemen at Syracuse University 131-204. The loss to the Orangemen was partly due to the fact that the Minutemen were undermanned, thus allowing Syracuse to compete in more events, which gave them much of the final margin of victory. However, Yarworth admitted that the face off at Syracuse, which has been one of their toughest opponents to date, has left his team a little worn-out. This condition will hopefully be remedied before their face-off with the Huskies on Saturday. A thrashing of UConn this weekend would ensure that the Minutemen would have something to celebrate on New Years Eve, since their next competition won't be occurring until after the New Year.

The makeup of the Minutemen and the Huskies is similar. The core of each team consists of freshmen. But while the young Minutemen may be lacking in years they are not lacking in talent, ability, or skill. Both Yarworth and the team will be relying heavily on their mainstays next week against the Huskies. Primarily, those mainstays are juniors Billy Brown and Chris Arsenault. Despite the team's loss at Syracuse, Brown was able to set two new records, while simultaneously winning both the 100 and 200-yard breaststroke. Seniors Ed Heffernan and Henry Turner also each won two events last week. Yarworth will be looking to both the junior and senior duos to set a positive tone and win events.

Although Yarworth concedes that it will be a close meet, he believes that his team has a leg up on most of the distance and diving events. Yarworth hopes that a win in those events, in addition to the Minutemen grabbing some other toss-up events, will amount to his team leaving Connecticut victorious. Either way, watching the matchup between the two rivals will be exciting, especially since the Huskies have improved since last season.

UM women look to collar Lady Huskies

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

With the words "bad dog" on their lips and brandishing rolled up newspapers in its hands, the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team is prepared to keep the Huskies on a short leash as the UConn/UMass rivalry continues tomorrow at Joseph R. Rogers Jr. pool.

However, the Minutewomen will have no easy task muzzling the Huskies. The Huskies stand at 5-1 and have been a dominant force lurking amongst the chlorination of any pool this season. Although just coming off a loss to Rutgers University in which they fell by only by one point to place fourth at the Nike Cup, the Huskies have proven they know more than just the doggy paddle.

Demonstrating this in at least the breaststroke event as UConn freshman Kate Larson with a time of 1:13.26 at the U.S. Open in San Antonio, Texas became the first person in UConn swimming program to qualify for the United States Olympic Trials. Larson has also broken a pool record at UConn's Wolff-Zakin Natatorium in the breaststroke and was a triple winner in two meets in her first season in the collegiate ranks.

Yet, it will take more than one big dog to prevent the Maroon and White from coming out on top this Saturday. Similar to UConn, the Minutewomen are also coming off a recent loss to Syracuse University and will be looking for that sixth victory against the Huskies.

Helping to keep UConn chasing their tails will be sophomore Anne Dettlof who has quelled many of her competitors in her freestyle events. Dettlof has earned herself a position in the winner's circle in every meet in which she has competed.

Another Minutewoman who has been equally prolific is sophomore Andrea Kazanjian. Kazanjian has added points to the UMass scores in both the 50- and 100-yard fly events.

Senior Elizabeth Risotto has also been a major asset to the team swimming strong in the backstroke events, while fellow senior Andrea Spencer has been powerful in the IM events.

Not confined merely to the water, freshman Kate Allery has practically owned the diving event for UMass. Allery has garnered wins in both the one-meter and three-meter events. In just her first year, the South Hadley native has broken the school record for 3-meter diving, tallying a 286.80 score against Boston University, nearly 40 points better than history's closest competitor. Not to be outdone is junior diver Robin Velona, who has been equally strong in her appearances in the both diving forums. Against the very same Terriers, Velona nailed down a school record of her own, a 265.65 mark from a meter up.

Yet even with all the Minutewomen's strengths and stand out athletes they will have to be on their game to avoid the ticks on the clock rather than the ones on the dogs as they attempt to race ahead of the Huskies tomorrow at 12:00.

12-13-1999

Fraternity Drinking Barred Until Control Plan Adopted

More and More Buildings Coming

The U. of M. will benefit heavily from the Capital Outlay Program set up in Chapter 604 of the Acts of 1952 of the State legislature this year.

Among the appropriations is one of $1,051,000 for a Public Health Center Building to be located south of the dining hall now under construction. A supplementary federal appropriation of $250,000 is also available for the building which will house all bacteriology and public health work, the nursing school, state offices of public health, and the public health services for western Mass. as well as offices for Dr. Radcliffe and the out-patient part of the [illegible] story building will [illegible] ture to that [illegible] expected [illegible] after 1¼ [illegible] spring.

The [illegible] building [illegible] be completed [illegible] of $850,000 [illegible] electrical [illegible] equipment, and cover landscaping. The building is designed to house the complete radio station thus moving W.M.U.A. from the tower of South College to its own unit consisting of two studios, an observation room, a record storage room, maintenance room, and office space. The entire engineering school [illegible] there [illegible] plete with [illegible] fices.

"The old [illegible] Center [illegible] will be retained [illegible] $70,000 [illegible] sion which [illegible] U. [illegible] are [illegible]

Frat Council, Student Life Committee, And President Must Agree On System

A meeting of a sub-committee of the University Committee on Student Life to which fraternity presidents were invited last week set up the following policy—until a reasonable plan can be submitted by the Interfraternity Council for control of drinking, there will be no liquor in the fraternity houses.

This statement is the most recent on the drinking question which came to a head last spring. As of March 14, 1952, there has been no serving of alcoholic beverages through the "chit system" at any fraternity house on campus.

Such a move was the result of an investigation into the legality of methods used by fraternities to distribute liquor to members and guests by Mr. Hitchcock of the Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission. Mr. Hitchcock recommended that a lawyer be obtained by the University to study the full details of the situation. The Boston law firm subsequently engaged suggested that the methods employed be discontinued. The University accepted the recommendation and declared the purchase of liquor over or a fraternity bar through the "chit system" illegal. Since that statement was made, it has been the practice for each member to privately possess his own alcoholic beverages. The most recent ruling [illegible] even this.

At its [illegible] Wednesday [illegible] terms [illegible] to [illegible] Interfraternity [illegible] in Thompson. Those [illegible] committee are: Rich [illegible] Casey, Paul Robbins [illegible] Marshall.

2 Orchestras, Chorus & Harps

The University Concert Association wishes to announce the following schedule of concerts to be given at the cage during the school year, 1952-1953:

Oct. 6, 8 p.m., Columbus Boy's choir; Dec. 7, 2:30 p.m., Rochester Philharmonic orchestra; Jan. 21, 8 p.m. [illegible]on "Pops" orchestra; Apr. [illegible] Conrad Thibault and the [illegible]

[illegible] concerts are presented for [illegible]udents of the University by the [illegible]t Association, a student organ- [illegible]ed are supported by the student [illegible] through the student tax.

Troy Keynotes SL Conference

The University student leaders met [illegible] a conference last week on Thurs- [illegible]o prepare for the school year.

[illegible] registration and lunch. [illegible]wyrda '54, co-chairman [illegible]Block '55, welcomed the [illegible] Curtis and Dean Hoo[illegible]

Mahar's Bill Proposing Change To University Status Moves To House Of Representatives For Vote Next Week

Among the persons who have endorsed Senate Bill 207 are:

Rep. Frank Allen Of Auburn, George L. Barrus of Goshen, Rep. Raymond Beach of Wilbraham, Rep. Clarence Brown of Brimfield, Rep. Lee Cournoyer of Worcester, Rep. Harrison Chadwick of Winchester, Rep. Logan R. Dickie of Holyoke, Rep. Thomas T. Gray of Reading, Rep. Howard Driscoll of Springfield, Rep. Francis G. Gregory of Chicopee, Rep. Lawrence Law of Holyoke, Rep. George Porter of Agawam, Rep. Anthony Parenzo of Westfield.

Sen. Edward M. Rowe of Middlesex, Rep. Ralph W. Sullivan of Boston, Roy C. Hawes, Master of the State Grange, Thomas F. Whitbread, Pres. of Amherst Businessmen's Association, Selectman Pray of Amherst.

Organizations that endorsed the bill included, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Holyoke Central Labor Union, the Holyoke Firemen, the State Farm Bureau Federation and the State Grange.

Seniors Hold High Hopes Of Being The First Class To Graduate From University Of Mass.

SENATOR RALPH C. MAHAR

State House, Apr. 10—Fulfillment of the hopes of Massachusetts State College students that seniors this year will get their diplomas from a "university" instead of a "college" moved a step nearer realization Thursday, April 10, when the State Senate by a voice vote unanimously approved Bill 533, formerly 207.

The bill, introduced by Senator Ralph C. Mahar of Orange, at the request of more than 2300 students now in the college, as well as the Alumni Association representing many more thousands, was reported in to the Senate on Wednesday by the Joint Educational Committee for a first reading.

Under a suspension of the rules the bill was given second and third readings on Thursday and passed to be engrossed.

Hopes of the State College student body now rest with the members of the House, who are expected to vote next week. A favorable verdict is expected, however, since the Joint Educational Committee had recommended the bill with only one member voting against it.

In addition, the bill has received the support of the college administration, the Board of Trustees, and newspapers throughout the State such as the Boston Globe, Quincy Patriot-Ledger, the Holyoke Transcript, and others.

What Goes On At MSC

[illegible] State "College" at Amherst is made up of seven schools and three divisions:

[illegible]ool of liberal arts
[illegible]ool of agriculture
[illegible]ool of home economics
[illegible]ool of [illegible]
[illegible]ool of [illegible]
[illegible]ool of engineering

Collegian

New Journalism Major

Over 320 Enrol[illegible]

New Record S[illegible]

1168 Women [illegible] Boy[illegible]

W. S. G. A. HEAD [illegible] PRESIDENT

Ratio 2[illegible]

U. Of Mass. Legislature

No. 1

FACULTY [illegible]ERS ARE NOUNCED

Freshman Class May Reach 360; A Record

340 Register on First Day of Freshman Week; 231 Men and 109 Women Comprise Total

The class of 1941 will have 350 members, according to a list of freshman released last Monday morning by the registrar's office. Two hundred and thirty-one of this number are boys, while the girls are in the minority of 109.

Upperclass registration had not been completed at press time.

The list of members of the class of 1941 is as follows:

BOYS

Ajauskas, Casty J.	Brighton
Alexion, Lazarus	Fairhaven
Allan, Donald P.	Fitchburg
Allen, Gordon	Concord
Allen, Vernon C.	Millis
Anderson, Edward E.	Andover
Aroian, Haig	Oxford
Ashley, Edward W.	New Bedford
Auerbach, Gabriel I.	Springfield

Marion Becher Herbert Brown

HISTORY OF "THE COLLEGIAN" VARIED AND INTERESTING

By Joseph Bartosiewicz

The Massachusetts Collegian, our present student publication, traces its genealogy to the decade following the Civil War. Almost as old as the Letter of the College itself is the history of the Collegian, for it was in 1870 that the students got their first chance at journalism. At that time the Amherst Record gave over to a group of students a section of the paper which was named "Massachusetts Agricultural Department."

A number of years later, in 1890, a group of foresighted students started a publication of their own to replace the one which died in the Amherst Record. The new periodical was named Aggie Life, and was published fortnightly in magazine form.

In 1901, by a favorable vote of the students, the name was changed to The College Signal. As such it grew and prospered until 1909 when instead of being published fortnightly, it was published every week. This was made possible by a tax of $1.50 which the student body agreed to pay. At this same time The Signal changed its form from magazine to newspaper. It then consisted of eight pages, similar in form to the present Collegian, except that the pages were smaller.

The autumn of 1914 found The Signal replaced by The Massachusetts Collegian. The policy of the newly named paper remained the same, however, until 1924, when The Collegian was increased in size. This increase was compensated for by a decrease in the number of pages to four.

Late in the second semester of 1935, the students voted to tax themselves an additional fifty cents for The Collegian. These funds made it possible for The Collegian to give the students 6 pages per issue. The paper also joined the Associated Collegiate Press in 1935, and it subscribed to National College News, an eight-page rotogravure section which is distributed with each issue of The Collegian.

Literary Supplement

The most recent progressive step in the annals of the Collegian has been the addition of a quarterly literary supplement as a permanent feature of our newspaper. The literary supplement has been under the capable editorship of Sidney Rosen, '39. It has consisted of original prose and poetry written by students at the college.

Although the literary supplement is comparatively new, it, too, has had several predecessors. In 1882 there was an organization on campus known as the Washington Irving Society which published a literary journal

[illegible]ointments are [illegible]d in 19 Changes

[illegible]ions and 10 new ap- [illegible]e made this summer to [illegible] the College, according [illegible]nts from the presi- [illegible]ently. Those promoted

Troy has been pro- [illegible]structor to assistant [illegible]nglish. Mr. Troy is a [illegible]. S. C. and received [illegible]rts degree from Am- [illegible]n 1936. He had been [illegible] since 1931.

[illegible]Torrey, associate pro- [illegible]ay, has been made a [illegible]and Rollin H. Barrett [illegible]anagement department [illegible]ced from the rank of [illegible]ssor to become a full [illegible] professors have been [illegible] professors. They are [illegible]Fraker of the modern [illegible]rtment and Stowell C.

ROOM FOR MORE

With the total freshman registration nearing 350, an all time record, comments Assistant Dean Lanphear that the increase in numbers has been made possible by several additions to the teaching staff. Increased class room space made possible by the use of the old library has also enabled the college to admit more freshmen than in other years.

Although registration closed at 4 p. m. last Monday with 231 men and 109 women registered, several late registrations were expected.

Browns Elected Heads of Alumni

Miss Pierpont [illegible] Varied Week

freshmen has been planned with the Stockbridge team Saturday night will be filled with the [illegible]per [illegible] ties and an informal dance in [illegible] Hall. There will also be general [illegible] ing.

Sunday will begin with a non-sectarian worship service with a speaker to be announced. This service will be over in time for people to attend their own church if they wish. In the afternoon, the snow sculptures will be judged, [illegible]ady films will be shown [illegible] Skinner Aud., and there will be [illegible]ating, [illegible]ed basketball game, and [illegible] volleyball. The Flower Show [illegible] will be held Sunday, [illegible]ith U.M.

Miss Pierpont said that at present journalism is an informal major, but that if enough students are interested it will be a formal major and will be listed as such in the catalogue next year.

To major in journalism now an English major must have five courses in journalism, five in English, and five electives in the social sciences (economics, government, sociology, psychology, and history).

A social science major would need five courses in journalism, five in one social science, and five electives in other social sciences and literature.

In addition to the four courses taught by Professor Musgrave, the University has courses in Technical Writing, Creative Writing and Advertising.

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
New England's largest college daily
Volume CVI Issue 61
Monday, December 13, 1999

Affirmative action still a heated issue

Scott faces, addresses protestors at forum

Chancellor David K. Scott speaks to a crowd of standing students yesterday afternoon in Bartlett Hall about the University's new policies on race in admissions.

Protestors block Whitmore entrance

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Scott addresses admissions today

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

In his first attempt at addressing the University of Massachusetts campus community on the recent revisions to the admissions policy, Chancellor David K. Scott is holding a public forum today.

The chancellor will be holding a small press conference earlier in the morning. The public forum will be from 3:45– 5:54 p.m. in Bartlett room 65.

The chancellor's hopes for the forum are to clear up and explain some of the misinformation he has cited, as well as receive feedback from the community.

While the chancellor discusses plans for establishing task forces to address new issues raised by the admissions policy, dissenting students, part of the Task Force for Equal Opportunity and Access for All People, are continuing their efforts to fight the revisions which made race less of a priority in admissions.

The Task Force requested a meeting with the chancellor, Board of Trustees, and President William Bulger two weeks ago when they submitted a letter requesting a moratorium on the admissions policy.

In an interview, Scott said there were no specific names to respond to so he contacted the Student Government Association (SGA) who said they were too busy on the time to prep due to finals.

A meeting was setup by the SGA for members of the Task Force to meet with two members of the Board of Trustees in which the chancellor was present, although he said there have not been any meetings setup with him specifically.

"I'll meet with students whenever they want, not to negotiate or to agree to demands but certainly to try to understand the issues and shape my thinking," Scott said.

The chancellor's new plan says a student body that reflects the diversity of the commonwealth is a long-range plan which he expects to take at least a couple of years to work.

Scott's plan involves a "systemic outreach program" which will work with students in middle and high school to better prepare them for college. However, students from the Task Force feel this is too long and do not trust the chancellor's plan.

In response to his criticism, the chancellor said, "The plan is an interim plan. I can't insist on trust, all I can say is give me some time to try and work on a new plan because I did work very energetically on the plan we had."

In addition to the "systemic outreach program," Scott plans to focus more on retention of Asian, Latino, African and Native American (ALANA) students as opposed to only ALANA students' admissions as was done in the past. By doing this Scott feels – "[ ] could improve the retention [of ALANA students] and will recover the losses that we have temporarily suffered at the admissions end... it shouldn't be just to recruit student body that reflects the diversity, it's recruit graduate and [ ] which is not doing [ ] reason the chancellor did it was important to make revisions to the admissions policy.

The chancellor's decision to make revisions came

Turn to SCOTT page 2

Reaction to O.J. verdict differs among Massachusetts students

Students Call for One Day Strike To Help Work for End of Viet War

Reverend Jesse Jackson was the guest speaker yesterday at Amherst College.

Students, community challenge privatization of campus center

Experts say expect disruption not disaster from Y2K glitch

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

AMHERST — The end is near. Y2K experts said in a forum yesterday — the end of coming into compliance for most Amherst agencies and businesses that is.

Various experts from the Town of Amherst to the University of Massachusetts and others said in the meeting at Grace Church yesterday afternoon that most systems in the town and University are Y2K compliant or are expected to be so by July 1.

"Preparedness is what we've got to be [working towards]," said Representative Stan Rosenberg. "But we shouldn't be panicked."

Randy Sailer, director of telecommunications for UMass gave an assessment of the University's Y2K status.

"We've focused first on the big systems," Sailer said. "A lot of people are upgrading their way out of the problem."

Departments are responsible for upgrading their own systems, Sailer said, and an exact date to be compliant by has not been set.

Having heat and electricity for the University shouldn't be a crisis, green, yellow and red which means serious compliance problems or a system that has not been checked yet.

In the report issued Oct. 23 1998 the Logicraft Served CD Databases are listed as red and Housing Services Cable is listed as yellow/red.

Listed as yellow is the Registration System, Financial Aid Management System, Current Human Resources System, Current Financial Records System, Catalog, Circulation, Fines and Reserves System for the library and others.

The rest of the departments are green or blue.

While the University can provide heat, it is not completely self sufficient with electricity, Sailer said.

Amherst Town Manager, Barry Del Castilho, who issued a Y2K compliance report to the Select Board last week, spoke of the five categories the town has for compliance.

The first category was the operation of [illegible]

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/ COLLEGIAN
Barry Del Castilho

[illegible] said because [illegible] operation of [illegible] equipment affected by [illegible] chips. Del Castilho said his concern over the unknown chips has lessened.

[illegible] others argued that privatization will lead to ba[illegible] king conditions on campus. One proposal sugge[illegible] t students' job security will not be dependent on t[illegible] des.

Many questioned the purpose of the study and the[illegible] of its initiation.

It's fundamental that you know why the study [illegible] iated. My suggestion is [that] a very prime fac[illegible] ive all, should be the impact upon students," [illegible] redo DiLascia, a business owner in Amherst and [illegible] o a board member of the local Chamber [illegible] nmerce.

This could be too much financially driven," [illegible] Lascia.

A few major student groups that may be affected [illegible] student businesses.

If they bring in private contractors, we're going [illegible] e a problem, because student businesses cannot c[illegible] e. Our mission here is to learn, our mission is n[illegible] ke money," said Gloria Brown, a member of the B[illegible] Student Businesses and a senior at the university.

The consultants will be meeting with various ca[illegible] resentatives, such as student leaders, faculty, [illegible] mpus Center workers. They will compile finan[illegible] rational, and service reports.

We're not here to initiate change. We're here to [illegible] analysis," said John Cornyn, a consultant who sp[illegible] he meeting.

Two more open forums have been scheduled for [illegible] h the consulting group. They will occur at 12 a[illegible] n. in the Campus Center.

Mass achusetts Collegian

UM phone service to change

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Some University of Massachusetts students will be expected to supply their own telephones in the residence halls next semester. Housing Services has announced a process to change the residence hall telephone service throughout campus.

The first phase of the project will change service in all residence halls in the Southwest area and is set to begin next semester. The next phase will occur over the summer and will update service in Northeast, Sylvan, Orchard Hill, and Central residence halls. The new service will require students living in residence halls to bring their own telephone sets.

Housing Services, in conjunction with Office of Information Technologies (OIT), is implementing the change because the current telephone sets have proven to be very fragile and have a high failure rate.

According to a Housing Service press release, Telecommunications averages over 140 non-working telephone replacements each week.

The current system is also old and expensive to maintain and replace. According to Telecommunications, if Housing Services had decided to continue with the current system, they would have had to replace all current telephone sets over the next three to five years at a cost in excess of $1 million.

The new system will be cost effective and will continue to offer the same features and benefits (call hold, call diversion, conference calling, and voice mail) to students living in residence halls, the press release said.

The new system will require students living in residence halls not equipped with Ethernet to change from TAUs to modems or fax modems for online connection. As a result, the data transmission speeds will be increased, but the new feature will not allow students with modems to be on the phone and online at the same time.

However, the rising success of the Ethernet project is expected to minimize the number of residence halls experiencing this problem. According to the press release, they expect 28 of the 41 residence halls, and 83 percent of the residence hall rooms, to have Ethernet by spring 2000.

Telecommunications said in the press release that the financial savings at the end of four years would provide Housing Services the opportunity to invest in areas such as deferred maintenance on the cable television system, multiple voice mail boxes and other enhancements.

Junior management major Matt Cogliano said he was required to supply his own telephone system when he attended Merrimack College. He said the current situation creates more of an inconvenience because UMass didn't start sooner.

"It just seems odd that they're doing it at the beginning of the spring instead of the fall," Cogliano said.

Sara Kac, a freshman communication disorders major, said she is planning on getting a cordless phone and is quite happy with the University's decision. Freshman undecided major Rhiannon Kelly agrees and said the change is good because the current phone system is old.

"I think it's a good idea because the phones here aren't good," Kelly said. "If your phone breaks you have to go through a replacement process."

JASON TRENKLE/ COLLEGIAN
A gloomy scene
An accident Friday night at the intersection of North Pleasant Street and Massachusetts Avenue destroyed a traffic light and a street light. The UMass Police responded to the scene of the incident.

GEO against privatization fix

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The Graduate Employee Organization (GEO) is accusing two middle-level managers in Campus Center Retail Food Services, a part of Auxiliary Services, of having discussed the hiring of work-release prisoners in order to staff the Hatch, Bluewall, and Coffee Shop, in response to the lack of student employees on campus.

The accusation came after GEO President James Shaw said the organization received an anonymous tip on its hotline and a copy of an e-mail between two middle-level managers discussing the hiring of prisoners as a solution.

"We fully believe that there is no doubt that this conversation occurred," Shaw said. "It may not have reached the top level of management, but the point is they're creating a climate of secrecy and an environment in which all these non-solutions are generated."

Shaw said middle-level managers are experiencing pressures in finding cost-effective labor as a result of the privatization movement. Instead of including student businesses and offering attractive benefits and flexible schedules to workers, he said they are being forced to come up with "outrageous solutions," and doing this all behind the student's backs.

"The management interrogated workers to find out who had leaked the information out to GFO," Shaw said. "It seems workers are being interrogated and challenged for being open and facilitating the free flow of discussion when in fact that's the way it should be."

Ashoke Ganguli, director of Auxiliary Services, denied the accusations.

"It's hogwash," Ganguli said. "We're not going to hire people from prison-relief programs."

Ganguli commented on the e-mail between the two middle-level managers, saying that it was not relevant to the whole issue.

"There was no discussion whatsoever at my level. How does GEO have the right to hack into someone's e-mail?" Ganguli said. "How else would they know these things?"

According to Ganguli, he conducts management meetings with the labor unions throughout the semester and said he would not raise such an issue without bringing it to their attention first. In addition, he said there are a number of student employee positions to adequately staff food services.

However, Shaw said the labor issue is the real concern, and he asks that such issues be brought before the entire community as public information and not be withheld by the administration.

"The university needs to realize that these issues belong to everyone and they need to bring everyone in on the decision making and discussion," Shaw said.

GFO has declared that if the university fails to disclose the information, they will take the issue to the Secretary of State's Office to have the public record law enforced.

UM alum gives lecture on violence

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts alumna Janet Aalfs will focus on ways women can resist violence in a lecture "Claiming Power, Facing Fear: Women Resist Violence," today at 1 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165.

Two weeks after UMass alum Jackson Katz spoke out about ways men can combat violence against women, Aalfs comes to draw upon her combined background in martial arts, dance, and theater to discuss how women can resist the climate of fear that often arises in the wake of violent events.

"The campus has taken a number of steps to address men's violence against women," interim director of women's studies Marta Calas said in a statement. "Men have been challenged to join the struggle against domestic and sexual violence, but women need to continue examining their fears, finding their voices, and empowering themselves until we change the culture of violence in our society."

A poet, writer, and fourth-degree black belt, Aalfs received a degree in women's studies from UMass in 1979 and an MFA in creative writing from Sarah Lawrence College in 1990. Her poems, stories and essays have appeared in numerous journals and anthologies, and her upcoming poetry collection "Reach" will be published in the fall.

Conducting numerous empowerment workshops throughout the world, Aalfs has been both head instructor and director of Valley Women's Martial Arts Inc. since 1982.

The lecture is co-sponsored by the women's studies program, the Everywoman's Center, the Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Women, the Chancellor's Office, the Office of Student Affairs, the Alumni Association, and the Office of Human Relations.

SGA ends heated semester of activity

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The climax of the semester for the Student Government Association occurred simultaneously with the semester's close during the Senate's last regular scheduled meeting. Last Wednesday night, a vote of no confidence was declared against Jo-Anne Vanin, Dean of Students, a motion that has been building for some time, according to SGA President Jeff Howe.

"Unfortunately, as we have seen over the past few years, and most glaringly over the past eight months, Dean Vanin has not functioned accordingly as our Dean of Students," Howe said.

He said Vanin had not made herself available to students, especially during their time of need this past month when the campus was alarmed by recent attacks.

Although the decision about Vanin was made late in the semester, Howe has assured that the SGA will not let the issue die. "It's not going to be dropped," Howe said. "We feel there has to be change, and we will push as far as we have to to see change occur."

Throughout the semester, the Senate has taken a stand on many issues, including several that stress its power on campus.

During the Oct. 27 meeting, a motion was passed involving the Wellman document, which stated that the University of Massachusetts administration must respect the powers granted to the SGA. The motion was meant to re-affirm that the policies passed by the Senate body would be implemented by the administration. Howe expressed that in the past, administrators have not

Turn to SGA page 2

ASHLEY COYNE/ COLLEGIAN
Late nights in the library
Students, taking advantage of the extention of the Dubois library's hours to 2 AM, cram for finals in the basement level.

Faculty Senate addresses major issues of semester

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The Faculty Senate at the University of Massachusetts had an intense and eventful semester of work.

One of the biggest motions passed by the Senate during this semester was a motion addressing the issue of academic clemency on campus. The Senate addressed their concerns about the issue of public safety in the wake of the series of rapes and assaults on campus. The Senate passed a motion, originally proposed by the Student Government Association, which allowed safety-concerned students to miss classes from Nov. 15 to Nov. 30 at the discretion of their professors. Professors in attendance at the meeting said that clemency would allow students additional safety on campus, and that the issue should be more widely discussed in classes.

Most recently discussed at the Senate meetings was the Massachusetts state budget that was established during the first part of December. The budget allowed for more money to the university as a whole. Three million dollars of the funds were distributed to the library budget, and six million dollars for salary and collective bargaining increases.

The issue about whether or not to change the division for the UMass football team, moving them to a Division I-A team, the highest echelon of collegian athletics, was discussed by the Senate. The issue came about after the administration hired a consultant to study the issue of the possible division move. Discussions regarding what is best for the university as a whole will continue to occur next year.

Another major issue discussed at the Senate meetings was the possibility of changing the curriculum to include four courses per semester with four credits per course. Some faculty members said the four-course plan would allow students to better concentrate on their courses and therefore get more out of them. The issue is currently being looked at by the Senate and will be brought up for further discussion during the next semester.

At the beginning of the semester, the Senate addressed concerns over the issue of affirmative action, the racial and ethnic makeup of the Commonwealth College and the need for more in-depth advising during freshman orientation.

Other additional ongoing issues that occurred within the semester included the possibility of incorporating an Intercampus Marine School. The school is to be a joint effort between all of the schools in the University of Massachusetts system. The proposal for the school to be located at the Amherst campus was voted down at the Dec. 2 meeting because of financial concerns. But, the school will still be implemented in the UMass system at another location.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 43 LOW: 26	HIGH: 37 LOW: 26	HIGH: 42 LOW: 30

SOURCE: WWW.WEATHER.COM

Tales of Violence
Crime marred the campus climate this semester, as students and community members responded to allegations of assaults against women on the University of Massachusetts campus. Read about how the UMass community was affected by reports of violence inside today's news section.
PAGE 3

Tom falls to top Toy Story at BO
Box office champ Toy Story 2 failed to edge out The Green Mile, a much-anticipated new release in which Tom Hanks plays a guard in a death-row prison
PAGE 6

Giving the Cardinal the bird
Kathy Coyner racked up 20 points and ten assists as UMass shocked No. 22 Stanford 74-69 at home. Check out the back page for more
PAGE 14

Arts & Living 6
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
International 5
Sports 14
ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

UMass police finally end busy semester filled with crime

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

With the last day of the semester only nine days away, another four months of the University of Massachusetts Police Department's work is done.

The UPMD investigated student deaths, pedestrians struck by cars, and graffiti on campus, but perhaps the biggest crimes of the year have gone unsolved. Two sexual assaults and one physical assault on campus are still under investigation as officers continue to search for the attackers.

On Nov. 2, a woman reported that she had been raped near the Campus Center Pond at 6 p.m. On Nov. 9, a second woman said that she had been raped near the pond. On Nov. 14, a third woman said that she had been attacked by three men who pepper-sprayed and punched her. As students rallied on Nov. 16 to protest the assaults, a fourth student said that she had been attacked in a parking lot near Skinner Hall, and that her attacker cut her face with a knife. It was the third Tuesday in a row that a student had been assaulted, either sexually or physically, on campus.

Students on campus protested the assaults, gathering for rallies, guest speakers, and walking out of class. The administration established a web page of information about the assaults, sent e-mails to students, and provided, free of charge, "shriek" alarms to any student who wanted one. Meanwhile, the police continued to investigate. While no one has been arrested, the alleged victim of the fourth assault recanted her story, thus dropping the number of assaults being investigated by police to three. While the woman could be charged under Massachusetts law for creating the story of the assault, the Hampshire County district attorney has decided against pursuing charges.

John Lippold, Chief of the UMPD, said that, by recanting her story, the fourth "victim" of the attacks was lightening the load of all investigating officers.

Investigations into the assaults continue.

Elsewhere on campus this year, two students and one employee died in separate incidents. Arthur Rudolph, 20, a senior history major, was found dead in his automobile in Puffton Village at 1:55 p.m. on Oct. 4. Both the Amherst Fire Department and the Amherst Police Department responded to a call reporting Rudolph's body and were forced to smash in the windows after all of the doors were discovered to be locked. According to the State Medical Examiner, the death was a result of asphyxiation, although the method of asphyxiation was not listed on Rudolph's death certificate.

Rudolph was not the only student to die as a result of asphyxiation this year. Andrew Brown, 19, a sophomore engineering major died Dec. 1, in what was described as an unattended death.

UMass employee Jean Hosmer, 45, of Pelham, was shot and killed in Northampton on Monday Oct. 25. William Bernotas, Hosmer's ex-husband, was charged in the assault. Bernotas shot himself after allegedly shooting Hosmer and died on Oct. 29.

At Smith College, Tina Haafke, 23, a German exchange student, was killed on Sept. 27, after being struck by a car crossing the street in Northampton. Heading towards a pool at 7:50 a.m., Haafke and Frauke Wolter were hit by a car driven by Mary McAleer, 38, of Laurel Park. Wolter's leg was broken in the accident.

Besides Haafke and Wolter, three other individuals affiliated with UMass were struck by automobiles on campus. Ruth Abrams, 33, a visiting professor in Judaic and Eastern Studies, was struck by an automobile on Massachusetts Avenue on Oct. 7. Lisa Abrams, 19, a sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences, and Courtney Spivack, 18, a sophomore in the College of Arts and Sciences, were both struck by a car on University Drive near the Southwest Horseshoe. Angel Santana, 55, a resident of Puffton Village, was cited in the accident for negligent operation of a motor vehicle, failure to stop for a pedestrian in a crosswalk, and impeded operation of a motor vehicle.

Meanwhile, graffiti became a problem for UMass police after the walls of Gorman Residence Hall were marred with racial and sexist slurs. More than 100 students attended a forum to discuss the graffiti that appeared on three floors of the Central residence hall.

Graffiti has appeared elsewhere on campus on a regular basis, including graffiti in residence halls, lobbies, and on the sides of academic buildings. Some of the prominent graffiti was not written, but Xeroxed, as in the case of flyers that were posted near the Morrill Greenhouse.

It was there, on Sept. 27, 1997, that UMass junior Adam Prentice died after falling through the glass of a greenhouse roof. The computer science engineering major who had lived in Field Residence Hall died from blood loss. The case remains open.

The graffiti appeared two years to the day after Prentice's death and marked the second time that flyers have been posted pertaining to his death.

On Nov. 10, UMPD officers discovered graffiti at the Lederle Research Lowrise. The graffiti scrawled in black marker read "BLT kills Fags."

UMPD spokesman Jim Lyons called that incident isolated.

All of the cases of graffiti around campus are open and under investigation.

But the police were not only investigating assaults on campus, the deaths of students, and graffiti; they were also investigating any number of other crimes that happened in the last semester, or just protecting the peace.

On Oct. 12, UMass students celebrated a Boston Red Sox victory by marching around campus. At least 1,000 students gathered after the 12-8 victory over the Cleveland Indians to celebrate the Red Sox victory. After massing in Southwest, half of the original group of students headed toward Central. After marching through Central, the group headed toward Orchard Hill, Sylvan, Northeast, the Campus Center, and back to Southwest before the group was finally broken up by police. Two students were arrested during the celebrations.

Celebrations continued on campus during Boston's games against the New York Yankees, ending only after Boston was eliminated after losing four games. After each game, students gathered after to celebrate wins by their teams in Southwest near the pyramids. The winning team's fans took the pyramids and losing fans stood around them, cheering back and forth at one another. The crowd was estimated at 500 on the first night, with a low of 200-300 on the last night after the final Yankee victory.

Various forms of police were present at the celebrations, including UMPD mounted police, bicycle police, undercover officers, and officers on foot and in uniform. State police officers reported to the celebrations, and the Amherst Police Department was on call. At least four more students were arrested during the celebrations, including one student who was arrested after attempting to provoke an officer's horse. No one was arrested after someone threw a firecracker into a crowd of revelers.

On Oct. 6, an individual was arrested at Teen Mania, a Christian revival at the Mullins Center, after it was discovered that he was carrying a .357 Magnum. The man was licensed to be carrying the weapon, but it is illegal to possess any weapon on a campus. The man was a member of the Teen Mania stage crew and a resident of central Massachusetts.

The man remains unidentified.

On Sunday, Oct. 24, a fight led to the arrests of four individuals who were not UMass students. Michael Hall, 18, of Springfield, was arrested and charged with assault and battery, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, and underage possession of alcohol. The assault and battery charge with a dangerous weapon is a felony.

Hall was reportedly kicking someone on Infirmary Way, according to bystanders interviewed by UMPD officers. Two hours later, officers came upon a van that Hall had reportedly gotten out of before the alteration. Investigating, officers learned that one of the van's occupants was wanted in Hampden Superior Court for failing to appear after being charged with assault and battery with a dangerous weapon. Antoine Diaz, 19, was arrested on the spot, as was Ryan Robinson, a second individual in the van who had also been spotted at the fight using his foot. Robinson was arrested and charged, like Hall, with assault and battery with a deadly weapon.

At 11 a.m. Sunday, another occupant of the van returned to the police station to bail out his friends. As Joseph Murray waited to bail out his friends, it was discovered that a warrant had been issued for his arrest after he failed to appear in Springfield District Court to respond to charges of selling and delivering alcohol.

All four individuals were also trespassed away from UMass, meaning that they are not to return to the campus.

Toward the end of October, the UMPD issued a public safety alert after $2,500 worth of bicycles were stolen on campus. The UMPD recommend that students write down their bicycle's serial numbers, and purchase a heavy-duty lock for usage.

On Sept. 17, three juveniles were arrested and charged with vandalism after they were caught spray-painting automobiles near the maze at the football stadium. Thirteen cars were painted in the attack, leaving red and black streaks across the cars.

On Nov. 9, one officer was forced to pull his service pistol after Alfred Goudeu, 24, ran from police who were asking him about his role in thefts on campus. Reaching toward his back as he was running, the officer was forced to pull the weapon. Goudeu had no gun, however, and he was arrested and charged with two counts of larceny over $250.

■ SGA

continued from page 1

always taken the Senate's work seriously.

In addition to these actions toward the administration, the majority of the semester was spent on actions surrounding the recent crisis on campus. The Senate worked from the time of the first attack to assist in making students feel safer while at the University.

"I think the Student Government Association has, for the first time since I've been here, created an atmosphere where students can feel we are doing something productive on their behalf," Howe said.

In a motion that the Faculty Senate also passed, the SGA stated that faculty members should allow excused absences and full academic clemency for the period of Nov. 15 to Nov. 30 to students, due to the fear caused by the incidents on campus. At that same meeting, two additional motions were passed to create a feeling of safety for students on campus. The first motion would allow students traveling to night classes to park in green, red, and blue parking lots after 5 p.m., whereas the other would create a shorter walk from the purple parking lot to the Grayson and Field Residence Halls in Orchard Hill by allowing card access to the door closest to the lot.

During the month of November, the SGA worked with other organizations on campus to organize rallies, and helped fund the student-run FoodWatch, a group designed to walk students around campus. It also set up a reward fund, which totaled $2,500, to be given to any individual who gives information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons responsible for the attacks.

"I'm glad we were able to do as much as we did; I wonder if we could have done more, but I'm glad we didn't do less," Ken Campbell, Safety Committee chair, said.

Most recently, the Senate passed a motion to begin a pilot program to install security cameras in two parking lots on campus. The cameras would be placed in the yellow parking lots located by the football stadium and the other by the Mather Career Center in an effort to increase safety of students and their property.

The SGA was plagued with other issues this semester, several of which caused heated debates. One issue in particular that raised many questions concerned ALANA (Asian, Latino, African and Native American) caucus and Area Government appointed seats. A motion was brought to the Senate floor concerning removal of the unconstitutional appointed seats.

The co-author of the motion, Senator Jim Eltringham, said the reason he was bringing forward the issue was because, "we're in violation of our constitution. The nuts and bolts of the issue is whether or not you can say we are upholding democracy. We're not talking about eliminating representation."

The ALANA caucus and others said eliminating the seats would be unfair, and would ultimately inhibit the representation of minorities on campus.

"People from all communities need to understand that minorities need to have a voice on this campus, especially on issues of gender, race...and if the framework needs to be changed, okay, but the representation needs to be there, and with the by-laws we have, we can accomplish representation," Lanell James, the internal chair of the ALANA caucus, said.

In the end, the Senate voted in favor of the appointed seats, voting down passage of the motion.

At another point in the semester, the SGA passed a motion to install an ATM in the Southwest Residential Area. A large amount of time was also spent discussing opposition to parent notification in regard to the alcohol policy, and the idea that the Commonwealth College was planning to change the Field lounge in Orchard Hill into a classroom.

Overall, Howe said the Senate was very successful this semester. "I think we've shown dedication to student issues and people now feel comfortable coming to us with their problems," Howe said.

UMASS
PUBLIC ADDRESS

Claiming Power, Facing Fear:
Women Resist Violence

Janet Aalfs '79
Poet and Writer
Director, Valley Women's Martial Arts
4th Degree Black Belt Shuri-ryu
Okinawan Karate

Monday, December 13, 1999, 4 pm

Campus Center 163C • Free and open to all

Sponsored by Women's Studies, Everywoman's Center, Faculty Senate Council on the Status of Women, Chancellor's Office, Student Affairs Office, Alumni Association, Human Relations

Amherst ready for Y2K

By Andrea M. Peers
Collegian Staff

This is the final article in a series.

Even though the millennium is right around the corner, the town of Amherst is making sure that all systems are checked and fixed for the new year. In accordance with town manager Barry L. Del Castilho, the town committee has formed an emergency management team in order to prepare for the Y2K bug. The team involves community service workers, maintenance workers, firefighters and police.

Other members on the team include the head of the management team, and firefighter, Mike Zloglar. According to the team, all necessary measures have been taken to ensure a smooth transition into 2000.

"We've been looking at all our systems, mainly anything that has electrical controls or processors," said Zloglar.

Other areas of concentration include town vehicles, buildings, computers, gas companies, and water plants. However, despite the large agenda, the team has managed to break up the planning into six categories of importance. According to the town manger, the steps are not 100 percent finished, but more like 90 percent complete.

"I have no way of quantifying the degree of completion. It is less than I would like because of staffing shortages, but that department is now making good progress on required upgrades," said Del Castilho.

The first category that was examined was water and waste management systems. All circuit and electrical power was checked, along with all pumps in the sewer and water systems. The Atkins Water Treatment Plant is expected to be operational and work on back-up power if necessary. Other water plants in the area that are not computerized are up and ready with the necessary equipment for Y2K. Upgrading for these systems included the remote monitoring of various sites that are still in the process of being fixed.

"We only expect that there may be isolated problems with the equipment. Other than that, though, all the main utilities should be fine," said Zloglar.

Another important item on the list was the compliance with the Y2K bug of all police, fire, and emergency medical services. All necessary equipment will function properly, according to Del Castilho, and back-up systems are being prepared as well in time for the arrival of Jan. 1. Included in the upgrading of systems were new police department telephone systems, Y2K-compliant 911 systems, and new Simplex door access systems in buildings. In terms of medical compliance, Cooley Dickinson Hospital reports that all equipment is Y2K-compatible and will function normally.

"We are told that Cooley Dickinson hospital does not anticipate serious Y2K problems, but we are seeking documentation of their readiness," said Del Castilho.

Buildings and building software is another area that is currently being monitored and upgraded as well for any problems in Amherst. Town buildings, such as the Town Hall, the Bangs Community Center, the Munson Memorial Building, the Amherst Community Child Care Facility, the North Amherst School, the Cushman School, and Ruxton Storage are all expected to run smoothly on normal electrical power. New computers are being purchased, as well as other electrical equipment, in order to update all town and school information systems. Systems expected to be upgraded include financial records, permit tracking, police records, and vital statistics.

The town of Amherst is also working in accordance with the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) in order to check all public electricity, telephones, and natural gas systems. So far reports from the North American Electricity Reliability Council have given positive feedback regarding the continuation of daily checks made on all systems.

"Reports regarding natural gas are positive, but there are still no guarantees, so emergency planning continues even as positive reports continue," said Del Castilho.

Emergency planning still remains number one, however, on the team's list of priorities for Amherst. Planning is the key to their effective strategy, and measures are being taken to ensure safety for everyone. A shelter will be set up if necessary at the local high school in case of emergencies. Also included in the list of shelters is the University of Massachusetts's Campus Center. As far as final planning is concerned, the emergency management team will be holding a meeting on the evening of Dec. 31 to assess reports of problems in New Zealand and Europe. This will allow the team to look at Y2K problems in other zones that will be affected before the United States.

"We have our contingency plan in place in case of any equipment failure," said Zloglar. "We will have increased security and police, but at this point, we believe that there aren't going to be any disruptions in services to the town of Amherst."

Eating disorders still a college problem

By Viviane Janda
Collegian Correspondent

Approximately 15 percent of college-age women suffer from an eating disorder, according to University of Massachusetts Mental Health Services. This statistic means that out of every 100 UMass women, at least 15 may have the problem.

"More and more attention is being paid to eating disorders," according to Dr. Edward Bynun, a psychologist at UMass Mental Health Services, because they are continuously on the rise among college students.

The two most common eating disorders are anorexia and bulimia. Anorexia is self-starvation and judging oneself as fat, even when one is extremely underweight, and can include excessive exercise, according to Dave Wallace, a psychology intern at UMass Mental Health Services. Anorexia has a very gradual onset, he said.

Bulimia is binge eating – consuming large amounts of high-calorie food – and consequently forcing oneself to vomit or use laxatives to rid the body of the calories, according to Wallace.

"It is more difficult to detect a bulimic than an anorexic because bulimics tend to have a normal or close-to-normal body weight," Wallace said. "Anorexics are easy to pick out of a crowd because they are excessively thin."

Eating disorders have the highest mortality rate of any psychological disease, according to Mental Health Services.

Upon entering college, people may experience many new emotions. The thought of being on one's own can be extremely frightening and overwhelming. The beginning of college life can lead to the end of a "normal" life.

"When I first started my freshman year, I felt like I was starting a whole new life," said Margaret Mancuso, a junior accounting major. "It was much harder to be noticed in college than in my small high school. I thought I had to stick out in a crowd, so I lost a lot of weight. I almost starved to death just for the attention," Mancuso said.

Having left behind anything that was familiar, a person can be thrown off his or her feet by difficult classes, social pressures, budget problems, change of environment and many other feelings of defeat. Unfortunately, an eating disorder often follows these pressures.

"I had no control over how my life was changing, so I started vomiting after meals again so that I could control my body from changing," said Trina Wilson, a junior sociology major and long-time bulimic.

When pressure takes control of a person's life he or she may naturally seek any part of life over which to remain in control.

"Halfway into my freshman year and my mission of self-starvation," said Rachel Bernardi, a sophomore art major, "I realized that I could get a rush from controlling my weight. After the realization that I could actually control something in my life by not eating, it was all downhill."

It is much easier to fall down the hill to self-destruction than to climb back up. People who develop eating disorders in their college years are likely to struggle with them well after they graduate, according to Mental Health Services. Losing weight gives a stressed-out person something to feel good about.

"Every pound lost is another boost of confidence that control has been taken," Bernardi said. "Anorexics feel like they will only be accepted if they are thin. Weight loss, even when it is unhealthy, is one accomplishment that can help alleviate the disappointment of a failure in another area of life."

Bulimics find comfort in compulsive eating, rather than starvation, and then when the guilt of being overweight sets in, they vomit or use laxatives. Bulimics tend to find a false sense of security in food consumption. Eating can be a way of avoiding one's problems, while vomiting can feel like a way of releasing them.

"I was a cheerleader in high school and almost my whole team would throw up after they ate to release the calories and sometimes problems. It was normal," Wilson said. The fact is that this behavior is not normal, and those problems are not actually released – so the cycle of either starving oneself, or binging and vomiting, continues.

Women aren't the only people who suffer from these disorders. The number of men with eating disorders is drastically increasing each year, according to Mental Health Services. Men tend to become fall victim to these disorders for different reasons than do women. Men usually, but not always, starve themselves to meet the weight requirements for sports teams such as wrestling or swimming, Bynun said. Men can also have eating disorders for some of the same control issues as most women.

"I think sometimes it can be even harder for a man to have an eating disorder because it's not expected, so courage to partake in this amazing ride will also enjoy the 70 mph drops and stomach-churning curves. In addition to the new Hellevator, and Night Wing, the first horizontal flying machine, Six Flags will include themed sections of the park, which sound something like a makeshift Universal Studios. One of these themes is targeted at younger kids, which will be called Looney Tunes Movie Town, where we all get to see more ridiculous characters of cartoon land. One of the themes in reality sounds like a good idea. A new 12-acre section of the park is being built along the banks of the Connecticut River and will feature themed restaurants that will have a deck with an exquisite view. "We've been extremely thoughtful in the overall design of this new section to take full advantage of the natural beauty of the area, particularly as it relates to the River," expressed Tim Black, GM.

you feel like you're weird and all alone," said Richard Stone, a senior engineering major and a recovering anorexic.

Approximately three percent of all young women suffer from anorexia and four percent suffer from bulimia, and one percent of men suffer from an eating disorder, according to Carmen Cardona, a guidance counselor for teenagers in Boston Public Schools. If UMass contains 30,000 students and the percentages hold, that would mean that 300 men suffer from an eating disorder at UMass, 900 women suffer from anorexia, and 1,200 women suffer from bulimia.

The first step to recovery is realizing the problem. The signs of anorexia include drastic weight loss, withdrawing from social activities that once were a big part of your daily life, thinning hair, and avoidance of family and friends.

Bulimia is harder to detect than anorexia because while anorexics lose drastic amounts of weight, bulimics maintain a normal weight. Some signs of bulimia are eating large quantities of food without weight gain, frequent trips to the bathroom after meals, burst blood vessels, and scarring on the knuckle of the index finger. If you recognize any of these symptoms in a friend, talk to her/him about a possible eating disorder. If your friend admits to having a problem, seek help. Many groups are available to help people, or friends of people, with eating disorders, such as the American Eating Disorders Center, the Center for Change, and the John Hopkins Eating Disorders Program. For help on campus, contact Mental Health and Health Services.

Goodbye Riverside, hello Six Flags

By Derick Fleming
Collegian Staff

AGAWAM – One of the largest expansions in theme park history is happening just a few exits down I-91. Riverside Park will finally complete its four-year, $100 million dollar expansion in what will become a Six Flags theme park in May 2000.

Kieran Burke, CEO of Premier Parks (the company that owns Six Flags), expects the new transformation to help Western Mass get on the map, and increase the popularity of this "hot spot." The eight new rides and two new themed sections were unveiled on Dec. 8. The most eye-catching was the announcement of New England's biggest, tallest, fastest and longest hyper coaster called Superman-Ride of Steel. This gigantic structure will cast an imposing shadow over the entire park as it stretches skyward nearly 22 stories. People who can muster up the

Have a good winter break everyone!

ENTRY-LEVEL MANAGEMENT OPPORTUNITIES

100 Best 1999
Fortune Magazine's 100 Best Companies To Work For

FORTUNE® MAGAZINE MAY HAVE PUBLISHED THE LIST,
BUT OUR EMPLOYEES PUT US ON IT.

As you search for a place to begin your career, consider this. There are millions of companies that strive to give their employees the very best, but according to FORTUNE® Magazine, only 100 who actually do. And Enterprise Rent-A-Car is one of them.

Why? Because we're a company that knows what it takes for our people and our business to succeed. Like a work environment in which decisions are shared, not handed down; where people enjoy real responsibility from the start and look forward to promotion based on performance, not seniority.

In Enterprise Rent-A-Car's Management Training Program, you'll have every opportunity to be your best. And there are 35,000 people and one magazine who can attest to that. This growth opportunity offers a competitive salary and benefits package.

Use Your Head. Join Enterprise.

For consideration please forward resume to:

Greater Boston and Northern Massachusetts
Trudy Cucinotta
248 Mishawum Road
Woburn, MA 01801
Fax: (781) 935-3831
Email: tcucinotta@erac.com

Western Massachusetts and Connecticut
Jean Wasilewski
100 Corporate Drive, Suite 101
Windsor, CT 06095
Fax: (860) 683-1448
Email: jwasilewski@erac.com

Southern Massachusetts
Sare' Bernier
348 Turnpike Road
Canton, MA 02021
Fax: (781) 830-0225
Email: sbernier@erac.com

Apply on-line at: www.erac.com

Enterprise rent-a-car
Use Your Head

We are an equal opportunity employer.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Money misspent

Andrea M. Peers

We have all witnessed the crime and assault on our campus this semester; we have seen the news, attended the rallies, spoke out, and reacted to the violence which shook our campus only a few weeks ago, but what fails to go unmentioned is the real priorities of this university as a whole. We as students have seen the police, and heard the words of our Chancellor, telling us that every safety precaution is being taken to ensure our safety. This may be true, but I was very disturbed to hear the recent news of the last attack. Not because it was a self-inflicted act of violence, or because it upset and shocked this campus. What I am most upset about are the side approaches which authority figures, as well as university officials, have taken during these last few months.

In a recent article from the Associated Press, official University spokespeople gave facts and figures, attempting to prove that the thousands of dollars that were spent on safety over the last month or so have had real benefits to the campus and students. Figure after figure was spit out, and broken down figures gave costs totaling close to $100,000 for each measure of safety that was taken in order to make this University safe.

This is all well and fine, but I decided to do a little research to see if these people really knew the facts, or if they were just trying to impress our parents, news stations, and papers with their "costly" figures. The first figure I looked at was the largest cost, the university's purchasing of 15,000 personal "shriek alarms." The total cost: $50,720. This is a huge amount of money, and I think that it's just great that they spent all that money, but to my surprise, spokeswoman Barbara Pitoniak failed to mention to the press the number of alarms that did not even work.

Many residents, including myself, received broadcast messages saying that they handed out malfunctioning alarms to students and that they should be returned. So, I decided to call up Barbara and ask her how many of these "shriek alarms" did not initially work. Ten percent was the figure she gave me, which would mean that 1500 alarms did not work. I also asked Kay Scanlon, another University spokeswoman who works in the same department as Pitoniak, how many of these alarms did not initially work. She told me that she would estimate no more than 500 alarms.

"I had not heard any more complaints after the initial round of malfunctioned ones," she said. So which is it 1500 or 500? That's a pretty big gap. Considering that the two spokeswomen for our University did not even have their facts straight, I decided to go to the Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, Javier Cevallos. I asked him the same question, hoping to find an answer, but I was told, "As far as I know, all of the alarms are working now. I would estimate that only 300 were not working out of the 15,000," he said.

So, in receiving three different answers to a simple question, I have come to a conclusion. If our own officials on this campus are not even aware of these malfunctioning alarms, how can they strut in front of the press and fail to mention this important fact involving these thousands of dollars? Is it all about how good they look, and how much they spend? This is not only embarrassing to the university, but I think it should be embarrassing to the students on this campus. The real problem here goes beyond the attacks.

These figures were purposely dished out to the media so that all of the big cheeses in their offices at Whitmore will be able to keep their jobs. Don't you think the story might be a little bit different if our parents, the press, or newspapers knew that a decent chunk of that $50,720 went to waste? Who knows what the real number was? 500? 500? 1500? The fact remains that nobody is on the same page, and that makes me wonder what the real priorities of this university are.

Moving on with other costs, Pitoniak also stated that $6400 was spent on installing one new call box by the campus pond, which has maintenance fees of $17 a month. Wow, one new call box. That's really going to make a difference. We don't need one new call box; we need several in order for this safety thing to work. Have you ever heard of the expression, "safety comes in numbers"? I don't think the university has. Well, I started to think that $6400 is a big sum of money as well. But is that one new phone going to help a rape victim after she is raped? After she is traumatized? NO. The Everywomen's Center, however, is a place where rape victims and assault victims can receive counseling and attend programs.

I contacted the director of the center, Carol Wallace. Wallace was kind enough to share the Everywomen's Center's annual funds with me, which totaled $791,000 for fiscal year 1999. The state funding through the university gave just under $500,000 of that to the center, and any additional money comes from funds or grants. However, out of that total, $680,000 is spent on salaries and benefits alone, which only leaves a mere $111,000 to work with. That's $9,250 a month. Wallace explained that this money is used to organize programs, send out mail, and help set up hotlines. But, is that really enough money? That's only around $3000 dollars more than one new call box. Which one is more important? Helping rape and assault victims cope with their problems, or a $6400 phone? I think the answer is obvious.

What disturbed me more however was the fact that the Everywomen's Center has not received a dime of additional funding since the rapes and assaults on campus, yet they spent $4600 for a lecture on combating violence against women. Wallace talked about the lack of extra money and explained what they could achieve through extra money.

"The only increased funding we have seen is to cover the increase in salaries. We have not received any additional funding since these incidents occurred. We depend largely on student volunteers to compensate for the money we don't receive. With some additional money and resources, we could do a lot more," said Wallace.

So there you have it. Again, what are the university's priorities? The Everywomen's Center cannot even plan additional programs because the school felt that one new call box was much more important. These figures are a shame to this campus community.

Other numbers that I did not mention are the $7200 spent mailing letters to all our parents, to make them aware of the situation and what is being done about it. According to the article, the letters were sent last month. My parents received that letter a week ago, a little too late to be informed. Other students I talked to say that their parents also received letters an extremely long time after the incidents occurred.

All these figures continue to pile up, making it seem that the university is really spending a lot of money to care about their students, but all this says to me is, "We want to spend a lot of money so that we can look good and get out of the news every night." Until this university realizes that they are disorganized and misdirected in the way they handle such a serious situation, the student body will continue to be cheated out of the true resources that could be used more effectively in preventing an incident like this from happening again.

Thousands of dollars on one call box, and much overdue letters, are not going to prevent or help anyone in this situation. It is the right of every student on this campus to know that this is how our school is being run, and that these figures are broken down and explained what they could achieve through extra money.

Andrea M. Peers is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

GEO members going overboard

To the editor:

Being on the GEO mailing list, I was amazed how much spam was flying around the net expressing outrage about Gary Mendese's article. I am still laughing about the number of PC statements expressed by the other members of GEO. I guess, however, that I am just a "white male," so you can automatically discard this letter because my opinions are obviously wrong.

I am sure that the Collegian must also be getting many hate letters from the militant members of GEO. GEO is very diverse, and a significant number of its own members would like to see sticks of dynamite planted under the office, while others would be diving on top of the sticks of dynamite to sacrifice themselves.

Anyway, the point of this letter is that a majority of the students on this campus have large sticks up their asses and take things too seriously.

Do your best to ignore the biggest complainers and eventually they will shut up.

Douglas Jo Harris
Amherst

Mendese's column very misguided

To the editor:

Thursday, the Daily Collegian published an opinion essay by Gary Mendese that we at the Graduate Employee Organization found racist and inflammatory. So much so, in fact, that we absolutely must speak out loudly against it.

Gary made the claim that there are international teaching assistants ("named something like 'Ti Szhng'") who have thick accents that he cannot understand. Gary's "solution" is to deport these teachers because, he claims, their accents make them incompetent. These statements are racist. Suggesting that international students should be deported because he has trouble understanding them is despicable. Calling them incompetent is disgusting.

What Gary apparently does not know is that UMass attracts some of the brightest scholars from around the world. Rather than ranting about his trouble with their accents, it would be in Gary's best interest to pause to listen and hear what these scholars have to offer him, which I promise, is quite a lot.

Indeed, there are real issues of communication with which international TAs and students must cope. At GEO, this has been an issue with which we have contended, and done so in the GEO contract. Solutions to this problem involve ways to facilitate communication and improve people's teaching skills. We condemn all xenophobic, racist, and isolationist rants and non-solutions.

It is especially frustrating that Gary does not even have his facts straight. He argues that international teaching assistants should be tested based on spoken English, and that those who fail the exam should not be allowed to teach. What Gary apparently does not know is that such practices are already in place at UMass, for better or worse.

As the president of GEO, I am certainly used to criticism of my union. Although the vast majority of graduate and undergraduate students support GEO and its efforts, there are, alas, still some people out there who criticize our activities. We wish that everyone wholeheartedly supported GEO, but we nonetheless expect criticism, and we accept it. We are even used to the occasional suggestion that GEO should cease operations on campus.

However, this is what we do not expect. We do not expect that a

Collegian columnist would suggest murdering each member of GEO with dynamite. If this sounds disgusting to you, you should know that for

Gary, "[T]hat's the price I'm willing to pay." I hope that he was not serious, but I must take seriously any comment that suggests the campus would be better off if 2,500 graduate students, including me, were killed.

Some more of Gary's words: "[GEO members] are a bunch of narcissistic, crying infants who accomplish nothing." Since GEO formed a union at UMass, the minimum stipends of graduate employees have more than doubled, graduate employees now have health care benefits, and we are guaranteed significant tuition and fee waivers so we do not have to pay for the privilege of employment. One could label that "nothing," I suppose, but given the facts, that argument seems without merit.

What is most frustrating is that Gary does not understand that increased benefits to graduate employees helps undergraduate students like him. Better pay and benefits improve the university's ability to recruit graduate employees do more than half of the teaching at UMass.

Gary also lashed out against smokers (who "should just flat out be beheaded!") and white supremacists ("sheep-impregnating" and "heffer Screwers"). Obviously, neither are our constituency, and, presumably,

Gary was not entirely serious. However, we still implore Gary and the Collegian to pursue a higher level of discourse, one that is productive and seeks to address real issues.

I do not believe that the staff of the Collegian supports Gary's views. I believe that they would denounce his racist and violent views, and I think that they should do so publicly (I even wonder how much Gary, given hindsight, would support his own essay.) I also believe that there would be consensus to prohibit such inflammatory articles from appearing in their newspaper.

James Shaw
G.E.O. President

An Unnamed Angel On Campus

Emily Vacanti

Well, here it is. This is both my last column of the semester, and my last column of the millennium, depending on whether you consider the millennium to be ending on December 31, 1999, or December 31, 2000. I will be graduating in the spring, and will stay for the next four semesters. Some of you are weeping out of happiness (thank god she's done for the semester), some out of sadness (sniff, sniff). As my last column of the semester I decided to tell a story about a certain angel on campus. This person has changed my life forever. Enjoy!

Last year during the random blackout of Southwest, something amazing happened. I met someone who I will never forget.

As most Southwest residents should know, last spring there was a blackout. The escort van was just arriving in the horseshoe when I heard about the blackout over the scanner. Now, I'm afraid of the dark, I had a sprained foot and a cane, and about ten pounds of books on my back. This was a very bad thing, knowing that I lived on the 21st floor of my building, Washington. I hurried from the van to my dorm dodging the bottles that were flying out of the windows at anyone passing by. I don't actually know if the card reader at the entrance of my building was working, only because someone saw me running to the building and graciously opened the door for me. (This is one reason that we should have full access. Keys don't depend on electricity.) Anyway, I got into my building and began cursing when I realized that I had to climb 21 flights of stairs.

So I began the climb. It sucked. Until you've actually climbed 21 flights of stairs, you cannot comment. Climbing 21 flights of stairs, whether your ankle is sprained or not, with a lot of books or not, sucks. There's no other word to describe it. When I got up to the eighth floor, it happened, the amazing occurrence that changed my life forever while giving me hope for everyone. This really good-looking guy came into the stairwell while saying good-bye to his friend. He saw me struggling and asked what floor I lived on. I told him the truth: 21. He asked to feel how heavy my book bag was. I handed it to him. Next thing I knew, he was climbing the stairs with my bag. Now keep in mind that this guy had a duffel bag that was full. He added my bag to his load. By then he was probably carrying 15 or 20 pounds. As he climbed the stairs, he kept glancing back to check on me, and every couple of flights he asked me if I was okay. He was a perfect gentleman and an angel. When we finally got up to my floor and I unlocked the door, he simply placed my bag on the floor. I offered him a drink and food. But he said he was fine. I asked him to stay for a few minutes to rest, either in my room or in the hallway with my friends. He said that he was fine and that he should get going. That was the end of it. He just left.

After he left, my friends said that they hadn't seen anyone with me. Considering that he had passed at least five of my friends when we got to my floor, I just don't understand it. Later I asked his friend who he was. His friend told me that he had no idea who I was talking about. He didn't say good-bye to anyone at that time that night. He saw me in the stairwell, but he didn't see anyone else. The angel had told me that he lived in a Southwest low rise. But I don't know anything else about him. Yes, I inquired about who he was, his year, his building, anything. But he was very shy. He kept very quiet, except to ask if I was okay and to make sure that I could make it.

I want to thank you for everything, whoever you are. If it is possible, I would like to thank you to your face. But I know that is very unlikely.

This brings me to another point. Unfortunately, there hasn't been another angel in my life since then, but there have been some great people and great organizations this semester. Since this is my last column of the millennium, I would like to give them a millennium thank-you. First, thanks to the Science Fiction Society. These people are great. Not only are they funny, talented, smart, personable, cute, and laid-back, but they don't discriminate. Anyone who wants to join can. They're great because they accept everybody. Some organizations only accept certain types of people. (no, I will not name any of these groups). The Science Fiction Society accepts everyone. Also, there's Hair by Harlow. They've fixed some of the biggest screw-ups of other salons in my hometown. The manager has been the one to help. The Collegian has been kind of an ongoing angel ever since I started working down here. The people are hardworking and great. Though some have definitely both intrigued me and confused the hell out of me. There's no other word to describe everyone down here, other than great. Any other word cannot be used to describe everyone.

What I consider to be two great departments are Sociology and Comparative Literature. The heads of both departments have helped me in so many ways. Professor Petroff has been an angel to me in every way possible. She has been understanding and supportive, while assisting me in both of the classes that I have had with her. And the Sociology Department Head, Gene Fisher, has been more understanding than any other head that I have consulted with. Other than the Science Fiction Society, The Collegian, and those two department heads, no real angels have presented themselves to me. Thank you to all five of you (the angel, the Science Fiction Society, Hair by Harlow, and both Professor Petroff and Professor Fisher). You've all been great, and I look forward to working with you in the future. Happy Millennium.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Shawn Ilinitch Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Jake Lilien Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Jeanie Gorlovsky Co-Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Jon Rondall Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Catherine Turner International Affairs Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics/Business Advisor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1998. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

International Affairs

World briefs: Chad, Yemen and Tajikistan

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Chad: Oil companies Elf Aquitaine and the Royal Dutch/Shell Group are waning in their interest to build a $3.5 billion dollar oil pipeline in the central African nation of Chad. The oil, found in the financially strapped nation's southern end, would be piped through Chad and into neighboring Cameroon, where it would then be collected.

Both oil companies were still considering the possibility of the plan that was opposed by foreign environmental groups. Both have said that they are considering having a much smaller part of the project. The World Bank's African External Affairs Unit has continued to support the plan which is seen as crucial to Chad's economic future.

Tajikistan: Tajikistan's President Emomali Rakhmonov signed a bill last Saturday that set elections for both houses of the nation's parliament. The lower chamber will be voted on Feb. 27, while the upper chamber will be voted on March 23.

The same law also makes Rakhmonov, when he chooses not to run for president, to be a senator for life.

Laos: The United States government defended the Laotian government after charges that the Asian government abused 1lmong refugees from Thailand after the Vietnam War.

State Department spokesman James Rubin said that while there have been instances of discrimination in Laotian society and individual human rights abuses, those have not been caused by government policy. Hmongs in the Vietnam War fought with American forces, and many came to the United States after the fighting ceased.

Albania: The Constitutional Court of Albania has abolished the European nation's death penalty. By abolishing the penalty, the country met the Council of Europe's main requirement for membership.

Forty nations are a part of the Council of Europe, a group set up in 1949 to promote democracy and human rights in Europe. Albania wants to join the group to further its integration into Europe.

Twenty criminals sentenced to die in Albania have been given life in prison after the Court ruled that the death penalty contradicted the nation's constitution.

Suriname: Jules Wijdenbosch, Suriname's president, fired four of his cabinet ministers after saying he was displeased with their professional performance.

Wijdenbosch sacked his education, finance, planning and justice ministers. He is not immediately seeking replacements for all four positions, and has divided their responsibilities up amongst his other eight ministers.

The president faces re-election next year after protestors called for his resignation and he moved the elections forward a year.

Uganda: The International Monetary Fund has praised Uganda's efforts to reduce poverty and launch structural reform. However, the IMF also observed that certain areas of the African nation were much poorer than others.

The IMF recommended that Uganda's government observe its own budget limits. Inflation in the nation was projected to hold at five percent while the nation's growth was projected to stand at seven percent.

Uganda was one of the first nations to qualify for the IMF's Highly Indebted Poor Countries Initiative that offers debt relief to reformist debtor states.

Yemen: Saudi Arabia deported thousands of Yemenis last week after telling them that they'd violated the kingdom's immigration laws.

It is the second time this decade that Saudi Arabia has deported Yemenis. In 1991, Saudi Arabia suspended aid and stopped issuing entry visas to Yemenis of Sanaa, the nation's capital, and angered neighbors after appearing to side with Iraq after that Middle Eastern nation invaded Kuwait.

Israel working for a peace with neighbors

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Staff

Israel and its neighbors

Palestinian Leader Yasser Arafat

Israeli Leader Ehud Barak

Leaders of Israel and Syria will be arriving in Washington D.C. on Wednesday to resume peace talks that were cut short four years ago. Israel's Prime Minister will join President Clinton and Syria's Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa to discuss the status of Golan Heights, an area occupied by Israel since the 1967 Mideast war.

The question of the day will be how flexible Israel is on its withdrawal from the plateau. Syria wants Israel out of the region completely, but Israel has over 20,000 settlers in the 30 square-mile area that have spent the last 20 years building lives and communities there.

Everyone involved is invested in peace, and Syrian leaders predict that peace can and will be achieved within a few months. Envoys from the European Union and the Kremlin traveled to Damascus on Saturday to meet with al-Sharaa to discuss their support in the peace process.

The talks began nine years ago but broke down after a series of suicide bombings by Islamic militants that killed scores of Israelis. Clinton hopes that the talks will pick up exactly where they left off and the Middle Eastern leaders can reach an agreement regarding the borders of their respective countries.

Though this is a groundbreaking event in the history of Israeli relations with Syria, the small country also must remain focused on its ongoing peace negotiations with neighboring Palestine.

In an agreement signed in September, Israel agreed to transfer another five percent of the West Bank to Palestine and the Palestinian Civil Administration. By November 15th, only two percent had been given up and the Palestinians were dissatisfied with the lands surrendered. They wanted a more densely populated area, rather than just wasteland.

Israel and Palestine are working to reach a framework accord by February 2000 for a perpetual peace that would conclude seven months later. Palestine would be put in control of almost forty percent of the West Bank if the agreement were to be implemented in full.

United States Secretary of State Madeleine Albright has already arrived in the area to mediate the Israeli-Palestinian negotiations. She hopes to keep attention focused on the final borders, the appointment of scarce water supplies, and the disposition of the Palestinian refugees.

Palestinian Yasser Arafat has made it clear that the Palestinians want to create a state with a capital in Jerusalem, but Arafat is feeling pressure from both Islamic militants and parlimentarians as to which exact lands should be confiscated, and what exactly will be done with them once they are inherited. The West Bank and the Gaza strip are currently Israeli-occupied and subject to an Israeli-Palestinian interim agreement.

Meanwhile, Israeli Prime Minister Barak has so far been keeping his campaign promises. In his short, five-month long tenure as president, he has already approved 3,200 housing units in the Golan Heights area and proved that to be striving toward peace with the Syrians.

However, Barak has halted building in the Heights for the moment, until the talks are over. The residents of the region are vehemently opposed to the transfer of land to the Syrians. Protesters have already congregated on the steps of the parliamentary building in Jerusalem with signs and flags, symbolizing their dissent.

Residents do not want to be uprooted and a relocation of the Golan occupants would not only be devastating, but would also be costly. If this were to happen, Israel would turn to the United States to help foot the bill for the transfer.

The Israeli military is also opposed to letting go of the plateau, claiming that Golan Heights is a military necessity just by its location and terrain, enabling soldiers to look down upon Syria and monitor their activity. Many Israelis do not want to give the Syrians access to the Sea of Galilee, which is what would happen if the accord is reached.

Barak is still confident in his negotiating skills despite the strong movement against withdrawal. He is confident that the parliament will agree with him and pass the accord, letting peace reign over the land, rather than shells.

Israel seems to be on its way to a unilateral peace with its neighbors for the first time since 1991 when a framework was established during bilateral negotiations between Israel, Syria, and Palestine. Since then, the country has also resolved disputes with Jordan in 1994 and may begin peace talks with Lebanon soon if the latest discussions are successful.

Israeli troops have occupied southern Lebanon since 1982 and has remained technically at war with the Lebanese ever since. However, Barak also promised in his campaign speeches to work toward an end to the unpopular war, and even made claims he would withdraw all forces from Lebanon by July 2000.

Though an end to the war would relieve most Israelis, some still have concerns with security and safety from Islamic guerrillas near the borders. Over 500 Israeli soldiers have been killed since a buffer zone was set up in 1985. This year, Israel has claimed to have finally gained the upper hand, but the Jihad fighters are constantly retaliating with more sophisticated weapons. Peace with Lebanon will only come once a peace with Syria is established, this much is clear.

The hump of land, only 476 square miles, may not seem significant to Americans, but is extremely controversial and integral in the Middle East as it is the epicenter for both Jews and Muslims. In fact, almost the entire expanse of land occupied by Israelis has some religious significance, and this makes it that much harder to find a common ground for which to negotiate.

Barak's approach to the situation is vastly different than that of former Foreign Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who was more assertive yet less willing to sacrifice vulnerabilities for a lasting peace. Barak speaks softly and has a genuine interest in dissolving grudges from preceding decades. He is decidedly more committed to a new era of cooperation in the Middle East.

So far, the leaders have been optimistic on all fronts. Representatives from the said countries all seem to agree that if conflicts are settled with Israel, a potential peace within all Arab states is within reach. Resolution is the goal in this 52-year-old conflict.

Dark side of the Iraq embargo

By Simon Doolittle
Collegian Correspondent

Iraq is so often on the receiving end of U.S. criticism and attack that it barely makes the news anymore. Indeed, U.S. planes have bombed Iraq periodically since the end of Operation Desert Fox in December of last year, including once just two and a half weeks ago. Yet hardly anyone seems to notice.

According to a growing activist movement, the bombs dropped on Iraq do very little damage compared to the UN sanctions, imposed largely due to U.S. support. The anti sanctions movement says that the embargo has caused extraordinary suffering for an innocent population.

Indeed, UNICEF's 1999 report states that at least 500,000 excess deaths have occurred among children since 1990 due to the direct effects of sanctions. The report also states that, in the same time span, infant mortality rates have more than doubled. Denis Halliday, the former UN Humanitarian Coordinator, says that UNICEF estimates of 5,000 Iraqi children dying each month due to lack of food and medicine are "conservative."

The UN Department of Humanitarian Affairs reports that "public health services are near total collapse – basic medicines, life-saving drugs, and essential medical supplies are lacking throughout the country. Fifty percent of rural people have no access to potable water, and waste water treatment facilities have stopped functioning in most urban areas." Nobel Peace Laureate Mairead Maguire has referred to the sanctions on Iraq as "the economic nuclear bomb."

The budding movement claims that U.S. policy is unjust and hypocritical because, in aiming to destroy Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, the U.S. is itself utilizing a weapon of mass destruction: sanctions.

Whether or not Iraq actually continues to pose a serious threat with such weapons is also doubtful. According to W. Scott Ritter, UNSCOM Chief Inspector, "When you ask the question, 'Does Iraq possess militarily viable, biological, or chemical weapons? The answer is a resounding 'No'."

Yet, the Clinton Administration remains committed to its policy on Iraq, insisting that Saddam Hussein alone is responsible for the suffering of the Iraqi people. The administration claims that the Oil for Food Program should address the humanitarian concerns of activists.

Again, the activists passionately disagree. Kathy Kelly, coordinator of Voices in the Wilderness, an anti-sanctions campaign based in Chicago, says that, "the sanctions shouldn't be lifted because of the actions of the Iraqi government, they should be lifted because they're direct, discriminate warfare against a vulnerable population.

Further, Kelly argues that the $3.2 billion of oil sales every six months allowed under the plan doesn't come close to meeting Iraq's needs. She notes that, due to the combined damage of the Gulf War, repeated bombings, and lack of maintenance, Iraq needs tens of billions of dollars worth of repairs to update the basic health, sanitation, and electrical infrastructure alone.

Kelly says that beyond the insufficiency of funds, the UN takes large amounts off the top to pay for reparations from the gulf war and UN personnel in Iraq. She estimates that the actually amount of money from the oil for food deal that makes it to the Iraqi people is only about $0.25 per person per day.

Another key criticism of U.S. policy is that, beyond being cruel, it has failed to weaken the Hussein regime. Social services, education, and communication systems are all in shambles, and the middle and professional classes have largely fled Iraq for more livable countries. All of these factors cast serious doubt on the prospects for a strong democracy movement in Iraq. Activists argue that sanctions only exacerbate these problems. Finally, with the Iraqi government the only channel through which oil for food funds are brought into the country, the power and influence of the regime has only been centralized.

Voices in the Wilderness, which has coordinated 28 delegations to Iraq since March of '96 to deliver food and medical supplies, has actually been fined $160,000 by the US government for violating the embargo. Yet, the delegations continue. According to Kelly, they have no intention of paying the fine.

Generating opposition to the sanctions is certainly an uphill battle, but the movement continues to grow. Over the past year, the Education for Peace in Iraq Center (EPIC) had been founded in Washington D.C. to spearhead lobbying efforts against the sanctions. It's Executive Director, Erik Gustafson, is a Gulf War Veteran. This past September, five congressional offices sent staff members on a delegation to Iraq to investigate the impact of the sanctions.

Despite enormous opposition, the movement chugs along, and there's no sign that it'll stop before the sanctions are lifted. Ms. Kelly says, quite simply, "we'll continue to do what we do."

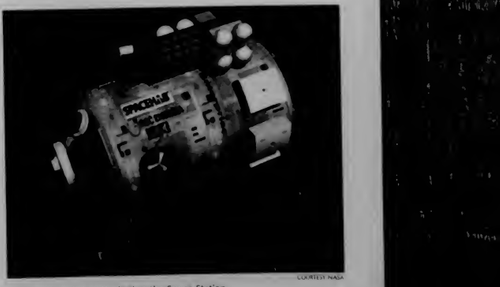
Iraq and its borders

International Enterprise: US/Russia sky module

By Timothy Brothers
Collegian Correspondent

December 10 – An American company, Spacehab Inc., has reached agreement with a Russian space company to begin funding for the first commercial outpost in space. RSC (Rocket Space Corporation) Energia, a Russian-owned company, manages the Mir space station on Russia's behalf and built the Zvezda service module that will serve as the initial living quarters on the new space station.

The two companies have decided to name the module, which weighs in at approximately 15,000 pounds, and will be 12' in diameter and 36' in length, Enterprise. Current schematics show that the Enterprise would be attached to the Russian segment of the International Space Station (ISS) between the Zarya control module and the U.S.-built Unity connecting node.



Enterprise will be manned and dedicated to servicing a variety of commercial markets on Earth. The new addition to the station will house a broadcast station and a research laboratory in which microgravity experiments targeting new biotech and advanced material products and processes will be conducted. Spacehab hopes to use the communications equipment for advertiser-supported television and Internet broadcasts from space.

The company estimated that developing and testing the module and its commercial communications system would cost $100 million. Spacehab will fund its portion of the project through private financing. Energia will construct Enterprise and coordinate with the Russian Space Agency (RSA). RSA will provide launch services and other resources to the enterprise.

The $60 billion International Space Station, being built in segments 250 miles above Earth, is to be a giant laboratory weighing almost a million pounds when it is finished in 2004. The project, led by the United States, is a concerted effort of 16 countries; the other countries are Russia, Japan, Canada, Brazil, and 11 nations of the European Space Agency.

The space station currently consists of two segments, one American and one Russian, launched late last year. While a dozen major components wait to be linked together in space, construction has been halted for a year because of Russia's inability to complete a crucial third segment on time.

Although NASA has stated that it plans no direct involvement with this particular project, it has expressed great interest in commercializing future ventures. The United States and other partners in the station have said they eventually want some of it, or all, to be commercialized so as to help produce a return on the investment

COURTESY NASA
Enterprise will be attached to the Space Station.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Hanks fails to top Toy Story 2 at BO

Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

With the release of two new movies this weekend, including Frank Darabont's much-anticipated sequel to Shawshank Redemption, The Green Mile, it was expected that overcoming films would slide down the box office charts. However, the embittered champion, Toy Story 2, had other plans.

Pixar's animated gem pulled in $18.7 million over the weekend to just edge out Mile for top honors. In their third week of release, Buzz and Woody lost only 32 percent in their business to remain atop the box office.

Saving Private Ryan ($30.6 million open) this was $30.4 million, Ryan opened in peak summer position, while The Green Mile was cast amid December's releases. Thus, while January December is a bad box office period. However, only one movie has ever opened to more than $30 million during December – Scream 2 with $33 million – until. On 2673 screens, Tom Hanks' latest tallied $28.6 million for the weekend, for a strong $6470 per-screen average. December films traditionally have huge multiplier – look for this to have great legs, especially with Hanks and great reviews. I expect a drop of 15 percent or less next week.

Taking third place was Deuce Bigalow: Male Gigolo. The stupid comedy, seemingly made for Adam Sandler (starring Rob Schneider), had a fairly impressive $6044 per-screen average on 2151 screens to the tune of $13 million for the weekend. This will last longer just because December, but overall it's just a bad fad.

The Wild Is Not Enough finished its month-long box office run not shy of the $100 million mark. Bond's $6.2 million weekend brought its cumulative total to $99.5 million. After opening at $55.5 million, Bond still managed an impressive 2.47 multiplier – better than average. Thanksgiving likely helped.

End of Days managed a fourth place finish this weekend with $4.7 million. Despite horrible reviews and word of mouth, this movie continues to attract some business. Its cumulative total is up to $55.2 million and is on its way to an average multiplier.

Tim Burton's Sleepy Hollow also witnessed its final weekend in a month-long box office run this past weekend. $4.6 million was good enough for sixth place and $81.2 million overall. Sleepy Hollow opened at $30 million, which translates into a 2.7 multiplier, reflecting mixed word of mouth on this one.

Rounding out this week's top ten were: The Bone Collector with a $1.7 million weekend and $60.8 total, Dogma ($1.2 million, $26.4 million), Pokemon: The First Movie ($1.1 million, $82.3 million), and finally Being John Malkovich ($1 million and $15.3 million).

With that said, I'd like to take an opportunity to project the rest of this holiday's box office fare in hopes of pointing the finger towards blockbusters on the horizon.

Blockbusters. The Talented Mr. Ripley (This has Oscar written all over it.) With Matt Damon, Gwyneth

Turn to MOVIES, page 8

Green turns up gold
Mile is haunting human tale

COURTESY RALPH NELSON

Tom Hanks and Michael Duncan star in Frank Darabont's humanistic prison tale, The Green Mile.

David Troupes
By Collegian Staff

The Green Mile
Directed by Frank Darabont with Tom Hanks, Michael Duncan, David Morse, James Cromwell
Playing at Mountain Farms Theatres, Hadley

Tom Hanks has made a career for himself out of playing characters exhibiting both universality and objectivity; through his eyes, an audience can observe the world of a movie in all its moral intricacy, while the uncompromising clarity and honesty of his observation leaves judgment at the discretion of the viewer. He lives for us, but we feel for ourselves. The Green Mile takes the power of Hanks' acting, and joins it with the remarkable talent of director Frank Darabont and a script adapted from a book by master novelist Stephen King. The results, as can be expected, are nothing short of magnificent.

Tom Hanks plays Paul Edgecomb, one of several guards working on E-Block of a certain death row prison, termed the Green Mile because of the lime-stained floors. The considerable length of this movie (three hours, eight minutes) follows the experiences Edgecomb and the other guards have dealing with several colorful inmates, especially one John Coffey (Michael Duncan), a physically massive but endlessly meek and kind-hearted man who begins to exhibit strange, miraculous abilities.

Do not let this movie's length turn you off. It grips you from the beginning, sucking you into its characters with one of the most solid casts ever assembled. There simply wasn't a single moment of bad or inappropriate acting in the entire movie; David Morse as guard Brutus Howell, James Cromwell as Warden Hal Moores, and Bonnie Hunt as Ian Edgecomb are just a few of the actors who deserve praise for their flawless performances.

Darabont does an excellent job of recreating the 1930's: everything from the clothes the characters wear, to the cars they drive, to the telephones they answer, to the music they listen to, everything fits together perfectly in the formation of a completely convincing setting. Lighting, camera placement, action pacing: all are handled perfectly.

The movie's unique power comes not from the 1930's placement, however, but from the Green Mile itself, and the spiritual energy alive in every happenstance. One would naturally picture a death row prison block as offering nothing but ugliness and brutality, and yet the Green Mile overflows with hope and subtle beauty. Much like The Shawshank Redemption, which was also directed by Darabont and adapted from a King story, this movie seeks to examine humankind's ability to survive spiritually in even the most dire of environments, as well as the irrepressible power of humility, selflessness, and hope. Whereas the prison in Shawshank was merely a prison, and its inmates merely inmates, the Green Mile frequently comes alive with a supernatural energy; the movie

Turn to GREEN, page 8

GNR's latest Live Era dead on arrival

GUNS N' ROSES
Live Era '87-'93
Geffen

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

My first experience with Guns N' Roses was almost surreal. I was in third grade and therefore much easier to impress, and everything cool about GNR hit me all at once. "Welcome to the Jungle" was the coolest song ever: it ruled the radio, and the video, which was equally great, was playing constantly on MTV. My friend had the tape, and the foldout had a picture of a half-naked woman: it was blasphemous! And Axl and the gang were all over the news starting fights or speaking about riots at their concerts; this band was badass and they had the music to back it up. I thought maybe Live Era would conjure up these long-dormant memories, but alas, it didn't. This two-CD set is about as wild as a pregnant turtle.

Guns N' Roses only had three proper albums, as well as a CD of b-sides, and a release consisting entirely of cover songs, for a total of five releases. Four are represented on Live Era, and don't expect the omission of the masterpieces contained on The Spaghetti Incident? to cause any riots in the streets. Two discs worth of music may seem a little much for a band with so little material, but GNR could get away with it if it was only better put together than Live Era. A live set pulled from a single show would have been ideal, since whether it was from early or late in their career it still would have been better than this. Instead we get individual live performances "recorded across the universe" which destroys any kind of energy between one track and the next. Even this could be forgivable since one would assume that many great GNR tracks plus many great GNR performances would make it nearly impossible for one to choose which of the best to put on the album. I don't know where in the universe some of these performances were taken from, but some of them are downright depressing. I absolutely love "Nightrain" and "It's So Easy," but the versions on Live Era lack any sense of looseness or energy that are found in good live performances. I know that GNR didn't get to be huge by putting on a lackluster live show, but the performances represented too often here definitely aren't the ones you want to remember.

The super-refined sound of Live Era may help to diminish some of GNR's finer songs, but some of their material just can't be tainted. "Welcome to the Jungle" is just as good now as ever, and the live performance contained here is definitely one of the highlights of the album. Also, tracks like "Move to the City" and "Knockin' on Heaven's Door" make good use of the live setting and liven up the proceedings with some jamming, brass instruments, and even reggae. The polished sound of the album serves the epic songs in the GNR catalogue the best, as the vast, expansive feeling of a five show makes "Estranged" and "November Rain" sound all the more special.

Judged on the material alone, Live Era is great, as it features almost all of their best songs. The only complaints would be the too-heavy emphasis on Appetite for Destruction and the unintentionally hilarious rendition of the Black Sabbath non-classic "It's Alright." But if you're in the market for this CD, chances are you already have their whole collection. Save for the novelty of a GNR live CD, this is much too flawed a release to recommend as a purchase, even to fans. C+

so, now that I graduate...UMass is letting you bring your own phone! What a school, eh? NO CORDLESS!! Bad reception!!!

msa Muslim Students Association
Muslim Students Association
321 Student Union Building
University of Massachusetts – Amherst, MA 01003

RAMADHAN
At

Community Iftar:
Sunday, December 12, 19, 26, 1999 & January 2, 2000 Sundown time at Lincoln Center Rm. 163, 4:30pm
Islamic Movies:
Tuesday, December 14, 21, 28, 1999 & January 4, 2000 starting 8:00pm at Rm.165/162 Lincoln Campus Center
Daily Taraweeh Prayers:
Everyday 7:00-7:30pm at Lincoln Campus Center starting Dec 9-Jan 8
For more information, please contact Sr.Rana: (413) 545-1180. or email us at muslim@stuaf.umass.edu

BRUISED BODY?
Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.
DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
The Area's Most Complete Club
256-6446
Free T-Shirt
90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt. 9• 2 Miles East of town Center
JOIN NOW FOR OUR 15 WEEK
WINTER SPECIAL
($169)
AND GET A FREE HFC T-SHIRT
WE ACCEPT
MasterCard
VISA

Winter Tenant Matters and Protections for Renters

Heating Your House Or Apartment Over Winter Break: Frozen Pipe Alert

If you are leaving your house or apartment over the winter break please remember to keep your thermostat turned up at least 55 degrees throughout your residence. Neglecting to do this may cause significant damage to the residence from pipes freezing and water damage. If you are a renter the costs from these damages-which can be in the thousands of dollars-could potentially be passed on to you. SO...if you plan to be out of town for any time over the winter break make arrangements with your landlord to safeguard your residence against this potential serious and costly problem.

$$ Fuel Assistance

If your household is having trouble paying for home heating oil and fuel then you may qualify for assistance from the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program. Qualified households will receive assistance based on their household size and income. Locally residents from both Hampshire and Franklin counties should contact the Franklin Community Action Corporation based in Greenfield. Call 1-800-370-0940 to get access to this program as funds are only available for a limited time.

Winter Protection Plan for Households Facing Electricity Shut Offs

If you are the head of a household and can honestly say that " I cannot pay my electric bill in full and i will not be able to afford food, clothing, rent, medical treatment and other basic necessities" then you may qualify for a special program called The Winter Protection Plan from Western Mass Electric Company (WEMCO). Under this plan WEMCO will agree not to shut off your electric service non payment; not to send you a shut off notice this winter; not to charge you a late payment fee. To qualify contact your local public assistance agency or mail a copy of either a: fuel assistance award letter; a Medicaid card, a food stamp identification card; a copy of your social security card; your unemployment booklet or claim from or notice of action and or eligibility from MA Department of Social Services to:

Northeast Utilities, Office of Credit Administration, PO Box 270, Hartford CT 06141-0270

Important Information for Renters brought to you by Commuter Services (formerly Off Campus Housing office), Rm. 428 Student Union

Gr ews!

A New Year's ... to you. Starting next semester, students on the Traditional Me... can eat a limited number of meals at the Retail Food Service Ou... on the Campus Center and snack bars in addition to the Dining Halls.

Deluxe Meal Plan offers a 7 meal exchange per semester.
Value Meal Plan offers a 5 meal exchange per semester.
Basic Meal Plan offers a 3 meal exchange per semester.

Blue Wall
Coffee Shop
Hatch Food Court
Starbucks Coffee Cart
Whitmore Snack Bar
Hampden Snack Bar

How it works:
Student can use a meal exchange (cash value $5.50) at above locations.
Sorry, no reduction for meals of lesser cash value, student is responsible for any additional charges over $5.50.
Enjoy the best food value on campus!

It's really HOT the MILLENIUM..talk to me this time next year...then wish me a Happy Millenium, Pub.

Get paid while surfing the net.
more info:
http://www.gotoworld.com/getpaid/default.asp?rid=1022801972

Think About This:
You Want To Begin Investing But You Can't Afford Much Per Month, And Inflation Is Eating Your Savings Account For Lunch.
Try Series I Bonds. They're guaranteed to stay ahead of inflation for up to 30 years, and you can get started with just $50. Visit us at www.savingsbonds.gov to find out more.
iBonds
www.savingsbonds.gov
A public service of this newspaper

You must extract yourself from a dilemma by falling in love

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD
starting under $20.00
The Finest
silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY
One King St., Northampton 584-3324
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324
www.silverscapedesigns.com • 800-729-8971

Great Gifts
Bags Stocking Stuffers Hats
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Earrings Rings Bracelets Chains Sweaters Toys India Print Bedspreads Candles
Incense Baskets Merry X'mas Cards Mugs
Paper Lampshades Gloves Chinese Shoes
Sale 20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The Mercantile Mon.-Sat. 9AM Dec. 1-22 Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Amherst-Carriage Shops Northampton-108Main St.

Greenfield Community College - January Classes
Take a course during January Intersession!

Title	Credits	Days	Times	Course Dates
Introduction to Dance	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
English Composition I	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
English Composition II	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
Intermediate Grammer Review	2	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
French Skills Practice I	2	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 10-21, 2000
History of the American People to 1865	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 3-21, 2000
Spanish Skills Practice I	2	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 10-21, 2000
Spanish Skills Practice II	2	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 10-21, 2000
Oral Communication: Public Speaking	3	MTWThF	9-12:00	Jan. 8-30, 2000

You can earn one, two, or three transferable credits during January.
Register through Monday, December 27, 1999.
Financial Aid can apply to January courses!
Classes begin Monday, January 3, 2000 and run through Friday, January 21, 2000; unless otherwise noted.
(No class on Monday, January 17, Martin Luther King Day)
Spring Semester begins Monday, January 25, 1999
Greenfield Community College
Higher Education at an affordable price.
Call 775-1803 for more information.

Green

continued from page 6

takes a much more literal stance on the ideas of salvation and redemption.

There is a surprising amount of humor in The Green Mile, working as a welcome means of emotional release, considering the oftentimes troubling nature of the movie's material. The humor also keeps the action grounded in the human desire for happiness: the characters are not joyless people, wading zombie-like through a cold world. By demonstrating their capacity to enjoy the simple pleasures and subtle hilarity of life, the movie makes the awful emotional turmoil they face all the more shocking.

And that turmoil comes crashing down whenever an execution approaches – the movie allows you to become familiar with its characters, even affectionate toward them, before reminding us that the Green Mile is, after all, death row. The ugliness and inhumanity of the business conducted there is not spared on the audience; much the opposite, the movie brutally but necessarily drags the viewer through more than one electrocution (and the 1930's approach to this leaves much to be desired in the way of efficiency). I wanted to avert my eyes more than once, but to do so would undermine what the movie sought to do: contrast the human potential for miraculous beauty with the human capacity for unthinkable cruelty.

And here, the movie does falter a little bit, succumbing to an over-simplistic view of human nature. The characters are either good or evil, either worthy of our sympathy or deserving of our punishment. Had the movie been more willing to find fault with its heroes, and find forgiveness for its villains, the moral undercurrent at work would have resonated more strongly. As it is, The Green Mile has the feel of a complicated adult parable, mature and unsettling, but at the same time heavy-handed in its treatment of character worth and motivation.

It remains, however, a technical masterpiece, a haunting and emotionally trying look at the extremes of our capacity for kindness and callousness, and beyond that, a fascinating, entertaining story. By the movie's climax, much of the audience was in tears, a testament to The Green Mile's power and the appeal of its characters. Don't miss this one.

Grade: A-

movies

continued from page 6

Paltrow, and Anthony Minghella (The English Patient), it's hard to see this one missing. Man on the Moon (Jim Carrey in another intelligent role, and R.E.M. music), Galaxy Quest (part parody, part action movie, this will score big with teens), and Fantasia 2000 (the biggest movie in Disney's history on the biggest screens possible—IMAX).

Tossups. Bicentennial Man (granted Robin Williams made Christmas gold last year with Patch Adams, but this looks really bad), Stuart Little (family fare is bankable at holiday time), Any Given Sunday (Al Pacino, Cameron Diaz... and Jamie Foxx? Oliver Stone's latest could go either way), and Anna and the King (even Jodie Foster may not be able to carry a remade musical without the music).

Limited releases that could break out. End of the Affair (Ralph Fiennes in an independently made epic romance - can anyone say English Patient?), Angela's Ashes (the book was a hugely popular bestseller, but will anyone care about a movie chopped to two hours?), The Hurricane (early Oscar rumors for Denzel Washington should help, but it needs to appeal outside a very limited demographic), Magnolia (Tom Cruise is usually money, but will anyone understand this unorthodox storytelling?), Girl Interrupted (a guy's dream cast with both Winona Ryder and Angelina Jolie, but mental institutions usually aren't holiday material), The Cider House Rules (will John Irving's screenplay live up to his own wonderful novel?), and Cradle Will Rock (Tim Robbins directs a great cast in a period piece reminiscent of Quiz Show).

...the sun rained ...life were filled with words

the daily collegian

IF

the daily collegian

...I could touch a cloud ...the world were red

Applications are Available for Affordable Flexible-Schedule Child Care at University Child Care

Apply Today!

Enrollment Application Packets are available in the following locations:

University Child Care Office - 112 Berkshire House
GEO Office - 201 Student Union
GSS Office - 919 Campus Center
Computer Services and Housing Resource Center - 428 Student Union
Dean of Students Office - 227 Whitmore

•The Flexible-Schedule classrooms offers part-day child care programming for toddlers (15 months - 2 years, 9 months) and preschoolers (2 years, 9 months through 5 years).

•Parents select an enrollment schedule from a variety of drop-off and pick-up times from 7:30am - 5:30pm for toddlers and 7:30am - 9:30pm for preschoolers ("evening hours are contingent upon enrollment and staffing). The enrollment schedule may change each semester.

Enrollment priority is given to undergraduate and graduate student families based on financial need. Second enrollment priority is given to University employee families based on financial need. When enrollment is full, a waiting list is maintained.

Tuition costs fall on sliding fee scale, based on family size and household income. A family earning under $14,500 receives fully subsidized tuition.

For More Information and Application Call
University Child Care (413) 545-1566

At these prices, it's too bad we don't sell cars.

Maybe one day we will sell cars, food and everything else you need. But right now, it's great deals on textbooks every day. You can save up to 40%, and you'll get your books in 1 to 3 days. Not that you would, but don't sweat using a credit card. VarsityBooks.com is 100% guaranteed secure. Try saying that about a new SUV.

SAVE UP TO 40% ON TEXTBOOKS.

VarsityBooks

UMASS

UNIVERSITY FOOD SERVICES

www.aux.umass.edu/dinningservices/

JUNIORS - SENIORS - GRADS - COMMUTERS

*Accepted at:
Bluewall
Hatch
Coffee Shop
Snack Bars
Dining Halls
*other locations coming soon

YOUR CAMPUS MEAL PLAN SIGN UP NOW!

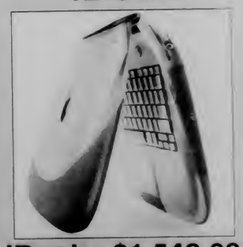
*Features:
Grab 'N' Go
Display Cooking
Fresh Baked Goods
Full Meals
Snacks*

Economy Plan	Commuter Express Plan	Light Plan
154 meals per semester	79 meals per semester	35 meals per semester
$950	$485	$225

*Payments may be made at:
Bursar's Office, 215 Whitmore*

*For more information call:
545-1362 or 545-2472*

Own Your Own



With finals just around the corner don't stand in line for the computer lab... Check out the new products from Apple!

G4

Apple has a new line of computers with the latest technologies. It's great to own your own computer and avoid the lines at the public labs. Think of your Student I.D. card as an Apple discount card and buy direct from Apple at educational discounts.

iBook

To find out how you can take one home...
Visit the Apple Education On-line Store at http://www.apple.com/education/store or call 800-780-5009

iMac DV	iBook
Affordable High Performance • 350- or 400-MHz PowerPC G3 processor • ATI RAGE 128 VR 2D/3D accelerated graphics • 64MB or 128MB of SDRAM; supports up to 512MB • 6GB, 10GB, or 13GB hard disk drive • Slot-loading CD-ROM or DVD-ROM drive • Slot-loading DVD-ROM drive plays DVD-Video movies • Two FireWire ports let you connect DV camcorders, hard disks, and other high-speed peripherals • Preinstalled iMovie software makes it easy for anyone to create high-quality DV movies in minutes	Impressive Performance, Low Price • 300-MHz PowerPC G3 processor with performance-boosting backside level 2 cache • Up to 6 hours of battery life (depending on configuration & use) • Graphics controller plus 4MB of SDRAM video memory for 2D and 3D graphics acceleration, enhanced QuickTime movie playback, and games • Built-in high-speed Ethernet networking and 56K modem • Stunning shape in a choice of two eye-catching colors • Brilliant high-resolution TFT active-matrix display • Convenient foldaway carrying handle • Unique closing mechanism with no latches to break

iBook - $1,549.00
M7619LL/A - Tangerine
M7707LL/A - Blueberry

iMac DV - $1,249.00
M7493LL/A - Blueberry
M7671LL/A - Tangerine
M7672LL/A - Grape
M7673LL/A - Strawberry
M7674LL/A - Lime

Rose's NFL holiday ramblings

To this, the holiday season, there are a lot of 11 teams that are giving praise to the lord. Also, there are a lot of NFL coaches, particularly in the NFC East, that are giving thanks as well. Four teams battle for the title of "Worst team to make the playoffs in 1999."

This weekend did more to make the picture clearer than it did to clear it up. The big game of the day was supposed to be between the Washington Redskins and the Arizona Cardinals. Unfortunately, the Redskins were the only team to show up, as they made the Cardinals offense look more like "The Mike O'Malley Show." AWFUL!

I would like to thank the Cardinals for participating in this 1999 season, but now they are DONE. Quarterback Jake Plummer looked more like Jake Plummet of the beginning of the season. In this one day, the Redskins defense looked more like the "Steel Curtain" than their usual Sunday selves. The Ken McDonald one-on-one defense."

Running back Stephen Davis and quarterback Brad Johnson are doing their best to make sure that head coach Norv Turner can stay for one more year of torment. At 8-5, the Redskins control their own destiny in the NFC East. However, they now have two teams breathing down their backs.

The New York Giants are making a late season push to try and become the unofficial "Worst team I've ever seen to Make The Playoffs." Their offense has showed up for two games this year and they are still 7-6. Kerry Collins has thrown for 5-TDs in the last two weeks, leading them to wins over Buffalo and The New York Jets. Other than those two games, it seemed like Y.A. Tittle had more hands passing than the Giant quarterbacks this season.

The defense has everything to do with the team's 7-6 record this year. Michael Strahan and Jessie Armstead have every right to be unhappy with the offense's performance this year. The defense has worked very hard for its offense to continually play like statues, standing around and watching.

If the Giants had the Redskins' defense, they would be worrying more about whether they would be able to get a win this year than fighting for a playoff spot.

Also now throwing their hat into the ring are the Dallas Cowboys. Their once built wall of invincibility now has more cracks than Marion Barry. But they are still in the middle of the playoff chase.

Emmitt Smith went down on Sunday with a pulled groin, just another fork in the road for the Cowboys. Chris Warren, a one time Pro-Bowler with the Seahawks, will have to step up if Smith is out for any period of time.

"Prime Time," "Neon Deion," whatever nickname you go with, Deion Sanders has to carry the team down the stretch. Like him or hate him, Sanders is still one of the most dangerous players in the game. His inclusion into the offense has made him that much more of a threat. If he can be the player that he was in the beginning of the decade, the Cowboys might be able to sneak into the playoffs as the division champions.

David Rose on the NFL

In the holiday spirit, gifts are given and joy is spread (except at the Daily Collegian Sports Department, where fists, and an occasional news columnist, are always flying). For some players, they hope to get more gifts as the postseason awards are given out. Here are my picks:

NFL Coach of the year- Jim Mora, Indianapolis. With the help of Peyton Manning, Edgerrin James, and Marvin Harrison, he has turned a team with two straight 3-13 seasons into a Super Bowl contender Runners-up: Dick Vermeil, Bobby Ross, Mike Holmgren.

Offensive Rookie of the Year- Edgerrin James, Indianapolis. Is there any doubt about this award? A bad draft choice at the beginning of the year has turned into the NFL's leader in total yards with 1787, and has put the Colts on the brink of their first division title since 1987.

Runner-up: Kevin Johnson

Defensive Rookie of the Year- Jevon Kearse, Tennessee. A beast who has 49 tackles, 11.5 sacks, and five forced fumbles. Tennessee is 10-3 and headed for the playoffs, and Kearse has been the mainstay in the defense all year.

Runner-up: Champ Bailey

Comeback Player of the Year: Jeff George- Minnesota. He was on the brink of retirement after last season; now he has the Vikings back in the playoff hunt. He had 1908 yards in 19 touchdowns heading into last night's game against Kansas City. Although I cannot stand him, I have to give the man his due.

Runners-up: Bryant Young

Fade Away Player of the Year: Tie - Randall Cunningham Vikings, and the entire San Francisco 49ers' secondary.

Last year's runner-up for MVP is once again on the bench after an inconsistent start to this year. Jeff George is the reason why Cunningham might stay on the pine the rest of the year. The 49ers secondary has found a way to make Steve Beuerlein and Kordell Stewart look like Johnny Unitas and Fran Tarkenton this year. Enough said.

Runner-up: Jerry Rice (I never thought I would say that),

NFL Defensive Player of the Year- Warren Sapp, Tampa Bay. Sapp is the heir-apparent to Reggie White as the most feared defensive lineman in the game. With ten sacks on the league's best defense, Sapp has shown his force all season long.

Runner-up- Kevin Hardy

NFL Most Valuable Player- Kurt Warner, St. Louis. Let's see, Trent Green goes down with a knee injury during the pre-season, with an unknown quarterback coming in: season is over, right? Warner has made sure that has not happened. Thus far, he has thrown for 3558 yards and 34 touchdowns as the Rams are within striking distance of home field throughout the entire playoffs. Not bad for a guy who is making about $300,000 this year.

Runners-up: Manning, Marshall Faulk, Eddie George.

Next time will we see each other is before the Super Bowl. Until the year 2000, have a great break. PEACE.

David Rose is a Collegian correspondent.

Jordan still draws crowd

By J.A. Adande
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES – All right, what kid do you think will be the envy of their friends at school Monday: the one who sat on Santa's lap at the mall or the ones who caught a glimpse of Michael Jordan at the Bulls Center Sunday?

It's at that point you realize Jordan is almost a year into retirement and he still has a higher Q rating than Mr. Sock.

Jordan toiled through a couple of sports apparel stores Sunday, just admiring to see how the latest edition of his Air Jordan shoes are selling.

Except with Jordan it's never as simple as a weekend stroll through the mall. He had a small pack of Nike folks, three security guards, a representative from his agency, his personal trainer and a good buddy in tow.

There wasn't a mad rush of people trampling each other to get to him. Instead it was a gradual movement of people slowly moving toward Jordan, their eyes transfixed as they blindly stepped forward, kind of like the people looking at the giant UFO in "Close Encounters."

If we remain transfixed by Jordan, perhaps it's because of the retrospective state we're in as the end of the century draws closer.

Among Jordan's few peers in stature, Babe Ruth is long gone and Muhammad Ali's Parkinson's Syndrome has drained him of the bombastic charisma that was so closely tied to his image.

Jordan remains preserved and intact. He's like a living museum piece.

He might not be the greatest athlete of the 20th century, but he is the definitive 20th century athlete. He embodies physical grace, savvy and mass appeal.

Jordan had an abundance of talent and a sharp mind. He benefited from integration and technological advances, using all of the opportunities and tools at his disposal to reach the heights of his sport and achieve global fame and wealth.

His rise to prominence coincided with the advent of cable and satellite television, making it possible to watch every one of his games from anywhere in the country by the end of his career.

And he always gave us good reason to tune in. Talk about must-see TV. Watching Jordan go for 30-plus began to feel like a constitutional right.

In a sense, Jordan had to play in this era, because to come along before television would have diminished his impact. Think about how many conversations you've had that began with, "Did you see what Jordan did last night?"

■ loss

continued from page 14

fired a shot from the right circle through the legs of Kimento. It was his first of the season, coming on the heels of a punishing hit that he endured from two Irish defenders at center ice.

After the two-goal output it seemed as though the Minutemen would easily control the rest of the game, but that was not the case. Notre Dame exploded with three goals to head into the locker room with a 3-2 advantage.

"We were down 2-0, but it was not the same 2-0 it was last night. Last night we were dominated in the first period and were fortunate to only be down 3-2," Notre Dame coach Dave Poulin said. "Tonight it was just a different feeling."

The Irish got on the board midway through the period on a goal from Evan Nielsen. The freshman defenseman took a feed in the slot from Dan Carlson and drilled the puck past goalie Mike Johnson. Just two minutes later Notre Dame would get the equalizer.

The game-tying goal came off the stick of captain Ben Simon. The native of Shaker Heights, Ohio, scored on a slap shot from the point that was tipped in front of the net and trickled past Johnson.

With just over a minute left, Notre Dame put itself ahead for good with its second goal with a man-advantage when Ryan Dolder converted on a shot from the point that Johnson looked to have turned aside with his stick, but the puck jumped up and wound up in the back of the cage. The Irish had great puck movement around the perimeter and the end result was a 3-2 lead heading into intermission.

"Two of the goals went off our own players... sometimes it's just crazy where you're doing the right thing, but [the puck] just winds up bouncing the wrong way," Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen said. "[Momentum] turned around quick."

After the Irish's first period three-spot, Johnson was pulled in favor of Friday night's hero, Markus Helanen. The junior stopped seven Notre Dame shots and kept the Minutemen in the game with some miraculous sprawling stops to keep the puck out of the net.

The penalty-killing unit stifled the Irish, and with 2:52 elapsed Chad Chipchase ended the man-advantage by getting called for obstruction and the UMass escaped unblemished.

Trailing 3-2 heading into the third, UMass had the Irish right where it wanted them, in striking distance. The Maroon and White had a chance in the first minute when Jedd Crumb collected the puck at center ice and moved in on Kimento. The sophomore teed up a shot from the left circle, but squandered the opportunity by whistling it by the goal.

This would be the last chance that the Minutemen would get to tie the game as Notre Dame senior Ben Simon netted his second goal of the night, and second on the power play, giving the Irish the insurance goal that it coveted.

Nathan Borega added an empty-net goal after Helanen was pulled in favor of the extra attacker.

UMass fought valiantly to the end and its efforts were worthwhile when Ray Geever scored a shorthanded goal with 13.4 seconds remaining. On the shorthanded tally, Turner added his third assist of the night to record his first collegiate three-point game.

"It's exciting. It's just too bad that we couldn't pull off the win," Turner said. "Notre Dame is a big name school and it is always good to beat a big name school, but winning once just isn't good enough."

"I was really happy with the fact that we scored that goal with less than a minute to go, and our guys were fighting right down to the bitter end, which is good sign," Mallen said.

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club

The Area's Most Complete Club 256-6446

Free T-shirt

90 Gatehouse Road, Off Rt. 9• 2 Miles East of town Center

JOIN NOW FOR OUR 15 WEEK WINTER SPECIAL ($169) AND GET A FREE HFC T-SHIRT

WE ACCEPT MasterCard VISA

Work During Break
Earn $400 - $600 Per Week
Join our team taking inventory in your hometown area
Days - Nights - Weekends
RGIS Inventory Specialists
Visit our website rgisinv.com
OR CALL TODAY & SET UP AN INTERVIEW
24 HOUR JOB LINE: 1-888-532-RGIS

Springfield: 413-731-6910
Worcester: 508-366-8847
Boston: 617-484-1788
North of Boston: 978-777-2253
South of Boston: 508-821-5591
Plymouth: 508-833-1145
Route 3 South: 781-340-6355
New Hampshire Sea Coast: 603-926-9813

Visit us on the concourse December 8th & 9th

Equal Opportunity Employer

By serving America part-time
In the MA Army National Guard YOU CAN...
- Get free undergraduate/ graduate tuition
- Earn from $400-$800 for one weekend
- Receive a $5000-$8000 cash bonus
- Repay your student loans
- Develop leadership ability
- Build a POWERFUL resume
Call Today! 1-800-GO-GUARD or visit www.1-800-GO-GUARD.com
YOU CAN

Get paid while surfing the net.
more info:
http://www.gotoworld.com/getpaid/default.asp?rid=1022801972

MASS SKATE "kick A skate park"
Route 202 • Westfield
(413) 534-1000
Monday & Sat-
• BMX Sessions
Friday-
• Live Punk Shows
COMPLETE SKATEBOARD, SNOWBOARD, & BMX SHOP.
ELEMENT • SPITFIRE • INDY • SANT CRUZ • FORUM • FOUR SQUARE • DC • OSIRIS • EMERICA • BLACK LABEL • ZERO • 151 • ANTI HERO • VOLCOM • SPLIT • PRIMO • FBM • LOOSE • GLOBE • S-M • GIRL •
WEEKDAYS $5 OFF with COLLEGE ID
LARGEST INDOOR PARK IN MASS. OPEN 7 DAYS • NOON-NINE

What are you doing for the next two years?
Learn about 4,000 overseas jobs with the Peace Corps on December 13, 1999 www.peacecorps.gov

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n pleasant st amherst 256 0733
145 main st northampton 586 0155

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

■ win

continued from page 14

played well when we needed him to and came up in the clutch," UMass head coach Joe Mallen said. "It's nice to win any game, but to beat Notre Dame in anything is a feather in our cap. I thought that all of our guys played really well tonight."

UMass (4-7-2 overall, 0-6-1 Hockey East) set the tone from the opening face-off, when a bid by Kevin Poulin hit the pipe in the game's first minute. Then, six minutes into the contest, the Minutemen struck first on a goal by Jeff Turner. With the Maroon and White a man down, Turner took a feed from Jeff Blanchard in the neutral zone and broke in alone on ND goalie Tony Zasowski. He capped the play off by deking out the Fighting Irish netminder and sliding a shot home.

However, the Irish struck right back only ten seconds later. Jay Kopischke converted on a Notre Dame power play to knot the game at 1-1.

The seesaw battle continued a little over a minute later. After ND forward Troy Bagne was whistled for tripping, UMass winger Jedd Crumb redirected a Kris Wallis shot through the legs of Zasowski for a 2-1 lead.

Not wanting to be outdone, Notre Dame evened the score midway through the period. Ryan Dodder netted the second power play goal of the night for the Fighting Irish, tying the game at 2-2.

With time winding down in the first period, UMass defenseman Toni Soderholm scored the biggest goal of the game. Aggressive forechecking by Jay Shaw and Tim Turner freed the puck from the right-wing corner before Shaw threaded a perfect cross-ice pass right on the tape of Soderholm's stick. The sophomore blueliner fired a slap shot that rattled off of the post before finding the back of the net. In the process, the goal gave the Minutemen a lead they would not relinquish, as well as an extra boost heading into the locker room.

"That was our game plan – to try and jump on them early. We saw that they were a team who struggled in the first period," Jeff Turner said. "[Soderholm's goal] was a really big goal. It seemed like they were taking the momentum away from us towards the end of the period, but that goal gave us the confidence that we needed going into the locker room."

UMass finally tacked on an insurance goal early in the middle frame. Nick Stephens set the score up by warding off a Notre Dame defender, then sliding a one-handed pass to Wallis. The junior winger gathered the disc in stride and lofted a shot over Zasowski for a two-goal lead. The tally also spelled the end of the night for the ND netminder, who allowed four goals on 13 shots.

"We played very poorly in the first and second periods. It seemed like we only played one period of hockey," Notre Dame coach Dave Poulin said. "In fact, I thought that we were fortunate to only be down 3-2 after the first period."

When Simon lit the lamp early in the third, it seemed that the Minutemen might crawl into hibernation again. After squandering third period stanzas in recent affairs with Vermont and Boston University, UMass learned from its mistakes this time around. Despite a ferocious flurry of shots in the final 20 minutes, Helanen continued to deny bid after bid to preserve the one-goal win.

"Our D-men did a really great job in front of me. They didn't allow any second chances," Helanen said. "It was tough to get into a flow early on, but I did [as the game went on]."

Jeff Turner and Wallis each had a goal and an assist in the winning cause. With his two points on the night, it also marked the sixth straight game for Turner with at least one point.

Minutewomen sunk by UConn

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

UMass women's swimming and diving had the strokes, but couldn't doggy-paddle past the rival Huskies of UConn Saturday at Joseph R. Rogers pool.

It was not the gravy train or a rabbit that the Huskies were chasing this weekend as the Connecticut canines refused to play dead for the Massachusetts women's swimming and diving team, snatching its sixth win away from the hands of the Minutewomen at Joseph R. Rogers Jr. pool this past Saturday.

The loss was the second of the season and the second straight loss for the wet Maroon and White as its record dropped to 5-2. Although the Minutewomen kept the score close at 137-106, they could not get a handle on the slippery swimming Huskies, a problem more difficult than keeping a dog in the bathtub.

However, the animal control nets of UMass hardly came up empty as the Minutewomen snagged some important victories in the day's events keeping UConn on a short leash.

Senior Elizabeth Risotto swam away with the 200-yard backstroke event with a time of 2:06.1. Risotto's performance earned her a second place position on the UMass career chart.

Sophomores Anne Dettloff and Andrea Kazanjian both earned individual victories Saturday as well. Leaving the Huskies in her wake, Dettloff got wins in the 500-yard freestyle and the 200-yard freestyle with times of 5:11.90 and 1:56.73, respectively. Dettloff's first-place finish in the 500 was her second victory in the event in as many meets for the Minutewomen.

Kazanjian also earned to singles victories as she swam well in both the 50-yard freestyle and 100-yard freestyle. With times of 25.02 in the 50 and 54.05 in the 100, Kazanjian placed first in both events, marking the second meet in a row in which Kazanjian has hit the wall before her competitors.

Yet, Kazanjian and Dettloff would then help to earn another UMass victory as they teamed with senior Andrea Spencer and freshman Molly Buckley in the 200-yard freestyle relay. The team took the event with a time of 1:38.17, the Minutewomen closing out the meet with a win in the final race of the day.

The UMass victory in the 200 relay would not only mark the last event of the day, it would also mark the last event of the century for the team as the Minutewomen will not return to the chlorinated waters of collegiate competition until January 8th.

The Minutewomen will travel to the University of Miami in an attempt to quell the Hurricanes. Miami will provide the toughest opposition of this season for the UMass and will not be an easy storm to weather.

Women's hockey iced by MIT

By Melissa Hammel and Adam White
Collegian Staff

For a team struggling to establish itself and earn respect, a home game can be a tasty treat. But after a tough 2-1 loss to cross-state rival MIT on Saturday, the Massachusetts women's hockey team was left with the bitter taste of disappointment.

"We're definitely not satisfied with our effort against MIT," Minutewoman Elisa Garvey said. "Everybody on our team felt that we definitely could have beaten them."

The Maroon and White came out strong from the drop of the puck against the Engineers, but felt victim to some poor clearing on MIT's first offensive attack less than a minute into the action. Engineers Nicole Krumrie and Olivera Kesler camped out in front of the Maroon and White crease, screening UMass goalie Elisa Murphy and allowing MIT's Michelle Bonugh to blast home a slapshot at the 14:13 mark.

"There was a lot of screening going on," Murphy said. " They shouldn't have scored that first goal; the only reason they did was because of screening."

Despite some fantastic breakaways and stepped-up physical play from the likes of Gina Lostracco and Ellie Fernandez, UMass entered the first break still trailing 1-0. The second period saw even more ferocious play from the Maroon and White, as Fernendez crashed the MIT goal at the 8:47 mark and left Engineer keeper Jodi Cohen prone on the ice for several minutes.

But MIT kept up its pressure, and staked its lead to 2-0 on a Mary Krasovek slapper with 4:34 to play in the second period. Bonugh was again a big factor on the play, crashing through the UMass defense to set up the goal.

"Their number four [Bonugh] was an absolute beast," UMass' Molly Sherman said. "We call her 'little he-man,' because that's what she plays like."

UMass would finally gel in the third period, as Minutewoman Josie Raycroft swept in along the right wing and hit a nifty switch-hand move to fake out Cohen. Raycroft then backhanded the puck toward the left corner of the MIT net, and teammate Elisa Garvey tipped it home to cut the Engineer lead to one, 2-1.

"She came around the boards, and went around a defender," Garvey said. "I just got my stick on it and pushed it in. We both played a part in the goal, but she did most of the work."

The Maroon and White played with a ton of heart over the final two-plus minutes, but couldn't notch the equalizer to force overtime. As the final buzzer sounded, UMass was left wondering what would have happened had they played the entire 45 minutes with that end-of-game intensity.

"It was a little frantic," Garvey said. "But at the same time, that was the first time all game that we were really focused. At the end of that third period, we played with more intensity, the best we played all game."

The Minutewomen will spend the break working on conditioning, gearing up for their next battle. The team's next opponent is a club from Connecticut, the Clippers.

Men's swimming tames Huskies

By Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts men's swimming and diving team makes out its New Years' resolutions for the year 2000, it won't have to resolve to try to break a losing streak, but only to continue its winning streak.

This past weekend the Minutemen traveled to the University of Connecticut for a face off with their age-long rivals, their arch nemesis, the Huskies. The highly anticipated meet took place this past Saturday, and the payoff was huge for the Maroon and White. The Minutemen defeated the Huskies 141-90, ensuring that they will have something to toast to come the turn of the century.

Although the men's swimming team has historically been successful against Connecticut, the level of anticipation and anxiety preceding its meet was still profound, and its desire to continue its domination of UMass' oldest rival intense.

The Minutemen's solid and dependable lineup, including juniors Billy Brown and Chris Arsenault, and seniors Ed Hefferon and Henry Turner, overwhelmed UConn in practically every event they competed against each other in.

Junior Billy Brown continued to prove his worth to his team by claiming victory in the 200 yard breaststroke. Just last week Brown was named the Atlantic 10 Conference's men's swimming and diving Performer of the Week, in addition to winning his events and setting two new records in both the 100 and 200 yard breaststroke, despite his teams' loss at the hands of Syracuse. Brown also ranks fourth in the conference in the 200 individual medley and sixth in the 400 IM.

Turner and Hefferon also repeated their successful performances from last week. Turner seized a victory in the 50-yard freestyle, while Hefferon left Connecticut with victories in both of his diving events.

Junior Chris Arsenault made an impact by winning the 200-yard freestyle, and Tommy Keane won his event, the 500-yard freestyle.

Brian Grimes also contributed to his teams trampling of the Huskies by winning his event, the 1000-yard freestyle.

The team of Arsenault, Turner, Carlos Ramos, and Antonio Maldonado was also triumphant in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

"It was a satisfying win. Anytime you beat UConn you have to have a smile on your face" head coach Russ Yarworth said. "There was a great crowd, and it [the victory] was a good way to get ready for finals. We're ending the year on a positive note."

There is no more satisfying a victory than that which is exacted on your schools' foremost adversary, and Yarworth and his team are ending this century not only with a smile on their faces but with a deep-felt sense of satisfaction.

The Minutemen will kick off the next century by traveling to Miami on January 8th, followed by Rhode Island on January 14th and 15th.

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

UMASS
Is there something you would like to say before graduating? If so, you are invited to submit a proposal for consideration as the Student Commencement Speaker

Student Speaker Undergraduate Commencement

Who is Eligible?: Graduating Amherst campus senior (Class of 2000)

Subject Matter: Your proposed speech should be of general interest to graduating seniors as well as to parents and other guests. It should address your impressions and experience(s), both academic and extra-curricular.

Format: Submit approximately three word-processed/typewritten pages, double-spaced, or the equivalent of three to five minutes speaking time. Speeches exceeding this limit will not be considered.

Selection Process: A non-voting staff person will delete authors' names after which a committee of students (majority), staff, and faculty will review the proposals. Three to five individuals will be invited to "audition" before the committee (in March), after which the speaker will be selected.

Deadline: Wednesday, February 9, 2000, 4:30pm.

Submit Proposals To: Paul R. Appleby, Chair, Student Speaker Selection Committee, 305 Whitmore (545-3464).

UNDERGRADUATE COMMENCEMENT
- Preliminary Information -

The following information has been prepared to assist seniors and their families in planning for Undergraduate Commencement. For updates and further information visit http://www.umass.edu/commencement.

Date: Sunday, May 21, 2000

Time/Place: 10:30 a.m. - 12 Noon, McGuirk Alumni Stadium (rain or shine). There is no "Commencement rehearsal" for students.

Tickets: Tickets are not required, and there is no limit on the number of guests a student may invite. Guest seating is unreserved.

Eligibility: The year of graduation is established by the Registrar's Office. To be eligible to participate in the May 2000 Commencement ceremony, a student must pay the "Graduating Fee" and be scheduled for graduation in February 2000, May 2000 or September 2000. Students scheduled for February 2001 graduation who wish to attend the May 2000 ceremony must file a "Petition to Participate in an Earlier Commencement." This form is available at the Registrar's Office, 207 Whitmore.

Questions about graduation status, degree requirements, and/or graduation credits should immediately be directed to the Registrar's Office "Senior Staff": 207 Whitmore, 545-0555.

Program: Only seniors of record as of March 27, 2000 will be listed in the Program book.

Listings: If a student has a full Privacy Request on file but wishes to be listed in the Commencement Program book, the student must notify the Dean of Students Office (227 Whitmore, 5-2684) not later than the close of business on March 20, 2000. If the Dean of Students Office is not contacted, the student's name will not be listed.

Information Brochure: A Commencement Information Brochure will be mailed to seniors and their parents in March. The brochure will include information about announcements, caps and gowns, disability services, food services, on-campus accommodations, parking and shuttle services, seating for seniors, suggested routing, videotape orders, when and where to assemble and yearbook orders. An update with details about the ceremony will be distributed with caps and gowns in May. In one of the last issues of the "Collegian" all Commencement information will be printed.

Lodging: Sufficient residence hall space has been reserved on May 20 to accommodate prepaid guests who request this option. Details will be in the brochure.

Student Speaker: Information about competition for selection of a Commencement Student Speaker is in this issue of the "Collegian." Subsequent ads will run in February. The deadline for submitting proposals is February 9, 2000.

Further Information: Please call the Visitors Center at 545-0306 or the Commencement Coordinator at 545-4200.

Congratulations to all concerned. Good luck with finals.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom luxury apartment available January 1, 2000. Please call 413-253-7377 for more information.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

VW Jetta 1988, 5Speed manual, power window/seat, alloy wheels, great tires; $2100, call 665-7232

1997 VW Jetta 43K, Sunroof/Moonroof, 6 CD changer, alloy wheels, new tires; brakes;met. blue. Excellent condition $13,500. 546-3989.

1989 Toyota Corolla GTS 50,000 miles white 5spd moving $3200 Klay 397-8951

Toyota Camry '91 automatic, sunroof, alarm, top condition $4,300 549-0242

1993 Ford Escort Wagon 5spd 100,000mi eco-friendly runs great $2800/obo 538-6779

1992 Jetta GL, A/C, 76k miles, sunroof $5500. 546-1773

COMPUTERS

Cheap PC Monitor wanted. 549-9600 Margarita.

Hewlett Packard 15" Monitor .28 Dot pich maximum resolution 1024 x 748 $75.00 413-256-0583

EMPLOYMENT

Wanted Dec. 21 - Jan. 25, Longer optional. Student handyperson, also housecleaner. Car essential 413-549-1578

Internship available. Come aboard and grow with us. We are a new, web-based retail business in Amherst. We can offer you a great learning experience in growing a business. Work with us during Interterm, Spring or Summer. Hours and location convenient for you. Call Shirley at 1-888-LIGHT -15

Childcare needed two afternoons a week (Mon & Wed) for 6 and 9 year old girls. starting 1/10/00. No TV. Active outdoor oriented person perferred. Some lite housekeeping. References required. Car perferred. 549-6158.

Now Hiring Mullins Center part-time staff events and operations department apply 2nd floor Mullins Center

Get Paid To Surf the web. I get paid to surf the web, now you can too, It's absolutely free. For more details e-mail me at pub2000@yahoo.com

Fraternities * Sororities * Clubs * Student Groups Student organizations earn $1,000-$2,000 with the easy CIS three hour fundraising event. No sales required. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Dan Wolman at CIS, (800) 797-5743, x. 301, or visit www.campus-fundraiser.com

EMPLOYMENT

WINTER BREAK FLEXIBLE PART-TIME Day, Evening and weekend hours available Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, Ma has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for winter break. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent readings/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increase to $8.00, health dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact:

Paul R. Bebo
Recruting
Cooradinator
1-800-792-4514

ONE SUMMER, A LIFETIME EXPERIENCE. I could spend the summer learning someone else's bussiness, or I could be running my own. For more information visit our website and register to win a Palm Pilot www.college-proedge.com or call 888-277-7962.

Holiday Jobs For The Environment! $300-400/week work with the Sierra Club over the winter break and beyond! Call Jesse 256-6434

Bartenders make $100-$300 per night no experience necessary call 1-800-981-8168 ext. 205

EMPLOYMENT

Movers Part time positions available for winter intersession and spring semester. Starting pay $8.00 per hour. Located close to UMASS. Call 584-4746

NEED EXPERIENCE (and money?) Join a fast, fun and growing company as your campus reprsentative. Flexible hours, responsibilities and competitive pay. No experience, just personality needed. Visit www.mybytes.com/StudentRep to find out more.

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

FOR SALE

All New Brass Bed Queen Size orthapedic mattress/box. Still in plastic. Cost $ 1100. sell $365 can deliver. (413) 781-0242.

All New Brass Bed King size orthapedic Mattress/box. Still in plastic. Cost $1500. Sell $525 413) 781-0237.

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition triniton. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

FOR SALE

SNOWBOARD 97 M*I*A 153 Good condition Capped Edges, Dr Pro Model $300 Call 546-0647

GREEK AFFAIRS

Sigma Delta Tau Congratulates Their newest members: Kara B, Devon, Liza, Lisa K, Alyssa, Lisa S, Lenie, Kara S, Melissa S, Jen, Melissa T, Jackie, Jenn & Tara. Amazing job!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy 21st Birthday Allison!!! Congratulations to the first of us! Love Mish, Diana, and Meg

LOST & FOUND

Found Purple Jacket outside of LGRT before Thanksgiving. Call to claim 546-4427

PERSONALS

Sara, Martha, and K.K. Have a GREAT time next semester! We'll miss you!! Love, Meg and Diana

ROOM FOR RENT

1 Room for rent. Very close to campus. On bus route. 549-9254.

Take over my lease. One lg bdrm in a lg 3 bdrm house in Amherst. Call Christina at 253-7140

1 Bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment in Hadley. $278/month and utilities. On bus route. Nice yard. Call Alexa. 582-1821.

1 Bedroom Avail. for 1-2 people. Cheap. Free gym. On bus route Jan/Feb - May 31st. 253-2518

Room Available in two bedroom apt in house. Female preferred. On bus route call 549-8969

ROOM FOR RENT

1 or 2 Rooms available in 4 bedroom house. Right next to Campus. Washer and dryer. Available Jan/Feb. $305/Mo. ONLY call Prav or Deepa 549-1543.

January-August lease in Leverett. $325/mo. utilities, washer and dryer included. Call Cemil 549-1643

ROOMMATE WANTED

1 Bedroom in 2 Bedroom Apt. Puffton Village close to bus stop. Own bathroom call 549-0923 or 549-8714

1 or 2 People Wanted for large bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment in Puffton. Next to bus stop and laundry. Last months rent paid utilities included. Available start of spring semester. Call 548-6861.

Female Roommate Wanted 1 room in a 2 bedroom apartment. Cheap, clean on bus route. Call Jen, Noelle or Katie 253-0538.

Great House Needs!! 1 or 2 Roommates Wanted 2 share one huge room in 1, great house. Jan/Feb - June bus stops across street, backyard, super, fun-loving, remarkable roommates. Call 549-6886

One Bedroom in 2 Bedroom apartment available spring semester on North Pleasant St. $387/month includes heat female call 253-6726

ROOM FOR RENT

Two roomates wanted to share master bedroom in three bedroom apartment in Puffton. Private bath and walk-in closet $285+ each month call Pat/Steve 549-9310.

SERVICES

Feeling Ripped Off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined your favorite suit! Are debit collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Know your rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Personal Holiday Candygrams only $7.00! Delivery anywhere at UMass. Personal greeting with candy 253-6722

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

SPRING 2000 BREAK CANCUN from $389 (after discount) 14 FREE meals, 23 hours of FREE Drinks, $30 EARLY BIRD DISCOUNT, $100 off Trip in 2001!!! Boston Departures only CALL FREE 1-800-244-4463, www.collegetours.com

TRAVEL

GO DIRECT! #1 Internet-based company offering WHOLESALE Spring Break packages! Guaranteed Lowest Price! 1-800-367-1252 www.springbreakdirect.com

#1 Spring Break Vacations! Cancun, Jamaica, Bahamas, & Florida! Now hiring Campus Reps! Best Prices Guaranteed. Free Meal Plans! 1-800-234-7007 www.endlesssummertours.com

WANTED

Be an internet star! Seeking off-campus students to host 24/7 live web cam in your home. Interested? Chect out www.masslive.com/ofcampuscam or call 584-2777 for more information

Happy Holidays from The Collegian Classifieds staff!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, DEC. 13

Lecture Jacqueline Field will talk about her research on the history of a small silk company in Maine from mid-1 g.m. to Seelye 207 at Smith College.

TUESDAY, DEC. 14

Film There will be a showing of adult videos by students in Fem Shaffer 201 at 7:30 p.m. in Stillman Auditorium at Smith College.

Lecture Author and former New York Times literary writer Dava Sobel will give a lecture at 8 p.m. in the Neilson Library browsing Room at Smith College. The lecture is sponsored by the Kahn Liberal Arts Institute at Smith College.

NOTICES

Art An exhibit by video & language Aspen entitled, Touch Apple: A Tale of Two Families, a multidimensional portrait of the bi-cultural experience will be on display at Liberty College's Assembly House Gallery through Jan. 2, 2000.

Community The library hours for Dec. 6 through Dec. 19 will be 7 a.m.-2 a.m. Study space is available, but there will be no staffed services from 7-8 a.m. and midnight-2 a.m.

Crafts The Student Union Craft Center is open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops, call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Information The last information sessions this semester for the domestic exchange program will be held Tuesdays and Wednesdays until Dec. 15 and also by appointment. They will be in 614 Goodell from 4:45-5:45 p.m. Call 545-5351 for more information. The priority deadline for applications is Dec. 13, and the final deadline is March 1.

Support Al ANON and ALATEEN are offering local meetings to those affected by someone else's drinking problem. Call 253-5261 for meeting times and locations.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BEST OF SEMESTER SALES

With Special End-of-Semester Sales Throughout the Store, Now is the BEST Time to Buy UMASS Clothing, Gifts, and More!

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

University Ustore Not like a mall... Better.

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Hampshire Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board		21	Govel to Govel
3	CBS/3	Hartford	22	NBC/22 Springfield
4	CBS/4	Boston	23	CNN Headline News
5	ABC/5	Boston	24	CNN
6	PBS/57	Springfield	25	CNN Fn
7	HSCN	Movie Ch	26	CNN Si
8	UPN/20	Hartford	27	TBS
9	Weather Channel		28	BET
10	NBC/30 New Britain		29	College TV Network
11	Fox/61	Hartford	30	Univision
12	PBS/24	Hartford	31	Comedy Central
13	WDCH & HSCN		32	Cartoon Network
14	International		33	TV Land
15	UMass Academic TV		34	C Span
16	WB/New Haven		35	ZDTV (Tentative)
17	Sundance		36	Bloomberg Financial Network
18	The Learning Channel		37	History Channel
19	UVC-TV19		38	HSCN Programming
20	ABC/40 Springfield

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — DECEMBER 13, 1999

C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH 2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Jackie: Behind the Myth (In Stereo)				Senior Tengo (In Stereo)
WFSB 3	3 News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "Decisions"		News	Late Show
WBZ 4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "Decisions"		News	Late Show
WCVB 5	5 News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		NFL Football Denver Broncos at Jacksonville Jaguars (In Stereo Live)				Friends	Nanny
WLVI 56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven "Forget Me Not"		Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WHDH 7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX 4	Judge Lane	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Moesha (R)	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Real TV (R)	Change-Heart	Caroline
WVIT 10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC 11	Simpsons	Fraser	Seinfeld	Friends	Time of Your Life (In Stereo)		Ally McBeal "Saving Santa"				News	Fraser
WWLP 22	News		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY 57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour with Jim Lehrer		Great Performances "Les Miserables in Concert" (In Stereo)						Charlie Rose
WGGB 40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fraser	20/20		NFL Football Denver Broncos at Jacksonville Jaguars. (In Stereo Live)
WSBK 38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Fraser	Moesha (R)	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager "Faces"		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS 15	Rosanne	Rosanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Figure Skating Holiday Festival on Ice				★★★ "A Christmas Story" (1983, Comedy) Peter Billingsley
A&E 51	Simon & Simon		Law & Order	Jeopardy!	Biography of the Year				Biography of the Year (R)
CNN 23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM 28	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Better Off Dead" (1985, Comedy) John Cusack.				Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC 26	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery:	Frozen	On the Inside: Theme Park		No Place to Hide		Spytek "Spy vs. Spy...(R)		On the Inside:	Theme Park
ESPN 43	(5:45) Sportscenter		Monday Night Countdown				Figure Skating Cup of Russia					ESPNews
LIFE 45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Beyond Chance		★★ "Deceptions" (1990, Mystery) Harry Hamlin.				Golden Girls	Golden Girls
MTV 53	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	TRL Wenna	True Life (R)	True Life (R)	Scared Straight (R) (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Road Rules	Lovsline (In Stereo)
NICK 52	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Eddie	Rocket Power	Bewitched	Bewitched	Bewitched	Bewitched	Bewitched	Bewitched
SCIFI 55	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Outer Limits	First Anniversary	Outer Limits "The Joining"		The Stand (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 4)				The Stand (R)
TLC 54 28	Home Again	Home Again	Turning Point (R)		Paramedics		Cosmic Safari				Paramedics (R)
TNT 50	Dua South "Flashback"		ER "Fevers of Unknown Origin"		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)						★★½ "Who's the Man?" (1993)
USA 59	Baywatch "Out of the Blue"		JAG "Sondylexi" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		WWF Raw		WWF War Zone		Walker, Texas Ranger
HBO 61	A Kill for a Kill (e "Second Sight" (1989) John Larroquette, "PG"				★★ "Home Fries" (1998) Drew Barrymore.		Dennis Miller: The Millennium Special				Women Who Love Killers (R)
MAX 65	★½ "Switchback" (1997, Suspense) Dennis Quaid. "R"				★★★ "The Ice Storm" (1997, Drama) Kevin Kline (In Stereo) "R"				★★★ "Copycat" (1995, Suspense) Sigourney Weaver. "R"
SHOW 66	4:00		★★½ "Wrestling With Allegiance" (1998) "NR"		★★ "The Big Hit" (1998) Mark Wahlberg. "R"		Witness		★★ "Execution of Justice" (1999) Tim Daly.		Hoop Life (R)

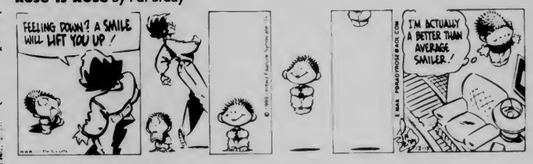
Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

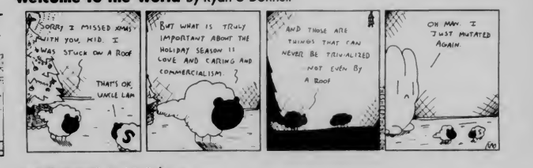
Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Joe Banani By J D Salinger



Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Joe Banani By J D Salinger

Horoscopes

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You can afford to add a little spontaneity to your love life today. You can be sure it will be much appreciated.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You may be after attention and approval today, but more important in the long run is whom you receive it from. Stay alert!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may find yourself racing against the clock before the day is out. Take care you don't sacrifice quality for quantity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may sense that some things are becoming more and more elusive today, while others are virtually on your doorstep. It's time to shift gears.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) – You must resist the urge to be impulsive today. There are certain rules you must follow before your imagination can truly take wing.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) – A buildup of charm and sex appeal can be expected at this time, but you must not make the mistake of thinking you can put it to conscious use.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) – Disagreement is unavoidable today, but lasting conflicts can surely be averted. Do what you can to stress the importance of accord and harmony.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) – He who hesitates is lost, but you know how to use the slightest delay to your advantage, and take the competition completely by surprise.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) – Hobbies are highlighted today, so you won't want to waste any time when it's your turn to indulge in a favorite activity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It is up to you to see that everything runs as smoothly as possible today, despite the unexpected complications that are inevitable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Teamwork can get a stalled project off the ground once more. Once it takes flight, you may have to work to keep the pace under control.

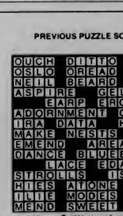
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Your sense of timing will be essential today, as you make a decision involving love and romance. You can organize that which seems chaotic.

Quote of the Day

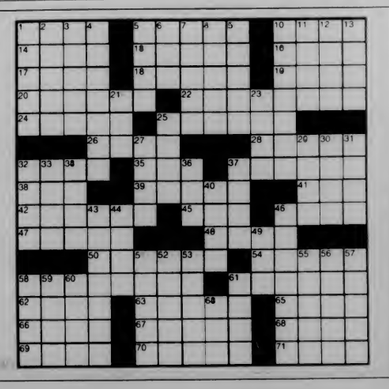
"If I am a star, the people made me a star. No studio, no person, but the people did it."

–Marilyn Monroe, 1955

Close to Home By John McPherson



"Can I interest you in one of our new dental credit cards? Three percent of all your purchases can be applied to the cost of a root canal, extraction or gum surgery."



ACROSS
1 From a distance
5 — down chills out
10 Prod
14 Prod
15 Mythcat hunter
16 Homely
17 Make turbulent
18 Shadow
19 Distribute
20 In dreamland
22 Rudolf and Blitzen
24 Meat order
25 Lack of color
26 Make waterproof
28 House parts
32 Soft drink
35 Went first
37 Realm
38 "Just — suspected!"
39 Playwright Clifford
41 Wallace or Ayres
42 Big hammer
45 Tea container
46 Positive votes
47 Flutter overhead
48 No-hater pro Nolan
50 Lighthouse lantern
54 Squirrel away
58 Present paper
61 Gangster Clyde
62 Singer Guthrie
63 Microscopic creature
65 Staffer
66 Cougar's home
67 Henri's cap
68 — over capsize
69 Picnic intruders
70 Tilt
71 Suggestion-box opening

DOWN
1 Emanations
2 Finish a cake
3 Spry
4 Set loose
5 Brilliant move
6 Body part
7 Zodiac sign
8 Gourmet mushroom
9 Symbol of slowness
10 Gelatin candy
11 S-shaped curve
12 Der — Adenauer
13 Salon worker, at times
21 — out, scrape by with
23 Hall-of-Famer Van Brocklin
25 Beseeched
27 Suntan-lotion ingredient
29 Greasy
30 Grabs
31 Uses a Singer
32 Money
33 Norwegian capital
34 Ukraine's capital
36 Yule mo
37 Glimpse
40 Revolve
43 Those who owe
44 Got bigger
46 Parkas
49 "Sol"
51 Riyadh residents
52 Humped animal
53 "Norma," e.g.
55 Spirit in "The Tempest"
56 Wild West show
57 Resided
58 Big celebration
59 Teheran's locale
60 Dart
61 Piece of insulation
64 Painter Shahn

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

12-13-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

The Daily Collegian: Your one-stop source for all the news and information you need at UMass.

Well, except the DC Menu.

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Vanessa Walker
Photo Technition	Barbara Bradbury
Copy Editor	Samantha Poulten
Production Supervisor	John Burt
Production Staff	Alan Basque, Tereza Rodrigues

UMass women's hoops team surprises the nation

Minutewomen take on No. 22 Stanford, send Cardinal packing with 74-69 loss

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

A miss on this shot would have left the world of collegiate basketball on killer. In less than five seconds, the No. 22 Stanford women's basketball team had turned a fairy tale 70-64 UMass advantage into a 70-69 margin, and with a brick by Minutewoman point guard Kathy Coyner at the free throw line with exactly half a minute to go, the Cardinal would likely go down the court and put the game in the record books.

Massachusetts' hard-fought loss would have been a mere side-note on Sportscenter, and chalked up as another moral victory for the 1-6 squad, while Stanford would throw the Maroon and White into the pile of conquered armies, which, this season, includes No. 7 Iowa St.

As big a win as it would be for UMass, it was arguably even bigger for Coyner. The 5-foot-6 guard eyeballed the rim knowing that this was the sort of victory she had never quite been able to grab. Not in her three years at the helm of the Minutewomen, and not in her days at Belpre High School in Ohio, where she poured in 23.5 points a game as a senior.

"I, personally, have never won a big game in my life – a game that I wasn't supposed to win or that we weren't supposed to win – and I think that's what this game was for us," Coyner said. "We believed in ourselves when many other people didn't. They looked at us and didn't expect us to win this game, but we just went out and I think we wanted it worse than them. It's huge. This is a feeling I've never felt before."

Coyner, who was only 4-for-8 from the charity stripe so far in the game, buried both with a cool stroke to push the lead back up to three. The Cardinal didn't score again, and UMass walked out of the William D. Mullins Center with a 74-69 win.

"Lately I've been struggling from the line, and that's really unusual for me, and I guess I just made it when it counted," Coyner said. "I've always been a very good pressure free-throw shooter and I was just, at the beginning of the game, thinking too much about my shot. I've been kind of working on it in practice and stuff, and I just stepped up and shot them like any other day."

"It's a big win," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "It gives us a ground from which to grow and a level we know we have to play at. We knew we could be a good basketball team, and now we've proven that to ourselves and to a lot of other people. Now we have to continue to play at that high level."

Stanford, which came into Amherst brandishing two National Championships in the 1990s, couldn't take full advantage of its immense height advantage. The Cardinal sent 6-foot-6 Carolyn Moos and 6-foot-7 Cori Enghusen to battle it out in the paint against a Minutewoman crew whose frontcourt's tallest tower is only 6-foot-3-inch freshman Jennifer Butler.

While the Stanford duo combined for over 13 feet, their 12 collective rebounds were only a board above Butler's 11. UMass forwards Caroline Nehls and Nekole Smith grabbed seven and six, respectively, while tiny Coyner skied in from the backcourt to haul down six rebounds of her own.

"I don't think we played with the effort that we needed to," Cardinal coach Tara VanDerveer said. "I will say that I think UMass played very hard. Especially in the first half, they did a great job on the boards. They took care of the ball very well, and a lot of different people hit good shots for them – and I think we really hurt ourselves in the first half with our rebounding."

While the Minutewomen surprised their opponents in the paint, pulling down 23 offensive boards to Stanford's 17, Coyner outplayed the Cardinal guards beyond the arc. Stanford point, All Pac-10 sniper Milena Flores, scored 11 points and dished out six assists, but was out-hustled by the junior Massachusetts ball-handler, who tallied 20 and ten, and only turned the ball over once.

Coyner hit three of her first four attempts from three-point land to keep the underdogs in the game early on, and her bomb with 1:47 left in the contest turned a dangerous 65-62 UMass lead into a more comfortable six-point margin.

Minutewoman forward Alison MacFarland, who had only three points by halftime, poured in crucial points down the stretch, including an energetic lay-up and foul with 12:30 to go in the game to up the score to 54-48, and the final two free throws with 7.3 ticks on the clock to finalize the score at 74-69.

Moos was a force underneath for Stanford, with 13 points, but her seven turnovers helped a number of UMass defensive stands at key points. Guard Lauren St. Clair was 4-of-6 from behind the three-point line, keeping the game close with 18 points while Massachusetts enjoyed a constant lead.

"We try not to (underestimate) any team, but we didn't come out with the intensity that you would expect when you estimate a team correctly," Moos said. "If that reflects it, then yes, maybe we did. I think that we mentally prepared, but we didn't show it physically on the court."

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

UMass point guard Kathy Coyner played the game of her life yesterday, torching Stanford's Milena Flores for 20 points, and hitting six clutch free throws to help the Minutewomen upset the Cardinal, 74-69.

Fall of the Calihan put on hold as UMass goes down

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

There's a disclaimer that comes with playing at the home of the Detroit Titans.

They simply do not lose at home. The aura surrounding Calihan Hall is rarely matched, despite it still being widely unacknowledged on the national college basketball scene. The atmosphere surrounding the lair of the Titans is similar to that of the Sirens in the story of Ulysses, luring the untamed into uncharted territory before the tides send them crashing into the rocky crags.

This weekend, the Massachusetts basketball team (4-3 overall) joined inclusive company by trying and failing in its attempt to walk in and out of Detroit unscathed. In a game of streaks, the Minutemen came up a streak short, falling to the Titans, 63-59, on Saturday afternoon.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Chris Kirkland

Neither team could shoot, the Minutemen connecting on just 39 percent, Detroit a shade worse at 36 percent. The futility unexpectedly spread to the elusive Rashad Phillips, the nation's second-leading scorer. Although tallying a game-high 27 points, right at his average, the Minutemen blanketed the 5-foot-8 senior for 40 minutes. A 56 percent shooter from the field coming in, the senior went 5-for-17, but continually visited the free throw line and converted, hitting 15 of 17 charity shots to lead the Titans down the stretch.

Detroit built its lead to ten points three times in the second half, the latest a 53-43 lead when Desmond Ferguson, who was quiet up until that point, canned an 18-footer from the right wing at the five-minute mark. After a four-point mini-run to close to 53-47, Ferguson again bailed out the Titans (5-2 overall), drilling an off-balance 3-pointer from the left corner with just over four minutes to play.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Micah Brand

After a Chris Kirkland 3-pointer that closed the Detroit lead to 62-56, Phillips stepped out of bounds on the left sideline with 7.9 seconds remaining. Ronell Blizzard then knocked down a three off the inbounds pass with 5.7 seconds remaining to make it a one-possession game.

The Minutemen were late in attempting to foul Terrell Riggs, a 41 percent free throw shooter, in the corner on the ensuing possession. Instead, they were forced to hack Phillips, who iced the game with a freebie. He had drilled 41 consecutive free throws before misfiring with an 8-point lead and a minute showing on the clock.

In the first half, the largest lead for either team was five, a 24-19 advantage for the Minutemen. Detroit, however, took charge in the waning moments before halftime. In a half in which they shot 29 percent from the field, the Titans heading into the locker rooms with a 27-26 lead, going on an 8-2 run just before time expired.

It was part of a larger roll for Detroit, who scored nine of the first 11 points of the second half, capped by an Ike Harmon putback, giving UD a 44-34 lead. UMass would cut the lead to four points when Kirkland, who led the Minutemen with 17 points, sunk two free throws to make the score 44-40 with 11 minutes to play.

The game was built up to be a matchup of two sharpshooters, but only Phillips arrived at the arena. Monty Mack, who averaged 20 points a game through the Minutemen's first six games, shot 2-for-11 on his way to a 4-point afternoon, his second-lowest scoring output in 69 games at UMass. In the opening round of the Atlantic 10 Tournament two years ago against Virginia Tech, Mack scored just two in a 64-58 Minuteman victory.

Mack was part of an abysmal shooting night from the UMass starting lineup. Without Kirkland, the first five scored just 14 points, leaving it to the bench to pick up the slack. That it did, scoring 28 points led by Shannon Crooks' 13 and Micah Brand's 11.

Stanford size no problem for UMass

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

On one side, a perennial hoop powerhouse with a legendary coach and a humungous lineup. On the other, a youthful team with a single, lonely win and a pack of streaky shooters that often couldn't hit the broad side of a barn.

But when the smoke cleared after yesterday's roundball war on the hardwood of the William D. Mullins Center, the Cardinal stood dazed and confused on the short end of a stunning 74-69 barnburner at the hands of the Massachusetts Minutewomen. Despite a seemingly insurmountable size disadvantage, the Maroon and White (2-6) chewed up the boards on both ends of the court and forced No. 22 Stanford to play an up-tempo style of basketball that definitely favored the home team.

"When you have size, and the other team has quickness, they kind of give and take a little bit with each other," UMass coach Joanie O'Brien said. "Tonight, our quickness kind of came out just a little bit more."

To say that Stanford (2-2) brought an imposing lineup into the contest would be a gross understatement; eight of the 12 players on coach Tara VanDerveer's roster stand at 6-feet or taller. With 6-foot-6 junior Carolyn Moos and 6-foot-7 sophomore Cori Enghusen leading the Cardinal's corps of board crashers, O'Brien implored her troops to use their athleticism and foot speed to neutralize Stanford's size.

But what the coach didn't count on was the monster play of Minutewomen Jennifer Butler and Nekole Smith, who seemed indifferent to their towering opponents and actually outboarded the Cardinal right from the opening tip. Butler ripped down four offensive rebounds over the first five minutes of the first half, while Smith constantly beat her assignment to the ball in tallying nine points and five boards over the opening set. According to O'Brien, that tenacity may have been a new experience for the bewildered Cardinal.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jennifer Butle

"The teams that they've played, even the Tennessees and the Iowa States, are great teams," O'Brien said. "But the quickness going to chase the basketball is something that they haven't had to deal with as much. I don't know if they were ready for the quickness of a Jennifer Butler or a Nekole Smith on the offensive end of the court, the entire Maroon and White defense unit was digging in on defense and preventing the Cardinal from finding its scoring rhythm. While point guard Kathy Coyner was playing Stanford scoring leader Milena Flores to an absolute standstill, UMass' undersized frontcourt was fronting its adversary and rotating tenaciously to keep constant pressure on the ball. Stanford's starting forwards, Bethany Donaphin and Sarah Dimson, shot a combined 1-for-6 from the field over the first half.

"Their inside kids are athletic, and move really well," VanDerveer said. "We didn't ever establish any kind of an inside presence."

Stanford's frustration at being shut down in the paint became apparent in the second half, as the Cardinal scrapped its methodical half-court offense and tried to run with the streaking Minutewomen. But it soon became obvious that the massive SU lineup was designed to stand and fight: Stanford committed 14 turnovers during its nightmare of a second half, leading O'Brien to question VanDerveer's style adjustments.

"I can't speak for her; I don't know what her game plan was," O'Brien said. "But if it was to run with us, that gave us a little bit of an advantage. We felt comfortable running up and down."

Up and down pretty much tells the story of this barnburner: up for the manner in which Butler and Smith skied to outrebound the mammoth Cardinal frontcourt, and down for the way that UMass' shots, and eventually its opponent, fell.

UMass and Notre Dame split a pair in South Bend

Helanen stymies Irish attack

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

SOUTH BEND, Ind. – For once, it was the Massachusetts hockey team that ended up on the plus side of a one-goal decision.

Thanks in part to a three-goal first period and clutch goaltending from Markus Helanen down the stretch, the Minutemen escaped from the Joyce Center with a 4-3 win over Notre Dame on Friday night. UMass had been a paltry 1-5 in games decided by a single score entering the first game of a two-game set with the Fighting Irish.

Trailing 4-2 heading into the final period, Notre Dame trimmed the UMass lead to one goal only 4:02 on a score by Ben Simon. Overall, Notre Dame would pelter Helanen with 21 shots in the third period, but Simon's fourth goal of the year would be the only score that the hosts would muster in the final 20 minutes.

"I thought that Markus played his best game of the year in goal. He

Turn to WIN, page 11

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Ontario native Jeff Blanchard, who has played solid hockey for UMass all season, again came up big in the team's defeat of Notre Dame on Friday.

ND battles back Turner brilliant

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

SOUTH BEND, Ind. – Coming off an impressive win against the Fighting Irish of Notre Dame [7-9-2, 4-6-2 CCHA] on Friday, the Massachusetts [4-8-2, 0-6-1 HE] hockey team was poised to take the weekend sweep at the Joyce Center. However, the broom was kept in the closet, falling 5-3, but not for a lack of effort.

The Minutemen came out firing, posting two goals in the first eight minutes of the game. Samuli Isalkanen scored the first goal just 1:16 into the period on the Maroon and White's first shot. The shot came from the left point and fluttered through a host of players in front of the net before beating Irish goalie Jeremiah Kimento over the shoulder. The goal was the first of his career and came on a great feed from fellow freshman Tim Turner.

UMass kept the pressure on Notre Dame when it added its second tally six minutes later as Jay Shaw collected a pass from Turner at the blue line and

Turn to LOSS, page 10

Students evacuated in JQA fire; Dorm candle may be the cause

Happy 50th Birthday UMass!

By Laura Stock
Collegian Staff

Fifty years ago today, the Old Chapel Bells rang proud as students rallied around Bowker Auditorium, cheering when they learned word from Boston that the class of 1947, who entered Massachusetts State College in September, would graduate as the University of Massachusetts in May.

In the afternoon, chimes rang again to the tune of "Happy Birthday," as state and local government officials – members of the UMass Alumni Association and current faculty and staff celebrated with class of 47 members the day that Governor Paul A. Bradford signed into law House Bill 93 to change the school's name.

"All I can say is that it was more excited for a small group of people of about a period than getting into the Final Four or I Refuse to Lose" – Doris Newman, class of 47 Index yearbook editor said of the "birth" of UMass. "I look at the current Campaign UMass and see that we dreamed, we acted and we had a leadership."

A student initiative

There was a growing sentiment on campus that it was time to broaden the college years before the actual change came about. In 1932, Mass Agricultural College became Mass State College, but it still carried the "cow college" moniker. A drive to "go university" started in 1941, however, as did World War II and with many undergrads enlisting in the armed services, momentum was lost.

In the fall of 1946, Holyoke native Michael Donohue returned from his civil engineering department would soon be created. Residence halls and stadium seating would be created, a number of them bearing the name of deans, presidents and senators of that year.

Class of 1947 members (L-R) Doris Newman, Frederick Rothery, Dwight Rehnery and Michael Donohue will celebrate UMass' 50th birthday today.

A sense of personal growth happened along with the physical growth of the University. Donohue decided to go to law school at Boston University, and eventually turns, change wouldn't go through.

I tried one whole month of April because I didn't think it was going to pass," Newman said.

Dwight Rehnery, who served as vice president of the University of Massachusetts Graduate Student Senate, after Mario [illegible] Johnson, Rehnery turns change wouldn't go through.

I tried one whole month of April because I didn't think it was going to pass," Newman said.

Dwight Rehnery, who served as vice president of the University of Massachusetts Graduate Student Senate, after Mario [illegible] Johnson, Rehnery

I was change with the stroke of a pen

At 10:15 a.m. May 8, 1947, state Rep. president Evelyn Nesbit announced that the governor had signed the bill, and the campus erupted into boisterous college classes for the day.

I was down at the [illegible] on the campus [illegible] Donohue said. There was [illegible] pu

Students take Goodell; demands issued

ALANA students negotiate; Protesters offer reaction to new set of demands on table yesterday's takeover & rally

Humphrey brown III & Lisa Chiu
Collegian Staff

With tired eyes and high hopes, the small core group of approximately [illegible] African American, Asian American and Native American students [illegible] ing last night with [illegible] administration officials [illegible] tiations process tomorrow morning.

The six hours of negotiations carried throughout the greater part of yesterday's student protest. The demonstrators left the meeting resolved to spend the night inside the building they have been occupying.

[illegible] is spreading around the nation that Paul [illegible] me on deadline [illegible] Turn up the dead, Billy Sheats. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Page A1 | The Massachusetts Daily Collegian | Wednesday, January 26, 2000

UMass agrees to privatize Annex, UStore

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

After a long period of consideration by the University of Massachusetts, Chancellor David K. Scott announced last week the decision to privatize the University Store and Textbook Annex under a bookselling corporation called the Follett Higher Education Group of Chicago.

Scott said in a statement that the approved bid to assume management and operations of the University's bookstore will be granted starting July 1, 2000 pending approval by the state auditor.

A university selection committee, representing a cross-section of the campus, reviewed the bids and voted unanimously to recommend that the contract be awarded to Follett.

The announcement came last Wednesday at approximately 3 p.m. and Student Trustee Seth Avakian said he approved of the final decision.

"I was at the meeting [last Wednesday] when the chancellor and vice-chancellor presented the results of the committee," Avakian said. "In discussing with the Student Government Association member on that committee, I think that the contract is fair to employees and beneficial to university students. I support the administration's decision."

The bid from Follett was one of three bids submitted last fall to operate the University Store and Textbook Annex. Other bids included Barnes and Noble of New York City and a UMass labor coalition.

According to Barbara Pitoniak of the News Office, the bookstore has "incurred financial losses" in the past that have caused it to be under scrutiny. In fiscal year 1999, the bookstore lost $138,000 and the projected loss for fiscal year 2000 is $138,000 under university operations.

"[At this rate] the projected loss for FY 2001 is $263,000 and this is all if the bookstore continued as it is under university operations," Pitoniak said. "This higher loss is because of the projected needs for renovations."

To meet the needs of a cutting edge society, the bookstore would have to invest in these renovations to become more efficient and better able to suit the community, Pitoniak said. Follett will be able to take on these changes at a no-expense cost to the university.

"If Follett does the renovations then Follett pays for them, the university doesn't," Pitoniak said. "They [Follett] are in the bookstore business and the universities priority is education."

In fact, Scott said the decision to contract with Follett brings in additional revenues to the university and at a cost that is less expensive than operating the bookstore through the campus.

"Follett's bid provides for a significant financial return to the University, protects our employees, and delivers the best possible package for our students," Scott said. "In times of constrained budgets, we have to look at these opportunities where they can be accomplished responsibly and respectfully for our students and employees. Follett has done that."

Pitoniak said the contract between Follett and University bookstore operations is five years. As part of the contract, the university will receive a guaranteed payment of $7.3 million, approximately $1.4 million more in revenues than if the campus continued to operate the bookstore, according to Vice Chancellor for Administration and Finance Paul Page.

In addition, the 26 current full and part-time bookstore employees will be given the option of either becoming Follett employees and retaining their same salary and number of years of service toward Follett's comprehensive benefit package, or working for Follett but continuing as University employees with all current benefits and years of service.

With the bookstores of the future likely to be very different from today, Scott said this is not just about money.

"We are looking at a future that includes new stores, more competition, e-commerce and other challenges," Scott said. "Our own campus store has already taken steps to use Information Age methods.

"In the long term, we believe that Follett, with its cutting-edge technology and national resources, is best positioned to service our students and to lead us into the future," Scott said.

Pitoniak said she believes Follett has the high-tech resources to offer the best goods and services to the UMass community. They use the same buyback policies and pricing policies for new and used textbooks as most current bookstore policies.

The only difference from other bookstore programs is that according to Follett's policy, they will offer a textbook buy-back program offering students 50 percent off the current selling price, regardless of whether the book was purchased new or used.

In addition, faculty and staff will receive a 10 percent discount on non-sale items, excluding textbooks, and departments will receive a 30 percent discount on supplies excluding academically discounted software.

Scott said Follett commands a strong position at the top of a highly competitive marketplace and will support the university services in the future.

KARA STORES/ COLLEGIAN

Changes may be in store for student shopping at the Textbook Annex, which will soon be run by the Follett Higher Education Group of Chicago.

"While our employees have done a commendable job operating the bookstore in the past, books and information will be handled much differently in the future," Scott said. "Follett has the cutting edge technology and resources to support the store, which will allow the university to focus its time and resources on its core academic enterprise."

Follett currently operates approximately 62 college bookstores in the U.S. and Canada. The corporation is currently developing a state-of-the-art virtual bookstore on the worldwide web at www.efollett.com and will additionally produce an online mail-order catalogue.

The final agreement must be certified by the state auditor, in conformance with state law, which sets out requirements concerning wage rates and benefits, hiring of former employees, cost estimating standards and bid procedures.

Contract negotiations between the University and Follett will begin immediately. A local manager will oversee the new bookstore operations to assure Follett's compliance with contract terms.

Sam Wilkinson contributed to this article.

Change of millenium uneventful possible catastrophies avoided

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

People around the world breathed a collective sigh on relief on Jan. 1, 2000 as the turn of the century passed without major incident. The bite of the Y2K bug was barely felt as ATM machines continued to work in Australia, lights stayed on in India, planes continued to fly in Japan and telephones still rang all over Europe.

Much of the success of a problem free Y2K new year can be attributed to the intense pre-planning that had taken place for the event. Large corporations all over the world began to hire companies years in advance in order to make sure the transition to the new year would be smooth.

One company called Oracle, the world's second biggest software company and the number one surveyor of database software, was hired by the United States government, 10 of the biggest Internet sites online, banks and insurance companies to make sure that computers were ready for the change. Many companies spent upwards of $50 million on Y2K improvements.

Assistance companies like NEC America stayed open throughout the night to field calls from anyone with Y2K problems. The extra precautionary lines proved unnecessary. The company received a total of three calls for the weekend, two of which were from NEC customers sending their New Year's greetings to the NEC support staff.

Local towns were also well prepared for the potential crisis. The town of Ludlow put black reflective stop signs at every traffic light in the off chance that the town might lose both power and the use of their traffic lights.

The town of Northampton went so far as to form a Y2K preparedness committee to address negative consequences of a millennium crisis. In its mission statement the group said that "by meeting with neighbors and re-evaluating our concepts of communities, we hope to strengthen our ability to respond to any public emergencies."

The University of Massachusetts was also prepared for any problems that may have arisen with the Y2K situation. At the last faculty senate meeting of the year representatives from the Provost's Office asked professors to try to turn in final grades previous to the new year as a precaution.

UMass also ran checks on computers and telephone systems in the case something happened during the transition to the new year.

The State of Massachusetts as a whole also prepared for the year 2000 as they launched their public information campaign "Be Y2K Wise" in November of 1999.

The campaign included a toll free resource hot line with recorded information 24 hours a day, and the distribution of hand cards with a list of steps to prepare for the new millennium. The state passed out these information cards at tollbooths on the Massachusetts Turnpike and at other strategic locations throughout the state.

The state instructed people to prepare for Y2K as they would for a

Turn to Y2K page A2

Budget cuts: Fewer professors

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts is facing financial cuts from the state and it depends. Chancellor David K. Scott has asked all department heads to prepare budget cuts for next year, an exercise that could mean fewer professors and fewer course sections available to students.

Chancellor Scott made his request last month in response to UMass receiving less money than anticipated in the state budget last fall.

The university's share of the state allocation was $218 million, an increase of $8.9 million from the previous year. However, this increase was $10 million less than what was requested.

Scott said in a Massdaily article that $6.6 million of the $8.9 is already targeted for employee pay increases and scholarship commitments.

Joseph Larson, director of the Environmental Institute and secretary of the UMass Faculty Senate, said the preparations for the cuts began when Governor Cellucci filed

Turn to BUDGET page A2

Kresge grant aids SOM

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Isenberg School of Management must raise $5 million by June 1, 2001 as part of a prestigious challenge granted awarded to them from the Kresge Foundation in Troy, Michigan.

The grant was bestowed to the university for the first time in its history. The Isenberg School was awarded $850,000 in December to start them off in their fundraising challenge.

The terms of the grant require that the school raise the remaining funds with its help. The Isenberg School's $26 million campaign goal includes fund-raising for a new $12 million high-technology building wing, endowed faculty positions, the School's Annual Fund and a curriculum innovation fund.

According to a news release, over a period of five years, the school hopes to raise $125 million for the university.

Chancellor David K. Scott said in a statement that the award represents a resounding vote of confidence in the Isenberg School and the university.

"Kresge awards are a scarce commodity in the academic world," Scott said. "They are synonymous with the highest quality in college and university programs."

Isenberg School Dean Thomas O'Brien said in a statement that the awards signified a superior quality of teaching, research and outreach in the community, as well as providing motivation towards private fund-raising.

"The Foundation was impressed by the caliber and diversity of our students, the record of our faculty, and the accomplishment of our alumni."

O'Brien said in a statement, "Just as important, we had to demonstrate that we have a solid fund-raising plan in place. Kresge grants are designed to give impetus to private fund-raising."

So far, the School of Management has raised $16 million towards its $26 million campaign goal. O'Brien said for the first time the school is "gaining lots of momentum" toward an alumni participation goal of 30%, with more alumni donating to the fund than ever before.

"We just completed the best year of fund-raising in the Isenberg School's 52-year history," O'Brien said.

The School is planning to break ground next October for its high-technology building wing, with occupancy slated for May of 2002.

UMPD emerges from winter safely prepared for spring semester

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

After three assaults on campus, two students and one professor being hit by automobiles, various new safety measures are taking effect on campus.

For its part, the University of Massachusetts Police Department has used the break as a time to recoup energy after a taxing first semester.

"Our break is still ongoing and that is good," Barbara O'Connor, Deputy Chief of the UMPD, said.

Jim Abrams, the UMPD spokesman, described the break as quiet, and while officers had to deal with "a few minor things" nothing extraordinary took place.

O'Connor said that over the break, UMPD officers have had the opportunity to be a part of various training sessions. Officers have participated in sessions covering first aid, professional standards and firearm training.

Both Abrams and O'Connor said that the break, from a criminal perspective, was quiet.

"We didn't have any Y2K disruptions," O'Connor said. Abrams agreed, describing the evening of Dec. 31 and the accompanying celebrations as being "totally uneventful."

However, now that students have returned to campus, both O'Connor and Abrams mentioned some changes that students can expect to see.

After three assaults near the Campus Center Pond last semester, two of them sexual, officers had maintained a routine patrol of the pond. Abrams said that would change in the upcoming months as fewer patrols would be centered around the campus pond.

Instead, according to Abrams, officers would focus less on that area so that more attention could be focused on the campus as a whole.

"It certainly won't look the same to students who aren't as used to seeing officers elsewhere on campus," Abrams said.

According to O'Connor, officers will be on bike and horse patrol around campus. She said that staffing was solid, but that while those numbers were always subject to change.

"We've got one vacancy on staff," O'Connor said, "but right now we're fairly comfortable without staffing."

UMPD staffing will be more and more busy in the upcoming months. While October is what O'Connor described as the UMPD's busiest month, April is next busiest.

"As the weather gets warmer in the spring, the opportunity for things to happen greatly increases," O'Connor said. "We start planning for certain weekends that we know will be more busy than others, so we have to schedule our staffing around some of those events."

O'Connor said that the warmer weather brings people outside for events that include Southwest week. Abrams agreed, saying that when the weather gets warm, people just tend to be more active and outside more often.

"We're going to do our usual daily briefings and roll calls, but eventually we are going to get into our rhythm of campus life," Abrams said. "Everything tends to be fairly predictable. The spring semester is going to follow certain patterns."

Elsewhere on campus, in an attempt to respond to pedestrian accidents on campus last semester and one pedestrian death at Smith College in Northampton, new road signs can be seen on campus and a new stop-light flashing yellow to slow drivers down on University Avenue has been put.

Last semester, after Tina Haafke and Frauke Wolter, a vehicle in Northampton driven by Mary McAleer, 58, struck two German exchange students at Smith, on Sept. 27. Haafke was killed in the accident. An automobile on Massachusetts Avenue hit Ruth Abrams, a visiting professor of Judaic and Eastern Studies, on Oct. 7. Finally, two students, Lisa Abrams, 19, and Courtney Spivack, 18, were struck by an automobile on University Avenue on Nov. 28.

The signs, which are placed by employees at the physical plant, are bright yellow and hang off of orange and white barrels. The new stop light hangs at the T-Intersection of University Ave. and Fearing St. There are also new neon green signs with flashing lights above them announcing to drivers upcoming crosswalks.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 30 LOW: 10	HIGH: 43 LOW: 0	HIGH: 34 LOW: -56

Bluewall Floods

The Bluewall was closed due to a sprinkler malfunction over break.

ARTS A3

Cook Inside If You Dare

We've got reviews for all the big winter movies and some cool bands. Plus, we'll tell you what to do and where to go during your first week back. So, check out Arts.

ARTS B1

Leap Frog

The UMass men's basketball team jumped around from being one of the best in the region to being confusingly unorganized.. read about the hoopsters' winter break.

SPORTS C1

Arts & Living B1
Comics C9
Crossword C9
Editorial A4
News A1
Sports C1

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

budget

continued from page A1

a petition seeking support for the legislature to reduce income tax in the state.

Because the university is a state-funded school, the amount of funding needed to maintain operations and meet contractual agreements (with) faculty and teaching assistants) is dependent on what the state allocates. The University also uses state funds for research and scholarship allocation.Larson said the amount needed to maintain all of these obligations is well known by the state and he said he and the faculty are surprised by the cuts.

"If you add that all up and look at the amount that's been allocated, there's a shortfall," Larson said.

During the Dukakis term, the university experienced a similar lack of funding, but it was also during a period in which the economy wasn't strong.

In this fiscal year, Larson said there is no indication that the economy is in a poor state. The economy is quite strong and because they are experiencing similar cuts as in the past, Larson said he and some of the faculty are feeling puzzled.

"The faculty are pretty well shocked by this because the state's economy is in good shape," Larson said. "The fact that the university now finds themselves facing the same kinds of cuts as the Dukakis debacle is very shocking."

With these cuts on the horizon, the university might have been better equipped to prepare for them in advance Larson said. However, according to him, they didn't know the budget available to the campus until December.

The fiscal year begins in July and being six months into the fiscal year, Larson said Chancellor Scott didn't have many options other than to prepare for larger budget cuts in the future.

"When you figure out that you don't have as much money halfway through the year, you've already made commitments for the year," Larson said. "It's very difficult to make adjustments on such a short notice."

Chancellor Scott has asked all department heads to prepare three separate budget plans for the next fiscal year, in anticipation of insufficient state support. The plans, which wouldn't go into effect until next fall, would reflect cuts of one, two and three percent.

According to Larson, the severity of the financial shortage will

Turn to BUDGET page A10

New professors welcomed

By Elana Premack
Collegian Staff

Two new professors, Joseph Berger and Katherine McDermott, have joined the Department of Educational Policy, Research and Administration in the School of Education at the University of Massachusetts.

Professor and department chair Andy Effrat said the department was "delighted" to have found and appointed the new faculty members, who will "contribute so much to the development of our initiatives in educational leadership and policy studies."

"These appointments are particularly important in enabling this University to participate effectively in addressing the vital educational issues concerning equity and excellence that face the Commonwealth and the nation," Effrat said.

Berger, an assistant professor, researches issues of organization and leadership in higher education. He examines factors related to how the organization of higher education institutions affects undergraduate students and contributes to the reinforcement of social class inequity in America.

Berger earned his B.A. in anthropology and sociology from Lawrence University, his M.A. in college student personnel from Bowling Green State University and his Ph.D. in education and human development, specializing in higher education administration, from Vanderbilt University. He is the author of a number of book and journal chapters and is a consulting editor for the journal "Research in Higher Education." Berger also won the 1997 Irvin Lee "Bobby" Wright Award from the Association for the Study of Higher Education (ASHE) for the most outstanding dissertation in the country.

McDermott, also an assistant professor, studies state governmental control of public education. She wrote, "Controlling Public Education: Localism Versus Equality," a book critiquing local control of public education. Before coming to UMass, McDermott taught undergraduate courses at Yale and contributed to a Connecticut school desegregation and regionalization project.

McDermott received her B.A. in international relations from Lehigh University and her M.A., M.Phil. and Ph.D. from Yale University.

The School of Education's Department of Educational Policy, Research and Administration awards Master's and Doctoral degrees in education.

COURTESY OF PHOTO SERVICES

Joseph Berger has joined the Department of Educational Policy, Research and Administration in the School of Education.

Kathryn McDermott has also joined the Department of Educational Policy, Research and Administration in the School of Education.

Y2K

continued from page A1

three day snowstorm. This included: having extra supplies of food and water, extra batteries, flashlights, a portable radio and extra supplies of prescription and frequently used over the counter medication.

Although most everyone was prepared for the new millennium some small problems did arise from the change in year.

One of the most major incidents that took place because of Y2K related failures involved the Pentagon's key intelligence processing computers. Due to Y2K computer problems a U.S. spy satellite hookup was temporarily shut down when a glitch crippled a ground station meant to process images.

The incident cut off access to the Air Force's Keyhole photographic reconnaissance satellites. According to Defense Department spokesperson Kenneth Bacon in an Associated Press article, the power outage lasted only a few hours before a backup system was in place.

"We lost a little corner of part of our total intelligence take for several hours. That's what happened," Bacon said.

Other problems ranged from consumer fear and smaller failures.

Airlines faced some problems both with loss of funds due to a fear of flying in the millennium and because of computer malfunctions.

In the Caribbean pilots were warned about a problem with date time code that led to runway lights being out.

A web site at the U.S. Naval Observatory marked the date as Jan. 1,1900. The software glitch occurred because of an error in JavaScript written with an older version of the program language that was not Y2K ready.

In South Korea, a problem hit the heating system of apartment complex and forced residents to spend their New Year's day shivering. Thermostats failed at midnight and were off line until 7a.m. on Saturday morning.

Also in South Korea, a provincial court issued summons for 170 people to appear for trial on Jan. 4, 1900 rather than Jan. 4, 2000.

While most people were pleased that they were ready for any potential new year problems, some corporations felt they had spent too much money on preparations for the millennium.

Companies like Kmart, which spent $47.9 million on Y2K preparations, and ITT industries which spent approximately $19.5 million dollars are now suing to recover some of the Y2K remediation costs.

Although the world suffered a few minor problems due to the new millennium most remained unchanged. Planes did not fall out of the sky, terrorists did not blow up any major cities, and grades still went to UMass students.

WIR SPRECHEN VOLKWAGON
The Valley's largest VW inventory!

Whether it's a simple tune-up of a full blown restoration project; from engine valves and bearings to door handles or gas caps, we have the parts for just about any model VW ever made! Plus a full inventory for Japanese and Korean cars and trucks.

WE SPEAK VOLKSWAGON!
It All Starts With Parts...
PELHAM
AUTO PARTS
Route 9
Amherst/Belchertown Line
256-0457
Hrs M-F 8-5:30 & Sat 9-2:00

BACKPACKS & MESSENGER BAGS
25% off 25% off
413 - 545 - 2619
Collegiate Castials UMass Clothing for Everyone
Sun 10-5 Mon 8:30-6 Tu-Th 8:30-7 Fri 8:30-5 Sat 11-4

Occasions CARD & GIFT SHOP "The thought that counts"
½ PRICE SALE
ALL POSTERS
Buy 1 Get the 2nd at ½ Price
(Higher price prevails...must be of equal or lesser value)
Choose from a wide variety
Posters starting as low as $6.00
Ustore Extended Back to School Hours
Sun. 10-5 Mon. 8:30-6 Tu-Th 8:30-7 Fri. 8:30-5 Sat. 11-4

???? GOT PHONES? ????

WE DO!!
PRICES STARTING AS LOW AS $8 UP TO $35
*BELLSOUTH*PANASONIC*SOUTHWESTERN BELL*

THE University Ustore™
Not like a mall... Better.™

Special Back to School Extended Hours
